LIBRARY
THE MUSEUM
OF MODERN ART
Re

Scanned from the collection of Eileen Bowser

Coordinated by the Media History Digital Library
www.mediahistoryproject.org

Funded by a donation from Richard Scheckman

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2011 with funding from Media History Digital Library

http://www.archive.org/details/movingpicturewor21newy

FL
BER duplicate discard
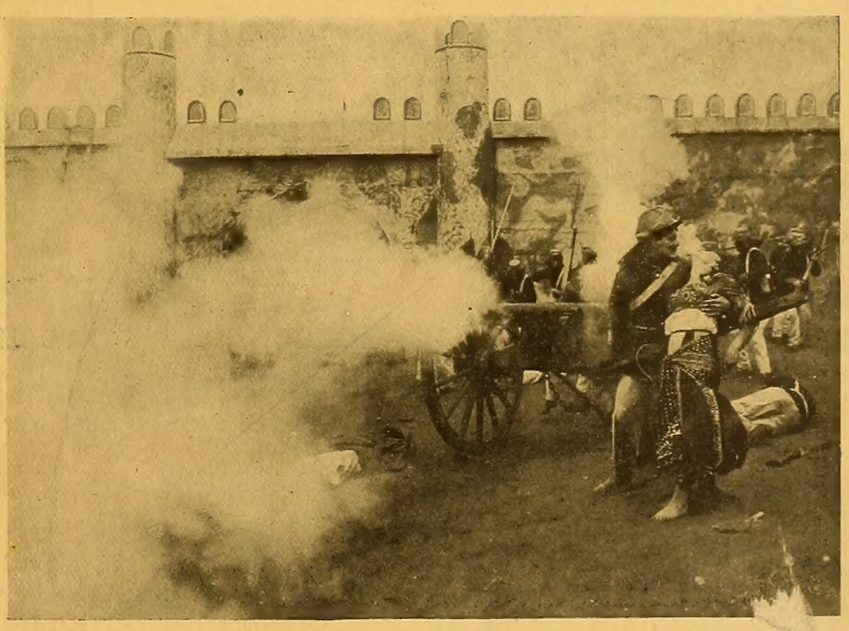
1/51
FL
2750

Vol. 21, No. 1 July 4, 1914 Price 10 Cents

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE FILM INDEX

EXHIBITORS' GUIDE



Scene from "Shannon of the Sixth" (Kalem).

Post Office Box 226
Madison Square Station

NEW YORK

17 Madison Avenue
Telephone Madison Square 3510

The Greatest Film Production Ever Presented!

—the Unanimous Verdict of the Public

"Unquestionably the biggest success ever scored by any motion picture play"—this is the unanimous verdict of the thousands who have seen the first two episodes of the Million Dollar Mystery.

Never before has such remarkable photography been shown. Never before have such stupendous scenes been incorporated in any one production. Never before have such costly costumes been used.

The overwhelming success of

THE MILLION DOLLAR MYSTERY

Story by Harold MacGrath Scenario by Lloyd Lonergan

Thanhouser's Million Dollar Motion Picture Production

is only a matter of course. Nearly 200 leading newspapers, including the Chicago Tribune, Boston Globe, Cincinnati Enquirer, New York Globe and Buffalo Courier are running this startling story by Harold MacGrath. The better theatres everywhere are exhibiting the films. And $10,000.00 in cash is offered for the best 100-word solution of the mystery:

Bookings are still being arranged. See representative of the Syndicate Film Corporation. The Million Dollar Mystery is an independent release and may be obtained regardless of the regular program being used.

SYNDICATE FILM CORPORATION

71 W. 23rd Street, NEW YORK 166 W. Washington Street, CHICAGO

or Syndicate Film Corporation representative at any Mutual Exchange in the United States and Canada

The Thanhouser Three-a-Week

Tuesday, June 30, "THE HARLOW HANDICAP"
A remarkable 2-reel drama, featuring Mignon Anderson and Harry Benham. In this 2-reel production is shown an exciting horse race, throbbing with action.

Friday, July 3, No release because of two-reel subject of preceding release date.

Sunday, July 5, "A COOKED GOOSE"
One-reel comedy subject, displaying the talents of Nolan Gane, Harry Blakemore, Joseph Phillips, Carey L. Hastings and Eugene Redding. The versatile cast assures a laugh for everybody.

THANHOUSER FILM CORPORATION, New Rochelle, N. Y.

Head European Offices: Thanhouser Films, Ltd., London, W. C., England 00 Thanhouser releases will continue to be features of the Mutual Program

Essanay

Superlative and Aristocratic Features

Released Monday, July 13th.

"Sweedie the Swatter"

A whirlwind slapstick comedy that is fairly filled with humorous situations. See "Sweedie," our new character comedian.

Released Tuesday, July 14th.

"At the Foot of the Hill"

A dramatic offering that will appeal to all who are fond of human interest stories.

Released Wednesday, July 15th.

The Fable of "Napoleon and the Bumps"

An excruciatingly funny story concerning a clerk who thought he was Napoleon. Story written by George Ade.

Released Thursday, July 16th.

"Snakeville's New Waitress"

A delightfully pleasing Western comedy in which Sophie has a new experience.

Released Friday, July 17th.

"His Stolen Fortune"

(In Two Acts)

An intensely interesting comedy-drama concerning the young American who was left a vast fortune, only to discover that he must lose it. The situations will keep an audience in a continual uproar. Story adapted from The Munsey Magazines.

Released Saturday, July 18th.

"Broncho Billy Puts One Over"

A thrilling Western drama in which G. M. Anderson is featured.

Three Big Laughs! SIX-A-WEEK Three Big Thrills!

Coming Soon! "ONE WONDERFUL NIGHT" Coming Soon!

(In Four Acts)

The story millions have been talking about which appeared in the Ladies' World Magazine. The story your audiences voted, and elected Francis X. Bushman to play the lead in. A story that will thrill and entertain.

Ten Million People are Waiting to See This Production Book It Now!

Essanay Film Mfg. Company, 521 First National Bank Building Chicago, Ill.

Factory and Studio: 1333 Argyle Street, Chicago, Ill. Branch Offices in London, Paris, Berlin, Barcelona

GRAB THE BEST

If I owned your theatre this very minute, I'd worry my head off for fear that some other fellow would GRAB THE BEST PROGRAM ON EARTH—THE UNIVERSAL—AND PUT ME OUT OF THE RUNNING.

A PROGRAM OF 21 DIVERSIFIED

MONDAY, JULY 6.

VICTOR — At Mexico's Mercy (Western Drama).

IMP—The Lady of the Island (Two Reel Dr.), Dorothy Phillips and Alexander Gaden.

STERLING—Billy's Vacation (Juvenile Com.)

TUESDAY, JULY 7.

GOLD SEAL—Lucille Love, the Girl of Mystery (Series No. 13, Two Reel Dr.), Grace Cunard and Francis Ford.

CRYSTAL—Nearly a Stepmother (Com.).

UNIVERSAL IKE—Me, Him and I (Com.).

WEDNESDAY, JULY 8.

NESTOR — A Ranch Romance (Western Drama).

JOKER—Bess, The Detectress, or, The Dog Watch (Com.).

ECLAIR—Duty (Two Reel Soc. Dr.), Belle Adair and Alec Francis.

ANIMATED WEEKLY.

(Note) The following stars and motion picture

Pauline Bush	Dorothy Davenport	Cleo Madison
Allan Dwan	Isidore Bernstein	Bob Thornby
Eddie Lyons	Carl Laemmle	Herman Fichtenberg
Lee Moran	Rupert Julian	Edwin August
Murdock MacQuarrie	Wilfred Lucas	James V. Bryson
Wm. Dowlan	Herbert Rawlinson	Edna Maison
Warren Kerrigan	Otis Turner	David Horsley
Al Christie	Wm. Clifford	Allen Curtis
Bob Leonard	Maurice Fleckles	Universal Ike
Wallace Reid	F. A. Van Husan	Henry McRae

UNIVERSAL FILM

1600 BROADWAY

CARL LAEMMLE,

The Largest Film Manu

PROGRAM ON EARTH!

Don't wait until your opportunity is dead before you send in an emergency call for the oxygen tank. A flower in the hand of the living is better than a whole greenhouse full of flowers beautifully festooned around a cold gray headstone. CARL LAEMMLE

SUBJECTS THAT CAN'T BE BEAT

THURSDAY, JULY 9.

MP—The Old Rag Doll (Child Drama).
EX—When Fate Disposes (Two Reel Dr.), Ella Hall and Bob Leonard.
TERLING—Snookee's Flirtation (Com.). Featuring Ford Sterling.

FRIDAY, JULY 10.

STOR—The Great Universal Mystery (Com.). See NOTE.
[illegible]—Passing the Love of Women (Dr.).
TOR— Beggar Prince of India (Three Reel Dr.), Irene Wallace and Walter Miller.

SATURDAY, JULY 11.

JOKER—Love, Roses and Trousers (Com.).
IOI BISON—Prowlers of the Wild (Two Reel Animal Dr.), Anna Little and Herbert Rawlinson.

SUNDAY, JULY 12.

REX—Plain Mary (Dr.).
ECLAIR—Willy and the Parisians, and Lily as a Little Mother (Split Reel Com.).
FRONTIER—The Fight in Lonely Gulch (Dr.).

cties appear in the GREAT UNIVERSAL MYSTERY:

Marie Wolcamp	King Baggot	Howard Crampton
Betty Schade	Wm. Shay	Edwin Mortimer
Fred Balshofer	Alex. Gaden	Leah Baird
Henry Lehrman	Wm. Welch	Ethel Grandin
Ford Sterling	Frank Smith	Florence Lawrence
Francis Ford	Hobart Henley	Matt Moore
Grace Cunard	Frank Crane	Irene Wallace
Phillips Smalley	Herbert Brenon
Ella Hall	Julius Stern
Lois Weber	J. C. Graham

MANUFACTURING CO.
NEW YORK CITY

Presnt

factur Concern in the Universe

MARY PICKFORD.

POPULAR DEMAND CAUSES

Re-Issue of Famous

MARY PICKFORD

RELEASES

Within the past month, the Universal has received innumerable requests from exhibitors for a re-issue of the MARY PICKFORD releases made by the Imp Co.

First Release

"In the Sultan's Garden"

Released Monday, July 20th

One

Mary Pickford

IMP

will be released every other Monday

Although some of these pictures were made four years ago, they are perfect photographically, the producing excellent, and what is most important, MARY PICKFORD is delightfully charming in the parts she enacts.

There is not a moving picture "fan" who won't welcome these MARY PICKFORD releases. They are entirely new to the theater-goers of today—and the few who have seen them will be glad to see them again.

Special Lithographs With Each Release.

Look the first release over and then book up solid for the series.

UNIVERSAL FILM MANUFACTURING COMPANY

1600 Broadway, New York City Carl Laemmle, *President

MARY PICKFORD.

The Trey o' Hearts

A MODERN PROBLEM STORY WRITTEN BY

Louis Joseph Vance

Author of The Fortune Hunter, The Black Bag, The Brass Bowl, the Lone Wolf.

Will appear, serially, for fifteen weeks in some newspaper in your city

It starts week of July 28th

Louis Joseph Vance

Ask your exchange-man the name of the paper that will run it in your town

If you've got a drop of red blood in your veins—if your heart beats one bit faster to the tune of romance—adventure—love and mystery—then you've something in store so far ahead of anything you've ever read or seen that you'll forget the best among the rest.

Over-Shadowed

The Fortune Hunter—The Black Bag—The Brass Bowl—Louis Joseph Vance wrote 'em all. You know what millions thought of these stories. You know how they gripped—thrilled and inspired. But the TREY O' HEARTS overshadows them all. Vance has set himself a mark in this story he'll never beat and we doubt if even he, master of the written word, will ever pen another like it. Action—plot and telling, all combine to push the TREY O' HEARTS into the top notch of the best sellers in record time.

Exclusive With Universal

The minute we saw the manuscript of the TREY O' HEARTS we wanted it—we recognized the greatest piece of literature of its kind the last decade had seen. And we paid the price—the figures are staggering—almost unbelieveable—but the patrons of Universal exhibitors are going to get enjoyment and their full money's worth of the price we paid.

Remakes Two Kinds of History

THE TREY O' HEARTS is going to rewrite a page in moving picture and literary history. The TREY O' HEARTS as a piece of literature is going to be a pace-maker. And in the moving picture world, they'll still be unsuccessfully trying to beat the action of the TREY O' HEARTS ten years from now. This is a prophecy.

Full Reel Action in Every Foot

There is more action in every foot of the TREY O' HEARTS than in a full reel of the ordinary scenario. Thousands of scenarios go through our hands every year, but we are investing thousands in putting the TREY O' HEARTS on the screen. That's backing judgment. Our success in the moving picture field tells whether or not we know a good thing when we see it.

GET IN TOUCH WITH THE NEAREST UNVERSAL EXCHANGE AND BOOK THIS BOX OFFICE MAGNET.

Universal Film Manufacturing Co.

CARL LAEMMLE, President

1600 Broadway The Largest Film Manufacturers in the Universe New York

Essanay

Presents

The Greatest American Triumph

"The Good-For-Nothing"

IN FOUR ACTS

WITH

G. M. ANDERSON

"THE WORLD'S MOST POPULAR PHOTOPLAYER"

Exhibitors, Book This Feature!

The story carries with it an undercurrent of righteousness that is beneficial to the world. A tale of a son who had known nothing but riches all his life, whose great fault was the bright lights and the gay times. He is thrown out into the world to make a living for himself and later saves his parents from the poor house. The dramatic situations are great and the undercurrent of comedy running smoothly through the story, makes this attraction one of sustaining interest.

THRILLS — ROMANCE — COMEDY — DRAMA

This Production is a Box Office Magnet that will Draw the Crowds!

BOOK IT!

Essanay Film Manufacturing Company

521 First National Bank Building, Chicago

Factory and Studios,* 1333 Argyle St., Chicago, Ill.

BRANCH OFFICES IN LONDON PARIS BERLIN BARCELONA

10,000,000 PEOPLE

are waiting to see the Photoplay Masterpiece

"ONE WONDERFUL NIGHT"

(In Four Acts)

Written by LOUIS TRACY

This magnificent production will be released

Saturday, July 18th

FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN

The winner of the Ladies' World Hero Contest will play the leading role—your audience elected him to play it.

Book This Attraction Now!

Released through the GENERAL FILM COMPANY'S FEATURE DEPARTMENT

Essanay Film Mfg. Co.

521 First National Bank Bldg., Chicago

Factory and Studio: 1333 Argyle St., Chicago, Ill.

BRANCH OFFICES IN LONDON, PARIS, BERLIN, BARCELONA

"30 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

Coming: Jane Grey in "The Little Gray Lady."

DANIEL FROHMAN
Presents
The Greatest of Motion Picture Stars

MARY PICKFORD

In A Novel Yet Typical Characterization,

"THE EAGLE'S MATE"

A Story of Stirring Emotions,
By Anna Alice Chapin.

IN FIVE REELS
OF MOTION PICTURES

RELEASED JULY 1ST.

"30 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

FAMOUS PLAYERS

EXECUTIVE OFFICES
213-229 W. 26th STREET
NEW YORK

Coming: "The Scales of Justice," a drama of love vs. the law.

"30 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

"IF YOU WERE A BIRD CAUGHT BY AN EAGLE YOU WOULD KNOW THERE WAS NO USE TO STRUGGLE"

Another Mary Pickford triumph! A drama of splendid achievement.

A simple and masterful tale of life and love, laid in the heart of the West Virginia mountains

ANEMONE FACES THE FIERCE MOUNTAINEERS

"I'VE FOUGHT FOR YOU, AND NOW YOURE MINE!"

FILM COMPANY

ADOLPH ZUKOR, President

DANIEL FROHMAN, Managing Director EDWIN S. PORTER, Technical Director

"30 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

BEATRIZ MICHELENA

THE BEAUTIFUL AND CELEBRATED PRIMA DONNA

WHO WILL APPEAR IN A LIMITED NUMBER OF DRAMATIC SUCCESSES SUPPORTED BY A NOTABLE CAST INCLUDING

HOUSE PETERS

CALIFORNIA MOTION PICTURE CORPORATION

CAPITAL $1,000,000.00

DIRECTORS

HERBERT PAYNE — HENRY T. SCOTT
R.P. SCHWERIN — CHRISTIAN DE GUIGNE
ARTHUR C. PAYNE — EDWIN M. EDDY
JAMES TYSON — CHARLES T. CROCKER
ALEX. E. BEYFUSS GENERAL MANAGER

EXECUTIVE OFFICES
SAN FRANCISCO

STUDIO & LABORATORIES
SAN RAFAEL

CABLE ADDRESS - CAMPICO

Words that have lost their STRENGTH

"Greatest picture ever produced"—"Most stupendous feature ever filmed"—"Sets a new mark in motion photography."

STARS AND PLAYS THAT MEAN MUCH:

ANDREW MACK in
"THE RAGGED EARL"
(In Preparation)

JACOB P. ADLER in
"MICHAEL STROGOFF"
(Now Ready)

"THE GREAT DIVIDE"
Henry Miller's and Margaret Anglin's spectacular stage success.
(Coming)

Plenty of striking paper and slides, heralds, photos, etc., galore with each production.

POPULAR PLAYS AND PLAYERS, Inc.

HARRY J. COHEN, General Manager

1600 Broadway New York City Mecca Building

Phone Bryant 4016

AMERICA'S

Most Spectacular Production

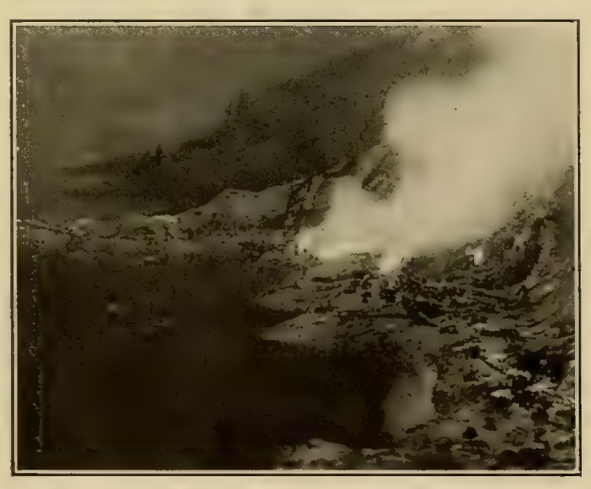
The Wrath of the Gods

or, The Destruction of Sakura-Jima

6 Parts

Produced under the personal direction of THOS. H. INCE, can be booked through

Continental and Mutual Exchanges



ENLARGEMENTS MADE FROM THE FILM

New York Motion Picture Corporation

LONGACRE BUILDING, 42nd ST. and BROADWAY, NEW YORK

KAY-BEE

KAY-BEE FEATURES

The Heart of a Crook, 2 Parts, Friday, July 3rd
The Feud at Beaver Creek, 2 Parts, Friday, July 10th
THOS. H. INCE, Director-General

DOMINO

DOMINO WINNERS

His Hour of Manhood, 2 Parts, Thursday, July 2nd
The Curse of Humanity, 2 Parts, Thursday, July 9th
THOS. H. INCE, Director-General

BRONCHO

BRONCHO HEADLINERS

Shorty Gets in Trouble, 2 Parts, Wednesday, July 1st
The Final Reckoning, 2 Parts, Wednesday, July 8th
THOS. H. INCE, Director-General

KEYSTONE

KEYSTONE COMEDIES

Three comedies a week
Monday, Wednesday and Saturday release days
MACK SENNETT, Director-General

KEYSTONE COMEDIES

Photos 8 by 10 Photos of players mentioned below can be had by sending to the Publicity Dept. 15 cents for one; 50 cents for sets of four; $1.00 for sets of eight.

MACK SENNETT
MABEL NORMAND
CHARLES CHAPLIN
ROSCOE ARBUCKLE
HARRY G. KEENAN
"BARNEY" SHERRY
RICHARD STANTON

THOS. H. INCE
GRETCHEN LEDERER
MARGARET THOMPSON
TSURU AOKI
ROY LAIDLAW
CLARA WILLIAMS
JAY HUNT
JOHN KELLER

MILDRED HARRIS
"SHORTY" HAMILTON
CHARLES RAY
WALTER BELASCO
FRANK BORZAGE
THOS. CHATTERTON
LEONA HUTTON
RHEA MITCHELL

A set of 8 by 10 Photos of Keystone Mabel, in four different poses, 50 cents

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CORP.
LONG ACRE BLDG., 42nd STREET and BROADWAY, NEW YORK

WORLD'S LARGEST
SAWYER INC.
FILM MART
1600 BROADWAY-NEW YORK

WILLIAM ELLIOTT
PRESENTS

DUSTIN FARNUM

IN "The Lightning Conductor"

The First Big Feature to Carry a Laugh Through Six Great Reels.

Picturized by Walter Hale.

Pronounced by Press and Public the Film beyond compare.

EXHIBITORS

Write or wire us at once, and if your state has not been sold, we will book you direct.

MR. EXHIBITOR

Write or wire SAWYER at once! If your state is not sold SAWYER will book you direct. Get on SAWYER'S books now and SAW THE STATE RIGHT BUYER'S PROFITS. No theatre too big—none to small. Everybody looks alike to SAWYER.

Send and get Sawyer's Bulletin of Releases—yours for the asking.

WORLD'S LARGEST

SAWYER INC.

FILM MART

1600 BROADWAY-NEW YORK

BIRDS OF A FEATHER FLOCK TOGETHER

"THE MILLION DOLLAR THEATRE"

THE STRAND

HAS THE HONOR
TO PRESENT

"THE MILLION DOLLAR FEATURE"

THE ALL LAMBS STAR GAMBOL

WEEK OF JUNE 28th

EVERY OTHER THEATRE HAS THE SAME PRIVILEGE-JUST WIRE SAWYER

$1,000,000 (repeated)

WATER SEEKS ITS OWN LEVEL

What Kind of Features Do You Want?

Read This Letter From a Man Who Knows

DURING the big exposition in New York, a number of the great six-reel Warner's Features were shown. The president of the International Motion Picture Association, Mr. Charles H. Phillips, saw them, and upon his return home wrote the following letter:

Milwaukee, Wis., June 16/14.

Mr. P. A. Powers, President,
Warner's Features, Incorporated,
New York City.

Dear Sir:—

Through the kindness of Mr. Samuel H. Trigger, New York, I had the pleasure of viewing several of your six-reel productions, and I consider these features among the best that have been produced in this country. With best wishes for your future success, I am,

Most respectfully yours,

(Signed) CHARLES H. PHILLIPS,
President, International Motion Picture Ass'n.

When feature films command praise from such a source, it is time for you to investigate. WARNER'S FEATURES have the appeal that fills houses---the "punch" that builds business---the quality that spells success.

Get complete information about the latest productions in WARNER'S FEATURES. Write to your nearest Warner's exchange.

WARNER'S FEATURES, Inc.

130 West 46th Street, New York City

JESSE L. LASKY

Announces

For Release in July

MAX FIGMAN and LOLITA ROBERTSON

RECENT STELLAR PLAYERS

In the All Star Cast of "FINE FEATHERS,"

In the Superb Military Romance

"THE

MAN

ON THE BOX"

5 Parts 321 Scenes Special Cast

PICTURIZED by DE MILLE and APFEL

Now Playing

THOS. W. ROSS in "THE ONLY SON"

JESSE L. LASKY FEATURE PLAY COMPANY

LONG ACRE THEATRE W. 48TH STREET

JESSE L. LASKY PRESIDENT

N. Y. C.

SAMUEL GOLDFISH TREAS. & GEN'L MANAGER

CECIL B DeMILLE DIRECTOR GENERAL

Get the Rights in Your State for the MEXICAN WAR PICTURES

To the Victor Belongs the Spoils

AND if you want to share in the fruits of Villa's conquests get control of the exclusive right to exhibit in your state War pictures made by the Mutual Film Corporation under Special contract with General "Pancho" Villa himself!

We have taken the "Big Chance"—which we are sure is really a Dead Certainty—and have paid the Mutual Film Corporation an enormous sum for the rights to these pictures for the entire United States.

THE IRON IS HOT! Villa is getting more famous every day! There is three times more about him in the newspapers than about any other man alive!

Prints are all ready for delivery—if you want the rights for your state, telegraph without delay or write by special delivery. Every moment counts in the stratagem of the FILM business, just as well as in the stratagem of war.

Remember These Facts:

The Mexican War Pictures—the only authentic ones actually taken under fire—are in seven full reels, filled with thrilling, throbbing excitement from start to finish.

The picture includes hundreds of scenes taken during the Battles of Torreon, Chihuahua and other famous conflicts and other scenes showing the tragic early life and adventure of this wonderful warrior, the greatest military genius since Napoleon!

This material has never been shown except at the Lyric Theatre in NEW YORK where it drew record breaking houses of enthusiastic patrons

NOW IS THE TIME TO "GET BUSY" AND TURN THE USUALLY DULL SUMMER MONTHS INTO THE MOST PROFITABLE PERIOD OF YOUR CAREER!

MEXICAN WAR FILM CORPORATION

Room 1205 71 WEST 23rd STREET NEW YORK

Look to Your Daughter," cries Iago

Othello

RELEASED
THROUGH SPECIAL FEATURE DEPARTMENT

or, THE MOOR OF VENICE

FIVE PARTS

THE DIVINE SHAKESPEAREAN DRAMA

Made at Venice, Italy!!!

By the Photo Drama Company. THE SUPER FILM—By All Odds the Most Pretentious, Beautiful and Accurately-Screened Version of Shakespearean Stories!

MADE AT VENICE, ITALY! That's a Tremendous advertising Feature in itself! VENICE, rendezvous of the modern tourist—A very fountain-head of Romance and Adventure! The waterways of Historic Venice with its tales, ten centuries old, of Passionate Loves and Fierce Vendettas—the indolent, dreamy sweep of these Gondola-ridden highways are scenes of the quaintest stories in any language!

FOR THE MAKING OF OTHELLO the City Fathers declared a half-holiday—canals were closed to modern commerce, leaving only the aged palaces, the gayly-costumed players and the clicking cameras of the Photo Drama Company.

In OTHELLO, we offer a real masterpiece. It is the first of Shakespeare's stories filmed in its proper environment, as the Master would have wished.

For Release Through

SPECIAL FEATURE DEPARTMENT

General Film Company

WEEK OF JULY 6th

Complete Line of Lithographs, Press Stories, etc.

GEORGE KLEINE

166 N. State St., Chicago

"THE CHRISTIAN" By Hall Caine

The One Feature Photoplay That You Will Eventually Book!

The Photoplay That Will Live Long After Other Features Are Forgotten

One of the Best Known Plays and Strongest Books Ever Written

All Star Cast of Vitagraph Players with

EDITH STOREY and EARLE WILLIAMS

A Photoplay Masterpiece!!

Why Show Doubtful Features When You Can Book This Most Remarkable Photoplay Which Will Be Sure to Please Your Patrons, and Bring the Money to Your Box Office. Send in Your Open Time.

Full Line of Advertising Matter. Our Paper Is of the Finest Quality in 1, 3, 6 and 24 Sheets. Also Window and Lobby Display Frames.

Extravagant Phrases Are Not Needed With "THE CHRISTIAN" Because It Has All the Qualifications of a Box Office Winner. Write, Wire or Phone.

GET FIRST RUN IN YOUR TOWN

E. W. LYNCH ENTERPRISES

531-532 Slater Building
Worcester, Mass. Phone 589 Park

110 West 40th Street
New York, N. Y. Phone 1562 Bryant

Business Boosters!

Our

American Comedies

The first of which

"ONE SUIT OF CLOTHES"

WILL BE RELEASED TUESDAY, JUNE 30th
AS PART OF OUR REGULAR FIVE A WEEK OUTPUT

Singles

Tuesday, COMEDY
Wednesday, DRAMA
Thursday, COMEDY

Multiples

Thursday, DRAMA
Saturday,
COMEDY or DRAMA

DON'T OVERLOOK THESE FEATURES

THE CURSE OF GREED
IN
5 PARTS
ABOUNDING
IN TRYING ORDEALS

THE THUMB PRINT
IN
4 PARTS
A THRILLING
DETECTIVE DRAMA

'NEATH THE LION'S PAW
IN
3 PARTS
THE
GREATEST ANIMAL
DRAMA EVER ATTEMPTED
FOR FILM PORTRAYAL

Released Through the General Film Co.

MELIES G FILMS

The Capture.

PASQUALI AMERICAN

110 W 40th St. Co. NEW YORK-

The Conspiracy.

NOW READY FOR DELIVERY

A MEXICAN MINE FRAUD

or The Game that Failed

(IN FIVE PARTS)

Stupendous dramatic production in five active scenes from Rome to Mexico, tango dances, raging lions, great fire scene. Wild action every moment, featuring the great international actor, Capozzi.

New England States, New York, Eastern and Western Pennsylvania, Ohio and Canada have all been sold. Western and Southern buyers should act quickly.

TO BE RELEASED JUNE 29th

THE CHIMNEY-SWEEPS

Of the Valley of Aosta

(IN FIVE PARTS)

One of Pasquali's best productions, entirely new, a thrilling drama in five parts; feverish action; more exciting romance than has ever before appeared. The beautiful actress, Laura Darville, here featurned as heroine, will command your admiration.

Buying Chimney-Sweeps.

Artistic two-color heralds, unusual sepia photos and attractive one, three and six sheet posters in four colors will be of great assistance to you in booking these plays.

A Mother's Anguish.

NOW SELLING STATE RIGHTS ON BOTH PICTURES

W

HEPWORTH'S, LONDON,
PRESENTS

SPLIT-REEL COMEDY
NO FLIES ON CIS
Billy's Endeavor to Deceive His Uncle Costs Him His Sweetheart and a Fortune

SPLIT-REEL DRAMA
A FRIEND IN NEED
A Novel Feature, in Which a Pony Acts in an Entirely Spontaneous Manner

A DRAMA OF HEPWORTH EXCELLENCE

THE CRY OF THE CAPTIVE

Almost All the Territory Has Been Sold

TWO PARTS

COMING!

A THREE-PART TRAGEDY

THE TRAGEDY OF BASIL GRIEVE

A Story With an Unusual Plot Vividly Portrayed

HEPWORTH AMERICAN FILM CORPORATION

110-112 WEST 40th ST. A. BLINKHORN, Pres. NEW YORK CITY

ECLIPSE-URBAN FILM COMPANY
PRESENTS

THE MYSTERY OF GREEN PARK

The First of the Series of Barnet Parker Detective Dramas, of Unusual Interest and Mystery, After the Famous Novel by ARNOLD GALOPIN

TWO PARTS

A THRILLING PHOTO-DRAMA

THE BIRD OF PREY

The Story of a Thrilling Pursuit and Capture of a Desperate Thief

TWO PARTS

SPLIT-REEL TRICK PICTURE
MAGIC MATCHES

ATTRACTIVE PUBLICITY MATTER

SPLIT-REEL COMEDY
BUTTERFLY AND HIS DOG

ECLIPSE-URBAN FILM COMPANY

110-112 WEST 40th ST. Telephone Bryant 3095 NEW YORK CITY

WORLD FILM
THREE NEW also Protea 2nd
"Don't let 'em pass"

CORPORATION
FEATURES COMING
THE WORLD THE FLESH AND THE DEVIL 6 ACTS
THE LIGHTS O'LONDON 5 ACTS
The GREAT STROKE 5 ACTS
ATLANTA
BOSTON
BUFFALO
CHICAGO
CLEVELAND
CINCINNATI
DETROIT
DALLAS
DENVER
INDIANAPOLIS
KANSAS CITY
WORLD FILM CORPORATION
TRADE MARK
130 W. 46TH ST. N.Y.C.
LOS ANGELES
MINNEAPOLIS
NEW YORK
NEW ORLEANS
PHILADELPHIA
PITTSBURG
SEATTLE
ST. LOUIS
SAN FRANCISCO
TORONTO
WASHINGTON

EDISON

*Andy Has a Toothache

A Comedy. By Mark Swain.
Eighth Adventure of Andy.
(1000 feet.)

It was no ordinary toothache. His mother suggested all kinds of remedies, even to tying a string to the door knob. The Superintendent sent Andy to the dentist's, but, once in the chair, he fled in dismay at a sight of the instruments. Called a coward by his chums, he challenged one to fight, and in the combat lost the tooth unawares. Released Wednesday, July 8th.

*Face to Face

A Drama. By Richard Washburn Child in "The Story of the Man Who Disappeared."
Produced in collaboration with the Popular Magazine.

Following the exciting attempt to stop Earle's train, the four partners land the new Court House contract. Carter attempts to block this by a bill in the Legislature. He in turn is accused of bribery and, after exciting incidents, is found out by a clever ruse. It is a thrilling drama. Released Tuesday, July 7th.

COMING MULTIPLE REELS

The Shattered Tree
Drama. Released Friday, July 3rd.

In the Shadow of Disgrace
Drama. Released Friday, July 10th.

Meg O' the Mountains
Drama. Released Friday, July 17th.

COMING SINGLE REELS

Dolly at the Helm
Eleventh page in the active life of "Dolly of the Dailies."
Drama. Released Saturday, July 11th.

Qualifying for Lena Comedy. Released Monday, July 13th.

*The Two Doctors
Drama. Released Tuesday, July 14th.

*The Ever-Gallant Marquis

An Up-To-Date Courtship
Comedies. Released Wednesday, July 15th.

Across the Burning Trestle
Drama. Released Saturday, July 18th.

*One sheets. One and three sheets. One, three and six sheet posters by the Morgan Lithograph Co.

TRADE MARK
Thomas A Edison

Thomas A. Edison, Inc.
275 Lakeside Ave., Orange, N. J.
Makers of the Edison Kinetoscope Model "D."

Gaumont

A FEATURE
THAT WILL LIVE
SHIPPING DATE JUNE 27th

The IRON MAN
in 3 parts

COMING FANTOMAS No FIVE

Gaumont Co
110 W. 40th St., New York City

EXCEPTIONAL POSTERS

A NEWS SERVICE THAT CREATES A NEW INTEREST IN FILMS!

Never have films aroused the same interest in exhibitors and public alike as has been shown in the great innovation

THE PATHÉ DAILY NEWS

The reasons are apparent:

NEWS ONLY A FEW HOURS OLD
BEST ITEMS FROM ALL OVER THE WORLD
PHOTOGRAPHY THE BEST
PICTURES WITH A PUNCH

Nothing deteriorates in value with age more rapidly than news. Show these films each day and the crowds will make a beaten path to your doors!

BOOK THE DAILY NEWS FOR BIG BUSINESS

FOR FULL PARTICULARS ADDRESS

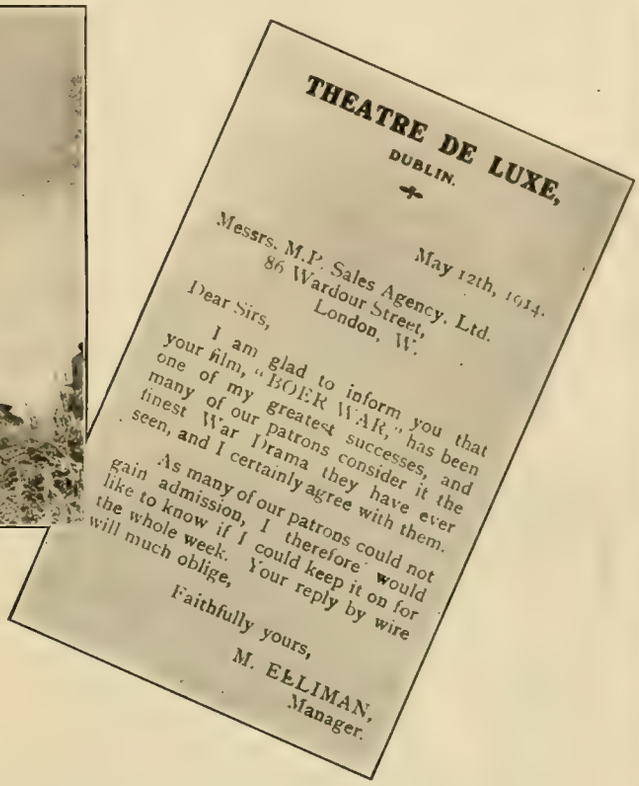
THE PATHÉ DAILY NEWS 1 CONGRESS STREET JERSEY CITY, N. J.

What the British Think of Kalem's

"THE BOER WAR"

(A Five-Part Masterpiece Production)

—only an extraordinary production could merit such strong praise. And when YOU see the battles of Elandslaagte, Wagon Hill, Botha's Pass and the taking of Almond's Nek, you will agree with the exhibitor above, that "THE BOER WAR" is the finest war drama you have ever seen. Two 1-sheet, two 3-sheet, two 8-sheet, and one 24-sheet Posters which show the most stirring events.



THEATRE DE LUXE,
DUBLIN.

May 12th, 1914.

Messrs. M.P. Sales Agency, Ltd.
86 Wardour Street,
London, W.

Dear Sirs,

I am glad to inform you that your film, "BOER WAR," has been one of my greatest successes, and many of our patrons consider it the finest War Drama they have ever seen, and I certainly agree with them.

As many of our patrons could not gain admission, I therefore would like to know if I could keep it on for the whole week. Your reply by wire will much oblige,

Faithfully yours,

M. ELLIMAN,
Manager.

Other Great KALEM Masterpiece Features

A Celebrated Case

A Four-Part Production of the famous old drama. Alice Joyce, Guy Coombs, Marguerite Courtot and Alice Hollister in strong roles. 1, 3 and 6-Sheet Posters.

Francis Marion. "The Swamp Fox"

A Three-Part Story of the War of '76, showing Marion's activities against the British. 1, 3 and 6-Sheet Posters.

WOLFE. or THE CONQUEST OF QUEBEC

Kalem's Superb Five-Part Historical Drama. Produced in Authentic Locations in Canada

The furious artillery duel between the French forts and the English fleet; the battles at Montmorenci Falls and on the Plains of Abraham; the death of Wolfe and Montcalm, a few of the famous historic incidents. Two 1-sheets, two 3-sheets, two 8-sheets and one 24-sheet for this feature.

The Death Sign at High Noon

Marin Sais, Jane Wolfe, W. H. West and Paul Hurst in a Three-Part Drama showing one of the most exciting Indian fights ever filmed. 1, 3 and 6-Sheet Posters.

The Other Half of the Note

Featuring Irene Boyle in a Three-Part Story of a Secret Service detective's efforts to capture a band of smugglers. 1, 3 and 6-Sheet Posters.

Coming

Shannon of the Sixth

A Superb Five-Part Production of Edward E. Kidder's Famous Play, based upon the Sepoy Rebellion

Released through General Film Masterpiece Service

LUBIN

LUBIN MASTERPIECES

"THE WOLF"

FIVE WONDERFUL REELS — BY EUGENE WALTER

"THE HOUSE NEXT DOOR"

FIVE REELS — BY J. HARTLEY MANNERS

IN PREPARATION AT GREAT EXPENSE

"THE EAGLE'S NEST" — 5 Reels — EDWIN ARDEN, Broadway's most popular and successful actor, leads the cast.

"THE FORTUNE HUNTER" — 5 Reels — By Winchell Smith

(These splendid pictures will be released through the General Film Masterpiece Service)

"The Living Fear," Wednesday, July 1st

"The Shadow of Tragedy," Thursday, July 2nd

FIVE RELEASES EACH WEEK

"THE WALKO SISTERS"	Comedy	Tuesday, June 30th
A pair of itinerant acrobats have a pretty bad time of it in Gloucester.
"THE LIVING FEAR"	2 Reel Drama	Wednesday, July 1st
A surgeon and physiologist has a strange kleptomaniac case, which he finally masters.
"THE SHADOW OF TRAGEDY"	2 Reel Drama	Thursday, July 2nd
A strange domestic story in which a curious mistake causes serious consequences and a near tragedy.
"THE DOOM OF DUTY"	Drama	Friday, July 3rd
A vigorous Mexican War incident with a fierce battle and a test between love and duty.
"IT'S A SHAME"	Comedy Split Reel	Saturday, July 4th
A roaring farce in which two furious wives beat up the minister instead of their husbands.
"THE KIDNAPPED BRIDE"	Comedy Split Reel	Saturday, July 4th
A bride is kidnapped by rejected lovers, which causes a pretty lively fight between the cops and villagers, but a cop wins out.

A Comedy Every Tuesday and Saturday

A TWO-REEL FEATURE Every Wednesday and Thursday

A Drama Every Friday

LUBIN BEAUTIFUL POSTERS

By Our Own Staff of Artists. One and Three Sheets with Single and Split Reels. One, Three and Six Sheets with all Multiple Reels.

LUBIN MANUFACTURING COMPANY, Philadelphia, Pa.

Chicago Office - - - - 154 West Lake Street

VITAGRAPH

"THE REFORMATION OF THE GANG" Drama
Monday, June 29

Their environments are not desirable, and the boys fall into evil ways. Through kindness and proper handling they are made good and useful citizens. PAUL KELLY in the lead.

"THE POOR FOLKS' BOY" Two Part Drama
Tuesday, June 30

Held in the grasp of a greedy landlord, the poor widow is robbed of her all. The old rascal tries to hold her boy in bondage. She rebels and clings to the child, defying her persecutor and the world. ANNE SCHAEFER, PAUL WILLIS, KARL FORMES and GEORGE STANLEY are the cast.

"THE CIRCUS AND THE BOY" Comedy
Wednesday, July 1

"Sonny Jim" sees the fat woman, the dwarf and all the other freaks. He wants to be one of them. He poses as the tattooed boy. "Mother Dear" takes him home, and after a good scrubbing, Sonny Jim is content to stay at home. BOBBY CONNELLY as the boy.

"TWO STEPCHILDREN" Drama Thursday, July 2

They find life at home miserable. Alone in a large city, both contemplate ending it all. They meet accidentally. Together they make life a dream of happiness and love. DOROTHY KELLY and JAMES MORRISON in the leading roles.

"A TRAIN OF INCIDENTS" Comedy Friday, July 3

BUNNY goes to Arizona to help someone else find a fortune. FLORA FINCH does likewise. They find each other and enrich themselves with each other's love.

"THE TOLL" Two Part Drama Saturday, July 4

Held by a band of blackmailers, a young man is rescued by a girl. He brings her to America and his wife is jealous of her. She is followed by one of the band and slain, but before her death, she reunites her protector with his wife. DOROTHY KELLY, JAMES MORRISON, MARIE WEIRMAN and GEORGE COOPER are the cast.

SIX A WEEK

"THE FALSE AND THE TRUE" Drama	MONDAY, July 6
"THE MOONSTONE OF FEZ" Two Part Drama	TUESDAY, July 7
"DOCTOR SMITH'S BABY" Comedy	Wednesday, July 8
"PROSECUTION" Drama	THURSDAY, JULY 9
"THE VASES OF HYMEN" Comedy	FRIDAY, JULY 10
"LILLIAN'S DILEMMA" Two Part Comedy	SATURDAY, JULY 11

VITAGRAPH ONE, THREE AND SIX SHEET POSTERS

THE VITAGRAPH CO. OF AMERICA, E. 15th St. and Locust Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

The Box Office Winners

5 FAMOUS—5

BROADWAY STAR FEATURES

Produced by the VITAGRAPH Company of America

A Full Hand of Favorites — RELEASED — To Win the Entire World

5 Part Drama A Million Bid A Vitagraph Classic

Goodness 3 Part Burlesque — Rib-Tickling Comedy Gracious

Mr. Barnes 6 Part Drama — A Vitagraph Masterpiece of N.Y.

Love, Luck 3 Part Comedy — Exceeding the Speed Limit & Gasolene

A War Story in a Semi-Tropical Setting | 6 Part Drama Captain Alvarez A Thrilling Story of Love and Adventure | The Acme of Film Photography

As Produced at the Vitagraph Theatre New York City

The Home of Broadway Star Features

For Terms and Further Particulars Apply

General Film Co.'s Special Service

By Arrangement with Broadway Star Features Co.

State Rights Valuable Territory Still Available for — The Massive Scenic Production The Christian 3,000 People in 500 Scenes — Apply Vitagraph-Liebler Feature Film Co. 116 Nassau St., N.Y.

Five Releases Each Week

A DIAMOND IN THE ROUGH

Featuring Guy Coombs and Anna Nilsson in a Two-Part Drama. Caught fast in a bear trap, Jack Grim faces slow death. How he is saved in the nick of time by the wife he had wronged will go straight to the heart. Released Monday, July 13th. The most striking incidents shown on 1, 3 and 6-Sheets.

ACCUSED

Rats steal a package of bills from a desk, causing a man to be accused of theft. A novelty that has never been paralleled in motion pictures. Released Tuesday, July 14th. Attractive 1 and 3 Sheets.

THE EXPRESS MESSENGER

A Two-Part Railroad story. Featuring Helen Holmes. The wild chase across house-tops and the struggle between the express messenger and the jewel thief are shown in a climax which will hold observers a-quiver. Released Wednesday, July 15th. Superb 1, 3 and 6 Sheets.

WANTED, AN HEIR

How the millionaire learns which of his relatives is worthy of becoming his heir, makes this a laugh clear through. Featuring Ruth Roland, Marshal Nielan and John E. Brennan. Released Friday, July 17th.

THE FATE OF A SQUAW

The heart of every photoplay patron will go out to the Indian maid who nurses a demented white man back to health and reason, only to become a victim of his ingratitude. Featuring Princess Mona Darkfeather. Released Saturday, July 18th. Special 1 and 3 Sheets.

The Next Feature of the Alice Joyce Series is "IN WOLF'S CLOTHING." Such stars as Tom Moore, Harry Millarde, Robert Walker, Henry Hallam and Helen Lindroth appear in the cast supporting Miss Joyce. See next week's ad.

KALEM

KALEM COMPANY, 235-9 West 23rd St., NEW YORK

MOVING PICTURE WORLD
THE FILM INDEX
EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

J. P. Chalmers, Founder.
Published Weekly by the
CHALMERS PUBLISHING COMPANY
17 MADISON AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY.
(Telephone, 3510 Madison Square.)

J. P. Chalmers, Sr.....President
E. J. Chalmers .....Secretary and Treasurer
John Wylie .....Vice-President and General Manager
The office of the company is the address of the officers.
WESTERN OFFICE—Suite 917-919 Schiller Building, 64 West Randolph St., Chicago, Ill. Telephone, Central 5099.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.
United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and Philippine Islands ..... 3.00 per year
Canada ..... 3.50 per year
Foreign Countries (Postpaid)..... 4.00 per year

ADVERTISING RATES.
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING—no display—three cents per word; minimum charge, 50c.
DISPLAY ADVERTISING RATES made known on application.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.
All changes of address should give both old and new addresses in full and clearly written.

NOTE.—Address all correspondence, remittances and subscriptions to MOVING PICTURE WORLD, P. O. Box 226, Madison Square Station. New York, and not to individuals.
(The index for this issue will be found on page 126)

Entered at the General Post Office, New York City, as Second Class Matter.

Saturday, July 4, 1914.

Facts and Comments

SITTING AMONG THE AUDIENCE and watching their attitude or listening to their comments is always a profitable occupation to the exhibitor, as well as to the writer on current motion picture topics. It is easy to find out that no audience likes the protracted list of future attractions displayed on the screen by means of slides. It is all right to announce the features of the program for a day or two ahead, but it gets somewhat tiresome to have the operator run a dozen or more slides announcing and describing the programs of the entire week or more. People cannot be expected to remember the details of a week's program; it is always better to focus their attention upon one or two of the coming big things.

* * *

Many exhibitors have realized this. They not only make their announcements of future attractions both emphatic and brief, but they prefer to have twenty feet or so of film instead of the slide. This is a decidedly novel way of advertising coming features and it is therefore sure of attracting attention. It may be a little more expensive, but we believe that in most cases the result will justify the experiment. Nothing is more trying on the patience of the spectators than a long succession of slides with equally extravagant announcements.

* * *

IN another part of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD we print an interview with the chief censor of the State of Pennsylvania which is now trying to sustain the censorship act in the courts. The censor, a well-meaning sort of person, shows in his talk the inherent absurdities of censorship. He says the cast of a play and its synopsis will greatly influence him. Now we all know that the cast and the synopsis are no criterion at all of the morale of a picture. Aside from the fact that not every synopsis is a true telling of the story it must be remembered that the gifted and experienced player sinks his or her individuality in his or her part. No matter how exemplary a great actor may be in his private life when he plays a part like Iago or Richard III he must show the depravity of the character which he attempts to portray.

*

The censor tells us that he is able to look at thirty or forty pictures per day without tiring. In this assertion he runs contrary to the common experience of all men whose duty it is to review pictures. All the reviewers of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD agree that the strain of looking at pictures in motion begins to tell after the twelfth reel even when there are long intermissions. The perceptive faculties begin to tire and attention can no longer be successfully concentrated on what appears on the screen. This applies even to the spectators whose interest in the picture is by no means as keen as that of reviewer or censor must be. To judge a picture from the censorial point of view the mind should be fresh and wholly free from the irritation which any unduly protracted mental labor is sure to produce. Take censorship at any angle and it is bound to lead to absurdities.

* * *

A FRIEND and reader of this paper has recently suggested a school for exhibitors or at least an occasional conference of exhibitors to be addressed by one who has made an undoubted success of his calling, like S. L. Rothapfel. It is by no means a bad suggestion. Questions of presentation confront the exhibitor constantly, especially in these days when big features make great demands upon the skill and the inventiveness of the exhibitor. The advantages of conference and consultation are apparent. But recently an exhibitor who had been in the business for some time was confronted by the alternative of either leaving out an entire scene so as not to offend his audience or of rejecting practically one entire reel. He chose a remarkable middle course. He feared to dispense with the entire reel, as that might unduly shorten his program as he thought. He concluded to eliminate parts of the offensive scene. He realized that this would probably puzzle his audience and make the story incoherent. To obviate this he ended the reel with an explanation on a slide.

*

We may laugh at the old medieval trade guilds to which nobody could belong unless he had given some evidence of his skill and craft. As a matter of fact in many professions we still exact for the sake of the public this special fitness of its members. The cases of teachers, doctors and lawyers are in point. Today no qualification whatever is required of the man who enters the exhibiting ranks, although the responsibility of the exhibitor is a very real fact. We do not of course advocate a return to medievalism but a little more study of the science of exhibiting motion pictures would help a whole lot.

The Single Reel—II.

By W. Stephen Bush.

IT is apparent even to the most superficial of observers that we are passing through a period of transition in the moving picture industry. No man can at this moment foretell the end, but one thing seems reasonably sure: There will be at least two different and distinct classes of motion pictures and motion picture theaters when the period of transition has passed. One class of theaters will use mostly single reels, the other will use mostly features. The lines of cleavage are becoming more distinct every day. One class of theaters will depend for its success mostly on variety while the other class will run parallel with the legitimate stage. The former will maintain popular prices of admission, while the latter must ask for prices which are not far below the prices of big legitimate attractions.

That the country will ever go back to the old single reel diet of three and four years ago seems exceedingly improbable. We cannot close our eyes to the fact that theaters with small capacity using mostly single reels are going out of business all around us. It would be folly to attribute this solely to the single reel; it is the abuse rather than the use of the single reel which has spelled ruin to many exhibitors. There are altogether too many men in the exhibiting business who have no experience in the show world and who fondly imagine that it is the height of exhibiting enterprise to show anywhere from five to ten reels for a nickel. In some cities this brand of "enterprising competitors" is more numerously represented than in others, but no locality of any size is without such specimens of the genus exhibitor. These men abuse the single reel. They overfeed the public, which is just about the worst thing they could possibly do, for in this way they injure not only themselves, but they hurt the moving picture patronage in their cities. The single reel holds out the greatest temptation to these men. True enough the cheap "feature" is as likely to be abused, but the bid for a temporary increase in the patronage and the incidental hoped-for ruin of the competitor is generally made by means of the cheap single reel. In a neighboring city it is at this moment not a rare thing to find an exhibitor who is giving eight and nine reels for five cents. The effects of this sad condition of affairs are felt all through the city and its tributary suburbs. There is scant chance to educate the public in the matter of quality and the justice of higher prices of admission while a score or more of exhibitors are surfeiting their patrons with programs of great length and little quality.

The readjustment of the place of the single reel will, we think, make much further abuse of this old unit of the motion picture entertainment impossible. There will be fewer single reels made and they will be of far better quality than the present single reel averages. When the old companies were at the height of their prosperity they put a good deal of fine quality into their single reels. There is no reason in the world why this cannot be done now. These single reels it will be remembered satisfied the tastes and demands of the public for some years. Time and money are lavished on multiple reels; the best of actors are employed and the best of scenario writers, no effort is spared to attain the height of art and realism. If a proportionate amount of care, time, and money were bestowed upon the single reel there would be an ample demand for such single reels. It is a great mistake to look upon the single reel merely as a filler or an interlude between the big things on the program. New and splendid fields for the single reel are developing constantly. The pictorial news budgets which are becoming so popular with audiences everywhere will always be told best in lengths of a thousand feet or less. The pictorial news budget has grown to fine proportions; the weekly has become a daily service and we verily believe that few items on the program of a motion picture theater are more welcome and please a greater part of the audience than the news in motion pictures. We can see a great opportunity for expansion in the single reel field right here. Short length educational and scenic pictures will increase in popularity as the number of big theaters increases. A program consisting entirely of features will always be the exception rather than the rule. The most pretentious theater catering to the high-class elements in the community cannot afford to forego one of the greatest charms of the screen —the charm of variety. Here again is an opening for the single reel of quality. Nor do we believe that multiple reel comedy will ever successfully rival the short, snappy comedy of a thousand feet. On the screen as well as in the newspaper and on the stage brevity is still the soul of wit. Single reel comedies are always in demand, provided they really deserve to be called comedies —too many of these so-called one reel comedies are nothing but vulgar spasms whose chief merit is their shortness. The time for unloading this kind of stuff on the market is hopelessly past and the exhibitor who tries to make money with it will soon find himself unable to pay his rent.

The single reel will continue to form a most desirable part of the motion picture entertainment, but it must be pruned and adjusted to new conditions. Producers must learn how to specialize in single reels when it comes to the choice of subject. With proper changes there will be a regeneration of the single reel, which is bound to benefit the entire industry.

The recent convention held in this city took up the question of single reels at great length. The prevailing sentiment seemed to favor something in the nature of a revival of the single reel. Some of the exhibitors wanted more single reel comedies while others likewise in favor of single reels generally protested against the stuff which was put on single reels and labeled comedy. A close survey of the men who were particularly anxious about a revival of the single reel will reveal the fact that they were practically without exception the men who conducted theatres with a small seating capacity. They too emphasized the need of better quality in single reels. Indeed from the discussion which occurred and from informal expressions of exhibitors attending the convention it would appear that the men who need the single reel most are most thoroughly convinced of the need of better quality as a condition precedent to a profitable revival of single reels. If the exhibitors were in a position to make their influence felt like their brethren in England the re-alignment which is bound to come anyway would have arrived without the laboring pains and the damage to the exhibitor. The fatal lack of a proper nation-wide co-operative organization of the entire industry is making itself felt more and more every day. If we had a representative film parliament such as they have in France and in England questions of re-adjustment of this character would be taken up in a spirit of mutual helpfulness and would be regulated with the least possible delay and the least possible disturbance or injury.

The Exhibitor as Censor

By Louis Reeves Harrison.

GOOD, plain, ordinary common sense is shown by the manager of "The Strand" in announcing a well-defined policy of presentation.

"We will endeavor to offer at all times only such entertainment as will be consistent with the dignity of American manhood. Our house is a theater for mothers, daughters, sisters and wives, where the purity of their thought will be conserved above all other things."

That sentiment reflects what is in the mind of normally constituted men in all parts of this country. A policy so sound needs only to be stated to command unhesitating and universal assent. Many subjects present themselves to different individuals in different degrees, according to the temperament of each—there may be a wide divergence of opinion in some cases—but there is deep-seated in the original constitution of manhood a desire, almost a passion, to protect womanhood and childhood from harmful influence, with a resultant harmony of opinion as to what should not be thrust upon mixed audiences attending the picture shows by millions.

A man does not carry books, periodicals or pictures of evil purpose to his home, but he cannot exercise the prerogative of selection when members of his family go to exhibitions of moving pictures. The shows are clean and wholesome as a rule—they usually deserve the confidence so freely given them—but those who attend have no other than poster forewarning of what may be thrown on the screen, and that does not always indicate its character. The household may be shielded by its natural protector, by the elimination of all that is undesirable in books, papers and magazines, but when its members go to a little place of entertainment, an entirely new condition is set up.

The great study of modern times is that of the workings and weaknesses of the human mind, and this subject is of supreme interest to the parents of our next generation. Supreme in their minds is the progress of their children along the finest possible lines of development. It is true that those children are not sent to picture shows for an education, but there is an obvious danger to immature minds in vitiating screen portrayals. There is no sight more pitiful than that of a human creature of God-given capacity enfeebled by vicious influences over which he had no directive control during his formative period, and it is quite in the nature of things for those who have the betterment of humanity at heart to scan closely any influence exerted by those irresponsibles who confuse "liberty" with unqualified license to do as they please.

Freedom in its noblest sense grants breadth of opportunity for the exercise of one's powers. Its best use implies a breaking away from conditions hampering progress, but it was never accorded by our institutions with any idea that it meant individual contempt for law, decorum and the rights of others. The rejection of legal and moral control is not, and never has been, the American idea of liberty. The self-imposed policy of "The Strand," that of giving "Only such entertainment as will be consistent with the dignity of American manhood," if followed in a general way by American exhibitors suggests the solution of a much-discussed problem.

As a writer of photodramas, I realize as much as anyone the necessity of bringing to the notice of organized society some of its weak and guilty phases. The dramatist must reveal in order to redeem. The essential function of his art is not to mildly reflect the surface of unsatisfactory conditions that are hampering our growth—it is to penetrate the depths for bitter truth—our stories of human lives involve, beside the discussion of conduct, the unveiling of motive and the discovery of what is base in our institutions that they may be bettered. Unintelligent restraint might easily, therefore, operate directly against the best service rendered by screen portrayals.

Realizing this keenly, and realizing as keenly the folly of thrusting upon millions of people what is either pernicious or revolting to the best of them, I have always advocated conserving breadth of opportunity in this new and powerful means of inter-communication, but never in disregard of the rights of those millions to determine what particular features of a general entertainment should be eliminated as vicious or offensive. While called upon occasionally to put juice in some dried lemons of literature or the stage, and compelled to conserve the ancient flavor to a degree, I never lose sight of the fact that the best "punch" a screen play can have is that given in defense of generally accepted ideas of justice. A drama that glorifies villainy is never popular, especially with the common people, and there being no other possible excuse for it than supposed popularity, common-sense indicates that exhibitors as individuals or as an organization should not tolerate such productions.

Madame Montessori, the eminent Italian woman who recently visited this country, whose works are read by millions of intelligent people in all countries, has helped to revolutionize the world's educational methods. She has taken defective children from the slums and lifted them to planes of those who have enjoyed every possible advantage from birth by means that suggest the powerful influence moving pictures exert upon the formation of human character. She has penetrated the secrets of nature that lay hidden in the child's soul and brought that unhappy little soul out of the shadow of its prison house into the light, beauty and charm that should invest human infancy.

Now there are many unfortunate thousands of grown-ups with undeveloped minds scattered among those who watch the screen pictures with absorbed interest, and, while they are not defectives to any serious extent, they are impressionable and largely guided by impulse. They also furnish a large proportion of our criminal class. They have the intense primitive egotism of defective children, and are easily affected by suggestion, led to pursue "liberty of action" at the expense of society's welfare. The majority of them are not criminal by tendency, but they lack safeguards against indulgence in criminal conduct, and they lack that sense of duty normal men acquire through education or through the example of intimate associates.

Such people are often led to commit crime by misapprehension of what is expected of them, and it is on their account, even more than on account of little children, that glorification of crime and exposition of its methods on the screen receive general condemnation. There is not the slightest self-advantage for any exhibitor to display moving pictures of that kind, and a sensible method of stopping these productions seems to be that of setting up a policy of presentation to be clearly stated and vigorously enforced, not only as a matter of good sense, but with a view to forever determining the character of an art whose destiny appears to be that of stimulating and inspiring the human mind. Let us unite to give motion-picture production such nobility, beauty and charm of purpose as may heavily contribute to our common progress. Let us endeavor at all times to offer only such entertainment as will conserve purity of thought in American womanhood and be consistent with the dignity of American manhood.

The Weakling.

New Kalem Special with an Exciting Climax Intensified by a Marvelously Staged Thunder Storm.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

EVERY WORK OF ART chooses some object, some effect upon the human heart and mind, and reaches its ends with all the vigor and felicity that the artist has at his command or all that his time, patience and courage will let him devote to it. Only a truly human theme will inspire an artist to do really good work. His genius may sparkle here and there in a scene of two, while he is dealing with insignificant or artificial situations, but the light that engages the spectator's whole attention won't shine out from any picture unless it's maker has an object that will let him be sincere all the way through. Kenean Buell, who produced this picture, "The Weakling," had to tell graphically a story with sufficient human significance and has made of it a very desirable offering, full of merit.

The picture sets before us the troubles of a youth richly endowed by nature, but sorely tried by lack of physical courage until, at the end, he overcomes the defect, winning thereby the girl of his choice. It makes it very clear to us that his blemish is due not to heredity but to environment. More intellectual than his relatives, and more sensitive, he is the butt of his elder brother's brutality and of the scorn of his parents as well. He is not weak in body or mind, but younger, and has been trained to cower, so they call him "the weakling." The first scene opens with a picture of the two youngsters playing with large cones before the rough cabin of a mountaineer. The elder brother is already playing the tyrant and the younger has to stand ill treatment from him. Two short scenes carry us along fifteen years. The boys have become young men and the old relationship of bully and "butt" still holds. Dave, the bully, is played by Jere Austin and the younger brother, Litt, by Tom Moore.

Scene from "The Weakling" (Kalem).

At this point we find the girl Nancy, duaghter of a judge, who is to be the heroine of the story (played by Alice Joyce), leaving her comfortable home in the foothills to do what she can for the illiterate mountain whites. She comes to the settlement where the two brothers live and opens a school for children. The "kids" who attend her school have been felicitously chosen. They have interesting faces and there is naturalness and grace in the way they are handled and also in the school scenes as picture compositions. Litt, athirst for knowledge, comes to the school and studies with the children, thereby, it may be construed, increasing Dave's scorn for him. Dave falls in love with the attractive looking teacher, calls on her in the evening, but gets no encouragement. Litt is a brilliant scholar and the girl takes a good deal of interest in him and this increases Dave's ill feeling, the more since the younger brother lacks the spunk to protect her from his rudeness.

Following these scenes, comes an absolutely convincing but very intense climax. The action is logical, the steps follow in naturally dramatic sequence and the result keeps us absolutely absorbed in what is truly a marvelous portrayal of a significant situation. We watch the preparation for the event and how it comes that Nancy is left along for a night and how Dave comes upon knowledge of it. He holds Litt in such contempt that he doesn't refrain from jeering at him and this makes Litt suspicious. He follows his brother through a moon-lit forest (some beautifully photographed scenes). Dave reaches the cabin just as a terrible thunder storm breaks and the rest of the incident is accompanied by some of the most startlingly realistic lightning we have ever seen portrayed. It is a marvel of photography. He forces his way in and is roughly handling the girl when his brother appears at the still open door through which now and again the background is filled with bright light or left in blackness. The struggle is now between the brothers and in the midst of it the doorway is filled with such a flash of light that the spectator, with nerves all tense, feels that it has struck close by. The older brother falls unconscious and Litt, believing that he has killed him, flees out into the pouring rain. A real rain storm is pictured. We can actually see the rain splashing in puddles and pools of surface water. Litt, overcome, is found by the judge next day lying unconscious at the road-side and is taken to the judge's home.

Scene from "The Weakling" (Kalem).

Soon after Litt leaves, Dave comes to, his arm paralyzed, and is kept a prisoner until morning by the girl who has found a gun. The girl had already written to her father asking him to continue the education of Litt and he is installed in a college to graduate later with honors. Here, one would think that the story would naturally end, but it is continued to show by two more incidents that Litt has not yet escaped from the bondage of physical cowardice. The girl loves him, but still refuses to marry him on account of this. At a third chance he proves himself a hero indeed, stopping with his body a bullet intended by his brother for the judge who is trying his father for illicit whiskey making. Perhaps this scene is hampered somewhat by lack of restraint, a defect of which the first reel is almost absolutely clean. As a whole it is a very fine offering though a bit too long at the end. Kenean Buell, who produced it, is deserving of very high commendation.

MUTUAL MEN ARE RE-ELECTED.

At Annual Meeting of Stockholders, Past Methods of Operation are Approved—Business Flourishing.

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Mutual Film Corporation, held in Richmond, Va., on June 17, five directors were elected. Crawford Livingston, Felix E. Kahn, George W. Hall, Wilbert Shallenberger and Addison E. Jones, directors, were unanimously re-elected for terms of three years each. A resolution was adopted by the stockholders approving the conduct of the corporation's business during the past year.

At the annual directors' meeting in New York, June 19, the treasurer's report showed the Mutual to be in a flourishing condition. Regular seven per cent dividends on preferred stock for the year beginning July 1, 1914, were declared payable quarterly, and a dividend of one-half of one per cent with an extra dividend of one-half of one per cent on the common stock was declared payable in each of the next four months.

At the same meeting, the officers were unanimously re-elected as follows: President and general manager, H. E. Aitken; first vice-president and treasurer, C. J. Htie; second vice president, John R. Freuler, and secretary, E. L. Thomas. After the meeting, President Aitken announced the appointment of James N. Naulty as third vice-president.

Pennsylvania Head Censor Talks.

His Curious Notions on the Necessity of Censorship—Admits the Steady Improvements of the Morale of Films—Will Exercise Control over Posters—He Takes no Notice of the "National Board."

By W. Stephen Bush.

THERE are no inquisitorial terrors about the head censor of Pennsylvania, I mean, no outward emblems of that dreaded institution, no masked "familiars" of the "Holy Office," no black-covered seats of judgment, no headsmen standing around in ominous silence. Mr. J. Louis Breitinger, on whom devolves the duty of censoring every film coming into the Keystone Commonwealth is just an ordinary American lawyer suggesting rural antecedents. I saw him in his office at the Franklin Building, 133 South 12th Street in Philadelphia calmly attending to his law practice.

"Mr. Breitinger," I asked, "how did you become censor of motion pictures in this state?"

Mr. Breitinger, in a somewhat formal but not unpleasant manner, declined to discuss this fact in any way whatever.

"Were you a candidate for the position?" I persisted.

"I must decline to answer that question," replied Mr. Breitinger, becoming slightly more formal.

"What I want to know," I began again, "is your qualifications for this office of censorship. Do you think you possess the knowledge and experience; have you ever been associated with motion pictures in a commercial or official way before?"

The censor became less formal and more willing to talk.

"Why, yes," he said, registering a tone of emphasis. "I guess I have seen as many pictures as any other man in this state. You know I have been counsel for the exhibitors in Philadelphia and I was always interested in motion pictures."

"What about your rule forbidding any comedies which are not sufficiently serious?" I queried further.

Mr. Breitinger smiled tolerantly.

"There has been a lot of comment on this rule," he said. "I guess the language was open to misunderstanding. What I wanted to say was this: I do not believe in making fun of solemn and serious things; I would, for instance, refuse to pass a film trying to throw ridicule on a court of justice or on a creed. If a comic situation is evolved in the progress of the story, I would of course look at it in a different light."

"I see," I continued, "that under your new rules you assume authority over posters. You ask that posters be submitted to you whenever you request it."

"That is true," declared Mr. Breitinger. "Wherever posters are misleading, showing something which does not occur on the film, I propose to suppress them. All posters that are lurid and ultra-sensational will likewise be placed under the ban. I think the law gives me the authority to do this, as it provides for regulating the display of motion pictures."

"Do you propose to co-operate with or take notice of the work of the National Board of Censorship in New York?"

"Well, there is, properly speaking, no National Board. I will say that the Board you mention has, in my opinion, done some good, through the fact that the manufacturers pay for its upkeep has been criticized. We keep a record of advance information on films in our office and we take notice of any special comments made by this Board, but, generally speaking, we will pay no attention to its verdicts. In some ways I have accepted their standards and perhaps even used their language, but this does not mean that their decisions will have any influence on us. We may accept what they reject and vice versa."

Mr. Breitinger here said something about the necessity of protecting the children against certain films and I was prompted to ask him whether he judged films from the viewpoint of the child alone.

"Not at all," was his quick reply. "I try to censor the pictures for a mixed audience, such as I know the average motion picture audience to be. I look at the needs of the whole people, any other action would be arbitrary. I might say, too, that I do not propose to impose such a censorship as we might expect from the police authorities. The police are not the proper judges of films, their views are too narrow and one-sided, indeed, I think their whole training unfits them for the work of censoring. I may also add that I harbor not the slightest resentment against the men who are testing this statute in the courts. They have the right to do this. If the act is bad in law or if it violates any constitutional guarantee, we want to know it."

Mr. Breitinger spoke of a corps of assistants who would aid him and the other state censor in the performance of their duties and who would have the right to suggest eliminations. He would, he said, look at the films himself whenever the judgment of his assistants might be called into question.

The censor declared that if the producers would "play fair" with him, matters might be made easy in the matter of examinations of duplicates. I asked Mr. Breitinger to be more definite and he said that he would dispense with the examination of duplicates if he could feel that the producers would make every alteration ordered in the original. He hinted, too, that he might eventually recommend a lower examination fee for duplicates, which are now taxed $2.50 per thousand feet just like the originals.

"From examining the synopsis I generally get a fair idea of what kind of a film I am going to see from a censor's viewpoint. There are certain actors and actresses who, I think, may be relied upon for clean playing and that's why I always pay particular attention to the casts. One woman will play an adventuress in an inoffensive manner, while another might think it necessary to wear tightfitting gowns and smoke cigarettes. You ask me where I am going to do my examining. Well, wherever it is most convenient. I am now fitting up an office in Philadelphia. I had a talk on the subject with Governor Tener, who seemed to think we, being state officials, ought to have an office in the state capital. Recently we were in New York where we examined 200 films or more. I should say that the total number for examination is about 300 per week. I can look at thirty or forty reels a day without getting tired."

"Have you so far," I asked, "been compelled to totally reject any of the films offered to you for examination?"

"No," replied Mr. Breitinger, "I am glad to be able to answer 'No.' Out of about four hundred that we have examined we have had only about four serious eliminations. Motion pictures are getting better, I must say. I think that if motion pictures continue to improve as they have in the past six months, there will be no more demand for censorship."

"Do you mean to say that it would be safe to repeal the law?"

"No. I think a restricting and restraining influence will be needed. There will be, I am afraid, men who would abuse the film. We would have white slave films and drug terror films and other objectionable pictures. To safeguard the public against them we always must have censorship."

GEORGE PERIOLAT.

ONE of the most popular, but decidedly the most retiring character man in the West Coast forces of the Universal Film Company, is George Periolat, who plays character leads with Jack Kerrigan.

George Periolat.

Periolat was born in Chicago, Ill., "long enough ago to make me my present age," he says. His father was in the mercantile business, but the boy never had a vivid dream of any other career than that of the drama. Still in his teens, he secured a small position in a stock company. Naturally a student and open to impressions, the boy developed into a juvenile lead before many years. With Julia Arthur, Otis Skinner, Adelaide Thurston, Maurice Barrymore, Wm. Gillette, Kathryn Kidder and others, he played for twelve years, making a careful study of stage technique which has formed the basis for his interesting work in pictures.

A year ago the Dearborn Stock Company in Chicago, a season with the original production of "Bedford's Hope" and the young character man decided that motion pictures offered the greatest future to the conscientious actor. Periolat joined the Essanay Company as an extra man under Tom Ricketts. So quick was he to learn the mechanism of this new work and so appreciative were directors of a man who could mix brains with his talent, that the Selig Company persuaded him to join their ranks. Eight months under Frank Beale was succeeded by an offer from the American company which Periolat could not refuse. Three years of steady, consistent work followed, under the direction of Allan Dwan. It mas at this time that Periolat came to be associated with Jack Kerrigan, whose company he has never since left. Periolat and Mr. Kerrigan are both now with the Universal forces.

"The Evil Men Do."

A Three-Part Vitagraph Drama Written by Edward William Farley and Produced by Maurice Costello and Robert Gaillord.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

Cast.

David Horton ..... Maurice Costello
Captain Clifford ..... Thomas R. Mills
Margaret ..... Mary Charleson
Beatrice ..... Marie Weirman
Margaret's escort ..... Rex Hitchcock
Agent ..... Robert Gaillord
David, as a boy ..... Dolores Costello
Beatrice, as a girl ..... Helen Costello

A STRONG and interesting story, "The Evil Men Do," should have had a more comprehensive title, as most of the trouble is caused by the reckless infidelity of a mercenary wife. Perhaps the author was too gallant to imitate Adam and blame it all on the woman! Her machinations began it all, and her indifference to the rights and happiness of others is the direct cause of all that occurs. The character of "Margaret," the unfaithful wife of David Horton, is interpreted with high intelligence by Mary Charleson, and it is fascinating in its extreme self-sufficiency. She does not even pretend to care for anything but her personal pleasures and interests, is keenly alive to what is self-advantageous and is so delightfully like many ladies in good society that she may be said to typify them.

Scene from "The Evil Men Do" (Vitagraph).

The character of "Beatrice" as portrayed by Marie Weirman, though affording fewer emotional opportunities, is a beautiful one and destined to quicken sympathy among those who watch the play. "Ingenue" is too often suggestive of "inanity" for the rôle to assume importance in most plays, a foolish tradition handed down by the French. The French jeune fille is an inanity as far as social events that furnish dramatic material are concerned, but the American girl is quite another proposition. Miss Weirman looks and plays her part with rare charm, and it is a pleasure to see two such accomplished actresses on the screen at one time.

Scene from "The Evil Men Do" (Vitagraph).

Costello seems to have regained some of his old-time form when he acts with subdued emotion, but he works too hard at times—it is just as well to credit the modern motion picture audience with intelligence—it is not necessary to force the obvious in a situation of stress and sorrow. Then it is in the character of manly men to suffer in a stoical way, dominating acute misery with a strong will. He appears to advantage as a serious character when he "acts" the least.

The story of "David Horton," whom Costello impersonates, is that of a man who loved Beatrice as a little girl and forgot her when they grew up. He falls an easy victim to the designing and self-sufficient Margaret, though Beatrice retains an undying affection for her playmates, an affection that is the seed of love, waiting to be warmed into a thing of beauty by a little attention from David Horton, but which he fails to give. She goes abroad to hide her disappointment. He weds Margaret and is disillusioned when his wife forsakes him in an hour of trial in company with Captain Clifford.

Clifford wearies of the false woman, meets Beatrice and wins her hand in marriage. These four are brought together near an army post by the workings of destiny and some high scenes of excitement and emotion rise out of the complicated social relation. Horton is working alone on a ranch, attempting to redeem his lost fortunes, when Beatrice and her husband, Captain Clifford, the man Horton knows to be the cause of his dishonor and misery, call on him. Horton keeps silence to preserve the happiness of Beatrice, while she attempts the reconciliation of Horton and his wife, not knowing that her own husband caused their estrangement. Beatrice induces Mrs. Horton to rejoin her husband, and actually effects a suspension of hostilities between them, when Captain Clifford stumbles in.

Horton has given up further thought of vengeance, for the sake of Beatrice, but it is quite another matter with Margaret. Infuriated by Clifford's desertion—a woman scorned—she turns to a veritable fury, attacks Clifford and is shot by him in a struggle between them. Horton secures evidence that Clifford committed the murder and is about to suppress it, when Beatrice overhears "all" with a sense of overpowering and complete revulsion that drives Clifford to self-destruction. Horton and Beatrice are eventually united by the affection that bound them together as children, but which was not to be theirs again until both were tried in the crucible of bittle experience.

MOVIES AID "BETTER BABIES" CAMPAIGN.

Mayor Mitchell set the week from June 20th to 26th for Baby Week in Greater New York. Katharine Eggleston was appointed on the Publicity Committee. Two hundred thousand babies and their mothers were given outings in parks and on the Hudson. Some of these babies had been saved by the efficient work of the Milk Stations, the free clinics and the instructions to mothers. And the mayor believes that the public ought to know more and help more in this wonderful work of saving the kiddies from sickness and death in the hot weather.

Once upon a time the newspaper would have been the chief medium for advertising and illustrating this kind of work. But Miss Eggleston knew the movies and their facilities and set about letting the Pathe Weekly and Daily, the Mutual Weekly, the Animated Weekly and the Hearst-Selig Weekly know of the "heart-interest" and news-value which the Baby Week parades, outings, illustrated teachings, and prize baby-shows would furnish. Consequently, the films will show the public some interesting pictures of the fun and frolic of the littlest girls and boys.

The attention that will be attracted to the work of making "Better Babies, Better Mothers, Better Homes" by the representation of scenes during the New York Baby Week, will reveal the power of "the movies" as right-hand helpers to the big movements for public good that can be carried on by an enlightened government.

EXCELSIOR FEATURE FILM CO.

The Excelsior Feature Film Co., Inc., is a new concern with executive offices at 110 W. 40th St., suite 1002, which promises to be in the future, an important factor in the moving picture industry.

The pure, clear mountain air at their studio, located at beautiful Lake Placid, "The Switzerland of America," enables them to secure the highest standard in photography and with the able assistance of Harry Handworth, late Pathé head director featuring Octavia Handworth, late Pathé star, Gordon De Maine, Tom Tempest, William A. Williams, late Pathé leading man and many other screen favorites.

Mr. Wm. H. Wright, treas., and Arthur Rosenbach, sales-manager, both well acquainted with the trade, are very busy getting their first release ready for showing. Judging by their description of the feature, it will be one worth seeing.

"The Tragedy of Basil Grieve"

Hepworth American Film Corporation Has Added Feature of Exciting Interest in This English-made Three-Reeler.

Reviewed by Randall M. White.

IN ADDING "The Tragedy of Basil Grieve," a three-reel feature, to their list of releases, the Hepworth Film Corporation have accomplished a stroke of business which will redound to both their financial and artistic credit. The picture, made by the Hepworth company in England, has all the elements which exhibitors, figuring from the box office point of view, regard as necessary to success and in addition will please the motion picture devotee who insists upon having his screen stories unfolded in a logical and interesting manner. Novel bits of construction have been used in building the plot, the action is spirited throughout, and the most has been made of the many opportunities for a display of careful photography.

Scene from "The Tragedy of Basil Grieve" (Hepworth).

Basil Grieve is a successful novelist who falls preys to a designing woman who returns his honest effection by marrying him for his money and standing in society. A suitor whom the woman has refused because of his lesser financial and social influence, through a successful invention, amasses a fortune about the time the novelist has begun to complain of his wife's extravagance. How the inventor and the novelist's wife destroy him with the aid of a quick poison and are providentially punished for the crime provides the big scenes.

A novel turn in the plot is introduced when the wife paves the way for her husband's murder by obtaining his signature to a note purporting to explain that he has committed suicide by having him sign the note in the belief that he is signing a check in payment of some of the wife's bills.

The interest attaching to the proper filming of such a story can readily be imagined. There is the scene in which the wife quite calmly pours the poison into her husband's coffee as he sits chatting with her at the breakfast table, immediately followed by an intensely dramatic and well executed scene which shows the death struggle of the poisoned man. Then one is made to realize the shallowness of the wife's suicide tale when the publisher of the husband's novels identifies the note supposed to have been left by the husband in explanation of his death as a copy of a note sent him as a part of the manuscript of a new book. A thoroughly human detective gets into the action and makes a couple of conclusive deductions which do not jar one's sense of logic and, for a finish, there is one of the most exciting auto chases which has ever been filmed, as the murdress and her paramour attempt to escape from the police; the wife is killed when the machine in which she is riding crashes into a ditch, and her partner in crime is picked up by the police.

The players in the picture have all acquitted themselves well but standing out in boldest relief is the work done by the Hepworth principal who impersonates the adventuress who does not hesitate at murder. Hers are the big scenes and she makes all of them convincing, although one is never permitted to lose the impression that such a woman as she has lived, is living now, and will live as long as love and passion are the most powerful emotions of mankind.

There is a particularly effective bit of photography used in a close-up of the wife and her paramour sitting beside an open grate planning the death of the husband. The auto chase, as a splendid climax for a good picture, is also well done and one is fairly swept away with the feeling that he too is speeding along at the rate of eighty or ninety miles per hour.

Church Picture Plan Tried Out

Duke of Manchester, Cleveland Moffett, Miss Katherine Eggleston, and Others Interested in Important Movement.

THE Duke of Manchester, Cleveland Moffett, the author, and Miss Katherine Eggleston, fiction and scenaria writer, might not like to be classed with the humble straw that helps 'lemo' and 'sasprella pop' to its destined end; but they certainly are straws that show what a strong wind is blowing in the direction of an increased production of the kind of motion pictures which will meet the requirements of those who believe that the screen is the greatest of teachers.

To begin with, the Duke is forming a company which will produce religious and educational pictures. To continue, Cleveland Moffett is fathering a plan which will open the churches in districts where there are many children who spend more time than is good for them on the street, and make the good program of motion pictures a delight and a benefit to the youngsters. It's a splendid idea. Katherine Egleston entered on her rôle as Another Straw when she stopped for the meeting after the program at the Old First Church on the evening of June 18th.

It was a kind of "try-out." The Vitigraph Company furnished the excellent program, and Mr. Moffett asked those interested in the movement to stay and "Talk it over" afterward. Some of the "scared-cats" who are always worrying lst the sacred edifice be desecrated should have seen the orderly, appreciative mob of youngsters who came out of the dignified old church, talking quietly but enthusiastically of "the show." They would be ashamed to advocate a moss-back policy which shuts up the great, idle, expensive pile of stones half of the time. It was when the point came up whether pictures should be rented or "asked as contributions" to the beneficence that Miss Eggleston began her part.

"This is a great scheme," she said; "but it's bigger than just giving a good show to a lot of hungry-eyed little people. It's bigger than just a means to keep them off the street. It's bigger than even its significance as an uplift movement. It's the habit of high-brows, church-people and a good many others who belong to neither class, to rail at the producing companies for not making better pictures. Right here in this work you will need the best kind of pictures. You hope to interest many churches, many schools—indeed, it will be perfectly possible to turn to account every public building that is occupied only part of the time. You will use so many pictures that you will create a demand for good pictures. Making pictures is like any other businss. The producing companies must realize returns. If you realize the power you will hold of actually making it possible for the company to produce the kind of pictures you believe should be shown, you will be benefactors in more than just the way you plan for the children. But rent your pictures. Don't ask the producers to pay for your beneficence. A good many of them have paid a good deal more dearly than you suspect for their efforts to produce educational and morally high-toned films. If all the churches and the schools of this country were in the market for good pictures, it wouldn't be a year before the output of the various producing companies would show an improvement in subjects and treatment which would compare favorably with the wonderful mechanical perfection of motion pictures. Create the demand right in this splendid project and the supply will be ready. Motion pictures are made almost over night. Demand high-class films and pay the market price and see what happens!"

Miss Eggleston's remarks were backed by her thorough knowledge of motion pictures from the scenario start to the screen finish gained as film editor and by the reputation she has made as a writer of magazine fiction. She combines an intimate knowledge of pictures with a scholarly education and success as an author. And she confidently looks forward to the growth of moving pictures to a usefulness and an artistic development which is scarcely forshadowed by their present development. Mr. Moffett and the others who are associated in the new scheme recognized and agreed with the truth of what she said. It is safe to predict that films used in the entertainments they give will be rented at the usual rates. And all this means that a good healthy wind is blowing splendidly in the right direction.

CONTERNO'S ORCHESTRA AT REGENT.

Conterno's Orchestra began an engagement at the Regent Theater, 116th Street and Seventh Avenue, Sunday, June 14. Besides playing a program of high-class music, while the pictures are running, the orchestra provides an overture as a part of each show, Sig. Conterno directing. The orchestral music, of course, is in conjunction with the pipe organ selections, which have long made the Regent popular.

"Something to a Door"

An Edison One-Reel Comedy—Written by Mark Swan and Produced by C. Jay Williams.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

Cast.

Mr. Hammond.....William Wadsworth
Bessie, his daughter.....Elsie McLeod
Jim Ferris.....Arthur Housman
Walter Gray, a newspaper reporter.....Carlton King

A BRIGHT comedy of incident, "Something to a Door," is not without characterization and rises above farce in other respects. The opening scene gives it strength where strength is usually lacking. It enforces by unusual means that an antagonism has arisen between two men, and does it in a perfectly and logical manner. Hammond, an old corporation officer of wealth and dominating temperament, encounters opposition from young Jim Ferris at a board meeting of directors, and the clash is aggravated by the fact that the young man is engaged to the old one's daughter, Bessie. Hammond becomes enraged at having his business plans thwarted and his attitude towards his future son-in-law soon becomes a menace to the happiness of his daughter. He breaks off relations between her and Ferris as a matter of business retaliation.

Scene from "Something to a Door" (Edison).

Scene from "Something to a Door" (Edison).

This situation is not new, but it takes on new meaning through the story's superior structure and treatment. Interest is stimulated where it is ordinarily lacking. This is very largely due to skill on the part of the author and of the director, though the interpretation is all that could be desired, and the work of Mr. Housman as "Ferris" is an impersonation exceptionally good.

Now comes a veritable comedy of farcial tendency, hinging on a classy spring overcoat which Ferris borrows in a hurry from his room-mate, a newspaper reporter. He calls clandestinely on Bessie, during her father's absence and is obliged to hide behind an upright piano when father returns unexpectedly. Father sits down in his easy chair near the piano and some amusing acting follows, until Bessie is sent to bed. Father then dozes in his chair, while Ferris yawns behind the piano, and hour after hour passes in this relation, until father at last decides to retire. He goes to his room, removes his coat and waistcoat.

Ferris, cramped, exhausted and sleepy, puts on his chum's new coat and escapes by the front door, but it slams it on the tail of his coat, and he can neither open the door nor pull away his chum's classy new coat. Father hears the noise, descends in his shirtsleeves, notes the piece of coat, peeps through blinds, and telephones the police station stating that a suspicious character is at his door, a man in a grey overcoat. Police rush to make an arrest.

Meanwhile, Ferris finds his situation one of peril, and slips out of the coat and makes a quiet getaway. Father notes his departure, steps out of the front door, picks up coat and finds himself shut out in the cold—the door closing on him while his keys are in the house. He puts on the classy coat to keep himself warm and is arrested by the police as the suspicious character. There is a clearing up of complications at the station house and such a laugh on tempestuous father, that he becomes reconciled to his future son-in-law.

The settings of "Something to a Door" deserve commendation, especially the interiors. They are farther away from bare studio effects and nearer the warmth and homelike appearance of the rooms we live in.

HELEN MARTEN.

ONE of the sweetest and charming ingenues appearing in the silent drama to-day is Helen Marten, the beautiful little lady who made such a popular, personal hit with the visiting exhibitors at the Grand Central Palace, New York, recently. Miss Marten is the most modest and shyest of girls imaginable, and these qualities, coupled with her charming naivette, made her especially adorable to those exhibitors who secured their first glance of her in person. She has been a member of the Eclair stock company, at Fort Lee, N. J., for the past two years, and during that time has interpreted many roles, both character and straight. It is remarkable how this dainty girl, with the beautiful features and sweet personality can play a slavey and Indian equally as well as a society girl.

Miss Marten was virtually brought up in the theatrical business, and at the age of six was playing little Eva with one of the numerous "Uncle Tom" road shows. For several years she essayed juvenile characters with various repertoire and stock companies, and at the age of sixteen entered vaudeville with a vehicle especially adapted to suit her winsome personality. Shortly after this she was acclaimed the winner by a large majority in the Gibson Girl Contest held by the New York American, and was awarded first prize.

With this an incentive and spurred on by numerous requests from well-known artists for her services, Miss Marten drifted into studio work and her cameo-like profile has adorned the cover of many of the leading magazines and beautified numerous commercial advertisements.

From this work to that of the motion picture studio was merely a short jump, and since her engagement with the Eclair film players she has become a universal favorite with "movie" fans through her charming and entirely unaffected portrayals. This little ingenue captured without difficulty two of the beautiful cups offered as prizes in the Tango Contest at the recent New York Convention, and is proudly displaying them together with a number of other trophies which have come to her through her ability to dance.

Is Not "Official Censorship."

New Plan of Motion Picture Program Control by New York City Bureau of Licenses Neither Revolutionary nor Bombastic.

THAT the Commissioner of Licenses of the City of New York was to assume more active supervision of the motion picture programs in the metropolis in the future than has been assumed by any New York City department in the past was announced a few days ago. As the plan was outlined in the daily newspapers, it gave reasonable grounds for the suspicion that a short cut to that odious institution known as "Official Censorship" was to be attempted.

In an interview with a representative of the Moving Picture World, however, Commissioner of Licenses George H. Bell, made it clear that the purpose of the outlined plan was not to impose additional burdens upon the manufacturers of motion pictures who have been co-operating with the National Board of Censorship, but to handle a situation with which the National Board has found itself unable to cope and in the handling of which the Board has asked the aid of the city department.

Under the arrangement which is being made, Commissioner Bell is to appoint of a citizen's committee, probably consisting of seven members, who are to represent the City Bureau of Licenses in the control of motion picture programs. This committee is to co-operate with the National Board of Censorship in the work which that body has been doing for some time—and, indeed, the members of the License Commissioner's committee are being suggested by the Censorship Board.

As a general proposition, Commissioner Bell explains, this new committee will have nothing to do with the censoring of pictures as it is done by the National Board; in other words, the Commissioner's representatives will not accompany the National Board people on their rounds to see pictures which are submitted for their approval by the many manufacturers of recognized standing in the industry.

The report of the National Board will be taken as official by the Bureau of Licenses in all cases where no complaints are registered. When complaints are made, however, as they sometimes are, either by the general public to the effect that pictures which have been passed by the Censorship Board should never have been allowed to reach the screen, or by the National Board that changes and eliminations which they have requested have not been made, it is the plan to have the Commissioner's committee step in and exercise such power as is given the Bureau of Licenses under the existing motion picture ordinance.

The Commissioner's committee will visit such theaters as are said to be using an objectionable film and after having viewed the picture, will make a report to Commissioner Bell. Following this, an inspector attached to the Commissioner's department will view the picture and bring back a detailed account of the story which it tells, without criticizing it in any way. One member of the National Board of Censorship and one member of the Commissioner's special committee will consider these two reports and, if they are able to agree, will decide whether or not the objections made are justified; where an agreement between these two is impossible, Commissioner Bell himself proposes to decide the question.

If objections made against a picture are sustained after this procedure, all exhibitors whose licenses to do business emanate from the New York City Bureau of Licenses will be prohibited from showing this particular picture on penalty of suspension or cancellation of their license privileges.

The Commissioner's control of picture programs will differ materially from that exercised unofficially by the National Board of Censorship in that the Commissioner will bring pressure to bear upon the exhibitor in Greater New York and will not deal with the manufacturer or producer of motion pictures, with whom the National Board people are in constant touch. The power to vise the exhibitors' programs is vested in the Department of Licenses by the following paragraph (No. 352G) in the Motion Picture Ordinance of the City of New York: "Through its Motion Picture Inspectors, as provided in subsection 352B of this ordinance, the Bureau of Licenses shall inspect, subject to the authority of the mayor, the character of exhibitions in motion picture theaters and shall report to the mayor any offense against morality, decency, or public welfare contained in said exhibitions."

It is claimed that the National Board of Censorship passes upon about ninety-five per cent of the pictures which are released in this country. This ninety-five per cent includes the releases of all of the big commercial combinations and many of the prominent feature people. The five per cent not seen are pictures made by companies which break into the field to make an occasional release and overlook the National Board quite innocently or by companies or individuals who begin operations with the definite purpose of making sensational releases which they are confident would not be passed by the National Board and therefore studiously avoid anything in the way of censorship which has been provided. It is for the purpose of taking care of this five per cent of the picture output that the Commissioner of Licenses' special committee, working in conjunction with the National Board of Censorship, has been formed.

A member of the National Board had this to say in explanation of the plan: "Do not get the impression that the National Board has appealed for help because of out and out opposition which has been encountered—for it is rarely that any opposition bobs up. Every facility possible is provided by the principal film manufacturing companies and, while the Board has no legal standing, such changes, eliminations, etc., as we suggest are usually made without protest.

"It should also be said in justice to the men who turn out the five per cent of the films which we do not see that they are not in the habit of refusing us access to their projection rooms whenever we ask to be admitted and, as a rule, are not averse to listening to any suggestions which we have to make. The trouble is that this small percentage of the releases which we do not pass upon comes from so many different sources that it has been found practically impossible to devise a plan by which we could see them before they made their appearance in the motion picture theaters."

Insofar as Greater New York is concerned, Commissioner Bell's new plan will give the National Board of Censorship an official standing which it has not enjoyed before. In dealing with the manufacturers and producers it will make it possible for the Board and their associates from the Commissioner's department to enforce their demands for changes and eliminations. The manufacturers will be told in so many words just what pictures they can provide for use in Greater New York and what pictures will not be permitted in Greater New York's theaters. Pressure on the manufacturers—in the few instances in which it is needed—will be brought to bear by destroying the market in Greater New York for such pictures are found to be objectionable.

Another reform which it is hoped to effect through the new Bureau of Licenses plan, and one which the National Board has been powerless to bring about, will have to do with the poster question which is being discussed by manufacturers and exhibitors everywhere. The Commissioner's committee will have the authority to prohibit the use of posters and advertising matter in Greater New York which they consider objectionable on the grounds that they are immoral, indecent, deceiving, or unduly sensational.

In his interview with the Moving Picture World Commissioner Bell was anxious to emphasize the fact that there is nothing revolutionary or bombastic in the new plan. "We are not attempting 'official censorship'," he said; "our aim is merely to supplement the work of the National Board of Censorship, with which I have familiarized myself within the past few weeks, along lines in perfect sympathy with those already established by the able and conscientious men and women who are engaged in keeping the motion picture industry within bounds, for the protection of the general public and the ultimate betterment of the industry itself."

FOX OPENING EXCHANGES IN SEVERAL CITIES.

William Fox, president of The Box Office Attractions Company, 130 West Forty-sixth street, has determined to enlarge the scope of his exchange operations. Up to the present time The Box Office Attraction Company has released and booked features in New York City and State, Northern New Jersey and the New England States, but the recent acquirement of continental rights for the products of two large American factories, a contract for control in the United States and Canada of some of the best foreign productions and plans already adopted for the erection of a studio in New York, influenced him to take on important additional territories. Exchanges will open at once in Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Washington, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Detroit and Chicago. As soon as these branches have been efficiently organized the territories adjacent to St. Louis and Kansas City will be opened and cultivated.

In the Southern and Western states, in all states west of the Mississippi and in Canada, all Box Office Attraction Company features will be disposed of on the state rights basis, and Alec Lorimore, formely with the Gaumont Company, will have charge of this end of the business as well as other necessary details connected with the exchanges in the new zones of activity. The Box Office Attractions Company now owns and directs more than one hundred features and is accumulating additional features each week.

Question the Censor Law.

Mutual Film Company Presents Arguments Against Pennsylvania Censor Law to Court of Common Pleas. The State Represented by the Attorney-General. Great Interest Taken by the Court.

Decision May be Delayed.

THE SUIT of the Buffalo Branch, Mutual Film Corporation against J. Louis Breitinger, Chief Censor and E. C. Niver, Assistant Censor, constituting the State Board of Censors, was argued on Thursday, June 18th in Part V of the Court of Common Pleas, at Philadelphia.

On the bench sat Chief Justice Willis Martin, Judge Robert Ralston and Judge William Staake.

The complainants were represented by George Quintard Horowitz, Senator George L. Thompson and Frank Smith. Morris Wolfe, the third deputy attorney-general, presented the arguments of the Commonwealth. Attorney-General John C. Bell was present throughout the hearing, but took no active part in the proceedings.

Attorney Horowitz began the proceedings by calling as his first witness Arthur Lucas, Jr., resident manager of the Buffalo branch of the Mutual Film Company to show how films were made and how commerce in films was carried on. There were immediate objections from the attorney for the state, who contended that these questions had no bearing whatever on the issues before the Court. Most of the questions were ruled out. Vernon R. Carrick, of the Interstate Film Company was also called as a witness but was not permitted to say much. He was followed by John E. Hennessy, the recently appointed general manager of the General Film Company in Philadelphia. Mr. Henessy said in answer to questions that his company does not object to censorship and does not find it a burden.

Mr. Horowitz then began his argument against the constitutionality of the law.

"Since the foundation of this Commonwealth by William Penn, it is proposed for the first time to put a restriction on the right of the people to express themselves freely." He said that the Pennsylvania law left the exhibitor of motion pictures without legal redress against the rulings of the censors no matter how arbitrary these rulings might be. There was no court of review or tribunal provided in the act sought to be set aside as unconstitutional. In this respect, Mr. Horowitz said the law was even worse than the censorship statute of Ohio, which made provision for a judicial review of the decisions of the censors whenever any producer or exhibitor felt himself aggrieved thereby. He went on to characterize the act as an unreasonable exercise of the police power in as much as it deprives complainants of their liberty and property without due process of law and denies to the producers of motion pictures the equal protection of the laws. He pointed out the fact that there was no provision for a trial by jury and that the act is void because it amounts to a delegation of legislative power. He contended that the law attempts to impose an unlawful burden on interstate commerce. The state, he went on to say, had no right to regulate interstate commerce. The act was furthermore in direct contravention to the principles in the Declaration of Rights.

On behalf of the Commonwealth, Morris Wolfe asserted the absolute right of the state to regulate motion picture theaters as well as other theaters. He called attention to the fact that in the days of Mayor Weaver, the showing of "The Clansman" was prohibited by the police and no one thought of disputing the right of the Mayor and the police to interfere. He dwelt on the police power of the state as the proper and legitimate source of all such legislation as this. He went fully into the question of an improper delegation of the legislative power which had been raised by Mr. Horowitz and endeavored to show by a recent decision of the United States Supreme Court that the legislative power may in certain cases be delegated under proper restrictions.

All through the argument it was evident that the judges were deeply interested. Justice Martin asked many questions as to the facts in the case. Justice Staake intimated that he thought there ought to be a censor in every studio. He was surprised to hear that the exhibitor did not always see the pictures before they offered them to the public. He declared that he had recently seen a picture in some reformatory institution showing bar-room scenes. He thought this was enough to show the need of censorship. The position taken by Judge Ralston, at first seemingly unfavorable to the motion picture interests, changed toward the end of the argument. Judge Ralston at various points in the argument interrupted counsel to say that he thought the principle of censorship could with equal justice be applied to the newspapers as well as to motion pictures. He wanted to know why the proofs of newspaper articles ought to be less subject to previous legal restraint than the originals of motion pictures.

"They might after a while want to censor our cigars," the justice remarked facetiously. "Notions of morality differ as we all know. The censors might consider a thing immoral which the majority of the people might look upon in a different light. Some persons might be shocked by the scant attire of our athletes on the track. They might consider that immoral. A strict rule of censorship according to Puritan ideals might result in the closing of all our art galleries."

The Court took the matter under advisement at the conclusion of the argument. It is not expected that there will be a decision at an early date. The Court has much accumulation of business on its hands and is always rushed with work at the coming of the big vacation.

Albert E. Brown and William Sachsemaier have joined in the complaint. They are doing business as the Overbrook Theatre Company.

Thomas Santschi.

TOM SANTSCHI, who has been upwards of five years in the service of the Selig Polyscope Company as an actor, has proved his capability in many rôles as an artist of solid attainment of versatile ability equal to every emergency that was put upon him in the vast variety of rôles that he has assumed during the past five years.

Mr. Santschi, as a boy, was apprenticed to a watch-maker, but this form of mechanical art, fine as it was, did not appeal to him. He was a natural musician, and soon began to give a great deal of attention to the affairs of the theater. A man of splendid stature, classic cast of face, he got a position in a theater and was rapidly advanced owing to his habits of study and industry.

Thomas Santschi.

This school of work equipped him so well that when he came into service with W. N. Selig, he already had the technical training so essential to giving value to pantomime and in addition that flexibility of feature and poise that gave him eminence, befitting him as a potentiaity for the silent drama.

While he was associated with the Chicago Stock Company, he had varied experiences and constantly improved as an artist. Since he has gone to California, his powers have broadened and mellowed, and made him a prominent man in the world of moving pictures. He will be recalled for heroic service as Bruce, the American hunter, in "The Adventures of Kathlyn," and prior to this he had appeared in many of the jungle plays, giving valuable service by reason of his fearlessness and assuring safety to others as an unerring shot, so that his associate artists in the dramas involving wild animals always felt safe with him. The vigor, the finish and the dominance of his impersonation of "McNamara," evil genius in "The Spoilers," added further to his laurels as an excellent and eminent actor. W. N. Selig recently added to his honors by making him a producer at the plant in California.

RIDES MOTORCYCLE INTO RIVER TWICE.

Because an excited spectator kicked the motion picture camera and spoiled the picture, Eddie Gordon, of the Blanche Company, repeated a dangerous plunge into the Hudson River on a motorcycle to furnish a thrilling climax for the four-reel photodrama entitled "The Yellow Traffic." Large crowds witnessed both performances which took place a week apart and at different points along the water front.

The first plunge was made from a sheer cliff fifty feet high near Highbridge, New York, and the picture of his remarkable feat would have been invaluable but for the fact that the camera was moved by an excited spectator and only the first part of the fall was found recorded upon the film.

The second plunge—and the one recorded in the picture—was made from the pier of a big sugar refinery at Edgewater, N. J.

Guy Coombs, Silent Leading Man

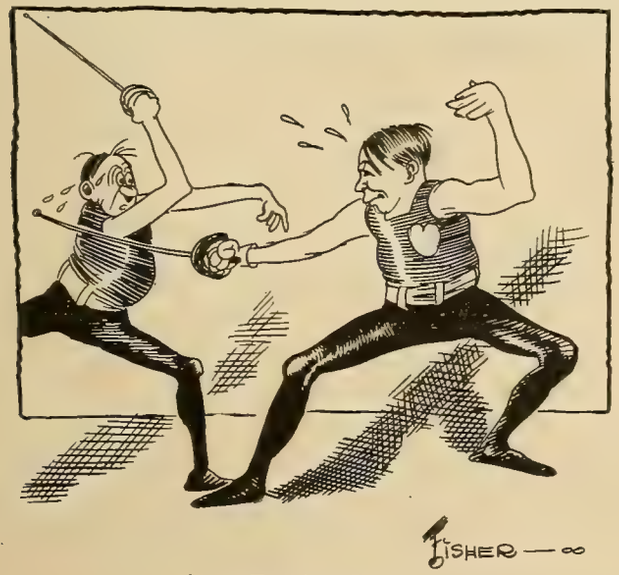
By Thornton Fisher.

MORE than fifteen years ago two lads sat in the balcony, perhaps sometimes it was the gallery of the old Academy of Music in Washington, D. C., eagerly devouring each word and action of a stirring meler-drammer with open-mouth wonderment. It was a tame performance indeed when five persons were not killed and as many more hopelessly crippled for life during the play while back in the dark recesses of the gallery hundreds of young hopefuls roundly hissed the intrigante or vociferously applauded the hero in his efforts to foil the conspiring villain.

Guy Coombs.

One of these boys was to become a future Kalem star and the other was the writer who, needless to say, did not recognize among the throng one budding genius, who in later years was to fire youthful enthusiasm with heroic roles of his own.

So it chanced that Guy Coombs and I never met until recently when I called to see him at the Kalem studio in New York City. The reception room of the director's sanctum was filled with aspiring photoplayers as I was admitted to the studio where preparations were being made for taking a big scene, and it was here the well known star greeted me.



As a Fencing Instructor.

Glance again at the title of this sketch for it fits Mr. Coombs with the exactness of his collar or shoe. Talk to him about the weather, baseball or the British policy in India and perhaps he will suggest an opinion, but concerning his work and career he is reticent. Do not deceive yourself by the thought that this attitude is assumed, for Mr. Coombs belongs to the type of man who, having nothing particular to say about himself, does not say it.

Mr. Coombs is a native of Washington City where he spent his boyhood and youth, which, according to the actor, was not conspicuous for anything usually regarded as essential to the beginning of a successful career. He never toiled in a store or drove o milk wagon to eke out a livelihood. It is not reported that a single tree ever fell on him or that he dashed before an oncoming locomotive and snatched the favorite daughter of the town's richest man from a horrible fate. He did not renounce the quiet village to plunge into the maelstrom of the rushing metropolis. Nothing like that for Guy Coombs, at least not when the prospects for achieving fame by simpler methods were available. Instead he pursued his studies in school, played the same games that other boys played, grew healthy. The monotony was occasionally shattered by witnessing a performance at one of the local theaters.

His pet sport in those days was fencing, and he became so proficient in the art that he was offered and accepted a position as fencing instructor for an athletic club in Washington.

Eventually came the yearning to become a regular actor. Again precedent received an awful jolt, for it is always necessary for papa and mama to walk in on the scene and declare their unequivocal opposition to the very thought of such a catastrophe about to submerge the family name. Mother is usually quite sure that she can never look the butcher or grocer straight in the eye again. But this is precisely what did not happen. Parental fury did not vent itself upon Guy when he calmly announced his intentions to the family.

So young Coombs became an actor. He played many parts in stock and with road companies gleaning a wealth of experience for hus future work. Among the large productions with which he appeared were "Becky Sharp" and Eugene Walter's "Boots and Saddles."

Three years ago, however, he decided to identify himself with the moving pictures and joined the forces at the Edison studio and made good. He later left the Edison Company to go with the Kalem staff, where he has attained tremendous popularity.

Mr. Coombs has worked in many war dramas for the pictures, appearing frequently as a young officer during the Rebellion. He is seen leading his troops in a savage charge or risking his life rescuing a fellow officer or soldier, and having witnessed his roles in these plays I ventured to ask if he ever had a hankering for a military life. Mr. Coombs slowly smiled as he explained that he never considered it for a moment. Seeing him play this part so well you are somewhat abashed at his statement.

He personally favors the society dramas, but hastens to add that it doesn't make any difference what he is cast in, the main idea being to play whatever it is to the very best of his ability, and, after all, that is the true mark of the real artist and accounts in a large measure for his splendid interpretation of the roles he plays.

Guy Coombs is a fine looking chap just about the type of a fellow who is peculiarly adapted to portray any character demanded. A suggestion of a smile lurks about his features as he mentions a phase of the picture business or some incident he recalls to mind—but never a word about himself. As I was engaged making the accompanying cartoon of the actor, other players came to him for instructions or advice regarding their parts in the photoplay about to be taken. Let it be said that Guy Coombs is also a Kalem director, and on the day of my visit was directing a production for the screen. If at any time you want a good listener, talk to this young man, but regarding himself—not a word.

WARNER'S FEATURES ADDS NEW PRODUCING CO.

Arrangements have been completed whereby the feature productions of the United States Film Corporation will become a regular part of the program of Warner's Features.

The United States Film Corporation is headed by Arthur Nelson, and A. R. Pelton. It is located near San Diego, California on a 220,000-acre ranch where a commodious studio has been erected. Prominent among the members of the company are Lawrence Peyton, Natalie de Lontan, Karl Formes, and others equally well known. Mr. Nelson, president and general director, has been long associated with successful productions, having written, directed and starred in a number of long-run plays. The organization makes a specialty of semi-western three-part films. The date of the first release will soon be announced.

"The Toll of Mammon."

The Excelsior's First Release, in Four Parts, Tells a Strong Story with an Obvious Moral.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

WHILE "The Toll of Mammon" is the initial production of the Excelsior Company, there is nothing in the subject to indicate the fact. Nor should there be. The picture is written and directed by Harry Handworth, who has had wide experience in production. He has surrounded himself with a most capable company, and this includes the camera operator. The four parts of "The Toll of Mammon" are nearly all in straight black and white. The few exceptions, the tints for evening, match in quality the major part of the subject.

The story is one of power, and is always interesting, even if it be not always pleasant. It takes for its theme the ambitions of a wife, not content to await the day when her husband will have the means to provide her with the luxuries she craves. Dazzled by the prospect of sudden wealth, heedless of the suffering to follow, she persists in urging her husband to lend his name to a fake tuberculosis cure. Octavia Handworth has the rôle of Mrs. Wright, the woman who has married a doctor who cannot support her in the style to which she has been accustomed. This well-known player brings to bear all her art in emotional betrayal. She is shown in joy and in sorrow, in prosperity and in adversity. Her first big moment is when she discovers the loss of the jewels she had borrowed that she might attend a neighborhood function. She skilfully handles many equally strong situations.

Scene from "The Toll of Mammon" (Excelsior)

Scene from "The Toll of Mammon" (Excelsior)

Gordon De Maine has the part of Dr. Wright, the rising young medico who following a remarkable operation is sought by the scoundrels anxious only to make money, who do not hesitate to prey upon the weak and the ill, whose supidity is matched only by the credulity of their victims. Mr. De Maine gives a fine performance—convincing, artistic. Tom Tempest has the part of the promoter who pays $50,000 to Dr. Wright for the use of his name and who compels him to take the money and to give his name in order to prevent the selling of the roof over his head. The doctor had given six months before a note for $5,000 to cover the loss by his wife of jewels that had been loaned to her by the wife of the promoter. Mr. Tempest is a good villain or a bad one, if you will. He finely portrays the unscrupulous, the wicked; he compels your dislike.

The story is well told. The picture is photographed in the Adirondacks, among the hills and on the lakes. There is a steady pull on the interest. The working out of the tale is on straight lines, steady drama, the only attempt at the spectacular being the blowing up of the launch in the final reel, and this is realistically portrayed. Many people are employed in the cast, and they are well handled. There are scenes of pathos in the ending, but these are tempered by prospects of peace at last. The ambitious woman has had her way, which was the wrong way. She as well as others has suffered. She has seen the light. "The Toll of Mammoth" is a story with a moral, a strong one, the compelling kind that will hold a house in silence. It teaches above everything else that the person suffering from tuberculosis has a chance in the hands of a competent physician and in proper surroundings—fresh, dry air and a correct diet; but that above all the charlatans must be shunned.

MARGUERITE NE MOYER.

MISS MARGUERITE NE MOYER, of the Lubin stock company, was born in Buffalo, N. Y., where she graduated from the Buffalo High School. It had been the hope and wish of her family that she would study art, as in her childhood she showed artistic ability, but try at other things as she would, the one desire to go upon the stage was foremost in her mind. Art has a great many classifications and Miss Marguerite chose the dramatic art. After achieving quite a pronounced success on the stage and hearing so much of the moving pictures, she decided to turn her talents to the movies. Two years ago she joined the Lubin forces and is to-day, after conscientious and ambitious endeavors, one of the most capable and clever young ladies of the photoplay sphere. Miss Ne Moyer is a brunette and has large, fascinating eyes—to speak correctly, she is a picture beauty differing from most "beauties"; however, she does not hesitate to make herself up in the most repulsive manner if the occasion or part demands it. She is one of the famous Ne Moyer sisters who met with such great success in Australia about two and one-half years ago.

Marguerite Ne Moyer.

BIG LUBIN SERIAL PICTURE BEGUN.

Arthur V. Johnson has begun the production of the first serial photoplay bearing the Lubin trade mark. There are to be fifteen separate stories, all being episodes in the life of the great adventurer—Lord Cecil, a nobleman impoverished through his own unselfishness—written by Emmett Campbell Hall. The character is rich in pictorial possibilities and, from the standpoint of the producer, the series will be Mr. Johnson's most ambitious undertaking. He has just returned to the Lubin studio from a ten-day motor trip through New England, where he went for recreation as well as to plan the details of his forthcoming work.

HITE GETS SUBMARINE FILMS.

From among the flock of picture magnates who bid for the marketing rights of the new "photographed under the ocean" films made by the submarine-picture-taking invention of the Williamson Brothers, of Norfolk, Va., Charles J. Hite, of Thanhouser-Mutual fame, was the lucky one. He will shortly "open" them at his Broadway Rose Gardens, the "society" playhouse where New York fashionables may see motion pictures and then dine, or even dance. After this the films will be shown to leading scientific bodies and then go on a tour of the big theaters of the country. Special representative Bert Adler is in charge of bookings.

"The Million Dollar Mystery."

Early Episodes of Big Thanhouser Serial Indicate Success of Biggest Film Project of Its Kind Ever Undertaken.

Reviewed by Randall M. White.

REPRESENTATIVES of all the important daily newspapers in New York, as well as of the several motion picture trade papers, to the number of almost two score, crowded into the little projection room at the Mutual Film Corporation's offices at Sixth avenue and Twenty-third street, Tuesday afternoon, June 23d, to see some of the early releases in the tremendous new serial, "A Million Dollar Mystery," which has been made by the Thanhouser Company and marketed by the specially formed Syndicate Film Corporation in co-operation with the Mutual.

The verdict seemed to be: "Guilty as stated in the indictment"—and the indictment, as represented by the Thanhouser company's extraordinary advance advertising campaign, was that "The Million Dollar Mystery" was the biggest and best serial ever attempted and a set of motion pictures that would establish a record for this class of productions.

"The Million Dollar Mystery," the last scenes of which were filmed a few days before the first release was made on Scene from "The Million Dollar Mystery" (Thanhouser).

Monday, June 22d, after months of patient work by the Thanhouser players, is to be offered in twenty-six episodes, each episode comprising two reels for release weekly on successive Mondays. The scenario is by Lloyd F. Lonergan from a story by Harold MacGrath. To Howell Hansel was assigned the big task of directing the production.

In a number of respects, "The Million Dollar Mystery" project is a particularly notable one in the motion picture industry. It has been handled in an unusually big way and is a gamble the success or failure of which will be followed with keen interest in the trade.

To begin with, MacGrath and Lonergan are said to have drawn down a record price for the story and scenario. Then the pick of the Thanhouser players, including the highest salaried people on the payroll, were cast in the action and the matter of expense was not considered in the making of the production. And finally, a publicity scheme with a $10,000 prize offer broad enough to embrace every section of the universe in which motion pictures are shown and enjoyed, and expensive enough to dwarf anything which had been attempted before, was devised.

The $10,000 prize is offered for the best 100-word solution to the mystery which the serial will develop as it progresses. The advertising campaign has been placed in the hands of a national advertising agency in Chicago which is working in conjunction with the Mutual Film Corporation's highly effective publicity department. Page advertisements in a number of the leading daily newspapers and big painted signs have been used to herald to the New York public the coming of the feature and this expensive advertising is to be supplemented with a national campaign intended to make the serial as big a puller in the smallest town as it is in the largest city. A quarter of a million dollars is the estimate placed on the advertising which was done for the serial before the release of the first episode.

Eight reels of the total of fifty-two, comprising four episodes, were shown at the recent private exhibition. For these it can be said that they will not disappoint even those who have read every line of advance publicity printed about the serial and by it, have been led to expect something far beyond the ordinary. "The Million Dollar Mystery," as a title, and the mention of a $10,000 prize for the solution of the mystery, gives the proposition a "wealthy" start and it strikes one as particularly fitting—if not vitally necessary—that elegance and expensiveness of production is made to stand out. That each of the episodes in the four already shown in private not only make a complete and logical chapter in the story but has been given one or more big incidents to make it satisfying in itself is also to be commended.

Part 1 of the first episode is given over to pictured information concerning the serial. A group of Thanhouser people which includes President Hite, of the producing company, and Messrs MacGrath and Lonergan, who collaborated on the photoplay production, is interesting. The principals of the action, as follows, are introduced in quite a novel way: Albert Norton, as Stanley Hargreaves, the millionaire; Sidney Bracy, as Jones, Hargreaves' butler; Florence LaBadie, as Florence Gray, Hargreaves' daughter; Marguerite Snow, as Countess Olga, adventuress; James Cruze, as James Norton, a newspaper reporter; Lila Chester, as Susan, Florence Gray's companion, and Frank Farrington, as Braine, one of the conspirators. The "Million Dollars" of the title and the greed for it which inspires the action of the story is allegorically shown with a clever conceit in which a mass of bank notes in the center of the picture is the bait for scores of darting hands belonging to invisible owners. The certified check for $10,000, signed by President Hite, of the Thanhouser company, which is to be given as a prize for the solution of the mystery of the picture, is also shown.

The action of the story begins with Millionaire Hargreave's mysteriously leaving his baby daughter at a school for girls with instructions that she be reared to girlhood and given every care, at his expense. Seventeen years later the daughter leaves the school to join her father whom she does not remember. She arrives at his home just after he has been compelled to flee for his life which is threatened by a gang of conspirators known as The Black Hundred, against whom he has apparently turned traitor. A demand has been made upon Hargreaves for a million dollars which he is known to have concealed in his home and the action of as much of the serial as has yet been shown hinges upon the efforts which are made by the conspirators (of the Black Hundred) to discover what has become of the million dollars after Hargreaves' escape. In the first episode of the serial a pair of hands—and hands only—are shown removing the million dollars in bank notes from the safe. Who owns these hands is one of the early mysteries.

Hargreave's escape in a balloon which he has arranged to have alight on the top of his house is the big thrill of the first episode.—and it is "some thrill." An encounter between two of the conspirators and the newspaper reporter (who is the hero of the story), followed by the daring escape of the conspirators from the police whom they dump off a pier into the river, is the climax of the second episode, for release June 29th.

Of the players who appear in "The Million Dollar Mystery," judging from the early releases, it seems evident that Miss Marguerite ("Peggy") Snow is destined to score a great personal triumph. Miss Snow is the adventuress of the story and her work is particularly convincing. Miss Florence LaBadie, as Hargreaves' daughter, is giving a good performance and James Cruze, as a newspaper reporter who is no stranger to dress suits, frock coats, and roses for his lady love, makes splendid use of "fat" opportunities. Sidney Bracy has a lot more than the "bit" which is common to the butler in most dramatic or photoplay productions and shows himself a fine actor in the way he carries off the big scenes in which he is a principal. Mr. Farrington, Mr. Norton, and Miss Chester give performances which warrant the statement that the cast is splendidly balanced.

CHICAGO LETTER

BY JAS. S. McQUADE

(This Week's Installment, by G. P. von Harleman.)

CABIRIA" is making a profound impression upon Chicago. The dramatic critics of the daily papers give this magnificent photodrama more space than most so-called legitimate plays. "Cabiria surpasses human belief in its magnificence of action," says Amy Leslie in the Daily News. Ashton Stevens devotes over two columns to his review in the Examiner. This is, by the way, the first time Mr. Stevens ever went officially to see a picture show. "A dollar for a seat to see this photodrama is a bargain," expresses the opinion of this rather fastidious critic.

"The Christian," which film-drama enters its third week at the Olympic, has also received unstinted praise by the Chicago papers. "Twice as fine a play as when Viola Allen played Glory," says Amy Leslie in the Daily News, and other papers are equally laudatory in their comments.

The daily papers in Chicago have not always been as friendly to the pictures as they are now, and my opinion is that it was largely the fault of picture people themselves. The tremendous advertising campaign of Wm. N. Selig with his "Kathlyn" series in the Chicago Daily Tribune, broke the ice and paved the way for a better understanding of mutual interests. The picture people were making a bunch of money and making terrific inroads on the "legitimate" theaters who were regular customers and good advertisers of the daily papers. The moving picture people did not seem to recognize that to have the good will of the newspapers, they must advertise like any other amusement enterprises. This was a great mistake, which now, in a large measure, has been rectified. Wm. N. Selig started the stone rolling, next came Universal, then the Mutual Film Corporation, and other manufacturers, taking full pages at the time for their features. This was an unprecedented event in amusement advertising and pretty soon the large downtown exhibitors, like Alfred Hamburger, Jones, Linick & Schaefer, and others, followed suit and doubled and tripled the space used by the regular theaters. This, of course, changed the attitude of the daily papers entirely, and it is now astonishing to see the space that the Chicago papers devote every day to the moving pictures. Even the "out-of-the-loop" exhibitors advertise their show in the papers nowadays. I understand, though, that some of the papers have made them a special rate on their advertising, as the average exhibitor could not very well afford to pay regular amusement rates. Some of the papers run this advertising in the form of what they call a moving picture theater directory, and practically every exhibitor in Chicago advertises his program three times a week in this section, which never occupies less than half a page. The daily papers certainly have met the picture people more than half way, and if this policy had been adopted long ago, things would have been much easier for exhibitors here in Chicago.

Adult Picture Theater Proposed.

An issue of considerable interest just now is the Geiger "Adult Only" ordinance. The Tribune comments on it editorially as follows:

"The proposal to have two classes of moving picture theaters, one for adults and one for chlidren, may prove to be the most practicable solution of the vexed question of police censorship of movie films. No one would for a moment think of giving a child the same physical diet that is given a grown up person. The same should apply to mental food. It is as proper, in fact necessary, to keep watch over the pictures that are to be shown to children as it is to watch over their reading and their associations.

"It is, of course, unfortunate that this selecting of the movies that are proper or improper for children should be done 'officially.' Primarily this is a matter for the child's parents to attend to. The father of the little boy doe not wait for the police to come and censor his conversation. He judges for himself as to fhat is proper talk in the child's presence ad what is not. In the same way it should be the business of the father or mother to determine which is a proper film for his little boy or little girl to see and which is not, or what theaters are producing safe plays and what theaters mix their entertainment with the adult rather than the child in mind.

"Since, however, both parents and theater owners have neglected to take these precautionary measures and the problem regarding the child's mind from improper impressions falls upon the city authorities, the proposal for the estahlishment of separate moving picture theaters for family patronage, as distinct from theaters that cater to 'adults only,' should be adopted. It is a measure making for sense and sanity in the muddled censorship situation."

If I should venture to offer my humble opinion on this matter it seems to me than an ordinance of this kind is liable to be greatly abused. Such an ordinance will, no doubt, be mighty welcome to the producer of white slave, drug-terror and blood-and-murder feature film thrillers, but if not restricted, I am afraid that it will cause more harm than good. With restrictions, I mean that permits for these "adult only" (why not as well "men only" and be through with it), theaters must not be given out promiscuously; only to responsible houses—with this I mean theaters that have a reputation to uphold and that cater to a decent class of people. At any rate, Tuesday afternoon, this week, we will see the outcome of this ordinance when it comes up again to be passed on by the city council.

Film Censor a Very Popular Job in Chicago.

To fill ten vacancies, one hundred and sixty-seven men and women (mostly women), anywhere from 21 to 71, appeared before the Civil Service Commission, this week, and verbally expressed their belief that their life's calling would be that of moving picture censorship. Previous employment did not act as a deterrent. Clerks, stenographers, social workers, artists, writers, dramatic critics and "movie fans," with a sprinkling of bar-tenders and manicures, felt equal confidence.

At the conclusion of a written examination a practical test was given. An uncensored film was shown and the would-be censors were asked to make a report as to its propriety. Some of the applicants did not take chances.

"The heroine rolls her eyes too much," was the criticism of a stenographer.

"Cut out the hand-holding scene on stairway," admonished another.

"The table manners of the actors are not proper in the dining room scene," said a school teacher. "People should not eat with their knives."

"Little girl must cut out chewing gum; it is a bad example," said another.

Some of the questions were substantially as follows:

"Why is censorship of moving pictures desirable and what are its principal advantages?"

"What is the distinction between censorship of moving pictures and censorship of literature and the stage?"

"Name four types of scenes that would be objectionable for general exhibition."

"Under what conditions might such scenes be shown."

The examination was conducted by Judge John E. Owens, Mrs. Gertrude Howe Britton, Mrs. Herman Landauer, Mrs. Margaret Long and Professor Orrin G. Cox, secretary of the National Board of Censorship. Eiton Lower, of the Civil Service Commission, and Captain Philip R. Crippen of Second Deputy Funkhouser's office assisted.

Announcement of the successful candidates will be made within a month.

Nielson Enters the Feature Film Business.

F. O. Nielson, one of the best known and most successful exhibitors in Chicago, has entered the feature film business, and purchased the exclusive state rights for Wisconsin, Michigan, Indiana, Ohio and the state of Illinois (except Cook Co.), for Selig's marvelous production of "The Spoilers." Mr. Nielson has rented offices on the 7th floor of the Schiller Building, and he will take care of his bookings from here.

F. O. Nielson is not the "Rothapfel" of Chicago (we don't have any such a man here), and he don't pretend to be, but he runs, according to my opinion, the best conducted moving picture theater in the city, and I have seen quite a few.

The Parkway is the model of a well conducted picture house. The projection is absolutely perfect, which I can say of very few theaters in Chicago, and the music accompanying the pictures is unusually pleasing. Of course, this alone does not make the Parkway the model picture house of Chicago. What accounts for it's popularity a great deal is Mr. Nielson's personal management of the place, and his most scrupulous attention to every little detail in order to please his patrons and give them a nice show.

The Parkway is located on Clark street near Diversey Blvd., and in the heart of the exclusive resident district of Chicago. The Parkway was built 1911 and opened for vaudeville. It was a failure almost from the beginning, as the people in this locality will not stand for a cheap vaudeville show. After having lost considerable money on this venture the owners decided to try out pictures, but even this failed, due to mismanagement. The writer, who has lived in this neighborhood for several years, had been watching the Parkway with a great deal of interest, being rather disgusted with the entire performance and the way a fine looking house was being run to the dogs. At this time I happened to meet Mr. Nielson, one day, in a congenial "thirst parlor," and we were talking things over. Mr. Nielson was running, with great success, the Kimball theater, a small house out Logan Square. He told me that he was looking for a larger house in a good locality, and I immediately thought of the Parkway. I told Mr. Nielson all about the place, and what great opportunity it would be for the right man. This interested Mr. Nielson so much that the next day he went up there to investigate for himself, and the outcome was that he acquired the Parkway.

Over ten thousand dollars was spent by Mr. Nielson on the place before hte opened, and he remodeled the entire house. Some twenty odd indirect light fixtures were put in, and a magnificent pipe organ installed. It was an up-hill fight at first, and Mr. Nielson lost many hundred dollars before he made a cent. He had the confidence, though, in the power of the photoplay, and refused to cut down his expenses even when the business was at its worst. Persistency won out and the Parkway is now playing to capacity, summer and winter, to the finest class of people in Chicago. The seating capacity is only 800, and sometimes the crowds will block up almost the entire street waiting for a chance to see the show. You can also count a score or more of automobiles stringed down for a block or more. That's the kind of a place the Parkway is.

Lasky Loses to Hamburger.

The Celebrated Players Film Co., of Chicago, announce that "Brewster's Millions" will be presented at the Ziegfeld Theater at an early date. This is the outcome of a long and strenuous fight in the Federal Court and a damage suit for $50,000.

It appears that the Chicago Censors ordered several scenes cut from the play at their first view of the production, and this made Alfred Hamburger hesitate in accepting the picture from the Lasky Feature Play Co., who held a contract to deliver one feature picture per month to Hamburger. The Lasky Company thereupon sued the Celebrated Players' Film Company for breach of contract and asked for annulment of his contract with a damage of $5,700 and the return to them of "The Squaw Man," the first feature delivered.

The Federal Court held that Alfred Hamburger had done all that a fair-minded business man could do to keep his agreement and it declared that the Jesse L. Lasky Company had breached the contract. The Federal Court issued an order compelling the delinquent company to keep their contract and deliver to Hamburger "Brewster's Millions" and all the other big feature pictures they will produce during the term of their contract.

Chicago Film Brevities.

Selig's Chicago studio is not closed, as according to some of our contemporaries. The fact is, that changes have been made in the local staff, and some members of the stock company have been laid off. The greatest part of the producing is done at the Edendale studio on the Coast, but the work shops and the laboratories of the home plant are still kept busy turning out negatives and prints.

* * *

I made a pleasant call, this week, at the new Chicago offices of the Laemmle Film Service, at 205 W. Washington street. Maurice Fleckles, friendly and obliging as ever, took me all over the place, and I must certainly say that the new quarters are mighty well equipped, light and airy. I also had the pleasure to shake hands with Carl Laemmle, who happened to be in town, and was stopping over in Chicago a few hours on his way to St. Louis.

* * *

"The Million Dollar Mystery" opened up the 22nd of June in Chicago, and at the following theaters: The President, Panorama, Cosmopolitan, Bijou Dream, Revelry, Ziegfeld, McVicker, Century, Chicago Ave. Theater, Crawford, Halsted, Hub, Kedzie Annex, White Palace, Cleremont, DuLuxe and Liberty. The story will appear in the Chicago Sunday Tribune.

* * *

"The Adventures of Kathlyn" is now ready in book form. The book is published by the Bobbs-Merrill Co., of New York, and fully illustrated from the photoplay. It is handsomely bound in cloth with wrapper in full color, showing dramatic scene from the play and beautiful portrait of Kathlyn Williams. Price at news dealers and book sellers everywhere is 50 cents.

* * *

Orchestra Hall opens July 1st with "Captain Alvarez," a six-reel photodrama by the Vitagraph Co. Prices will be 15 and 25 cents.

* * *

"Help Wanted," Jack Lait's immensely popular play at the Cort Theater, will probably be produced in moving pictures.

The Wilson Ave. Theater, having finished a week with "The Spoilers," offers for the approval of the North Shore residents, "The Drug Terror." It will remain at the Wilson for one week, giving way, on the following Monday, to the Eclectic big feature, "Les Miserables."

* * *

Jack Warner, of the San Francisco branch of Warner's Features stopped over in Chicago this week on his return from New York back to the Coast.

* * *

Phil. H. Solomon, for two years manager of the Chicago office of Warner's Features has been appointed special representative for F. O. Nielsen.

* * *

George E. Marr, proprietor of the Wolverine and Dreamland theaters, North Saginaw, Michigan, has purchased two motor driven Simplex machines for each of his houses, from the Amusement Supply Co., 160 N. Fifth avenue, Chicago.

* * *

The Photoplay Co. at 30 W. Lake street, this city, has secured the exclusive selling rights for Fotolight, a new projecting screen. Mr. Robert R. Barker reports very good business for his company.

MARY FULLER SIGNS WITH UNIVERSAL.

MARY FULLER, one of the most popular girls upon the screen to-day, has signed with the Universal. Negotiations to this effect were closed on June 20th, when Miss Fuller visited the New York offices and put her name to the contract. Also signing with Miss Fuller were Charles Ogle and Walter Edwin, her director.

Mary Fuller.

All three of these artists have been affiliated with the Edison company for some time, Mr. Ogle in the capacity of heavy and character man and Mr. Edwin as director of the plays featuring Miss Fuller. The little star herself has been with that company for several years.

As the heroine of "What Happened to Mary" series, Miss Fuller received more advertising and, perhaps, more popularity than any other girl in motion pictures. That the Universal has secured her is considered in the way of a scoop.

Miss Fuller has yet to finish the series she is now working upon before she will move her trunks to the Universal's studio, which will be probably sometime in the forepart of July. In all probability, a new brand name will be created under which to release the plays featuring Miss Fuller. As to whether Miss Fuller will work in the east or go to the company's Pacific Coast studios has not been fully decided upon, but it is likely that she will be located in the east.

Mr. Edwin, who has been directing Miss Fuller, is considered one of the most promising directors of the day. He will continue to direct her pictures with the Universal, and Mr. Ogle will be seen in the roles which have already made him famous in filmdom.

ANDREW MACK IN "THE RAGGED EARL."

Popular Plays and Players, Inc., of 1600 Broadway, New York City, are now producing as a pretentious feature "The Ragged Earl" with Andrew Mack. This play was first produced at the Academy of Music in Fourteenth street, New York City, late in December 1897, since which time Mr. Mack has been seen in it on several tours of this country and in Great Britain and Australia for the play was enormously successful.

Doings at Los Angeles.

THE EXHIBITORS here have it "on" the producers, for when fog stops the making of film, the theaters still run to full houses, but now the many manufacturers are smiling again and grinding their cameras merrily, for the sun has come out of his sullen spell, and the balmy breezes blow the warm air gently, and the wind whistles happily through the diffusers. The foggy spell has gone, and it seems to have gone for good. Much time was lost lately on account of the high fogs that came up from the sea.

* * *

Will H. White, who recently returned from a many month's tour of Central America, has joined the Oz Film Co., at Hollywood, and is the assistant technical man in the laboratory. White took many reels of interesting subjects in the Southern country, and tells an exciting story of travel and adventure down by the equator.

* * *

Mary Ruby, leading woman for the Robbins Co., is a student of the cello, but even with offers to play in public, and a good engagement, she will stay with the films. Every morning at 5 o'clock she arises and does practice on the instrument, and, when not working, her main occupation is the study of music.

* * *

The Vitagraph studio at Santa Monica is in need of snakes. The company advertised in the local paper down there "Kids, make some money, 25c. each for gopher snakes." No one says anything, but they must be going to put on some kind of a spiritual picture!

* * *

Marie Dressler, who some time ago signed with the Keystone, has cancelled all contracts for one year on account of an accident. Miss Dressler was in a comedy picture on the Venice pier, and while standing near the unfenced edge of the structure, an automobile backed into her, knocking her off. She fell into the sea below, tearing her hand painfully, and suffering several other injuries.

* * *

The Balboa Film Manufacturing Company is progressing nicely, and everything points to a favorable year for this new concern. Everyone is busy at the beach plant, and to mention each separate item of building news would be to embrace half a column. They are not "watchful waiting," but doing things.

* * *

Henry McRae and his 101 Bison players have disembarked from a Pacific Mail liner and are at home again in the Angel city, glad to be back, and feeling better than ever. They all report a fascinating and interesting voyage to the Paradise of the Pacific.

* * *

In September, 1912, Ocean Park, a beach resort near here was almost totally destroyed by fire. The Rosemary theater was burned. It was rebuilt and since the films of the fire have ben released which was shortly after the fire, this theater has exhibited the films five different times, and at each showing the house was packed to full capacity. Last week they ran the film and again the little theater was full. Shortly after the big fire, the "Boardwalk City" sprang up. It was a regular amusement pike, and this company opened a new theater. All concessionaries met, and elected the manager of the theater, James Sams, Mayor, and to this day, many people greet him as "Mayor."

* * *

After several delays Otis Turner has at last started actual production of that wonderful four reeler, "Damon and Pythias." He is working at the new ranch with a full company in the little city built for this picture.

* * *

The Oz Film Co., started operations this week with a full list of players. Last week they advertised for 60 girls to be used in the stock company, and about 600 answered the ad. It was a busy day on the big stage and no trouble was experienced in getting pretty maidens for the work. Mr. Baum piloted the inspection party, and the studio is certainly a most complete and compact one.

* * *

"Porterhouse" Porter, who acts for some company here, has been adopted by the Venice Tigers, a league ball team, as its mascot, that is, whenever he is at the games. One day lately he appeared during the last half of next to the last inning, and the home team was in arrears about two points. Immediately they came up and won the game, and he was dubbed mascot. He is a regular fan, and attends nearly all the games now.

* * *

It's all right to be burgled, but when the scamps come on one's birthday, it is kind of aggravating. That is what Miss Clara Williams thinks. She returned to her home on her anniversary and found the place robbed. Her broncho player fellows promise to remember her with articles to make up for the ones stolen.

* * *

"The Only Clue," one of those real life detective dramas is being put on by Jack O'Brien at the Mutual studios. The story is a strong one, and Eugene Pallette, Irene Hunt, and R. A. Walsh are handling it well.

* * *

A local "pink sheet" this week had a headline story about how the lady film players were going to desert the Photoplayer's club if the men did not appear on Ladies' nights in evening dress. The story went on to tell that Jack Dillon was beloved, because he was the only attender in the conventional costume. He denies the story emphatically. Informal have been these affairs, and informal they will be, say the men folks.

* * *

The Sterling studio is guarded like a jail by a burly policeman who stands at the gate and turns away the applicants for extra work. We went to the studio this week with a camera, and another cop was on the job, and when his eagle eye lit on the innocent camera, he refused entrance. No amount of explanation would do, so a message sent through the screened window of Fred Balshofer's office, brought him out in a hurry and the zealous representative of justice was made to "see." After that he has been as nice as pie. At no studios do they allow visitors to bring cameras in.

* * *

The new concrete studio being built by Bosworth, is fast nearing completion and will soon be ready for occupancy. The big plant is to be one of the most down to the minute and best on this coast. The whole place is spread over a generous lot, and facilities for producing great pictures are to be great.

* * *

Ruth Roland is playing the part of a private detective in a drama, or tragedy of her own. Some reckless driver of a large black tourer hit the nimble red racer of the speedy Ruth, and demolished one side of the handsome car. A visit to the garage, however, has made the motor as good as new, but Ruth is still looking for the stranger who hit her car.

* * *

The Photoplayer's club members are organizing a glee club and will soon make music at coming affairs. A large number of ex-singers and musicians have placed their names on the long list of "musically inclined" as the notice reads.

* * *

Walter Edwards, who directs for the Broncho company ran his machine off an embankment at the canyon studio and broke an axle, besides caving in an abode house used for mission scenes. George Osborne is directing a Kentucky story. "The Long Fued" and in one scene Miss Rhea "Ginger" Mitchell went down in quicksands to her chin, and as soon as the camera stopped she was quickly rescued, and just about in time, too.

* * *

Charles Bennett directing a Keystone picture threw a dummy over a cliff at Mt. Baldy, and badly scared three tourists who thought a real man had been killed. They scrambled for the "remains" and found the dummy with this sign on it: "Return to Keystone Film Co., and receive reward." Bennett's company was the first to go up the snow-capped mountain this season, and some excellent snow effects were snapped on the trip.

CLARKE IRVINE.

AN OCEAN LINER PICTURE HOUSE.

The steamship "Kroonland" has been chartered by a New York firm as a kind of traveling moving picture house. The course taken will be essentially a Latin-American one, with the object of carrying instruction to those large and important commercial seaports concerning the great manufacturing plants of North America.

Several of the largest representatives of the American manufacturing plants are to be taken in full operation to show them to South American neighbors. It is hoped thereby to make the southern merchants acquainted with the advanced methods of making goods. In addition to manufacturing and commercial activities, it is also intended to exhibit the following industries: road building, and road building machines, conveyors, laundry supplies, and other large machines may be shown in full operation without the necessity of carrying abroad the full and actual machinery. In reality this is a veritable traveling moving picture exposition.

This suggests that in future great expositions will be filmed, and their great and valuable resources made use of even "unto the uttermost parts of the earth."

OBSERVATIONS

BY OUR MAN ABOUT TOWN

RECENT ACTIVITY on the part of the Commissioner of Licenses and the Bureau of Fire Prevention in Greater New York has been greedily seized upon by those who are boosting the national censorship bill as support for their arguments before the committee at Washington, D. C.

* * *

Of course, the action of the fire department has not the slightest bearing upon the censorship question, but, nevertheless, the agitators are using it to convey the impression that the moving picture people (notwithstanding their contentions to the contrary) are opposed to all forms of legal restrictions. They would have the public believe that the considerations and aims of the makers and exhibitors of films are solely of a monetary nature, without regard to the welfare and safety of the public from a moral, or any other standpoint.

* * *

On the other hand, we find that the recent actions of the fire and license departments bear out to the letter the contentions set forth by the moving picture people, to wit: That all forms of violation of the laws are covered by existing regulations and the municipal authorities have full power to reach the offenders. The recent actions have also shown that the municipal authorities are constantly on the alert to stamp out evils.

* * *

Most of the newspaper reports on the activity of Commissioner of Licenses Bell have failed to give to the movement the force which Mr. Bell has injected into it. Some of the newspapers sent out interviewers to learn the effect of the commissioner's declaration upon manufacturers of films and exhibitors, but for some reason that does not appear upon the surface the results of the interviews have not been made known. Opportunity is taken to declare here, without fear of honest contradiction, that Commissioner Bell's program has been heartily endorsed by every manufacturer who submits his films for inspection by the National Board of Censorship and every exhibitor who will use only censored films. In each instance they have declared that what Commissioner Bell has undertaken is something they have been discussing for many months in trying to devise some means by which legitimate manufacturers and exhibitors might be saved from the results of the defiant attitude of film makers who have persistently ignored the National Board of Censorship and exhibitors whose greed for money made them indifferent as to whether or not the films used by them had been censored.

* * *

Commissioner Bell has performed a good service to the legitimate people in the motion picture business by his declaration that his inspectors will act against motion picture houses which run films that have not been passed by the National Board of Censorship. The commissioner's actual declaration was that it had been found upon investigation that the films passed upon by the National Board of Censorship were remarkably free from the objectionable features referred to by his department. So that, by official declaration by one of the most important departments in the government of Greater New York, the statement made by the federal censorship agitators that the National Board of Censorship is a board that really does not censor is most effectively refuted.

* * *

The federal agitators made all the use they possibly could of the statement made by a judge in Greater New York that several young people brought before him had declared they were first impelled to commit crime by impressions received from moving pictures. The court was correct, but that the accused who made the pleas told the truth is an open question. Nevertheless, the agitators were asked that the court's announcement be accepted as conclusive that Federal censorship was a necessity. It is now the duty of the legitimate moving picture to get before the committee at Washington the official declaration of Commissioner Bell with all the force possible. What he has stated leaves no open question. The court statement upon which the agitators relied was made several months ago and the pleas referred to antedated it. Commissioner Bell's declaration refers absolutely to conditions as they exist to-day and it should be given widespread publicity in every city, town and hamlet where local censorship is bewildering the public mind as to what genuine censorship is.

Another point raised by the agitators against the existing National Board of Censorship is effectively disposed of by Commissioner Bell. It has been claimed that the board has no legal authority to compel submission of films to be censored, or to proceed against those who ignore the board. The commissioner says his inspectors will visit every picture house in the city and the evil will be squelched by proceeding against the exhibitors showing offensive films. The licenses of the offending houses will be revoked immediately. This will make the exhibitors careful to see films which have not been censored are not thrown upon their screens.

* * *

Some newspaper accounts of the License Department's announcement have stated that it has been found immoral pictures have found their way into moving picture houses of Brooklyn and Manhattan. This is not quite correct. The officials claim they have been shown in all the boroughs of the city, but most of the offenders are in the Borough of Brooklyn.

* * *

A man who took pains to impress upon his hearers that he was not speaking for offenders and did not sympathize with them, but spoke only from a standpoint of consistency, said he deemed Commissioner Bell's plans the most well defined system of official censorship that could be formulated. "I do not see," he said, "how any of the picture people can endorse them and yet maintain they are against official censorship as unconstitutional. He proposes to compel censorship under penalty of closing the houses. It will lead to innumerable suits in court to determine whether the judgment of the commissioner's inspectors was correct, and to have the houses re-licensed if the films be found not immoral. It may also lead to injunction suits against the commissioner to determine whether or not his censorship is constitutional."

* * *

A well known lawyer who heard these remarks replied he thought Commissioner Bell was acting well within his authority. "When you sift the matter," said the lawyer, "you will conclude, as I do, that the commissioner is not establishing a censorship. He is acting under certain laws which empower him to cancel the license of a picture house for cause. If common decency is offended that is cause for a revocation. The commissioner does not say he will close houses that do not use censored films. He speaks of censorship only to say that the censored films have not been found offensive and he proposes to close houses in which offensive films are found. The question of constitutionality will not enter into such cases as it has in the cases now before the courts in which enforced or official censorship is fought, because the commissioner is practically only exercising the same police powers that were invoked a few weeks ago against certain Broadway theaters. The only difference is that instead of arresting the offenders and putting them on trial the commissioner revokes the house license, telling the offender that he has violated the conditions under which the license was granted, not that he has failed to use censored films."

* * *

"Does the fact that the commissioner has declared he will act against houses using uncensored films convey to your mind a question of discrimination in favor of houses using censored films, or appear as pressure to make the exhibitors drop all but such films?"

* * *

"Absolutely not. Stretch the point as far as you wish and the nearest you can get to pressure is the implied injunction by the commissioner to exhibitors that they will avoid trouble by using only censored films. By not doing so they take the risk of getting offending films on their screens. He does not say he will not revoke the license of a house which uses censored films if an improper film should get by. The commissioner is not after the exhibitor, but through him is after the film makers, who apparently are afraid of censorship."

JOE SMILEY'S BIRTHDAY PARTY.

Colonel Joseph Smiley celebrated his birthday on June 18, entertaining a merry party of the Lubinville players. At his beautiful home, Lillie Leslie, who is the colonel's lately acquired bride, superintended the service of choice delicacies for supper, over which Director Lloyd B. Carleton presided as toastmaster. Many costly gifts were presented and a jolly good time was enjoyed until the small hours, while no one looked at the clock. It is hard to over-estimate the regard in which Smiley is held by his associates of the Lubin studio and the wishes offered for the many "Happy returns of his Birthday" were many and sincere.

Foreign Trade Notes

PARIS LETTER.

(Special Correspondence to the World.)

IT IS A SIGN of the times that two moving pictures of outstanding merit are being screened at two leading Paris theaters. At the Theater Rejané, Captain Scott's expedition to the South Pole is drawing capacity business and the film version of Sarah Bernhardt's great success L'Aiglon is attracting a first-class audience to the Chatelet. The latter production is the first ambitious attempt that has been made in this city to present a feature film along the lines of a theatrical show. Posters advertising the films, display the names of the leading artistes as in ordinary theater bills.

* * *

There has been a typical Parisian affaire about L'Aiglen, which has proved a good boost for the Chatelet. Madame Sarah Bernhardt started a law court action to prevent the exhibition of the pictures. Edmond Rostand, author of the play wired Madame Bernhardt to the effect that he would not defend the suit and offered to hand over his share in the profits—amounting to some forty thousand dollars—to the actress. Madame Bernhardt replied that she didn't want Rostand's dollars but merely wished to protect his and her rights. She claimed that L'Aiglon was the property of the Bernhardt Theater repertory and therefore neither the play nor a reproduction of it could be given elsewhere let alone in a playhouse located exactly opposite the theater where the play was first staged in 1900. Subsequently Madame Bernhardt withdrew the action. It should be noted that the celebrated tragedienne was not asked to play in the moving pictures and it is generally believed that this fact sorely grieved her and was the real cause of the proceedings. Since it's initial presentation, L'Aiglon—the play—has brought in $1,000,000. Edmond Rostand's share in the profits amounted to $100,000.

* * *

A photoplay showing the advantages of learning typewriting and shorthand has been produced for the Paris Oliver Typewriter Company. The pictures show how the only capable breadwinner of a nearly destitute family becomes an Oliver Girl and restores happiness to the home.

* * *

Felix Weingartner, who has been leading the orchestra at the Champs Elysees Opera House where the Boston Opera Company is now playing, tells me that he is highly satisfied with the cinematograph orchestra conducting pictures he posed for recently in Berlin. "I think there is a great future for these pictures," he said, "and by means of them orchestras may be conducted by my baton simultaneously in Paris, London, New York, Vienna, and in fact anywhere. A Berlin corporation is exploiting the films.

* * *

There is still much mystery concerning the showing of Edison's Kinetophone at the Champs Elysees Opera House. Messrs Edison's representatives here deny all knowledge of the arrangement but I have it on good authority that the pictures will be seen in the Avenue Montaigne house next month, under the management of a certain Mr. Love.

* * *

Carlos Roditi, a nephew of Fernand and Gaston Akoun one time showmen at Coney Island and now proprietors of Luna Park, Paris, is starting in the film business. His concern will be known as the Nuoka Film Trading Establishments. Carlos—as he is generally called—is a hustler with American methods at his finger tips. He is now negotiating with a big United States company for a Continental agency. He is also organizing a great event, concerning which I must refrain from giving particulars until a further date.

* * *

President Poincare and Lord Mayor De Vansittart Bowater, of London, and a contingent of Aldermen attended a gala performance given by the City of Paris at the Gaumont Place Hippodrome on June 6th. The public was not admitted. The great hall was lavishly decorated. In the Presidential box were displayed precious Gobelin tapestries valued at $40,000. This was the first occasion on which the French President had attended a moving picture show. The programme included topical pictures showing the visit of the English guests, Gaumontcolor trichome films, a special musical cinematograph production "The Song of the Sea," an educational subject and "The Voice of Patriotism" and "L'Agonie de Byzance." Outstanding features of the entertainment were the fine orchestral and choral accompaniments. The gala was a huge success and the press was loud in praise of Leon Gaumont and his great picturedrome.

* * *

Number five rue de Provence is the location of the Success Film Company, a new buying, renting and marketing firm.

* * *

The Film Fabriken Danmark, of Copenhagen, have appointed Mlle. Halley as French representative.

* * *

Prompted by the favorable reception of his feature films Georges Lordier, director general of the Grandes Filmas Populaires has taken possession of the big studios recently rented by the defunct Lux Company. Lordier held a big opening reception last week. The leading scene in a coming film was registered prior to the party partaking of a champagne luncheon.

* * *

A moving picture adaption of Henri Bataille's play "La Femme Nue" has been produced with Lydia Borelli in the leading role. A special exhibition was given at the Colisee Cinema.

* * *

Pathé Frères have secured the French rights of the Gloria production "Nero and Agrippine" for the sum of $30,000. It is called the million franc film and is being rented on ordinary terms.

* * *

Police Prefect Hennion's educational moving picture class for young constables has just been inaugurated. The pictures are being photographed under M. Hennion's personal supervision and are acted for the most part by members of the force.

* * *

One film shows how an armed burglar should be tackled, another, the way to save a drowning man. The most interesting picture yet prepared is that which shows the method of handling a murder case. The body is discovered. The police are called. A careful examination of the scene of the crime is made. Furniture and effects are left as they were on the arrival of the officers. Then talc powder is sprinkled on the safe and desks and the finger prints are disclosed. A clue is followed up which leads to an arrest. The prisoner is brought before the examining magistrate and confronted by witnesses and the prosecution's evidence. The murderer confesses—and the lesson is over. Prizes will be awarded to progressive students.

* * *

The Odeon Film Company's first production is "La Fille du Garde Chasse" (The Gamekeeper's Daughter) an adaptation from the play by Fontanes and Decori.

* * *

Joseph Menchen has disposed of his beautiful moving picture park at Epinay sur Seine. He will nevertheless retain his Paris offices and continue to produce films. Menchen's Arsene Lupin series is now practically ready for release.

* * *

There was a law court sequel to Louis Aubert's seizure of several copies of the Kleine Cines production "Quo Vadis?" The Tribunal of Commerce decided that the Cines Company were proprietors of the film. Aubert was ordered to return the reels in question, pay heavy damages and have inserted ten announcements in trade papers. There will be an appeal against the judgment. Readers will recall that Louis Aubert was granted renting rights of "Quo Vadis?" for a certain period. The Cines Company then opened offices in Paris and commenced to rent all its productions including "Quo Vadis?" direct.

JOHN CHER.

J. D. WILLIAMS ON AUSTRALIA.

I HAVE READ with greatest interest your Chicago correspondent's letter which appeared in your issue of June 20th, as result of an interview he had with Mr. Stanley Twist who had just returned from Australia. It contains much valuable information which doubtless proved interesting reading to your subscribers who are probably surprised to learn of the big way in which the picture business is handled out in that country. The article, however, contains a few inaccuracies and without in any way wishing to criticize your Chicago correspondent, Mr. McQuade, or belittle Mr. Twist, I feel as though you owe it to your many Australian readers as well as to those interested in America to correct any false impression which they might have gathered from the article as to the kind of picture houses they have in Australia. According to the article, it would appear that while giving them full credit for the size of the principal theaters where films are shown, Mr. Twist gives the impression that "they are all big barns and that there isn't a real theater in all Australia for that matter, either legitimate or picture, but that they get by and do the business nevertheless."

Mr. Twist speaks about the houses not being modern and this prompts me to suggest that I am afraid his tour of Australia was not extensive. No doubt a great many large exhibitors and manufacturers in America know that the high class motion picture exhibition had its origin in Australia. The Melba and the Brittania Theater in Melbourne (built especially for pictures) represent an investment of almost a million dollars. Their location, construction and appointments are ideal and, with one or two exceptions, there is nothing to equal them in America.

Having spent four years in the moving picture business in Australia and being greatly interested in all that pertains to the advancement of the industry, I am anxious that all the exhibitors in America should become acquainted with the conditions that exist in the exhibition of motion pictures in Australia. The articles by your Mr. W. Stephen Bush are doing much to bring to the exhibitor his sense of responsibility and it will be of interest to most American exhibitors to know that many of the benefits and the high standards which he is advocating have to a large degree already been accomplished in Australia.

I shall never forget the first evening I spent in Australia at a picture show. Previously I was engaged in the business in America and I left for Australia because I believed from all I heard and read of conditions out there that there was an opportunity to develop a business in a way where originality and personal work would be more likely to count than in the United States. I had always chafed at the thought of not being able to select my own program, believing that therein was the fundamental principle of success in exhibiting motion pictures. While I thought I understood the conditions, of course, it was impossible to know the real situation before actually getting out there on the ground.

On the evening referred to, I dropped into a picture show next door to the hotel where I was stopping. The show was billed as West's Pictures. The name of the theater was the Palace. Never have I entered a more beautiful little theater. It had a seating capacity of about 1,200 and an orchestra of fifteen or more, intelligently directed by a leader whose name I afterwards learned was DeGroen, known as the Sousa of Australia. The music was beautiful and was cued perfectly to the pictures. The general atmosphere was one of refinement throughout. I paid sixty cents for the seat I occupied. As I had gone out with the idea of engaging in the business, I remarked to a couple of young men who accompanied me to Australia that I would have to go some to beat that, for truthfully I have never enjoyed an evening's entertainment more. It was there and then that the tremendous possibilities of the film business dawned upon me. I had often dreamed of what the future was to be, but this first night in Australia brought it home to me in a way I shall never forget.

Afterwards I met the general manager, Mr. T. J. West, who is known in Australia as the "Grand Old Man" of pictures, and he is indeed worthy of that title. After studying his career, I came to the conclusion that he had done more towards elevating the standard of exhibiting pictures than any other single individual in the business. During the time I remained in Australia I built several beautiful picture houses. I inaugurated the continuous show there, charging half the price usually demanded and showing a program one half as long. From the beginning I was successful. I had not gone very far before I found, however, that charging a cheap price of admission was a mistake, and in the last houses built the price was double that which I usually charged.

In Australia the pictures are selected on their merits. The exhibitor is not a mere figurehead who takes whatever picture the exchange chooses to give him. However, most exhibitors do follow a few big houses in selecting their programs, but they know that the manager of these big houses has most carefully scrutinized every picture and passed upon its merits before it was shown in his theater. Nowhere in all Australia do they change their program more than twice each week. The picture theaters are very liberal users of newspaper space and carry twice as much advertisement for their shows as the regular theaters do.

The market conditions in Australia at present are not so good from the manufacturer's standpoint. The exchanges control the market there and it is only human nature for them to buy their pictures as cheaply as possible. Some day the American manufacturers will realize the advantage of pooling their interests and maintaining an export department operated on their joint account with a view to marketing their products in foreign countries. Mr. Twist refers to my Australian experience. For months before leaving Australia I had been considering the idea of coming to New York to engage in the business, as I knew that it was bound to go ahead in America as it had progressed in Australia.

A new era is on in reality in our own city of New York. The Strand Theater is setting the pace. Its manager, Mr. S. L. Rothapfel, is another T. J. West and great credit is due to him and to the owners of this palatial structure dedicated to the motion picture art. Without a doubt these Strand Theaters or others like them will be constructed with great rapidity all over the country. What was needed was just such example as the clever and bold directors of The Strand Theater have given and such theaters will prove a tremendous incentive to manufacturers to make better and more expensive productions.

The future policy of our great industry will be moulded within the next six months. Let us all, manufacturers, exchanges and exhibitors, co-operate in placing it on such a high pedestal that no demagogues or grafting politicians can successfully attack it at any point. In conclusion, I sincerely trust that the part Australia has played in the general uplift of the greatest form of amusement and education the world has ever known will not be forgotten.

BRITISH NOTES.

(Special Correspondence to the World)

THE OLD PRISON at Wallasey near Liverpool has succumbed to the "movies." A few weeks ago it was opened as a moving picture theater.

* * *

A financial newspaper of considerable influence sought to create a stir last week by printing a misinformed article upon moving-pictures, which were continually referred to as "the passing craze." Another paper recently informed its readers that already the moving-picture was on the wane in the United States and it was only a question of a few months before the same effect would be felt here. I need not add the comments of the American film agent who showed me the paper.

* * *

London was startled the other day by the appearance in Fleet Street and the Strand of an eccentrically attired young man who distributed souvenirs on his journey. Although the public have nearly begun to regard every little street sensation as arranged intentionally for the pictures it took the bystanders some time to discover that the youth was only impersonating a member of the "Suicide Club." This novel by Robt. Louis Stevenson, is being filmed by the British and Colonial Co.; and from what I hear it is super-abundant in sensation.

* * *

Ed. M. Roskam, of the Life-Photo Film Corporation, N. Y. and Samuel Goldfish, of the Lasky Feature Play Company were among last week's American visitors to London. Mr. Goldfish, during his stay here is making his headquarters at the office of the Famous Players Co. in Charing Cross Road.

* * *

The annual meeting of the Cinematograph Exhibitor's Association of Great Britain and Ireland was held at Leeds last week. The shows marked progress, the membership being increased five hundred and fifty. Among the resolutions passed were the following: "In view of the detrimental effect upon cinema-hall proprietors by reason of certain hivers and manufacturers leasing films to music hall proprietors throughout the country before giving the genuine exhibitors an opportunity to tender for the same film the council earnestly appeals to those interested to refrain from a continuation of this practice." "That this Association views with great apprehension the action of certain makers and agents in dealing with the whole or part of their products on the exclusive programme system and earnestly urges its members in the interests of the trade to refrain from supporting such firms." A determination has also been expressed to oppose an attempt by the York Corporation to run a municipal picture theater.

J. B. SUTCLIFFE.

VIENNA AND BUDAPEST.

Special Correspondence to the World.

ON A RECENT VISIT to Vienna I had an interesting chat with Leopold Loebenstein, president of the Polo Film Vertrieb. He represents many famous film firms including Selig. "Selig's are very popular in Austria," he said. "The people here like snappy, brisk pictures but absolutely bar social dramas. Kathlyn Williams is a great favorite and her name is boomed everywhere. The picture theater patrons in Vienna have their special screen favorites and a popular name attached to a film is certain of bringing good business. I have just come back from a short stay in Budapest," he went on, "and I found business very bad there. There is little or nothing to be done in Hungary, the trade being practically in the hands of two firms. Budapest boasts of two magnificent picture theaters, the Omnia and the Apollo Projectograph. At these halls the finest films in the world are shown, but nevertheless attendances are small."

* * *

It is an astonishing fact that Pathe, Gaumont and Eclair are the only firms producing moving picture journals in the Austrian capital. Budapest, however, has the Kino Report, a new and enterprising concern which films all the important events taking place in Hungary.

* * *

At the Kaisergarten, Vienna's amusement park, a novel series of publicity photoplays never fails to draw a crowd. The films which have been made for about half a dozen firms are extremely ingenious and "pulling." That of the Omega Watch Company depicts most graphically how trains can be missed and business lost through faulty chronometers. It is rather surprising that, in other countries more use is not made of the cinematograph as an advertising medium.

* * *

Also at the Kaisergarten there is the Intimes Kino. It is a prime favorite among the mass of side shows and always showing to capacity notwithstanding the hot weather.

* * *

Vienna film men have been complaining about the censorship, but I don't think they need have much worry if Messter's "Diva in Noten" is able to evade the scissors as apparently it has done judging by what I saw at the Intimes. In spite of the risqué nature of several of the scenes, it is an excellent picture, thoroughly well played and cleverly produced.

* * *

Marcus Lowe and Lee Shubert were rceently in Vienna looking for novelties. The latter had a great find about which I shall give further information in my next contribution.

* * *

In Budapest, I saw a somewhat curious film entitled "Three hundred years." The comedy tells the story of a girl who in jest promised to marry her would-be husband "three hundred years hence." The man dreams that his desire has been fulfilled and the wonders he sees in 1914 supply the main scenes in the film. The chief interest in the production lies in the fact that it was made for the purpose of raising money for the purchase of aeroplanes for Hungary. Every artist in the big cast is an aristocrat. The society reception shown is the "real thing." The distinguished artists played their parts remarkably well. Needless to say, the picture has proved an immense success and has already brought in a large amount of money.

JOHN CHER.

THE ECLAIR "WESTERN GUN."

During the week of novelties, souvenirs and advertising suprises of all kinds at the Grand Central Palace, New York, from June 8 to June 13, one of the most sensational and original hits of the Exposition was the Eclair "Western gun" distributed by that company at its booth. This deadly-appearing and realistic-looking revolver had all the earmarks of an honest-to-goodness mining camp weapon. On the handle was imprinted a group of the Eclair Western players and on the barrel on one side was the slogan "Eclair Hits the Mark," while on the other side was imprinted photographs of the leading Eclair players in bull's eye frames and the barrel carried the advice: "Aim for Bigger Receipts with Eclairs."

Another novelty which attracted considerable attention and was carried away by most of the people who attended the Palace was the little souvenir in the form of an Eclair trademark on the inside of which were photographs of the leading Eclair players.

The Oz Film Co.

THE OZ FILM CO., headed by L. Frank Baum, the author, of "The Patchwork Girl of Oz," has started actual production in the new studio at the block between Gower and Lodi on Santa Monica boulevard. The lot is one block long, and half a block deep, and more space is at the disposal of the company. The grounds are part of an estate created some 35 years ago by Senator Cole, who founded the city of Colegrave, which is just opposite the new picture plant. The place is one of the old landmarks of the early days of Los Angeles. Harley Hamilton, organizer of the Los Angeles Symphony, tells of a great reception that he attended here some years ago, when the house was the scene of many big social functions. But that is delving into history. What was once a great drawing room, is now the projection and dark room of the large plant, and the dining room has been converted into the general offices. Every room of the three-story mansion has been remodeled and utilized for the manufacturing of feature films.

Main Building, Oz Film Co., Hollywood, Cal.

On half the lot has been built an enormous stage 65 by 100 feet, with a back building two stories high to be used for scene docks, paint frames, property rooms, and carpenter shop. The building is 24 feet wide, and extends the full length of the stage, 100 feet. The upper story is made into fine dressing rooms, fitted with hot and cold water, two large windows overlooking the stage, and with every modern convenience that can be thought of. Midway between the two sections of ten rooms is a double shower-bath room, and lavatories.

The stage is a feature in itself, being large enough for any master production that the fairy tale producers wish to put on. A large trap 7 feet deep, 65 feet long, and 6 feet wide has been constructed of cement. This is to be used for disappearing scenes, rivers, lakes, and many other things.

The diffusing system is somewhat original, and is exceptionally simple. The light will be kept from the sides as well as the top of the stage, and the means of working it will be quite easy. Along the front, a string of small handy rooms is to be built for storing permanent props.

At one side, near the stage has been built another dressing room house. Here the minor players will be taken care of. Two mob rooms each 20 by 46 feet have been included in this house which will also be equipped with bathing rooms and lavatories.

Much of the scenery and props is to be made of papier mache, and for this work a separate shed has been arranged which is at the side of a fenced enclosure. Nearby is the large concrete vault, which was built to store the film and cameras in. A cement and gravel driveway allows free passage through the large grounds, and out in front. This studio is really the most beautiful in this vicinity, having a grand setting of old eucalyptus and pepper trees, with plenty of other varieties nearby. Several giant pines add to the picturesqueness of the grounds, and every visitor to the studio remarks on the beauty of the location. In front of the plant runs the car line from Los Angeles to San Fernando valley, Hollywood, and the beaches on Santa Monica bay.

Joseph F. Macdonald has started on the first picture, and everything has assumed the look of a busy producing plant. The laboratories are being finished, and everything is now ready for the work of turning out the stories that were written by Mr. Baum. Harold Ostrom is assisting him at the business end. As time goes on, this new company, which is well backed, will produce all of the fairy tales, including some of the famous stories like "The Wizard of Oz," "The Patchwork Girl," "The Tik Tok Man," and many others equally as fascinating.

CLARKE IRVINE.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Not a Bit Of It.

L. J. SCOTT, of the Gem Theater, Warrensburg, Mo., starts off a letter by saying that he does not want to "bother" us with these contributions of his. To any others who feel the same way about it, we should like to explain that the only time we get bothered is when the stuff does not come in. We are here to pass along ideas and we've never thought and we've never been told that we are more clever than all the exhibitors. When anyone succeeds in convincing us that we are, we'll undertake to write this department single handed. Until then we appreciate all the help we can get, and this condition is likely to continue indefinitely.

Mr. Scott enclosed a handbill with request that it be compared with some of the sensational stuff. It is largely an advertisement for "The Adventures of Kathlyn." Half of the sheet is taken up with an odd cut of Miss Williams. Below that the title and the series title appear in heavy type, the only other black lines being another title and the name of the house. There is a brief sketch of the leading points of appeal: the whole story up to the climax in 150 words. It probably would not hold the attention of the busy man on a busy street, but it will get hold of a man in a small town and lead him down to the theater. It tells the big points and tells them in such a way that heavy type is not needed for emphasis. One thing we like is the use of ¶ marks to point up the important lines. This will give the idea:

> THE COUNCIL OF THREE, the highest authority in Allaha, decides that Kathlyn must survive two ordeals before she can occupy the throne without marrying. ¶ In the first ordeal she is to be placed in a leopard trap as bait and securely tied. ¶ The other ordeal is that of being placed alone and unarmed in an arena with twenty hungry untamed lions. ¶ How she successfully passes through these harrowing experiences makes an absorbing picture.

Mr. Scott also sends a couple of house programs. One gives this schedule for the handling of serial stories. It may help others to scheme their presentations.

> No doubt the series pictures have aroused your interest. Much extra effort has been expended in order to make each one a little above the ordinary run of pictures.
>
> In order that there will be no confusion regarding dates and no chance for those interested to miss out on a single picture we have set Wednesdays and Fridays aside as Serial Nights.
>
> Every Friday you will see either Mary Fuller as "Dolly of the Dailies" or Kathlyn Williams in "The Adventures of Kathlyn."
>
> As the other Serial Pictures are released only once a month, we have made arrangements to rotate them in the following order: May 6th, Ben Wilson in "The Chronicles of Cleek"; May 13, Wm. Wadsworth in "Wood B. Wedd"; May 20, Andy Clark in "Those Clever Kid Comedies"; and, May 27, Barry O'Moore as "Octavius, Amateur Detective."
>
> Every Wednesday and Friday.

Too Much.

Tom Gaines, of the Best Theater, Hillsboro, Texas, wants to know what we think of his advertising, the same being a circular letter. We think he is trying to make one poor little circular letter work beyond the union hours. There are forty lines of single spaced reproducing typewriter type advertising seven subjects and the house's past record. We believe that not many of the people who receive this will read from top to bottom or even half way down and those who do will not remember the subjects and the dates. We just gave it to a girl of average intelligence to read as a test and she remembered two titles and no dates. Mind you, this might not be long for a weekly program or a monthly program or something like that, but it is a mighty long letter unless it comes from your best girl, and people will not read long letters where they might be coaxed to read twice as much type. The stuff is well worded, but it covers too much ground for this form of vehicle. If you are walking five miles on foot it seems longer than ten in an automobile, and ten in a one-horse buggy seems longer than twenty-five in the car. Five hundred words of advertising is not too much for a circular. It is too much for a letter. Any one of those seven subjects could be effectively advertised in a double-spaced letter, but it is too much to expect the reader to remember seven titles and five dates.

One-One.

U. S. Hill, of the Lyceum Theater, Scranton, Pa., sends volume one, number one, of Reel News, explaining that this theater is going over to pictures for the summer and is getting ten cents for that sort of a show. Reel News is being overdone as a title. Why not Reelisms for a change? No effort seems to have been made to run a regular program, the effect aimed at being a gossipy sheet rather than the formal advertising program. One story gives a list of the coming feature reels that are available for use and asks the patron to check the three most desired, promising that this expression of opinion will guide the formation of the coming programs. No prize is offered for the best guess, though it is added that all who append their address will receive the publication free. Any hint of a prize would defeat the object aimed at, which is to give the reader the proper appreciation of the fact that the house is anxious to please its patrons. The News starts off well; well enough to go to eight pages with enough outside advertising to carry the cost of the additional pages.

Brief Volumes.

Here is a letter from J. F. Davied, of the Cinema Theater, Cynthiana, Kentucky. He writes:

> I am enclosing some samples of the weekly programs that I have been getting out. I hope you will give me your "honest to goodness" opinion of them, especially the present volume. I have just been in the business since October and that looks like a formidable number of volumes, but the first was simply an opening one, and the second had to be discontinued on account of its expensiveness. I had most of the third kind printed on cardboard and hung on door knobs, but there seemed to be so much waste about them and I took to heart your little sermon about writing about your pictures to the exclusion of the house and the enclosed folder—volume 3. No. 1, is the result. Now, please, what do you think of it—copy, layout, typesetting and all?
>
> I've taken everything out of the World that I could lay my hands on, but I'm hoping to have a brilliant or merely useful idea myself some of these days to pay for all I've received. I do not know whether you answer these enquiry letters personally or not, but in case you do you will find enclosed a stamped envelope. If you don't—why I read everything in the World every week anyway.
>
> Thanking you for all your "dope" that I've already used and am going to keep on using, I am.

The submissions form an interesting study of an effort to find just the right idea. Taken in combination, they are more valuable than any one would be or all four sent one at a time.

The first issue was an effort at a four-pager devoted mostly to chat, with the program on the right-hand column of the first page, and six advertisements. There were readers for the features and some gossip. Apparently this did not look right, for presently we find the house using all of the space and giving only the program with no reading matter of a general nature. The makeup is artistic, but almost too much so, which is a possible thing when opposed to utility. The front carries the name of the house in the center of the sheet with a message of welcome in the upper left-hand corner and the date in the right lower corner. The back gives the times of performance, the prices, the service used and a hint that undesirables are not wanted. The inside pages give the program with many of the casts and a line or two of comment. It was set largely in italics, with the cast in a small eight point and the titles in twelve point bold. It would be an excellent program for a kid glove section, but done in brown on brown on expensive stock, it probably cost too much for the house.

The next change was to a single white sheet six by eleven, the dates, titles, some leading players and a line or two, interesting, and giving more for the money than the more expensive issue. Then the door-knob came along and now what might be termed a vest pocket door-knob, a four-pager, 3½ by 6½. There is some house talk front and back and the condensed program inside. The latter is not so good, since to get it all in the space there is used a small full face for the titles that is scarcely large enough. It is probably machine stuff, which reduces the cost of composition. An underline of one point rule would help not a little and not greatly add to the cost of composition. They have struck a convenient and yet inexpensive form in the present folder, and in time, if they wish, they can add a little advertising and get an eight page issue at no additional cost. The paper is sufficiently good, a brown, printed in black, and the press work is excellent. If they can get a machine italic it would be well to put the casts in that type . They are using straight machine composition, with a thirteen-em column, which probably keeps the cost down considerably. They are about right as they stand. Now to make the front and back pages work even harder.

Mr. Davied asks for a personal criticism if that is permissible. It is not. We would like to write personally to all of the friends of the department, but we are married and our wife won't let us stay out nights and we have about all we can do daytimes as it is.

The Olympian Newsletter.

Lately we asked Harold Ballou for some data on his Olympian News Letter, the house organ of the theater on the same name in Seattle. It is a letter size sheet, printed on both sides with a letter head and finished off in mimeograph. The program proper is a little more than five inches wide, the rest of the space being taken up with house or general advertising running the long way of the paper, while the program runs the short way. Mr. Ballou writes:

> When we get our program for the week from the exchange I look through the "Comments on the Films" for criticisms of the subjects assigned us and base my short descriptions upon them. And, by the way, if anything is booked us that, judging from the "comments" is objectionable according to the standard of our audiences, I request a change and it is invariably made. I find the "comments" reliable and almost indispensable.
>
> I do the printing on a mimeograph. The letter heads are purchased in lots of twenty-five thousand and the entire cost of an issue of two thousand, not counting time or distributing, is about three dollars. The little advertising they contain nearly covers the cost. The time required for writing the mimeograph stencil and running through the machine is no more than would be consumed in making up copy for a printed sheet and reading proof.

I believe the mimeographed "News-Letters" carry a greater prestige than printed matter; as they resemble typewritten letters they have a sort of personal appeal and get a more general reading. The disadvantages lie in not being able to use cuts and the necessity of brevity in descriptive matter. But I do not consider the latter a disadvantage for I am convinced that to get the stuff read it must be brief.

Now and then we get a copy of the Olympian that is as bad as some of the press copy sent out by certain companies that Hugh Hoffman calls "out of focus." It is too dim to be read. The various type devices cost more and take more time, but they give a more generally good impression. The time advantage is all with the mimeograph, but there is apt to be too much ink or too little. We do not quite agree with Mr. Ballou that the mimeographed matter is more effective than the printed program, but he assuredly can save time, and his copy is phrased to "get there." Two lines on the present program impress us. As has been said, Mr. Ballou comments on the films . One comment is to the effect that a certain release is "not the kind of story the title would indicate." That sort of thing is an inspiration. We know lots of good stories that have been damned by their titles one way or the other. This title suggests a revolting theme, not at all what the story really is. But get this one:

> Many favorable comments are made on the absence of posters from the Olympian front. Once in a while we fall from grace and place a framed one sheet nightmare in the office window, but we feel like being caught stealing watermelons while doing it. Somehow posters in front of a pretty theater remind us of a wart on a pretty girl's nose.

We wish Mr. Ballou would send in two photographs of his house, one for publication and one to be framed for our own office. Don't get the idea that Mr. Ballou has nothing attractive in his lobby. The same sheet speaks of his hand painted program and we suppose that he uses photographs as well, but the glaring poster is absent.

The place for the poster is up or down the street or over in the next block. Advertising by means of the house front is not merely a game to see how many posters you can drape around your front door and still leave room for a thin man to get in sideways. One of these days we are going to bring our camera over to town and photograph a certain house over on Third Avenue and let you decide which you prefer. Make your lobby attractive with photographs and things, but don't hide it.

Faces.

Somewhere in these United States there is a place called the Woodland Airdome and Park. Just where this particular one is we do not know because there is nothing on the printing to show and the wrapper was lost before it came to us. Anyhow, it's a pretty place, to judge from the cut, and they use a good argument on a circular a couple of inches too large for comfort, which is bordered with cuts of the trade marks of the various Universal brands, under each brand the names of three leading players being printed. The text, in print, says:

REMEMBER THIS

"No two faces are alike."
"You do not forget faces."
"The human mind has a faculty for remembering faces."
Therefore when you see on the margin of this sheet the brands of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company
"The Largest Film Manufacturers in the World"
there will be brought to your mind the faces of the great actors and actresses who produce them and you will realize they are the stars of the picture world.

Below they give the name of the operator, the names of the musicians and the assurance that all employees are union men. The faces idea in connection with the trade marks of any combination of companies, is capable of a variety of treatments. Portrait cuts may be substituted for the trade marks with equally good effect.

Finishing Up.

The Plaza theater, New Orleans, had gone over to the Licensed attractions. This gives the Fichtenberg attractions in that city the celebrities of the Licensed and Universal combinations and most of the feature stuff. To celebrate, John Bunny's face goes on the front cover, staring out from a black ground. We've got to hand it to the Spotlight, the house program for the circuit, for getting vastly effective one-color front page effects, mostly in black. Part of this is due to inventiveness and part is due to the use of a good grade of black ink that prints a real black.

Going to Produce.

Lots of houses now have their own camera for making a local news weekly, but the Third Street Theater, Easton, Pa., makes that scheme look sick and weary with this announcement:

PLAYS AND PLAYERS WANTED!

> We propose to produce a number of comedies with the scenes laid in and around Easton, starting as soon as possible. We have a full equipment for taking and finishing pictures. What we prefer at present is short lively comedy plots.
>
> All wishing to be considered for parts in these proposed productions, will kindly leave their names and addresses at our box office, or send them in writing with any particulars as to experience or special ability.
>
> THIRD STREET THEATER CO.

The line forms on the right and if they do not reach you the first day please come back to-morrow. If anyone else wants to start this scheme we suggest these safety first rules:

Get a new lock for the door.
Get the police reserves.
Get a gun.

Then take a trip to New York and let someone else interview the would-be players.

It's a good scheme in that hundreds of extra dimes will roll into dollars when the friends of the players come to see Willie or Katie as a real live photoplayer and the friends of the rejected come to see how much better Harry or Maudie would have been in the part, but we are afraid that the Third Street has troubles ahead. At any rate a close inspection fails to show any moss growing under certain Easton footwear. If the management will send in in about three weeks, enclosing a stamped and self-addressed envelope, we will be glad to send a recipe for turning gray hair black again.

Better.

Instead of apologizing for raising the prices for "Antony and Cleopatra," Hay and Nicholas, of the Haynic Theater, Fairmount, Minn., advertise "No high prices. Twenty-five cents to everybody." A quarter is not too much for a subject like that, but there are lots of sections where people do not yet realize that the quarter is not a high price for a good picture. In their doorknob special they fold in the Kleine booklet, an artistic bit of printing. The special is a four-pager this time. They run a sliding scale. Seven reels bring from five to fifteen cents, while four bring five and ten cents.

A Famous Week.

Frank W. Buhler, of the Regent Theater, Philadelphia, sends in a folder for Famous Players' Week which was sent out on its mailing list. It is done in blue on a light brown rough paper, the front page carrying the list for the week. Inside is a running comment on the attractions; not a flamboyant brag, but comment on some of the players. On the back cover is this paragraph:

> The Regent management suggests that if you are a lover of clean photoplays, if you desire that your children or your younger friends shall see the best in filmdom, that you tell them about Famous Players' Week commencing Monday, May 11th.

The entire booklet gives the impression of dignity that harmonizes with the class of production and makes an appeal to the sort of persons likely to be most strongly attracted by the offerings.

You can't interest a millionaire in the purchase of a cake of soap by throwing in the promise that one cake has a ten dollar bill wrapped around it, and you cannot sell Turkish bath tickets to a tramp at twelve for twenty-five dollars. There is a lot in gauging your appeal to the class of persons you want to reach. This the Regent does.

A Movigram.

We do not like the word "Movies," but it grows increasingly popular and now L. J. Willis, of the Opera House, Dickinson, North Dakota, sends in his Movigram, a four-page house program. It is not a pretentious issue —yet—but it looks well and clean. There is not a surplus of type matter and what there is has been well set. The first page gives the title and a brief explanation of the fact they take the General Film service. Inside each page carries two large boxes and one small one. One of the small boxes gives the feature for the week and the other the coming features. The other four boxes give the other four changes of program. The back page carries a few items under the head of "Comment on Players." In the programs the only black type is for the titles and these stand out in about a ten point, as clearly as though set in twenty-four point in a mass of other bold faces. The rest is all straight eight point except the day and date. It is clean cut and intelligent. It is not a costly sheet, but it is a program with a punch, simply because it is well planned and well set. In most instances the underline gives the players rather than a hint as to the story.

Doing Well.

J. R. Baxter, who runs the Opera House, Spring City, Utah, writes that he uses a lot of stuff from this department in his house sheet. The sheet proves it. It is all new stuff to his town and it's good stuff as well. He mixes it in with a little local matter, to keep it fresh and comments on the leading films of the week. He writes:

> I am enclosing a copy of the "Times" for your valued criticism, something that is very good for us all. The synopsis of the various films are not what they should be, but when you consider that the paper went to press in two hours after I received the bookings, it isn't such a bad job after all. The printer made a rather bad mistake in the last paragraph of the second page, where he prints "sixty" instead of "six."
>
> I have a 300 house, and you can see what service I am using, but will state, however, that I am usually booked a little newer stuff than is booked this week. In addition to the G. F. service I use the Famous Players' productions, and also some of the Lasky Features, both of which are booked through the Notable Feature Film Company. Not bad for a country town of 1,100 people. Failure was predicted very freely when I started some two years ago, but by no small amount of persistency I am still in the game.
>
> I am enclosing a clipping from the Herald Republican, a daily paper of Salt Lake City, which, by the way, has a very large circulation through the West. The clipping is an editorial.
>
> What do you think of the complimentary coupon enclosed? I use the upper line for the party's name and the lower line for the date.
>
> In conclusion, will state that I am a close reader of the "World." I hardly know what I would do without it. You no doubt will recognize parts of it in my little weekly.

The Times is a four-pager. The front carries a portrait and a brief reader, the program (which should give dates as well as days) runs double column on three-quarters of the third page and the rest is house and clip stuff, well selected. It runs largely to eight-point type and you do not get the idea that it is merely a smudge of black ink. He uses a type heading for the first page instead of a drawn head, but it looks better than most drawn heads. If we had his house and a quarter of a dollar, we would put the quarter in our pocket and go over and buy the printer a drink, but not until the printer had promised to date every day and not merely Monday. That is the only criticism we have to offer. Some of the small type runs on a rather long line, but it is either leaded or double leaded, and that helps to take the curse off. Mr. Baxter and the printer are both doing better than eleven hundred town stuff.

On the other hand, the pass should have been on a better grade of paper. The stock is entirely too thin, and it is too casual in appearance. An effort at some slight display would have given something more appreciated by the recipient than this because if would look to be more. It would not get them in any easier or give them a better seat, but it would make a better and more lasting mental impression. As it is in invitation form, it should have been on card or very stiff paper. We use a better grade of paper for office memorandum and much better for printer's copy. The form is well worded, but should have carried at the top the name of the house and the town and State. It should also have been signed in ink. With these changes and on good stock, this form will be useful:

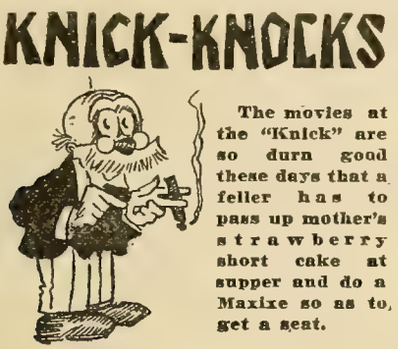
MR. AND MRS. JOHN DOE

As an inducement for you to become acquainted with the class of pictures shown at the Opera House, I take the liberty of enclosing this complimentary coupon and trust that you will use it May 20 or 21.

J. R. BAXTER, JR.

Knick-knocks.

Emery M. Downs sends a clipping from the Cleveland Press giving his photograph in the center of a layout of cuts and an appreciation of his work in raising the Knickerbocker there to the success it now enjoys. It is a deserved tribute to a man who knew how to make good and proceeded to do so. He also sends a three-inch single column advertisement that is good enough to reproduce. We think that this form of advertisement is more likely to appeal to the fashionable patrons the house caters to than the more splurgy display advertisement. The better class of people know



KNICK-KNOCKS
The movies at the "Knick" are so durn good these days that a feller has to pass up mother's strawberry short cake at supper and do a Maxixe so as to get a seat.

Tonight

Edward Abeles is smashing up a perfectly good automobile for the movies in "Brewster's Millions" twice every night for three days, and I can't a-ford a-Ford.

Knickerbocker Theatre

Mr. Abeles and his work and they know the play. They need no more argument to get them in. Probably a proportion of the patrons look for the advertisement because it is stuff out of the ordinary. Of course the stuff must be well done, but if you can invent, beg, buy, borrow or steal a single snappy sentence a day for your advertising, it is worth a whole font of black type in getting regular attention. We presume he uses other advertising, but we never see it. Wonder why?

To Miss Tango.

C. N. Odell, who writes that he has been in the business only a week, as manager of the Holmead Park Airdome, Washington, D. C., sends a letter with this data: "Two thousand of these letters, distributed all over my territory, cost me, all told, $14. Result—the park packed the three nights I have been opened." It must be good at that rate. The letter is on fairly good paper, the text mimeographed, but well done. The envelopes have typed addresses, though these might also have been mimeographed. The letter is addressed:

Miss Argentine Tango,
711 Terpischore Avenue,
Mt. Pleasant, D. C.
Personal. Kindness of Cupid.

The letter itself is on plain paper and is signed in typewriter. It reads:

Dear Tango Girlie:

Guess what? Holmead Park at Fourteenth Street and Spring Road has opened for the summer and we can see licensed motion pictures in the open air. How is that for a jugful of joyful news, eh?

What care we now if the lights are too warm for dancing? This is no time for the "hesitation" with an open air park just "one-step" from your home. We can "waltz" around any old evening and see the best kind of movies for a nickel.

The new manager has made the seats comfortable and fixed things up in great shape. He has engaged a talented pianist and an expert operator and is going to show the pictures you like best, you know—Vitagraph, Biograph, Kalem, Lubin, Edison, Melies, Selig, Essanay, Pathe, Kleine, and all of those "worth-while" pictures.

I may not be able to see you to-night, but don't let that keep you away from the park. I am enclosing a ticket for I want you to get the "movie habit." If you can't use the ticket to-night, don't throw it away, for it will be accepted at the park on any night in the month of May. I am,

Your affianced,

MAXIXE.

The enclosed ticket is not a specially printed pass, but a regular roll ticket. The ticket sent carries the number 3527. If this represents the sales minus the 2,000 sent out, it is a good showing. We think that a special ticket giving the address would have been better for this free distribution.

And speaking of free tickets, did you ever want to tell just what section you drew most of your patrons from? The trick of numbering will do it. Suppose that you want to see what your drawing radius is. Get a numbering stamp. When you send out your tickets number all within say five blocks in the thousand. Raise a thousand for every two block increase and a study of the tickets will tell you about how far back you can go with a free distribution. Probably you can reach that same distance back with a big feature, so you can judge about the clientele you have to draw from. By numbering in the hundreds for the points of the compass, you can tell just where the people come from. Say that you number all tickets eight blocks away with a 3000, but all to the north are 3256, all to the south 3496, all to the east 3527, and to the west 3619. Now, when the tickets are in, the 32's are all from the north and between seven and nine blocks, while the 42's are from the north but from 9 to 11 blocks. The intelligent student of patronage can tell where to put his advertising to the best use from a chart of this sort, and it will come in handy in many ways.

Another Cycle Ad.

R. J. Tindell is one of those who can't see the use of going after a photomailer when it is so easy to wrap a photograph up in a newspaper and send it along that way. He should have been on this end of the line to see how it looked by the time it got here from Valdosta, Ga. It would cure him. It had warts, wrinkles and freckles, but the idea is good. It is a cycle ad, and Mr. Tindell writes that it did the Grand Theater more good than some page advertisements in the papers. It is simply a light framework shaped like the letter U with the loop sharp pointed, fastened to a man-power bicycle. It is light enough not to bother and the pointed front end helps a little as a wind splitter. Mr. Tindell should take his sign painter out into the back yard and after swearing him to secrecy explain that it is f-e-a-t-u-r-i-n-g and not f-e-a-t-u-r-e-i-n-g. The house rather than the sign painter gets blamed for this sort of thing.

Does She.

The Haynic, Fairmount, Minn., is flirting with Miss Mary Fuller when they put out this advertisement, but we think she will not object, and the name of Miss Fuller at the top will arrest greater attention than the name of the house. Here it is:

Miss Mary Fuller
begs to announce the premier production of her new photoplay serial
"Dolly of the Dailies"
at the Haynic Theater, Fairmount, Minnesota
Tuesday evening, the nineteenth of May nineteen hundred and fourteen

Coming from the Haynic, it goes almost without saying that the stock and printing are level with the wedding annoucements of that Minnesota town. This being the case, the name of Miss Fuller as the top line gives a shock of surprise. The first thought probably is that there is someone with the same name as the well-known Edison player. By the time it is discovered that it is she, the advertisement has been assimilated. The recipient has been virtually shocked into reading the announcement. If you do not make the shock too strong, it is good advertising.

Color Scheme.

A Broadway theater gives you a white slave picture and a glass of orangeade for one price of admission. This makes an interesting study in yellows, but some white slave pictures should be accompanied by a box of chloride of lime.

Technique of the Photoplay

(Second Edition)

By EPES W. SARGENT

Not a line reprinted from the first edition, but an entirely new and exhaustive treatise of the Photoplay in its every aspect, together with a dictionary of technical terms and several sample scrits.

One hundred and seventy-six pages of actual text.

Special chapters on Developing the "Punch," Condensing the Script, Writing the Synopsis, Multiple Reel Stories, Talking Pictures, Copyrights, etc.

In cloth, two dollars. Full leather, three dollars.

By mail postpaid. Add ten cents if registration is desired.

☞ Address all Orders to

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

17 Madison Avenue - New York City

THE PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Inspiration.

LATELY several correspondents have written us to declare that it is wrong to argue that inspiration is not necessary to writing and some intimate that inspiration is the first great essential. That is not wholly true. Some of the most gifted writers have been men of the most methodical habits, others have been erratic in their writing, but all who have done something real have at least trained themselves to work under the conditions most favorable to their temperament.

We do our best work before lunch, but a cousin cannot write until the rest of his family have gone to bed. Others work better in the early evening than in the early morning, but most regular writers plan to do about a certain amount of work and do not trust too much to chance inspiration. We know more than one writer who is afraid of his stuff if he has too much inspiration because he knows that then the story is apt to run away from him. He writes to please himself and himself only, and the result is not apt to be a selling proposition.

This is peculiarly true in photoplay. In fiction an author gets an inspiration; something that takes hold of him and forces him to write. He drives ahead and writes with more than usual vigor. He may get into his story something foreign to his usual style. It stays there, for the work is done. Do a photoplay under a like condition and it is seldom that you can communicate your inspired fervor to the director and the product, if it is made, is not so good as usual.

A photoplay is not like a fiction story in that you cannot give it style. You cannot phrase your descriptions so cunningly that the sheer charm of your writing carries your work to success. You cannot gain points with sparkling dialogue. You must put a story down in action. The director interprets that action into acting. The style is gone, there remains only the story. You can, of course, get your action crisp and snappy in a comedy, or fluent and pleasant if it is a drama, but you are at the mercy of your interpreters, in the hands of the director and his players. Your inspiration evaporates from the script, but if you do a good technical job of plotting and developing, you are reasonably certain of getting some adequate result on the screen.

A good writer can get out a passionate love scene in cold blood, just as a good actor can make passionate love to the leading woman and all the time be cursing her for eating onions, but the inspired genius rises above such trifles as technical considerations, and may or may not be successful.

Train yourself to the habit of work. Train yourself not to loaf around waiting for inspiration. The result may lack the fine frenzy, but it will be more solidly competent. The good craftsman is superior in a majority of instances. The inspirationalist makes a hit now and then. The .050 batter may now and then make a sensational home run, but he is not in as great demand as the .300 man who regularly delivers the goods.

Keep It Full.

If you sold lemonade you would expect to buy lemons and sugar now and then, unless you make your product with tartaric acid, but even there you would need the chemical, and always you would need water—and plenty of it. If you made a pailful of lemonade you would not expect to keep on dipping lemonade out of the pail indefinitely unless you replenished your stock.

In some ways there is small difference between a dealer in lemonade and a seller of ideas. If you sell ideas out of your brain, best put more ideas back in there. There was a time when your mind was a blank. All that is in there now has been put in. You can take nothing from there that has not been put in any more than you can take a hat out of an empty box that never had a hat in it. When a man has a lot of clever ideas it merely means that he has the faculty of improving the ideas he has stored in his brain, and the more facts he has stored up, the more he can take out, but he must have facts, just as a cook must have eggs with which to make the breakfast omelette. One cook may take the eggs and produce a delicious dish and another may take eggs and get something that looks like a libel on a piece of chamois skin, but both cooks need eggs. One is a bad cook and the other a good one, and perhaps the bad cook may learn to become a good cook through practice just as an uninventive novice may learn to become an imaginative author, but the imaginative author needs ideas to imagine just as the cook needs eggs for the omelette and the more ideas used the more there are needed to replenish the stock just as you cannot make tomorrow's omelette with the eggs used yesterday.

Learn, then, to keep up your stock of ideas by reading and observation and keep a full supply on hand. If you have only one idea you may be able to write only one story from it and this may not be the sort of story you want to write at the moment. Read and keep on reading for ideas, but don't give back merely the idea you get. Build it up, improve on it, transform it, make it your own. That's what being an author means; an ability to see things more interestingly than other men and women.

Free Lancing.

One writer recently declared that he could do fine work if only he could get a contract job and have a reasonable assurance that he would see his work on the film. An infinitely better writer gave up a job that paid him in three figures because the knowledge that his work must be produced robbed him of incentive and he could see that his product was falling back. One correspondent writes he cannot do good work because he has struck a selling slump and ambition is killed, and another writes that he is in a slump and fighting hard to pull out of it.

And the funny part is that all four are right according to their lights. One man does better work when his mind is comfortably at rest. Another needs the incentive of obstacle.

But the one great thing against the contract job is that it bunches the hits. Let there be a change of editors or directors, or even a change in sentiment and the contract man is out in the cold, and few know of his good work. Keep your work before more than one editor. Be a first run writer if you will, giving a single studio the first selection, but let other editors buy a few against the time when the first editor will stop, as stop he probably will in the long run.

Phrasing.

Lately, watching some English films, we were struck by the number of phrases in the leaders that were not wholly intelligible to Americans, and our comment was met with the return that they were not as local as some of the phrases in American stories sent to the other side. On both sides of the Atlantic English is spoken, but in London, if you ask for suspenders you get something to keep your socks up with. If you want to hold your trousers up you ask for braces. Over here you ask for a small jar of paste and you get about four ounces. A jar of paste there is a gallon, and so it goes. In framing your leaders try and get the words and phrases in international use and save making over the leaders.

Waiting.

Writing from a full heart, a correspondent says he quite agrees with Bannister Merwin, that the script is an author's capital and should be treated with respect, and adds: One company kept a script of mine for six weeks. No other company will be allowed to treat me in this fashion.

The script is the author's capital, just as pianos are the piano maker's capital, but you can buy a piano for ten dollars down and five dollars a month for the next ten or fifteen years. If you want to do business you must have sufficient capital to carry your business along until the returns come in. If you make pianos, arrange with the banks to carry you along. If you write scripts, have a stock so that you can waist six weeks, or sixty, if need be, before you make the sale of any one story. The man who goes into the piano business knows that he must be prepared to sell on the monthly payment plan. The man who starts to sell photoplays should know that most companies are slow to act, and be prepared with a proper stock of scripts and patience as his capital.

Sticks.

A correspondent writes that he seems able to write a good synopsis and then gets stuck on the plot of action. He cannot see what is wrong, but knows there must be something, because his scripts back, though he has novel plots.

It's a long distance diagnosis, but perhaps it is the plot that is at fault. Not all interesting plots make good photoplays. It may be that there are physical objections, such as the need for too much leader, too many time interruptions, excessive cost of production, including the need for scenes too widely separated to be made by a single section of any company, or merely the mere matter of cost.

Since the fault seems to be with the plot of action, it is not unlikely that the trouble is that the idea does not lend itself to visualizing. The story, the plot seems to be all right, but when it comes to telling the plot in definite scenes instead of the broad generalities of narrative, the situation is changed. The proper sort of plot will translate nicely into action. The improper plot cannot be made to run right.

It sounds all right when you start in with "John and Mary are childish sweethearts. When they grow older they separate, Mary going to Vienna, where she studies music, while John goes to the Klondyke, where he becomes a prospector. They lose sight of each other, but years after, John, now a rich man, comes to New York, where he meets Mary, now making her American debut as a pianist." All this reads well and may be a factor of the subsequent story of how John wins his own love back after many difficulties, and, as a story, it would be all right, but put that into film and see how impracticable it becomes. There must be the schoolday episode, the parting after they have grown up, the life in Germany and the Klondyke, and finally the New York scenes, and this entirely apart from the need of many time leaders. It will cost too much and run too long and have too many leaders to go into action, yet it might be a good plot, this, of course, merely being the preparation, and perhaps the novice has not yet caught the trick of starting the story in New York, where the action really starts, and telling all of the former facts in one brief letter, something like: "I heard you play last night. So my old schoolmate has made herself famous while I have been making a fortune! May I call—for old time's sake?"

Not all plots are good.

Not all good plots are good for photoplay.

The Baltimore Inquest.

Here is a report from the Baltimore Inquest Circle, that puts it in with the live ones. An effort will be made in a few weeks to put Philadelphia on the map again. This is the Baltimore report:

"As it seems to me that all the other Circles are reporting their meetings, etc., to you, I think it is high time that you heard something from the Baltimore Circle. To begin with, we are not a high-brow Circle at all, and our motto is very much like the Pittsburgh one, with the exception that we believe that 'treat the editors fair and they will treat you likewise.' We are only five strong and for the life of me, I can't see why the other writers in Baltimore don't wake up to the fact that the little club is so valuable a help to those interested in the work. The members active at present are: Miss K. K. Kepper, Miss Linderman, Mrs. Sam'l Benjamin, Mr. A. A. Sommerwerck, who is the coroner, and myself (J. L. Shellman).

"If you have noticed what Kalem is advertising now in the way of two reels, and the big boom it is giving the first of the Alice Joyce series, I take great pride in telling you that this story was written by Miss K. K. Kepper, of our Circle, and she also wrote 'The Barrier of Ignorance.'

"We usually meet every Wednesday night, but do not take in a show, as we find that by the time we finish criticising a script we have no time left. When one person gets something accepted, a member will take the script and copy it, making enough copies for all, so that when the play is produced we can study it thoroughly and see where any changes have been made. This enables us to get in line with the company that has accepted the script, and see just how they change it. In the past, we have taken a good many plays down from the screen, and when one of the club does this, a copy is made for all. We find that they are a great help to us.

"Our method of criticising is for one member to read his or her play aloud, and for the rest to comment on it, and I certainly do wish you could be here sometimes and hear the arguments that arise; it reminds me of cases before the bar. (Never mind which one.) But it is all done for our own benefit, and the arguments are taken in that way. The majority rules in regard to that point. That Pittsburgh Circle is good, but don't forget that as Baltimore is the monumental city, we are hoping that the Circle will be one of its main monuments before long."

Not Exactly.

Edward S. Kern takes issue with us on a recent statement that if we had our way writers would be required to wait until they had written 25 scripts before they endeavored to dispose of any. He says:

> I have just completed my seventeenth script. Of this number four have been sold, two each to Selig and Kalem. These were the third, sixth, tenth and fourteenth scripts written, the tenth being in two reels. Kalem now has the fifteenth under consideration. Now I am not sufficiently egotistical to believe that this is an extraordinary performance. I realize that I am but a novice at the game and that a good start does not necessarily presage the same sort of finish, but the point is: does not my success prove that there is a market for the author of eight or even fewer scripts, and doesn't such a statement tend to discourage new writers who may have ability, but lack the proper persistency? I think I can anticipate your answer to that last question and that is that writers of the proper sort will not permit themselves to be discouraged.

Mr. Kern evidently writes a better script than most beginners, and we were not discussing the exceptions to the rules. The point is this: without a proper training a lasting success is seldom, if ever, possible, and the writing of twenty-five trial scripts will scarcely give the average writer the proper groundwork. There is no use in learning how to make an automobile go unless you also know how to stop it. Both bits of information are equally valuable. In the same way the man who starts to sell without the proper foundation of work and experience, is apt to find himself floundering after a time. Now and then a writer does come along who starts to sell and keeps on selling because he has it in him to write salable stuff, but the paragraph to which Mr. Kern objects has to deal with the average writer who wants to write and sell scripts with no serious work of preparation, and who kicks and says that editors are not buying if he does not immediately hit a winning pace.

And to a man of that sort, it is the toughest sort of luck to make a sale because instead of infusing him with a desire to do better work, he gets the idea that he knows how now and stops studying. Mr. Kern evidently is able to write salable ideas. He is keeping on studying, to judge from the unprinted portion of his letter, and so his work will probably improve to the point where he cannot only write ideas that sell, but scripts that can be worked—and a sale does not always mean that the script is practicable. He is a newspaper man, and presumably used to plotting, but the majority of those who take up the work are those who are enticed into the business of writing by the assurance that no literary experience is required, and for these a minimum of twenty-five practise scripts is none too many. If that discourages them we hope it does. Persons so easily discouraged are not writers at all. The harm they do is that they give the editorial readers the hopeless feeling that there is nothing good in the submissions because there is so much that is bad. How would you, gentle reader, like to bite into a whole pint of wormy chestnuts in the hope of finding one sound nut? Wouldn't you want to switch to cocoanuts instead? Well, then!

Not Correct.

Read this extract from a recent letter:

> I was talking to a writer the other day who has been some time in the business, and he told me it was all a matter of influence. He offered to sell my writing under his own name and wanted half the proceeds. That proposition was no use to me as I wanted to reap the benefits myself.

This statement that sales are all a matter of influence is unqualifiedly false. A few persons who are intimate friends with some manufacturer, editor or director may, now and then, get a story accepted on pull, but this seldom happens and almost never happens half a dozen times to the same person. It is not a matter of influence, but a matter of writing a script more suitable to the accepting studio than some other writer offers. Note that this does not say a better script, but a script better suited to the studio. We know of no branch of literary work where personal or official pull counts for so little, and the writer who offered to sell on the strength of his name probably did not remember to add that he took half the money for rendering suitable the chaotic ideas of the beginner. He may have a particularly good line on some one or two editors and be able to suit them exactly, because he has, but the mere fact that John Jones is written on a script instead of Frank Smith is not going to impress many editors. The only pull is derived from an ability to write precisely what is wanted, rather than stories that are good, but unsuitable.

Not Unusual.

Objection is offered by a correspondent to the fact that recently two companies advised him that they were holding one of his submissions. Later, both scripts were returned without comment, and the correspondent thinks it is "very discouraging to new writers to be treated this way" after having their hopes raised.

Why should discouragement arise? Hope has been shattered, but there remains the fact that two scripts appealed so strongly to two companies that they were held for further consideration, and the writer was so advised, instead of being left to worry. They were not quite right and so they were returned, but there remains the cheering fact that these two scripts came nearer to acceptance than any earlier efforts, and that surely is not a discouragement. The discouraged one should cheer up and feel that at least they are sitting up and taking notice.

For Manufacturers Only.

Dear Mr. Manufacturer: Will you please, please take note that the script department of your plant is not to be judged by the money it does not spend, so much as by what it gets for the money it does spend. Be mindful of the man who bought eleven thousand dollars' worth of useless stuff for ten dollars each and feel that eleven good scripts for the same price would be better worth the money. A hundred and ten scripts would be better yet, but it is what you get and what it brings you, rather than what you pay out, that should guide you in your estimate of your editor's value.

No Repeats.

Don't for the moment you sell a story, sit down and write three or four just like it; not the same story, but the same theme. First thing you know you'll become identified with a certain sort of story and when you try to do anything else editors will not believe that you can. Cultivate diversity of thought and you will not become rutted. If you write to-day of the missing will, do not write another lost will next week, and another and another. Get something entirely different and you'll stand a better chance of making a sale.

Past Performances.

One very new writer recently asked a company to hurry and take two more scripts as he was going to have some covers printed up and wanted to have at least four sold scripts to print on the back under "author of." Suppose that the author does get his four sold scripts and puts them on his covers. He will have at least one hundred covers printed. Long before these are used up the scripts will be beyond the statute of limitation.

It does not do you very much good to refer to your past work because editors see so few produced films and also know how little the author may have contributed to the success of the story, but if you insist on giving your record, use a small slip to be clipped to the script by the same fastener that holds your sheets together and use only stories inside the three months' limit. Have new slips printed every eight or ten weeks, or get a small press and print them yourself. It won't help any, but if any notice at all is taken of your history, the editors will not wonder why you have sold nothing in the past six months.

Instinct and Training.

There really are two kinds of photoplay writers, those who write by instinct and those who write through training. You hear of the natural born ball player, the natural born singer, and there is the natural born playwright,

But the natural born ball player blows up in fast, well trained company, and the natural born singer cannot stand the strain of concert or operatic work for long, and the natural born playwright does not last any longer than the untrained person in any branch.

Some people simply cannot learn to study plotting, even after long training. Others instinctively get a plot without knowing what it is. They work by no rules, for they are ignorant of rules, but their native good sense tells them when a story is right or when it is not right, but they cannot tell why in either case. Not knowing the why, they are right only by accident, and cannot reform the nearly good idea into a really good one. They may enjoy a reasonable share of success, but they work more or less in the dark and they make no advance. Instinct may be quickened a little, but training only can bring the fullest development.

Any man, by instinct, can tell the difference between tea and coffee. The trained tea taster can tell what kind of tea it is, possibly where it was grown and in what proportion it should be blended with other crops to get the best result. It's the same way with stories. Unless you know how and why you get a result, you cannot count on always getting that result when you want it, and unless you can, you cannot do the best work of which you are capable.

Knowing What.

This morning a pupil opined the reason why we did not like one of her practise scripts was that it was based on two improbabilities meeting. In other words, that the climax of one improbability depended upon meeting the other improbability. So we had a heart and told her what the matter was.

She had in her script two stories. The climax came when these two stories met. She realized that there was a clash, but she did not realize that the clash was between the two stories, and because the by-plot was slightly better than the other, she gave so much time to the development of that theme that her main plot suffered. Chlorate of potash and sugar are both useful around the house, but pound them together in a mortar and you will wonder who brought in that unsafe and insane Fourth of July. It is the same way when you mix two otherwise well-behaved plots together.

Go over your idea before you start to write it. See what the plot is. Mind you, we said plot, not story. See what the plot is. See if you have your story about that plot and only that plot, or whether you have not another and possibly a stronger plot. If you have, chase one plot out of your story and you'll have the chance to tell the other. Sometimes it will pay better to stick to the second plot and discard the first for the time being.

And in passing, please remember that most seeming impossibilities can be made into probabilities through deft treatment.

Pure Food.

When you want to buy brains, go to the butcher rather than the correspondence school.

Helpful Hint.

An ounce of action is worth a pound of padding.

Projection Department

Conducted by F. H. RICHARDSON

Manufacturers' Notice.

IT IS an established rule of The Moving Picture World and of this Department that no apparatus or other goods will be endorsed or recommended editorially until such articles have been demonstrated to a member of our staff. In case of apparatus pertaining to projection this means the editor of this Department.

Important Notice.

Owing to the mass of matter awaiting publication, it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two to three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending four cents, stamps (less than actual cost), will receive carbon copy of the Department reply, by mail, without delay.

The first seventy-four questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form. They may be obtained by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor. Every live, progressive operator should get a copy. You may be surprised at the number of questions you cannot answer without a lot of study.

Question No. 39.

Best answer will be published, and the names of others sending in replies of excellence will appear in the Roll of Honor. Permission to use the contributor's name must accompany each answer, otherwise only the name of the city will be used. Theater managers looking for high-class men will do well to watch the Roll of Honor.

Suppose you received, from the authorities, permission to drive your projectors with motors. Your employer owned two small motors of proper voltage. How would you determine whether or not the motors were heavy enough for the work? Suppose these motors were found to be of sufficient power, but there were no field rheostats to govern the speed. You could get plenty of small iron wire, about the size of the wire on a broom, how could you, without any figuring, determine accurately and quickly, how much of this wire would be sufficient?

Roll of Honor on Question No. 33.

The Roll of Honor on Question No. 33 consists of Joseph H. M. Smith, Fort Worth, Texas; L. S. Usher, Winnipeg, Canada; Harry T. Dobson, Toronto, Canada, and Harry Grant, Placerville, California, all of whom sent in replies of excellence. Brother James wrote, saying he was very busy and probably would not have time to answer. The reply selected for publication is by W. A. Burton, Trail, British Columbia. Brother Burton prefaces his reply as follows: "I wish to say that I consider your efforts to help the operator help himself as being worthy the commendation of every operator in America. More power to your elbow!" Friend Burton has precisely the right idea of these questions. Their purpose is not so much to directly help the operator as to help him help himself.

Answer to Question No. 33.

By Wm. A. Burton, Trail, British Columbia, Canada.

The Question:

If, after taking your motor apart to repair, it ran with an abnormally high speed, to what would you attribute the cause? What mechanical troubles are likely to prevent a motor from starting? If, after installing a motor, it refused to start, where would you look for the trouble? Show, by sketches, correct method of connecting a shunt-wound motor with its starting box and the line. Explain your reasons for the various connections. What is the electrical action when the motor is connected as per your sketch? What is likely to happen if the connection be not made correctly? Why is it small motors can be used without a starting-box?

The Answer:

Taking up the question as a series of queries rather than one question, we will consider them in the order in which they appear.

First: If, after taking the motor apart to repair, it ran with abnormal speed, I would attribute the cause to one of two things. Either I had put in a field coil end for end, or have a loose or dirty joint in the magnetic circuit, probably where the two halves of the steel frame join. Considering the first of these two conditions, I should state that, in the case of a motor with two field coils only, and one of them is wrongly connected, motor will not start at all, unless the starting current is so high that the armature itself magnetizes the field. With a four coil machine with a field coil wrongly connected, a condition such as the question implies will be had, accompanied with bad sparking. The effect, then, of wrong field connection, is to increase amount of starting current required; to abnormally increase the speed, and to cause excessive sparking at the brushes.

Second: If, in fitting the two halves of my machine together, I allowed dirt, grease, or other foreign matter to get into the joint, the effect would be to weaken the field, causing the starting current to be greater than it should be, accompanied by excessive armature speed. In case of a motor having detachable pole-pieces, the same effect will be seen if one of them is loose. The remedies are obvious.

As to mechanical troubles likely to prevent a motor from starting. They are many and various. Among them may be mentioned: load too great, belt too tight, loose top pole-piece resting on armature, armature resting on lower pole-pieces by reason of worn bearings, sprung or bent shaft with similar result, lack of end play in armature, foreign substance between armature and pole-piece, and bearings binding for want of lubrication. Again the various remedies are obvious.

If, after installing a motor it refused to start, I would look first to the fuses and find if they were O. K. If so, would couple a lamp across switch terminals to determine if power was on the line. Then look for open circuit at switch connections and in starting box, and for loose connection in wiring, or for a broken wire. Examine the brushes for dirt under them, and the commutator for dirt upon it. Brush may be stuck in holder or a brush may be missing. After assuring myself that all the foregoing is correct, would look for open circuit in motor, using a magneto bell or a lamp circuit; first, however, throwing starting box lever on and off, when a flash would indicate short-circuit. It would then be a case of locating short in armature core, in commutator, in field. If a shunt or compound wound motor, would ascertain if the field so connected as to allow armature to cut out field winding. Also look for carbonized brush yoke and see if brushes are i nthe right position.

Third: As to shunt motor connections, I will commence with connections as they should be, explaining to those progressive brothers who seek knowledge that the idea is to excite the shunt field from the line as soon as main switch is closed, for reasons that will soon appear. Figure 1 shows how this is accomplished.

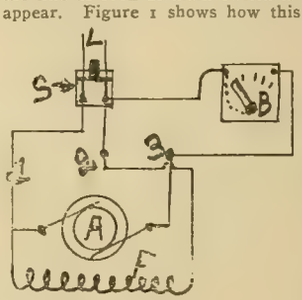

Fig. 1

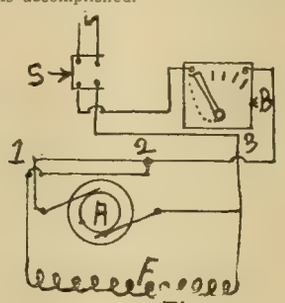

Fig. 2

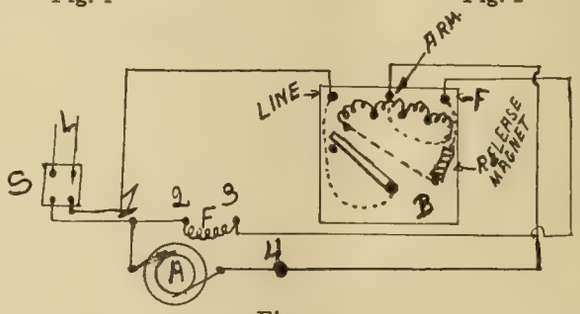

Fig. 3

Symbols: L=Line. f=fuses. S=Main switch. B=Starting box. A=Armature. F=Field, and 1-2-3=Motor terminals.

One armature lead and one end of shunt field are connected to 1. Other end of shunt to 2, and other end of armature to 3. It will be seen that field is connected direct to line ahead of starting box B, and as soon as switch S is closed the shunt field is excited from the line. Then when starting lever moves over to the first position, current flowing through armature has an already excited field to react upon, thus starting immediately with a good torque, or turning force. If this is not done and motor is connected as in Figure 2, the field would be practically connected to armature terminals 1 and 3, and no current would flow through it until the starting lever is moved. Then current would flow through armature and but little would flow through field because voltage across field terminals only equals the drop in the armature. Result, weak field, motor refuses to start until starter lever has moved over several contacts and a very large current flows through armature. This will heat up starting box and if fuses don't blow out, motor will probably "blow up."

Figure 3 shows a somewhat similar principle, and the action of the system is easily traced out. When switch is closed and starter moved to first contact, current flows through field, magnet, and lever, giving field its full strength at once, but limiting current to armature until lever has been moved to running position, when resistance is cut out. As to starting small motors without starting boxes. Perhaps the simplest way to come at this proposition is to start off by saying that a short is produced when an object of low resistance is connected across a circuit. In large motors it is necessary to insert a resistance in series with the armature when starting, because the resistance of the armature is very small, and if connected directly across circuit while at rest the rush of current would be heavy, because no counter e. m. f. or electromotive force is being generated to help it regulate the current. It is therefore ncessary to limit flow of current through armature until motor generates the necessary counter e. m. f. to automatically regulate the current.

It will be easy to perceive the simile of the short circuit in regard to the large motors, if we remember that connecting a lamp across the circuit will do no damage on account of its high resistance. The small motor is a similar proposition because its armature resistance in comparison to that of the large motor is high, due to its small, light construction and to the fineness of the wire in its windings.

One reason for selecting brother Burton's reply was the fact that he was the only one to really reply to question 33 as it was written. The other brothers, for instance, gave the various reasons for excessive armature speed in a motor, but that was not the question, as you will see by examining the same.

Brother Usher says:

The following troubles would likely cause a motor to run at abnormally high speed: (a) Weak field, caused by too much resistance in the field circuits; (b) short circuit in field coil, or coils, in which case very little current, or none at all, would flow in the windings, with a resultant very weak magnetic field; (c) open circuit in the field, and, of course, no current flowing in the windings. Motor would (unless a series motor) operate merely by the residual magnetism of the pole; (d) wrong connections of field windings, which would mean reversed polarity. The poles should be alternately n. and s. when read around the frame of the machine; (e) brushes too far advanced in direction of rotation. The direct result of any of the above troubles is high armature speed, because of the fact that the armature reaction would be weak. The armature conductors would be cutting a weak flux, therefore would generate very little reactance, which acts in the opposite direction to the current applied to the brushes. It is sometimes called the back e. m. f., and the weaker this back e. m. f. the greater the current voltage will force through the armature, and greater current means greater speed.

All of which is well and good, but does not answer the first clause of question 33 as it was put.

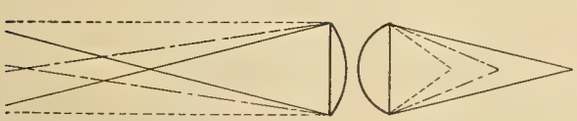
How It Is Figured.

The following letter comes from Allie Baron, Lodi, California.

I have had an argument with Mr. Clark, operator of the Novelty Theater, Stockton, Cal. I suggest for a 118 foot throw that I would use an 8½ and a 9¼ condenser, with a 10 inch projection lens. He says I am wrong. Please explain through the department if I am right. I have been a reader of the department for three years, and have had your Handbook for more than a year, and have also purchased "Lessons In Practical Electricity," by Swoope. I put in from one to two hours studying every day, but do not think I know all about projection by any means.

I referred this matter to brother James, of Camden, N. J., and asked him to set forth his solution of the same for publication, and he replies as follows:

In answering Allie Brown, operator at Lodi, California, I will submit my calculations which were made at your request. Referring to page 359 of April 18 issue of the M. P. World look at Fig. 10 of my article. Using this method the theortical f. l. of the front condenser should be 47 inches assuming, of course, that this condenser is receiving parallel light rays, which in this instance are furnished by a 6½ inch f. l. condenser with the arc crater 6½ inches from nodal point of the condenser, which is two thirds the thickness of the condenser from the plane surface. To answer the query I must first call attention to the fact that all lenses have conjugate foci and will first use the 8½ and 9¼ combination.



The accompanying sketch will make clear what I mean when I say change the point f of the conjugate foci. The points f of the three conjugate foci shown have their corresponding points fi with the exception of the dotted one which, theoretically should have no such point owing to the diverging rays of the arc being converted to parallel rays by the condenser combination. Using 8½ as F1 and 9¼ as F2 in determining the principal, of equivalent focus, of the condenser combination we have 8½ multiplied by 9½ equals 81½. Then as the separation in the average condenser mount of today would be, with the 8½ and 9¼ condenser, 1 inch we have 18 minus 1 equals 17. Then 81½ ÷ 17 = 5+ as the principal focus of the condenser combination. Again referring to the sketch we will assume that the arc is setting in this position which will, of course, convert it's rays to parallel ones such as is shown by the dotted lines, but we must have the condition shown by the solid lines instead. Now we know, as previously calulated, the image distance, fi, should be 47 inches, and the principal focus is 5+ we use the following formula: 1/f + 1/fi = 1/F, substituting we have 1/f + 1/47 = 1/5+, 5f+ + 235 = 47f and 42f = 235+ f = 235+ ÷ 42 = 5 35/42+, or we will call it 5 6/7 inches as the position of the arc in inches from the center of the condenser combination. Brown should be right if the following conditions exist:

Arc 5 6/7 inches from the center of the condenser combination.

If point O, photo No. 1 of my article is 45 inches from the center of the condenser combination.

If the distance between the center of the condenser combination and the aperture plate is 27 inches.

While an 8½ inch and 9¼ inch is as near correct as it is possible to procure from the average supply house, it is not correct in every sense of the word, because if we had a combination of longer principal focus we could carry the arc nearer to the condensers. By this I mean if we could have a condenser of 12 or 14 inch f. l. for the front we could use a correspondingly shorter one for the rear. I cannot figure the exact ones which would give the best results as I have no point f of the objective conjugate foci. As to Chas. Huber of Brooklyn it would take an awful amount of figuring to give the data wanted with the information supplied so would suggest that you get him to give us point f of his objective conjugate foci.

I want to impress upon all those gentlemen who are so kindly lending their assistance in solving the lens system problem, as well as all those who are studying the matter, that the ordinary rule for conjugate foci does not obtain, as brother James has already pointed out, due to the fact that the objective lens does not receive parallel rays, nor does it receive rays emanating from a point, but, as a matter of fact, receives converging rays. This, it appears to me, is a very important matter indeed, and one which must be taken very much into account in dealing with the condenser problem. Whether brother James has a system which will work out right in all cases, and is in all respects thoroughly dependable or not, I am not at this time prepared to say. It would, however, be very strange indeed if this were the case, since it could hardly be expected that the first attempt would not be subject to considerable improvement to say the least. I would like, however, to call attention to one very important phase of brother James' reply, viz: "Because if we had a combination of longer principal focus we could carry the arc nearer to the condensers, meaning by this that if we could have a condenser of 12 or 14 inch f. l. for the front we could use a correspondingly shorter one for the rear." This is a very important matter since, up to the point where the heat becomes sufficiently excessive to work injury to the lens, any added distance of the crater from the lens means a heavy loss of light—a very heavy loss of light, therefore it is of the utmost importance that the arc be located as close to the condenser as is practical. Brother Huber, of Brooklyn, will kindly come across with the desired data at his earliest convenience.

That Humidor Can.

Some weeks ago I spoke of a humidor film can now being manufactured, and marketed by the National Waterproof Film Company, Chicago, Ill. I said at that time that, while the idea looked good, I would not care to give the endorsement of this department until an actual test had been made. The National people immediately sent a can for demonstration, and stated that I ought to know they would not put out anything that was not all right, or words to that effect.

The fact that the can is put out by the National Waterproof Film people raises the presumption in my mind that it is a good article, and now after I have examined it I can at least say that in my judgment and opinion the idea is a good one, though with this reservation: In the bottom of the can is a ring about two inches wide around the outside edge, and this ring is of perforated metal, under which is a space something like one-quarter of an inch deep. This space is filled with some indestructible absorbent material, saturated with a chemical compound. I do not know what ultimate effect these chemicals may have on a film, that is on the emulsion, but presumably the National people have thoroughly tested out this proposition, and, proceeding on that assumption, I should say that the can is well worthy at least of a fair trial. The idea is that in the heat of summer, while the films are in transit, they will absorb chemicalized moisture, and the same is true while they are kept in the can in theaters and exchanges. Certainly this could not but be beneficial, therefore without waiting for a test, which, in order to be of real value, must necessarily cover a long period of time, I feel fully justified in recommending this can to the favorable consideration of exchanges and traveling exhibitors, and others who own films.

An Open Question.

W. S. James, Camden, New Jersey, in a personal letter remarks:

Will you enlighten me as to where the argument for using the refractive index comes in? Up to the present time, as near as I can find out, when the refractive index is included the calculations become altogether too complicated to be of any value. It is all right to use it for figuring condensers alone, but when we come to consider the objective in conjunction with the condenser it is a horse of quite another color.

While undoubtedly the refractive index has an important bearing in calculating any lens system, still, when it is all said and done, I believe James is right. It is, I think, an absolutely impractical thing for the average man to figure a lens combination and include in his figures the refractive index of the glass, even if he had that data available. As a matter of fact, when I come to think this whole proposition over, it cannot be expected that our calculations of lenses will be a fine spun affair. It seems to me the best we can possibly hope to do would be to arrive at an approximately correct answer to any question of this kind. In figuring lenses the operator does not know the refractive index of the glass, nor would it be at all a practical thing, so far as I can see, for him to try to find it out, therefore, while brother James should have mentioned the refractive index in dealing with the things which have to do with lens calculations, still I am prepared now to say he did the right thing in not taking it into consideration in the actual calculations.

Professor Wall Hands Brother Clay a Bundle.

Professor Wall, of Syracuse University, Syracuse, New York, proceeds to squelch brother Clay with the following:

> With reference to Mr. Clay's remarks, page 1113, May 23rd issue, I am not at all concerned with any dictionary definition, because the term, in the photo-optical sense, in which I used it, has only been in use a very few years, and like many other technical terms, has not found its way into the standard dictionaries. Your correspondent is wrong when he states that the light is not scattered by the silver image. It is, and the more silver there is, that is to say the denser or more opaque the image is, the greater will be the scattering effect. We actually differentiate as between "scatter" and "diffuse," though, theoretically, scatter is diffusion. A great many transparent substances possess scatter, although they do not diffuse light. It is very easily measured and has a very great practical importance in the projection of a motion picture. Although nobody has as yet recognized that fact, in consequence of scatter the dark or opaque shadows of a picture appear much darker than they actually are, therefore the contrasts between the tones of the picture are increased much more than when one examines the pictures by looking at them through the film. It can be entirely eliminated, but not in motion picture projection. With regard to the editor's comment on Mr. Clay's note, it is impossible to consider the picture as a whole. Every point in the image space must correspond with a point in the object space—point for point image formation is one of the fundamental laws of optics. But as in the particular case all object points are in one plane, therefore all image points must be in the same plane, consequently all image points and all object points are at two conjugate focal planes of the lens, and these planes are composed of conjugate point images. Mr. Clay is right on this point and Mr. James wrong. With regard to Mr. Buzelle's diagrams, page 1115, May 23rd issue, the upper one is absurd, and he only states half the law of refraction, for a light ray always refracts away from the perpendicular, or normal, as it should be called, in leaving the denser medium, and this he totally ignores. Further than that, if his second lens is a concave meniscus its action is hopelessly wrong, as all concave lenses must increase ray divergence, yet he shows it as increasing convergence. It is perfectly immaterial which way the heavy bulge of the lens is, and how the convex or concave surfaces are facing. The only effect of altering the position of the faces is in increasing or decreasing of spherical aberration.

I am not a professor in optics, but merely a practical operator who has studied light as applied to projection to the best of my humble ability. With regard to "scatter" and "diffusion" it seems to me that a most important point is here raised, and it ought to be put very clearly—considerably more so, I believe, than Professor Wall has made it in his present article. I take it that what friend Wall means is that the silver scatters the light much the same as a particle of dust in the air scatters it, but, even so, I do not see exactly where this would have any effect, other than the stopping of the light and its reflection in other directions. It would not and could not in any sense mean diffusion. Of course, any object which stops a light ray is bound to cause its reflection in another direction, unless the object be jet black, in which case the ray would simply be absorbed, and not reflected. Perhaps I have misunderstood Professor Wall, but, if I have, then it is by reason of the fact that he has not explained the matter quite as clearly as he might have.

With regard to the point for point conjugate foci: there is, and should be no doubt as to the correctness of that proposition, and yet its acceptance in conjunction with projection is to me quite confusing, because it seems to me that fact would of necessity make the film itself, in effect, an original source of light, and the only possible way which I can reconcile this with actual practice is that we consider each infinitessimal point of the film as an original source of light.

To make the matter a little more plain, the puzzling thing to me is that if the film at the aperture be treated as an original source of light, then it seems to me there would necessarily be great loss of light, between the film and the lens, since an original light source sends rays in every direction. I wish Professor Wall would make this particular matter somewhat plainer. I believe he is better able to do this than anyone else—at least he ought to be.

With regard to brother Buzzelle's diagram, which Professor Wall declares to be absurd, much to my surprise I find that the professor appears to be correct in his statement that, aside from the spherical aberration, it does not seem to make much difference which way the concave meniscus is placed, or, in other words, which way the convex side of the lens is. That is something I did not know myself, though a careful mental analysis of the thing seems to make the explanation reasonably simple. The difference in spherical aberration, however, is so enormous that it is impossible to get a good image with the concave toward the screen, or at least it is with the lens I have. As to the law of refraction, I studied this matter pretty carefully a couple of years ago, but without a lot of "looking up" I would not like to say anything on that subject, except that my understanding is that when a ray of light strikes a glass surface at an agle it is refracted toward the line which would be at right angles to the plane of the surface at the point where the ray enters, and upon leaving the denser medium the refaction is in precisely the opposite direction. Also the amount of refraction is, as I understand it, in proportion to (a) the refractive index of the glass (its density) and (b) the angle at which the glass surface is encountered. And now I think I will let it go at that, and let Professor Wall and the department fans fight it out. I want to impress upon Professor Wall, brother James, and others that this discussion is, in my judgment, doing more to educate operators in the optical end of their profession than they could learn in years from studying text books. In fact I do not think they could ever learn it in that way, for the very simple reason that text books deal with abstract laws of light, in which much depends upon "parallel rays," whereas practical projection has nothing whatever to do with parallel rays at any point in the lens system, though, of course, the laws applied to it could probably be figured out by taking the parallel ray theory as a basis.

In conclusion I want to caution the correspondents to not feel hurt because one believes the other to be in error. Remember that losing your temper is no proof of anything. If Professor Wall is in error on any point, or brother James is in error on any point, just prove it to them—come back at them with an argument, because argument is the only thing which counts.

Open Armature Circuit.

W. A. Straith, mechanical superintendent of the Boyd Electric Company, Brandon, Manitoba, Canada, writes:

> I have become very much interested in your department in so far as it deals with motor-generator work, and having been for more than six years an armature winder and motor repairman I was specially interested in the article by L. S. Usher, April 25th issue. If it is permissible (It certainly is.—Ed.) I should like to make a suggestion or two which might be of a little value to the man in the predicament suggested. With regard to the open circuit of the armature coil of a two pole motor, the bars of the commutator affected will always be side by side, and as there are two ends to each coil there will be two dead bars and in the case of a four pole machine it will, as a rule, show as two dead bars on the opposite sides of the commutator, looking, however, as though there were in reality four dead bars, or two broken coils, and these bars should be treated just the same as if they were four dead bars, and two dead coils. The reason for this is that the leads coming from the coils are connected half way round the commutator (approximately) from each other. To make a quick temporary job, and at the same time a safe one, the best method is simply to solder the dead bars together, taking care to clean all the solder off any other than the bars and insulation affected by the broken coil. To be sure of having the right bars soldered it may be necessary to run the motor for a few minutes after the trouble is first noticed, when the insulation between the dead bars may be quite noticeably burnt or scarred, having a rough dirty appearance. In soldering the bars together always take very great care to select a portion of the commutator which will not come in contact with the brushes. This repair, if properly made, will effectively stop all the sparking due to a broken coil. In case your commutator becomes too dirty and oily to solder properly and neatly it might be more advisable to take a screw driver, or other metal instrument, not too blunt, and, starting at the outside end of the bars, about 1/8 inch from the insulation, drift or drive the copper of the bars for an eighth of an inch towards the center gently across the insulation, until the two bars make good electrical contact with each other. This is a very quick way and a very satisfactory way to jump an open coil, and will not burn out any other coils of your armature if they are really open, but at most would only affect your already dead coil, whereas by splicing the leads or risers, as suggested by Mr. Usher, you would be short-circuiting a live coil which would burn out on a 220 volt circuit within twenty minutes, or on 110 volts in about thirty minutes, requiring possibly the rewinding of the armature, which would mean a loss of at least twenty-four hours, the time depending on the style and size of the machine. Always be sure before making a short circuit on the commutator that the open circuit is not just simply a loose lead where it is soldered to the commutator, as this is the most frequent cause of open circuits. These open circuits are always accompanied by a violent flashing, which looks like a ring of fire around the commutator, and leaves a scar and burnt piece of insulation between the two particular bars. If, however, you are unable to locate the burnt insulation between the dead bars, do not make any short circuits on your commutator until you are sure the trouble is in one of the coils. It might possibly be due to the brushes making poor contact or something of the kind. If, however, you can find nothing of that sort wrong, then, having become certain you are right, go ahead. I hope that the foregoing will be of some value to the boys.

I don't think I would approve of swedging the copper across the insulation. If the copper is oily or dirty, just scarpe it clean and solder.

Lamp Terminal.

Wilmington, North Carolina, sends in a model of a lamp terminal and writes:

> I want to ask your opinion of the lamp terminal I am submitting; also whether or not you think it would pay me to have the same patented. I have been using one of these terminals on my own lamp for the past nine months, and positively the wire which enters has just as good temper as before it was put in. I could easily guarantee that when this terminal is used the cable will never burn off. I am using 60 amperes. I am sending you this model before I have it patented, because I feel that you can be trusted with the same. (Yes, mam. Thank you mam.—Ed.). Please let me know if it would be a good idea to have a small spring around the pin to hold the bearing up in position. Do you think a device for aligning the sprockets and also the intermittent with the cam shaft would be valuable? It would be an instrument which would not be complicated.

Here is where I grab my little spike-maul and shatter Wilmington's dream of future riches. Sorry, old man, but it is necessary. There are only about twenty-five devices more or less similar to yours already patented, and some of them are, in my judgment, while not any better, just as good as your own, so what is the use of you blowing in from seventy-five to one hundred dollars in getting a patent? When you sign the patent money check you might just as well bid it a long last farewell. If you do not believe me go ahead and try it out, and then when you discover I am right, come to me with ashes sprinkled on your hair and your loins girded about with sack-cloth, and I'll forgive you. No, I am not poking fun at you. I am just slipping you a bitter dose with a little amateur comedy. As to the aligning tool; not knowing what you have in view, I could not say, but with modern machines I do not believe such an instrument would meet with sufficient sale to be profitable, though it might. I really could not offer you any very intelligent advice; in other words, you can make just as good a guess as I could. As to my swiping the idea, while I feel flattered at your confidence, I will tell you confidentially, Wilmington, that some pretty big ideas have been submitted to the editor of this department during the past four years, as well as many hundreds of lesser size, and up to date I have not kidnapped a single one of them, wherefore I feel fairly justified in sprouting a pair of wings.

Troubles of His Own.

W. C. Phelps, Richmond, Indiana, is riding on the trouble train. He says:

> I bought an outfit consisting of an Edison machine, one pair of B. & L. lenses and an Economical Calcium Generator. Am projecting an 11-foot picture at 36 feet, but the picture is so dim that you cannot tell what the subject is. Now I want to know if a good picture can be produced with calcium gas, using a Gundlach-Manhattan lens. Or is the fault in my outfit? Do all Calcium generators give the same light intensity? What would be the result if I put in carbide with the oxone?

In the first place, brother Phelps, what you need is a good, big dose of "know how." I do not know what kind of generator an "economical" is, but I do know you are attempting to operate something you know practically nothing about, and you cannot, therefore, expect good results. The lens you have is all right, if it is of proper focal length, and I suppose it is. But you cannot expect to get a very good 11-foot picture; that is too big a picture for an amateur gas man. I would suggest that you cut down your picture to 8 or 9 feet in width, and select very light films, meaning by this that none of the scenes be dense. Pick out light scenes only. Keep your lens perfectly clean, and try Guil pastils instead of limes. However, I cannot give you detailed instructions on gas; that is impossible, since space in the department is too limited, but you will either have to serve a short apprenticeship with some gas man, get some one to teach you, or else simply acquire your knowledge by the hard and expensive school of experience. I think, on the whole, you will find that the Model B gas making outfit sold by the Enterprise Optical Company, Chicago, will give you the best satisfaction.

Doesn't Know Why.

H. C. Powell, Melville, Saskatchewan, Canada, sends $2.50 and says:

> I want one of the Handbooks. Have been operating about nine years and do not know why I have not purchased one long ago. (Neither do I.—Ed.). I was East for a week recently and borrowed a brother operator's Handbook for an hour or so, whereupon I quickly realized that no operator can afford to be without one. We have rotten electric service here, and it is pretty hard to get good results. The light is poor until about 9.30 p.m. and after that time we cannot ask for better service from alternating current. We have to use 60 amperes at the arc, but are talking of installing a mercury arc rectifier, therefore we want to get that Handbook as soon as possible. I certainly got some good dope out of brother James' optical article, in April 18th issue. Have been using a very light yellow tinted screen and find it not as hard on the eyes, though I believe it takes a certain amount of brilliancy out of the picture.

According to your statement, brother, either your lines or your transformer are overloaded up to 9.30 p.m., or else the power house generators are. It is likely, however, that the fault lies in the street mains, or else in the transformer. Possibly the transformer supplies other houses or stores and your service becomes better about the time they begin to turn out the lights. Surely there is an overload somewhere, or else the power house is deliberately carrying a low voltage in the early evening and this is not at all likely.

Machine for Traveling Showmen.

Omar C. Anderson, Cleveland, Ohio, writes:

> I wish to start a show to take in schools and churches, giving an educational and travelogue program, and one not shown in the average moving picture house "just around the corner." Have been working on this for some time, but would like to have your advice as to the best machine for this purpose. It must be for both gas and electricity, for motion and stereopticon, and dissolving views; also wish to show post cards by reflection. What is the best combination I could get?

Without criticising your proposed plan, if I were going to rig up that way I would get some rather light machine, if I could run across one in good condition. You would, of course, have to have a gas burner and electric lamp with it. I would then get a separate dissolving stereopticon and a Bausch & Lomb post card projector, but I am afraid that you will find that by the time you get rigged up you will have quite a bunch of stuff to carry along, and, moreover, it will cost you considerable money, and you had better be pretty sure that you can get that money back before you invest it. All is not gold that glitters, and there is a lot of glitter to that small town proposition that does not materialize into dollars and cents when you tackle it. You might make some money from it, but take it from me you will earn every nickel you get. I personally would not touch that particular kind of proposition with a ten foot pole.

Very Clever Article.

A. E. Adams, Los Angeles, California, sends sample of a carbon clamp screw wrench he has invented. He says:

> Under separate cover am sending for your approval a carbon clamp screw wrench which I find very handy. It is adjustable for large and small clamp screws and wing nuts. If you think it is good pass it along as I believe in helping each other.

The wrench is entirely practical, though I really do not see that it is much better than a pair of gas pliers, except for the fact that one could easily make one of the tools and it would then be kept beside the lamp house especially for the purpose of tightening and loosening carbon clamp screws. It is nothing more or less than a piece of one-half inch heavy brass tubing about 8 inches long, with a wooden handle inserted in one end and a notch ½ inch deep filed in the other end, this notch to engage the wing nut. In the sample submitted he has taken a short piece of tubing just large enough to slip over the other tubing and has filed a wider notch in it to fit larger clamp screws. This piece of tubing is only 2 inches long and at the back end he has clamped a ring like the rings on the old style collapsible machine stand legs, and by sawing a kerf in the end of the short tubing the screw in the ring clamps the one to the other, and there you are. It is a handy tool, yes, and I presume that any operator who made one would find it well worth the trouble of making.

Age of Film.

From the South comes a letter requesting a personal opinion of the editor as to a letter from an exchange manager, one clause of which reads as follows: "Your method of computing the age of film is not in accordance with that employed by film exchanges. It is quite evident that you have counted Sundays, whereas they should be eliminated, as it is not a working day for films."

The editor is not running the exchange in question, but it seems to him that the branch manager has made a very queer ruling. I never before heard of eliminating Sundays in computing the age of film. The age of film, according to all my information, dates from the day of its release, and every day thereafter counts. As a matter of fact in many cities and towns Sunday is one of the heaviest days, and, anyhow, it is cutting matters pretty fine, even in the localities where theaters do not work Sundays, to try to eliminate that day in computing the age of film. Regardless of whether the film is working or not it is a day older, and, while that may not cut much ice with local patrons, it would cut a figure in transient trade. In my opinion and judgment the branch manager is absolutely wrong in his ruling.

Enterprising.

D. O. Reilly, Grand Theater, Frankfort, Kentucky, encloses $1.00 and says:

> I am a close student of the projection department. I also have your Handbook. With regard to the article, "Excellent for Operator's Library," page 966, May 16th issue, it is to the point. I want the Hawkins' set of books on the terms mentioned in the article, and you will find $1.00 enclosed as the first payment. I will pay $1.00 a week thereafter until the $6.00 is paid. If you will help me to secure these books I will very much appreciate it.

You can bet your last solid-ivory collar button that I will, because I am always willing to help the man who is willing to help himself, and the one who will pay $6.00 for a set of books in order to improve his knowledge of his profession certainly comes under that head. I have forwarded your dollar to the publishers, and you will undoubtedly hear from them long before this is published.

A Year's Experience.

Lowell, Massachusetts, writes:

> I have been in the picture business for the past five years. My father runs a theater. I have just passed the Massachusetts examination and have received my license as operator. I am willing to join the union, and had a talk with the president and business agent, but they say their by-laws require that an operator have one year's experience before he be admitted. And now how is a man to get this year's experience? I will appreciate any information you can give me along these lines.

You say you have been in the moving picture business for five years but you do not state what you have been doing, presumably it was not operating. The union is perfectly right in demanding that a man shall have at least a year's experience in the operating room before he be admitted to membership. Presumably the only way you could do this would be to get yourself taken on as an operator's helper, but I cannot offer you much advice on that point, not knowing the conditions in your territory. I can only repeat that the union's view point is correct.

Mirroroide Improvement.

J. H. Genter, of the J. H. Genter Company, Inc., Newburgh, New York, writes as follows:

> We are sending you samples of our latest in mirroroide suitable for whatever tests you may desire to make. We have spent a great deal of money and time in obtaining the best to be had in projection surfaces. You will note that the silver white is of the purest white obtainable, that is it is a silver white surface. In competition with aluminum screens this will be very noticeable. Our pale gold is of a more pronounced gold color, whereas our silver flesh certainly came up to our expectations in every way. We believe that its use will prove quite a revelation in the possibilities of picture toning. The company will be fully represented at the Exposition where we hope to meet you personally.

The Genter Company has always been progressive, and, while I have not made actual tests of the surfaces submitted, still the silver white and flesh tint certainly are beautiful surfaces. The gold is also a very pleasing surface, but personally I am skeptical about the desirability of introducing yellow into a projection surface. I have no doubt that the new surfaces here are doing fine.

Old Copies.

C. A. Hatt, Sacremento, California, writes:

> I want several copies of THE WORLD. The desired copies are those containing instructions on the various mechanisms. I have one covering the Simplex and Standard, but want the rest, so that I can bind them and keep them for reference. I believe they are one of the greatest things of their kind ever gotten out. I am now operating two Simplex machines and like them very much. Am going to take a little trip soon, and, if I can stretch my bank roll sufficiently, may call upon you in the Big City. All the operators here are doing find.

I am sorry to say that the copies desired by the brother are not available. There was a big demand for them and the copies were all sold long ago. I would suggest, however, that friend Hatt can get all these instructions in compact form, together with several hundred pages of other valuable matter by sending $2.50 to THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD for the Handbook, and this is what I would advise him to do. I like your idea of a "little" trip, and hope the bank roll will be sufficiently rubberized to include Gotham, and that we shall have the pleasure of a personal acquaintance in the near future.

Comments on the Films

Licensed

A GAP (Edison), June 16.—The sixth of "The Man Who Disappeared." This portion of the series is rather more reasonable and consistent than several of the prior ones and contains a chase that is very intense and gripping, utilizing a taxicab, a tug, etc., to open a bridge to stop a train, which is accomplished. The action is all interesting and the photography is up to the standard. It is gratifying offering.

ON THE BEACH (Melies), June 16.—The flirtatious husband makes eyes at a pretty young married woman at the beach, both thinking their better halves are absent. But the latter show up. This proves only moderately amusing and rather drags in places.

HOW LONE WOLF DIED (Selig), June 16.—This is a weird and gruesome picture depicting the final end of a renegade, red-handed Indian, who seems to take joy in committing murder. He even goes so far as to kill a settler's wife, leaving her baby motherless and ends his savagery by wantonly murdering a missionary. An Indian maiden, Laughing Star," who has become impressed by the missionary's teaching, learns from his dying lips the name of his assailant. She finds Lone Wolf injured by a fall from his horse and tortured by thirst. Several scenes are shown where he is digging himself across the sands to obtain water; the girl enticing him on. Finally he drinks from a poisoned spring and dies miserably.

THE LITTLE HE AND SHE (Essanay), June 16.—This is a story of a newly wedded couple just launched on the sea of matrimony. The husband's salary does not admit of high living, but the wife fails to realize why she has not the many pretty things her friends are enabled to have. A lady friend in better circumstances persuades her to buy two beautiful statuettes and loans her the money. She deceives her husband as to the cost and later confesses to him and how she must reimburse her friend. A quarrel ensues; each dream in their loneliness that the statues come to life. A beautiful production which results in a happy ending.

THE SHELL COMB INDUSTRY (Lubin), June 16.—This is on the same reel with "Good Cider," illustrating the manufacture of shell combs, from the live turtle to the show case, and from there into the hair of maiden and matron. Very interesting.

GOOD CIDER (Lubin), June 16.—On the same reel with "The Shell Comb Industry." A rural comedy with a barrel of cider as the main theme. It is a very laughable number and enjoyable, especially to those who have lived in the country. Everybody doctors the cider and eventually the cider doctors everybody, even the doctor. In the finale the barrel is empty and everybody is full. See this picture if possible.

THE MISSING JEWELS (Kalem), June 16.—This is certainly a story which is out of the ordinary and contains much that gains the sympathy of the audience. The plot blends the two extremes of humanity together in an unusual and complicated manner. A $30,000 necklace is lost by a young society matron and found by a train yard man, who unconscious of its worth gives it to his little daughter. After various touching scenes this incident results in a bright future for little Nell and her father.

A MODERN SAMPSON (Edison), June 17.—Both of the offerings on this split reel are too long for the matter in them as it is handled. There is an excellent idea for a a farce in the first part, written by J. Edward Hungerford, and this idea makes the picture fairly amusing. But the producer, Preston Kendall, has made it seem impossible by over-accented burlesquing and its hero too much like a crazy sissy boy.

ON THE STEPS (Edison), June 17.—This farce on the same reel would have been very funny, if it could have been made believable. It is fair; but its author, Charles H. France (he also produced it), seems to have developed it hurriedly. It is fairly amusing; but there was no laughter to be heard in the house while we watched it.

THE FATE OF THE BRASH DRUMMER AND THE NECTARINE (Essanay), June 17.—For review of this picture see page 1666, issue of June 20, Moving Picture World.

CASTLES IN THE AIR (Selig), June 17.—A picture with a good popular appeal and one that is sure to be generally liked. It is perhaps the best single reel of to-day from the exhibitor's standpoint and makes a very good offering. Lillian Brown Leighton's washer-woman mother is the best played rôle; but all in the cast do well. It is well staged and the photography is clear. Wallace Clifton is the author and Norval MacGregor staged it.

THE LADIES' WAR (Vitagraph), June 17.—A picture with an actor-proof situation at its climax and with a very well played climax, for the fun at that point depends most on Jane Fearnley and Mandy Wilson (colored and fat) and both of these with the ladies' tailor (Albert Roccardi) are very amusing in their rôles. Roy McCardell, the author, made good use of an idea which is not new at all, but, nevertheless, very laughable. There was much hearty laughter while it was on, and it makes good as a comedy offering. Wilfrid North produced it.

THE WOOING OF SOPHIE (Essanay), June 18.—A ranch comedy in which Sophie is wooed by many admirers. Slim and a rival quarrel over getting the marriage license. This is not quite as amusing as some comedies produced by this company.

HIS DREAM FULFILLED (Melies), June 18.—A half reel in which the film is orange tinted and some of the scenes quite dim. The young couple elope and are married, exactly as their fond fathers wish. Not very new in plot.

EVERYBODY'S DOING IT (Melies), June 18.—The little youngster spends his money for an itching powder and makes everyone scratch. This is also a familiar idea and not very amusing as it was developed.

HER NEIGHBORS NEXT DOOR (Biograph), June 18.—The story of a girl separated from her sweetheart, whom she meets unexpectedly in after years and saves from death. This is well pictured and contains much of interest. The scenes on the desert island were not all germane to the story as it afterward developed, but were entertaining.

ONLY A SISTER (Vitagraph), June 18.—A western offering, in which the girl gives up her savings to meet a worthless check signed by her brother for a gambling debt. The story is quite ordinary in plot but handled well and works up considerable suspense toward the close. Margaret Gibson is attractive as the girl, and Alfred D. Vosburgh plays the brother.

THE PARENT STRAIN (Lubin), June 19.—A drama crammed full of anguish involving two brothers who are in love with the same girl; the one she favors has inherited from his father the trait of gambling. The mother, realizing this, prevents their union after the girl is piloted by the discarded brother to a gambling place to see her fiance at the gambling table. An inconsistent scene occurs here, where she repairs to a minister and immediately marries the other brother. Later the husband becomes a gambler and the older brother is converted and becomes a minister and saves the two from disaster.

MILITARY TATTOO AT ALDERSHOT, ENGLAND (Kalem), June 19.—On the same reel with "The Wages of Sinn." This is said to be the most handsomely accoutered and impressive military spectacle in the world.

THE WAGES OF SINN (Kalem), June 19.—This is a sort of a rough and tumble farce comedy that involves the wages of Mr. Sinn, therefore the caption. Mrs. Sinn elects herself treasurer of the Sinn family and to increase the exchequer cuts down family expenses to very light meals, and even sells her husband's clothes. The outcome gets many good laughs. On the same reel with "Military Tattoo at Aldershot, England."

THE PERSISTENT MR. PRINCE (Vitagraph), June 19.—A comedy featuring Wally Pan, as Mr. Royal Prince, and Lillian Walker, as Miss Prunella Peach. This picture causes great laughter by the many expedients to which Prince resorts to win the Peach. This is not only a meritorious comedy, but it contains the elements of intensity as it is produced.

CHICKEN (Selig), June 19.—On the same reel with "Peter's Relations." Quite a laughable revamped old plot, concerning two husbands and their wives involved in misunderstandings, through telephone messages and accidentally discovered notes, etc., "Chicken" is responsible for considerable anguish, but the wives discover it is the real thing.

PETER'S RELATIONS (Selig), June 19.—This is a somewhat funny picture and everybody is involved in the mother-in-law plot. No such mother-in-law ever happened and if she ever does she should be suppressed. The funniest thing in this number is the scene where the young couple convert the extension table into a downy bed. On the same reel with "Chicken."

IN THE DAYS OF SLAVERY (Edison), June 20.—A Civil War story which involves the gambling mania of that period, on the Ohio and Mississippi steamboats, where poker was the popular game. Few people understand the fascinating chances and the irresistible power of the turn of the single card which may eventuate in the loss of all worldly possessions of the player. Old timers will appreciate this offering as it goes back to the days of '61. An exciting and meritorious offering with a pleasant ending.

THE GIRL AT HIS SIDE (Selig), June 20.—This is a love story, complicated with business wherein the head of a construction company is mixed up in a love affair with his private secretary and an heiress. A valuable necklace of pearls for which he becomes responsible enters into the plot. It accidentally becomes broken and he offers to have it repaired. Ford is seriously injured while inspecting a building and taken to a hospital. Various complications obtain concerning securities during his illness and convalescence. The necklace is returned to the heiress and the secretary is rewarded with the reciprocity of love. This is an interesting offering in every respect.

BRONCHO BILLY—OUTLAW (Essanay), June 20.—An illogical melodrama introducing several characters in a complicated plot which admits of no logical reason whatever, unless it is to allow of the escape of Broncho Billy who is lucky enough to secure the sheriff's horse and save the sheriff's wife from the attack of a greaser outlaw. The sheriff, through gratitude, secures Broncho Billy's pardon from the governor.

BROUGHT TO JUSTICE (Kalem), June 20.—A western drama involving love, intrigue, deceit, etc. The characters in the cast are cowboys, half-breeds, Indians, horse thieves, desperadoes and so forth. Eventually the offering ends with the capture of the criminals and a victorious sheriff marries Helen, the rancher's daughter.

GETTING SOLID WITH PA (Lubin), June 20.—This comedy is on the same reel with "Long May It Wave." It is a slap dash picture which uses the old and antiquated, before-the-war loaded cigar as an expedient to get laughs. Other used before numerous times.

LONG MAY IT WAVE (Lubin), June 20.—On the same reel with "Getting Solid with Pa." A ludicrous, an old plot involving the hen-pecked husband. This picture gains laughs by its absolute absurdity.

BY THE OLD DEAD TREE (Biograph), June 20.—The development of the love affairs concerning a persistent wealthy young bachelor and a puritanic young school teacher furnish the theme for this meritorious picture. The prejudice of the girl's mother is overcome by the sincerity evinced by the suitor. The caption is misleading as the action centers around an old stump which is loaded with powder. Many children are utilized in this picture and the scene where they are in peril is unusually gripping.

Licensed Specials

ONE WOMAN'S WAY (Cines), June 16.—In this two-part visualization a rather interesting plot is worked out concerning a young wife who is deeply in love with her Baronet husband. There is another woman involved and the wife is awakened to the fact by accident that his lordship is neglecting her. Several intense scenes occur where an opportunity presents itself, and she proves her willingness to give her life for his happiness. He awakens and his regeneration follows. Husband and wife start life anew. The picture is splendidly produced.

A WAYWARD DAUGHTER (Vitagraph), June 16.—This picture is in two parts and although somewhat conventional in plot and theme contains much that is of heart interest and should be a wholesome lesson to girls who are disposed to be headstrong, and to disregard the admonitions of their parents and friends. This is a well-produced picture in both city and country scenes. Norma Talmadge, as Betty, the wayward girl, gives a clever portrayal of the part, and Van Dyke Brooke as Luke Hardy, the country storekeeper and postmaster, is impressive. All the characters are well sustained. An offering worthy of a place on any program.

THE STRUGGLE EVERLASTING (Lubin), June 17.—Two-part melodrama, by Shannon Fife, produced by Edgar Jones. It holds the attention fairly well; but makes a son, as acting district attorney, prosecute his father for fraudulent use of the mails. This son had been arguing with his father about his business methods for years; but the old man thinks no one dishonest until caught. But the incident—the son's acting against his parent—falls down in tact and its bad effect was noticeable, especially on older spectators. The story is clear and, without really convincing, is made plausible. The acting is so so and the photography good. A fair offering. These "fair" offerings make none enthusiastic and don't compel any to come again; but those who are in the house like them.

HOME RUN BAKER'S DOUBLE (Kalem), June 17.—A two-part picture for baseball fans with plenty of grandstand and "diamond" atmosphere. It tells an interesting, likable story and is a better-than-fair offering. But it was a serious mistake to introduce the girl as the picture's center of interest and then handle her tactlessly; make her a listener at doors and one too ready to meet a man at a cafe. Nor is she rightly the picture's center; that belongs distinctly to Bender, played by the great ball player. He also take the rôle of the "double" who is looking for money under false pretenses. There is much that is distinctly interesting in the picture and its interior photographs are life-like as can be. We dare commend it, taking all things into account, as an especially desirable offering.

THE UNKNOWN HAND (Melies), June 18.—A two-reel mystery story which holds the attention from start to finish. It never becomes really thrilling, yet the trend of interest is well sustained as the detective traces the owner of the hand which stole the valuable papers. Lady Curtin, wife of the minister of justice, stole the papers to satisfy a blackmailer. The denouement is satisfactory and the offering as a whole is pleasing.

THE HOUSE OF DARKNESS (Lubin), June 18.—A two-reel number by Shannon Fife. This tells the story of two lawyers appointed guardians of a girl heiress. The effect produced on them by the money they covet is strongly shown as the picture proceeds. This makes a fascinating story of a somewhat old-fashioned type, rather obvious in development, but with numerous exciting episodes to keep up the observer's interest. At the close the hero saves the girl from the burning house, but it seemed a mistake to let all the money be burned with the rascally brothers. It would have been more satisfactory to have saved this. A good release of its kind.

THE HAND OF HORROR (Edison), June 19.—This two-part picture play is very gripping and interesting and contains in its plot many scenes which are familiar to New Yorkers. It is well written and splendidly produced both in acting and photography. The gripping scenes take place at the Metropolitan Building where the hero is called upon to make some repairs on the hands of the clock. Scenes among the gangsters of the East Side are also portrayed. The plot is embellished with an interesting love story. This is a superior offering.

FINGER-PRINTS (Essanay), June 19.—This is a very complicated two-part picture, the plot of which hinges on the attempt to secure a valuable scarab by a gang of crooks. It contains many interesting and gripping scenes, especially the interior of an underground room and the interior of a sewer through which the heroine makes her escape after being incarcerated by the gang; she is rescued through a manhole by some laborers. Several realistic fights occur. It is finely acted and photographed.

FATHER'S FLIRTATION (Vitagraph), June 20.—A two-part comedy, written by Edwin Ray Coffin, worked out to a finish by John Bunny, Flora Finch and Mary Anderson. The many complications that occur in this comedy causes great laughter. It is elongated into two reels and numberless feet of film might have been saved. However, Bunny gets into an awful position, but extricates himself, with the assistance of the director and the roll of mazuma which he carries in his pocket, with which he purchases the silence of the college widow. This is a superior comedy. George D. Baker is the producer.

Independent

HER FRIEND THE BANDIT (Keystone), June 4.—Charles Chaplain and Charles Murray play the chief funny characters of this farce which is a bit thin; but has the rough whirling of happenings usually found in farces of this well-marked type. It will amuse and make laughter and can be considered a safe, rather than noteworthy offering.

OUR COUNTRY COUSINS (Keystone), June 6.—Farm characters and an elopement that has the Keystone flavor and is sure to make laughter. It has unexpected and very funny incidents and will surely make an excellent offering.

THE KNOCK-OUT (Keystone), June 11.—Roscoe Arbuckle, ably supported, makes barrels of fun in this two-reel comedy release. In its early stages, the story has a particularly well-connected plot, but things go to smash a little in this line when a big chase is introduced in the second reel. This chase, as well as a comedy prize fight, is unusually funny.

THE LITTLE SENORITA (Princess), June 19.—A pretty, poetic romance with Muriel Ostriche as the heroine. It is set on an island not far from shore, and, at the climax, she swims to the mainland for help and, of course, brings her lover. Her parents are South Americans in retirement after a revolution and her father has a lot of gold. Some roughs determine to levy a generous contribution on him for a revolution, and land on the island. The girl's lover had been coming there; but had been "warned" off. He now, with the help of Muriel, is able to save the treasure and win the father's consent. The staging and photography are of the best. It is played naturally. We think it a very acceptable, though slight, offering.

A BUSY MAN (Royal), June 20.—Another one of Burns, Reehm and Stull Royal comedies. Squire Higgs, of Dog's Corners, is the fire department, minister, doctor, constable, postmaster—in fact, the pooh-bah of the whole durn village. "Hats in his specialty," begosh, and the whole community recognize the fact. Gee, but it's funny—and he always collects his fee.

SUCH A BUSINESS (Royal), June 20.—By Burns, Reehm and Stull, who essay the leading parts, assisted by Isabel Daintry and others of equal ability. Ikey Lecy, a hatter, finds business dull and he seeks to improve it through his son Sammy, who follows the bright idea of his bright parent and the results of his endeavors furnish the comedy. This offering creates laughter.

MABEL'S MARRIED LIFE (Keystone), June 20.—It is surely a winner. It can't be described; but there is nothing at all offensive in it; it is all laughable, and a very desirable release. Charles Chapman and Mabel Normand are at their best and everyone knows what that means; better than most feature offerings from an exhibition viewpoint. This kind makes 'em come again soon.

THE DECEIVER (Komic), June 21.—Tod Browning and Ed Dillon love the same pretty widow and, as the situation develops, we see her affections changing from the latter to the former and back again to Dillon, who is again a prosperous police officer. It is quite laughable and makes a good offering.

OUR MUTUAL GIRL No. 23 (Reliance), June 22.—The Mutual heroine is found; but we are not yet told how it came that she was asleep in the country house of respectable people. The notability introduced this week is our Collector of the Port, Dudley Field Malone. The story is still interesting and is holding up very well, though the quality is not quite so gripping as in the three parts that preceded it.

PAPA'S DARLING (Imp), June 22.—In this Ethel Grandin plays the daughter of a rich man who masquerades as a young man and secures work in her father's office. The story is almost farcical in its situations and we like Miss Grandin better in her own style of apparel. Still this will probably interest many observers.

A CASE ON THE DOCTOR (Universal Ike, Jr.), June 23.—In this characteristic western comedy Louise Glaum plays the lady doctor and Universal Ike, Jr., heads the list of her male patients, which is a rapidly growing one. Not a very new idea, but plenty of action and some laughable situations in this.

THE BURDEN (Majestic), June 23.—A rather interesting plot obtains in this picture play which is ably directed and well acted. Eugene Palette, Sam De Grasse and Irene Hunt in the principal parts. The plot embraces the commitment of a murder and two brothers are under suspicion. There are gripping and intense scenes which hold attention. The finale is gratifying. It is worth viewing.

IZZY'S NIGHT OUT (Reliance), June 24.—This is a very comical production of the popular "Izzy" series exploiting Max Davidson in the title role. Never did anything like that happen by Izzy before in his life. Izzy was made dizzy and he was kept busy. But, ohy, ohy, ohy, is the morning after, oh, such a headaches. This offering is received with continuous laughter.

BLUE KNOT, KING OF POLO (American), June 24.—A timely picture, giving a melodramatic love story, a variant on the old race horse theme; but fairly acceptable. The photography is as clear as can be and the scenes are often full of beauty. A polo game well pictured is included. The players are acceptable and the offering will please.

LOST BY A HAIR (Rex), June 28.—An amusing little one-reel comedy by Lois Weber, in which the jealous suitors lift the tenor's wig from his head by means of a fish-line. This is old business, but brings the usual laugh.

ON THE VERGE (Frontier), June 28.—A western story of a young wife who starts to leave her husband for an old sweetheart and is saved from this step by a dance hall girl. The story is jerkily developed and the characterizations are not very appealing. This is only of about average merit.

A TWENTIETH CENTURY PIRATE (Victor), June 29.—A farce with its hero far too shy to suit its or his heroine; but he gets interested in his family genealogy and learns that he is derived from a pirate. He develops some of "the old pep," snatches the girl from her garden and marries her willi-nilli, but much to her delight. Then the genealogist whom he had been employing comes back to say that he had made a mistake and that the youth is derived from only an archbishop. But the deed is done. Warren Kerigan has the leading rôle. It will make some laughter; but it is too long for the matter that it has. The photography is fair.

IT'S A BOY (Sterling), June 29.—Little Billy is the chief figure in this film story. When the new baby comes he conspires with a friend to make away with it. They place it in the dog cart and there is an exciting pursuit. This is not strong, but proves quite entertaining.

THE GIRL IN PANTS (Crystal), June 30.—Vivian dresses up in men's clothes and fights a burlesque duel with her lover's rival. This is fairly funny and helped considerably by good photography.

HER NEW HAT (Crystal), June 30.—A Pearl White number, on same reel with above. Pearl shoots up a poker game, in which hubby is winner, and gets the stakes to buy a new hat with. This is entertaining.

BESSIE, THE DETECTRESS, IN TICK, TICK, TICK! (Joker), July 1.—Bess Merredyth is here featured in a burlesque detective story. The fore part of this contain little action and the plot is very uncertain. The rough and tumble scenes at the close are about the most interesting feature of this, and they possess but little humor.

THE LOST ARROW (Nestor), July 1.—A pretty story of Indian life, in which two dusky lovers hunt for the arrow shot by the chief, in order to gain the daughter's hand. The story involves love and jealousy, and altogether makes quite a pleasing offering of a somewhat conventional type.

PASSING THE LOVE OF WOMAN (Rex), July 3.—This story, written by Bess Merredyth, concerns the love affairs of a gunman. The characters command no sympathy from the observer and the sacrifice of the gunman's pal seemed to contain a good deal of false sentiment. The scenes are good and well acted, but the type of story is not of a high order.

THE HEART OF A CROOK (Kay-Bee), July 3.—A compelling human interest story in which a bank robber makes a great personal sacrifice to protect a friend who has helped him is well told in this two-reeler. At times the action is somewhat jerky, but the picture in its entirety is to be highly commended.

CAPTAIN KIDD'S PRICELESS TREASURE (Joker), July 4.—An illustrated ballad of pirate treasure. The costuming is exceptionally well done, picturing Colonial days to a nicety. The forepart of the story is somewhat jumbled, but it comes to a very diverting finish. This makes a very good novelty offering. The pirates are fearfully and wonderfully made up.

ON THE RIO GRANDE (Rex), July 5.—A typical story of the Great Southwest, with Herbert Rawlinson, Anna Little and Frank Lloyd in the cast. The construction is jerky in places, but the outdoor scenes are attractive. The story concerns the rounding up of Mexican cattle thieves. An average number.

THE GREATEST OF THESE (Eclair), July 5.—Alec Francis plays the part of an old cobbler in this number, a man of the Silas Marner type. He sours upon life when his daughter runs away with an artist, but later there is a reconciliation and he again becomes the friend of the neighborhood children. A pretty story, with good settings and a pleasing heart interest.

Independent Specials

THE STOLEN CODE (Reliance), June 20.—A foreign spy picture in two parts. The situation is developed in an almost tiresomely ordinary way. Is there no way for a pretty spy to get acquainted with a diplomat or military officer except by pretending to have a fall and a sprained ankle? The second reel is much better and the truth is that the picture ought to have been condensed into one reel. It interests; but it might have been made stronger. The staging, photography and acting are of good quality.

THE SEVERED THRONG (Majestic), June 21.—A real feature. It is a two-part picture and tells a story in which two Indians have parts; but it is quite out of the ordinary. There is nothing of the trite "Western" about it and, since it is full of convincing action of very sensational nature and handled with restraint by both producer and his players who act in a most natural manner, we commend it as an offering that will very likely awaken enthusiasm. It is an unusually gripping picture and a most desirable release.

BIRD OF PREY (Eclipse), June 22.—A two-part feature offering providing a sensational melodramatic story in which an evil clerk is loved by his employer's daughter who permits him to visit her at midnight, climbing up to the second story window. He later steals his employer's money and a fellow clerk suspects him. This second clerk becomes the hero in an exciting pursuit of the criminal by land and sea. The action is often of a startling character and will hold attention. It has been very carefully staged in well-chosen or constructed backgrounds. The photography is often in delightful purple-gray tints and is always clear and commendable. There are fine pictures of old buildings, of docks and seashore and of the ocean. But when the hero wins the girl in the end, one wonders whether she were really worth while.

THE PAINTED LADY'S CHILD (American), June 22.—In this two-part picture, the title is a bit misleading, or the woman was painted by an artist and did not "paint," so far as we know. An elaborately woven situation is developed into a love story of sentiment, in which William Garwood and Vivian Rich play the leads. Jack Richardson, who, in the first reel, is a half-villain, in the second recognizes his daughter whom, with her mother, he had abandoned, and does what he can to make up. It is well acted and clearly photographed in many commendable scenes. It is hardly an offering to stir enthusiasm, but is a bit better than fair.

FOR HER CHILD (Thanhouser), June 23.—The "Kidlet" has a prominent role in this two-part offering and her presence and charming acting will surely make it go well with most audiences. The story is poetic and sentimental. It could hardly be called a strongly dramatic picture, but there is a most sensational struggle in one scene in which Irving Cummings, as the husband of the heroine and the child's father, fights with a burglar. The acting is fair and the whole makes a good offering. It deals with divorce, and its theme is far from new.

THE SKULL (Imp), June 25.—At first one grows a little impatient at the obscure development of this story, but later this feeling vanishes when the observer learns that it was all intended for a mystery. What looks like confusion of plot is really a purposely vague style of development. Alexander Gaden turns out to be a detective who has for years been rounding up the villain of the piece. The skull feature was unique and there is a sort of uncanny, expectant atmosphere about the story as it progresses. The suspense is well sustained in the second reel and the denouement is a satisfactory one. Not a powerful offering, but something different and enjoyable.

THE MYSTERY OF WICKHAM HALL (Powers), June 26.—This three-part story, written by Bess Meredyth, brings to mind the style of English society stories written by Bertha M. Clay and The Duchess. Cleo Madison appears as the heroine, whose path is beset by much suffering. The scenes, both exterior and interior, are very attractive, and represent a big English estate. The characterizations are only fairly good as a whole, partly owing to faulty costuming. The story itself extends over four generations of time and is entertaining. The strongest moments are in the last reel when the unwilling bride sees the ghosts of former inhabitants of the place and determines to reject the rascally John. As an old-fashioned type of story this gives full value and is handled with a fair degree of strength.

THE CRY OF THE CAPTIVE (Hepworth), June 29.—A melodramatic love story in two parts, set in English backgrounds. Many of its scenes are in a forest and the photographs (good all the way through) often give that half-misty suggestion of deep leafy isles that is very pleasing. The story is very fair and will hold attention although few, if any, will be convinced that what it shows really happened or is likely to happen. The heroine changes, between the closing of the first and opening of the second reel, from a simple forest girl in which guise the rich hero meets and falls in love with her, to a stylish city girl. Her evil uncle, now her guardian, is making her help him cheat in his gaming house. He is also chief of a gang of thieves and one turns against him. In an exciting scene the hero rescues the girl just as the disgruntled thief accomplishes the uncle's ruin. The story misses some good chances to be consistent and effective at the same time, but makes a fair offering just as it is.

LUCILLE LOVE, Series No. 12 (Gold Seal), June 30.—The rascally servant, played by Ernest Shields, complicates the situation in this number by more of his villainy. He is choked by Hugo and there is some gun fighting, with a fair amount of suspense involved. The scenes are of a melodramatic character and wind up with an auto chase.

SHORTY GETS INTO TROUBLE (Broncho), July 1.—This two-reel western will make friends everywhere. The story is interesting and is quite logically worked out. An acceptable comedy incident is used to open and then follows a series of intensely dramatic incidents. Intelligent direction and first-class photography have added greatly to the class of the release.

SNOWDRIFT (Eclair), July 1.—This is a two-part delectable production and contains a heap of heart interest. A human derelict is faithfully sweeping snow from the pavement in front of a prominent clubhouse, the members, for the purpose of enlivenment invite him into the parlor to tell the story of his life which he does. His story is of the great northwest, where the snow is on the ground and in the air. The story proves to be one of gripping interest and holds spellbound the clubmen who listen to it. A tragic ending pertains when he recognizes one of the leading members present as the man who wronged him and cruelly left him to die in the drifts of snow.

HIS HOUR OF MANHOOD (Domino), July 2.—This two-reel picture may please those who merely view but do not analyze. It is hardly logical in its plot. It follows the old theme of Enoch Arden in some respects, but is weakened materially by a mess of melodramatic happenings that are absolutely uninteresting.

THE HOUSE DISCORDANT (Rex), July 2.—A two-reel number, with Robert Leonard and Hazel Buckham in the leading parts. This shows quite naturally the manner in which a young wife takes up the enjoyments of her younger friends and this gives her husband the impression she is abandoning him, when she is really assisting others to elope. This rises to a high point of interest which is never quite realized in the action of the characters. It would have been stronger if the climax had come sooner and then worked in the happy ending as it now stands. The photography and settings are attractive and the story very well constructed and presented.

THE HOPES OF BLIND ALLEY (Rex), July 4.—This three-reel number, produced by Allan Devan, has a number of strong points. It gives an intimate and convincing picture of tenement life. It develops a pleasing story, naturally and appealingly, and has a number of strong character parts. Murdock MacQuarrie makes a memorable part of the old grandfather. The Italian vender of statuettes made a good touch, and the silk hat episode contains the right human element. This whole production shows an unusual feeling for picturing real life on the screen. A strong offering.

THE MYSTERY OF GREEN PARK (Eclipse), July 6.—A two-part feature offering somewhat above the average in merit. It tells a detective story and has a new situation that baffles the imagination of the spectator, quite fooling him until the detective lays open before us the criminal's method of having a perpetual alibi. Natural acting quite above the average and beautiful photography increase the effect of it and make it commendable as a good offering.

FACING THE GATTLING GUNS (Warner's Features).—A sensational melodrama in three reels, dealing with modern life and taken against a great, partly-built dam or other engineering work. Its center of interest is the contractor's difficulty in getting on with the work. He is short of ready money and the villain, a millionaire, plots to keep him from borrowing on gilt-edged securities he owns. The contractor's daughter repulses the villain and the hero, his clerk, gets discharged for shielding her. This hero is made foreman, and the old foreman becomes a dramatic factor in the second reel by opposing him. The work is protected from the rioting workers by gattling guns (not wholly convincing as shown) and they are loaded with blank cartridges by the new foreman. The millionaire villain changes these for ball cartridges and this act is photographed by a motion picture camera man and, at the trial, his reel is brought to the jury and he real criminal is arrested. It is fairly well acted; the photography is clear; many of the scenes are truly exciting and it makes a passable offering.

THE CITY OF PROMISE (Warner's Features).—Cecilia Loftus is featured in this three-part picture as its heroine, a country girl who has acted "Rosalind" in Mayville and comes to the great city to be an actress. The plot follows a well-worn path and we think it will be fairly popular, but much more could have been made of it with fresher development and with broader, less stagey scenes; it is cramped into too small a space and lacks the atmosphere without which it fails of being truly convincing, although its business is all probable enough. Then the girl's father or perhaps uncle (the relationship is none too clear) spoiled the homespun feeling in the home scenes; he is a city man. The acting of Miss Loftus before the camera is fair; she is good in human moments, but intruded burlesque business in the chorus girl scene that decidedly didn't agree with her acting of Rosalind, for example. Her work in moments of transition is not sure yet. She is ably supported and the picture makes a very fair offering.

New Rainey Pictures Please.

Series of 1914 Now Running at the Casino are Replete with Exciting Incidents of the Camera Hunt in South Africa.

Reveiwed by Randall M. White.

PAUL J. RAINEY'S 1914 set of African Hunt pictures, opening at the Shuberts' Casino theater, Broadway and Thirty-ninth street, Monday evening, June 22d, attracted another of those audiences which force the conviction that motion pictures of a certain class have already passed beyond the stage of being merely the "poor man's entertainment." New York's Four Hundred were there. They came in gay parties in full dress—in their limousines and victorias—in much the same manner that they might have gone to an opening night at the opera just a few doors up the street. All evening long the lobby was crowded with those anxious to purchase admission and the success of the opening night surpassed the fondest expectations of the most sanguine.

The first night audience was made up largely of people with an inspired interest in the pictures. Representative film men who had seen the previous set of Rainey pictures and knew of the success which they had achieved were on hand to prophesy as to the future of the 1914 offering. Personal friends of Mr. Rainey, who is widely known in New York by reason of his work in South Africa, were present to see the results of his last daring expedition. It was inevitable, therefore, that the pictures shown at the Casino should be measured in merit by comparison with the first Rainey exhibition. That the 1914 program is less gripping than was the previous one was the common expression of opinion.

Carefully considered, however, there seems little justification for any argument that the 1914 pictures themselves are one jot less interesting than were the previous ones, and it is more reasonable to believe that the lesser enthusiasm over the new pictures is resulting for the reason that the keen edge was taken off the interest in wild animal pictures some time ago—and largely as the result of the tremendous success of the first Rainey releases.

The presentation at the Casino is being made in the most effective manner possible. A lecturer with a fine appreciation of just where the motion picture "lecture" ceases to be helpful and begins to become damning helps the exhibition a great deal and because of his pronounced English appearance and accent provides what almost amounts to a comedy strain throughout the show. The Shuberts purchased the Paul J. Rainey pictures after having seen them in London and they did well to engage the English lecturer.

As models of perfect photography the 1914 Rainey pictures will not win any medals—but they are all that they reasonably expected to be and are clear and sharp enough to "put over" the interesting subject matter which is their first claim to distinction. In his opening remarks, the "Bombardier Wells" lecturer, explained the difficulties which Mr. Rainey and his associates had encountered in securing the pictures. He told that it was found utterly impossible to expose the positive film during the best lighted portions of the day for the reason that the excessive heat adversely effected the photographic emulsion; the pictures were therefore taken in the early morning and in the very late afternoon.

Two of the water holes shown in the previous Rainey pictures are shown in the 1914 set and, in addition, there is another interesting set of views taken at a waterhole about eighty miles removed from the original pair. The first reel shows a rhinoceros, a couple of herds of grand zebra, a flock of South African guinea hens, wart hogs, a particularly interesting group of baboons, and a small herd of giraffes, including the largest giraffe that Mr. Rainey has ever seen.

The second reel is largely given over to pictures of some of Mr. Rainey's pets on his ranch on the east coast of Africa. The playful antics of a pet baboon and a hound puppy are interesting and are well placed in the show to add snappiness and zest.

More grand zebras, the first moving pictures of the mongoose, grand and "Tommy" gazelles, and a flock of English storks are shown in the third reel.

A cheetah hunt, in which one of the pretty spotted animals is killed by poisoned arrows shot by Wandarobos, picturesque African tribesmen, and another is captured alive, is the big feature of the fourth reel—and one of the most interesting features of the series. The famous Rainey animal hunting dogs make their first appearance in this reel.

Strikingly beautiful pictures of a flock of flamingoes and other South African birds, and of a wonderful herd of buffalo, were shown in the fifth reel. The bird pictures, tinted as a night scene, give the impression of an animated Japanese print and, on the opening night, were greeted with prolonged applause. The hundreds of buffalo's milling silently and savagely through the veldt less than a hundred yards away from the cameraman, with their wicked looking horns and glaring eyes giving mute evidence of their power, also made a picture which was greeted with applause.

Properly placed as the final incident of the series, because of its striking and unusual strength, is the lion chase in which every detail of this dangerous performance is shown. In introducing this series of views, the lecturer explained that it was found necessary to track and kill an even dozen lions before the composite picture required could be obtained. The first views show jackals and other carniverous birds feeding upon the remnants of a water buck which had been killed by a lion during the night. Then the hunting dogs are brought to the water buck's carcass where they pick up the trail of the slayer and the chase by a company of fully fifty men, including Mr. Rainey and his associates and the native boys are shown. The lion that has gorged himself upon the buck is finally cornered in a deep ravine and is shown whisking around in the underbrush. His death, however, was not accomplished under circumstances which permitted of satisfactory reproduction by the motion picture camera and the finish of the series comes with a representation of the highly spectacular killing of another splendid King of the Jungle.

The lion that is killed has been cornered in a clump of bushes which skirts an open place in the veldt and the daring stunts performed by native boys in their efforts to entice the beast out into the open in order that he may be dispatched are shown. As a big climax, the shaggy maned brute charges directly out of the bushes towards the camera man—and towards the audience—to be "knocked kicking" into the air by a well aimed bullet from a big calibered rifle in the hands of a member of the Rainey party who, by the way, met his death during another hunt a couple of days later. It is said that the lion was within fifteen yards of the camera when he was killed and the pictures seem to support this statement.

The showman who sees the 1914 series of Rainey pictures will concede that the views have been arranged with a fine appreciation of what spectators throughout the country will enjoy. The injection of special features at stated intervals keeps the interest up throughout the program. As presented at the Casino, the stories told by the lecturer while reels were being changed added materially to the value of the offering.

On the opening night Mr. Rainey himself was in attendance and addressed the audience.

JOSEPH KAUFMAN.

JOSEPH KAUFMAN is a fair example of the quality of players now demanded by the Lubin Company. Amateurs are treated as amateurs and given their chance, but for responsible parts the people must be actors of experience, and Kaufman is eminently fit. Born in Washington, D. C., in 1882, he was educated at the Georgetown University and graduated with honors. With a forceful temperament and strong personality he at an early age adopted the stage, first playing for five years in a famous stock company. This was his apprenticeship in which he had the advantage of playing over two hundred roles, with this experience he was well fitted for Broadway, and engaged by Charles Frohman for the Empire Stock Company—in those days the greatest company America has ever seen. Among the stars that he supported were Maude Adams, Marie Doro, Mrs. Patrick Campbell, Fay Davis, Ethel Barrymore, William Collier and Elsie Janis. For a while he was a favorite player in Henry W. Savage's companies and later with Cohan and Harris, always playing leading roles. While not really starring, Frederick Thompson featured Kaufman in "Via Wireless," and as Monte Brewster in "Brewster's Millions." Much more could be told of his stage career which has made him a valuable player in the Lubin Studio of Philadelphia and a man much respected and liked by his associates.

Joseph Kaufman.

Isis Theatre, Indianapolis, Ind.

THE Isis Theater, completed and opened, brings to light the third motion picture house of class to mark the enterprise of Messrs. Barton & Olson in the Indianapolis field. B. V. Barton and Charles Olson are identified with both the Central Amusement Company, owning the Isis, and the People's Amusement Company, owning the Victoria and the Empress Theaters. By virtue of the amount invested they control all three properties. All three houses were completed this year and each one of them represents the up-to-date idea of what a picture house should be.

The Isis is the only downtown house of the three. It is located opposite the Traction Terminal Station which handles about 20,000 persons daily. With this transient trade passing by or near the house daily, and a good city patronage to draw from, the house is well filled from morning till night, and should pay a good return on the $40,000 invested in it. An admission of five cents is charged, and the structure is strictly a picture house. It is equipped for the presentation of vaudeville if at any time the management should care to so use it. As shown in the photograph, the house front is of stucco and terra cotta, and is studded with electric lights, 1,500 incandescent bulbs being used. A feature of the front is the peacock design above the second floor. The beauty of the tail spread cannot be appreciated until the illumination of the front is made at night. The name appears in ornamental letters on panels on each side of the front. The whole makes a very attractive and inviting appearance.

The lobby is not so deep as in some houses, but it is nicely finished in brass and mahogany, with mirror doors. The box office is of stone and glass, and contains an automatic ticket-selling machine that will dispense five tickets at once. It makes the handling of a crowd a matter of envious ease and celerity. The seating capacity is 700 and it is the only strictly moving picture house in the city with a gallery.

A $5,000 pipe organ from the Kimball Organ Company has been installed, and the pipe organ concerts are becoming a distinct feature of the entertainment offered. Two Power's 6-A machines in a steel booth that is equipped for the dual operation of the two projectors add greatly to the efficiency of the house, there being scarcely an appreciable wait between reels. The construction is fireproof throughout. The throw from the booth to the screen is long.

The chairs are of Circassian walnut and are leather upholstered. Though the house is relatively narrow, two aisles have been provided, so that the filling and emptying of the auditorium is greatly facilitated. The lights are invisible, and the screen is inset so that there are no cross lights to mar the pictures. At the same time the decorations are light in color and the house is always shown in a soft, sort of half-light, that is pleasing. A positive-acting direct fan and blower system of heating, ventilating and cooling is a part of the equipment. A rapid change of air is provided at all times.

Toilet and rest rooms with plenty of mirrors and other conveniences to endear the establishment to women patrons have been provided. On the whole, the house seems to present a good model of what the modern picture house should be. Messrs. Barton & Olson are to be congratulated, too, upon the fact that they have made it a five-cent house, instead of ten cent, which they could have done to their greater profit. They believe it was the price that made the picture house popular and intend to make the jitney the standard as long as circumstances will permit.

Photo by H. H. Coxburn Co., Indianapolis, Ind.

Isis Theater, Indianapolis, Ind.

CALIFORNIA M. P. COMPANY'S FIRST RELEASE.

There is to be something essentially Californian in the entire history and production of the first photoplay which the California Motion Picture Corporation are preparing to release to the public. It is to be a realistic adaptation from Paul Armstrong's dramatic version of Bret Harte's celebrated story "Salomy's Kiss." As the world at large knows, the scene of this story is laid in California and carries one back to the romantic days of the great gold rush of '49.

Not only is the story of California and from the pen of early California's most celebrated author, but in its motion picture adaptation, is to feature one of the most famous of that state's well known stage folk, Beatriz Michelena, the beautiful prima donna, who will appear in the title rôle. The part of the delightfully capricious Salomy Jane is exceptionally well adapted to Miss Michelena whose animation and petite mannerisms did quite as much as her voice to make her an operatic star of first luster. A long list of critics throughout the country have credited Miss Michelena with being the most beautiful woman on the American operatic stage, as well as an actress of unusual versatility. This, together with her youth and ideal size, form and animation for picture work, will establish her immediately as one of the greatest favorites in the silent drama. Her operatic work,—and she was touring the country as prima donna in the Shubert's production of the "Girl from Dixie" when not sixteen years of age,—has featured her in some of the greatest successes ever staged in this country. Among the operas in which she starred are: Kirk La Shelle's "Princess Chic," Henry Savage's "Peggy from Paris," John Cort's "Kissing Girl" and Oliver Morosco's "Tik Tok Man of Oz."

Miss Michelena will be supported by one of the best balanced casts ever organized for motion pictures and included in it will be House Peters, late of Frohman's Famous Players. Other members of the notable cast are: Andrew Robson, William Nigh, Ernest Joy, and Clara Beyers all of whom have played leading roles when with other companies.

According to a report received from the Pacific Coast, the contract covering the picture rights on "Salomy Jane" has just been terminated by the producing company with the Lieber and Paul Armstrong Companies. This same report brings word that the California Motion Picture Corporation, which is devoting its time exclusively to feature adaptations from famous plays, books and operas, has been carrying on actual operations at its San Rafael studio, situated at the base of Mt. Tamalpais, since the first of May, the intent being to get several productions ahead

This corporation has been financed by a group of some of California's best known business men and capitalists. Among the stock holders and directors are: Herbert Payne, millionaire of Menlo Park; Henry T. Scott, President of the Mercantile National Bank; R. P. Schwerin, Vice-President and General Manager of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company; Charles Templeton Crocker, owner of the St. Francis Hotel and director of the Crocker National Bank; Edwin M. Eddy of the Selwyn Eddy Estate Company; William F. Herrin, Vice-President and Chief Counsellor of the Southern Pacific; Christian de Guigne of the Parrott Estate; James Tyson, President of the Seaboard National Bank, and Arthur Payne of the Payne Estate. Alex. E. Beyfuss is General Manager of the Corporation.

"Little Lord Fauntleroy"

A Four-Reel McEnnery Offering Adapted from Mrs. F. Hodgson-Burnett's World-famous Story

Reviewed by Harry W. De Long.

CAST:

The Earl of Dorincourt.....Mr. H. Lyons
Cedric, his son (Lord Fauntletroy) ..Master Gerald Royston
"Dearest" (Mrs. Errol).....Miss Jane Wells
Mr. Havisham (family lawyer).....Mr. Bernard Vaughan
Minna Tipton (an adventuress).....Miss V. Osmond
Ben Tipton (her husband).....Mr. Frank Stather
Tommy Tipton (Ben's son).....Master D. Callam
Dick Tipton (a bootblack, Ben's brother) Mr. Harry Edwards
Silas Hobbs (a grocer).....Mr. F. Tomkins
Mary (a housemaid).....Miss Nelson

THIS PRODUCTION has been done in an admirable manner and is certainly good to see. The story is familiar, particularly to fathers and mothers, who perhaps perused it in their childhood days and it will be enjoyed by their progeny in the pictured version. As it is presented,

Scene from "Little Lord Fauntleroy" (Kineto).

nothing is left to be desired, and Master Gerald Royston, who essays the part of the little lord is certainly ideal. He combines the dignity of his aristocratic ancestors on his father's side of the house with the democratic inheritance which he obtains from his American mother and wins the love of his erratic grandfather, the Earl of Dorincourt, a peer of the old school and the descendant of a long line of illustrious ancestors whose escutcheon has never been stained. Fate levels the Earl's pride through the worthlessness of his three sons, who through various dissipations so gall the old Earl and irritate him that he becomes such a monument of selfishness that it usurps every other thought in his mind. The three sons being removed by death in various ways the mantle falls upon the shoulders of little Cedric and the old nobleman, inflexible and proud as ever instructs his solicitor to fetch little Lord Fauntleroy, heir to the earldom, from America. He is about six years old and is imbued with old-fashioned dignity and dearly loves his mother whom he calls "Dearest," and he promises his dying father to look after her comfort.

Scene from "Little Lord Fauntleroy" (Kineto).

Despite the aristocratic blood in his veins Cedric, with his artless and winning way is beloved by all. His chums are Mr. Hobbs, an elderly grocer, Dick, a bootblack and Bridget the Irish cook.

This is an offering pure in theme and elevating in character for the children especially, and we predict that it will become very popular.

The picture was made by the Kineto, Limited, of London, and is being offered by the James McEnnery syndicate.

"Giants-White Sox World Tour"

Baseball Players Representing American Cities Filmed on their Travels in Foreign Lands.

Reviewed by Hugh Hoffman.

BASEBALL FANS are such a rabid set that almost anything bearing upon their pet weakness is devoured with the avidity of a long starved beast. In the light of this fact, it might be stated off hand, that the motion pictures of the trip around the world by the New York National League, and the Chicago American League baseball teams would be a success without regard to any technical nicety or the lack of it.

With a real dyed-in-the-wool baseball fan these pictures will no doubt pass muster. The writer confesses to being in that class and therefore enjoyed the crumbs of baseball fodder that are to be found in these films. The real baseball interest in them cannot be said to be any more than crumbs.

A wonderful opportunity to make a world scenic picture, with a powerful baseball interest as an attraction, was not altogether taken advantage of in this set of views. Whether it is because ball players are notoriously bad actors or whether the pictures were made without any definite aim, or both, it is certain that the subject is not all that it should have been. The last thing a reviewer likes to do is to lay the fault at the door of the camera man, but there are camera faults here. In this case, I should say that the camera man's share of the blame should be less than fifty-fifty.

The chances are that he did not find it easy to handle the ball players and many times was obliged to take pot luck and get what he could rather than get nothing at all. This is a lamentable fact in most all pictures wherein some popular idol is featured. They want a big cut in the profits but are very stubborn and unobliging when it comes to taking the pictures. No doubt certain members of the Giants and White-Sox are getting a very decent profit out of these films but from the general result it would seem that they would not go a step out of their way to help things along.

John McGraw and Comiskey appear a few times and were evidently caught on the fly. The question then arises why do film producers make contracts for pictures of this kind without some assurance that the principals will stand without hitching for a minute? The public is easily satisfied, especially the baseball public, but they are entitled to a little run for their money. To put the case briefly, the baseball men did not give the camera man an even break. This applies more to the management than it does to the players, some of whom showed a willingness to pose, but not many.

Most of the time was spent on shipboard. The stops were brief and Victor Miller, the camera man, no doubt, was obliged to get what he could in his short time on land, regardless of light conditions or anything else. Consequently, as a scenic picture, it is not a wonder, but the scenic part of the picture is better than the baseball part. For these reasons also the photography is not what it would be in a studio.

There are snatches of ball games in various parts of the world, all too short for those who like to observe the impression that baseball makes upon the people in other lands. These alternate with glimpses of scenery along the route. There is also a "comedy plot" woven in but this is so poorly thought out and executed, and so unnecessary that the less said about it the better. It is something about a baseball bug who stowed away on the boat and made the trip. It is obvious in the comedy scenes that the comedian and camera man received little help from the ball playing fraternity who apparently consulted their own convenience on all occasions. There are some good close-up pictures of Sir Thomas Lipton and King George meeting John McGraw and others, only the trouble was that John McGraw and others comported themselves as though they hated the sight, taste and smell of a moving picture camera; wherein they differed from Sir Thomas and King George.

"St. Elmo"

The Romantic Atmosphere of the Old Melodrama will be Found in this Six-Reel Balboa Offering.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

THIS OLD MELODRAMA on the screen is more than likely to attract attention on account of the remarkable success that it had years ago and more because it has only recently had a popular revival. The clearness and beauty of this picturization of the story will also please the many who have not had the pleasure of seeing it on the stage. It is a success, for it carries through all its six reels the spirit of the original story and the quality that has pleased in the past numbers of people. Audiences seem to have grown tired of the morbid, realistic pictures of the seamy side of life and they seem to be wanting things that amuse; comedies, and things that vividly and dramatically present the conflict between right and wrong so important a part of all our lives.

Scene from "St. Elmo" (Balboa).

St. Elmo, the melodrama for the stage, in one or two of the picture's scenes intrudes itself on the St. Elmo that is written for the screen. This is not a very frequent defect in the picture; but it is especially noticeable in the ball-room scene in which the hero, St. Elmo, to whom Agnes has engaged herself, because she wants his money, entrusts her, while like some Hamlet he goes abroad to complete his studies, to the keeping of Murray whom she really loves. It, in truth, in both play and picture, is a bit of Shakespearian stagecraft quite out of place in any production. In a picture, its artificiality is too apparent, and the more because it is done with the full company of guests around and made a matter of state. Yet the picture quickly passes on from its few defects to beauties and the average spectator will condone them for the good things with which it is full and take up again the thread of the story with very little break in the interest.

The story is well known and, having commented on the quality of its presentation, we need only add that even in its minor rôles the acting is pleasing and that both its heroines (there are two) are played by very charming young women who are contrasts in many things, but alike in being skilful actresses. The rôle of St. Elmo is also praiseworthily portrayed especially in the latter part of the picture in which the visioned Savior and the visioned devil keep striving for his soul, after he has found that Murray and Agnes are untrue and has forced a duel and killed his one-time best friend.

Of the picture's scenes, perhaps that in the garden at St. Elmo's home will excite most enthusiasm. Its walks through which Murray and Agnes pass to the bench where St. Elmo is to find them in each others arms, are full of beautifully photographed flowers. There are walks and shrubs and labyrinthian vistas. Some may like even better the wreck of the railroad train in which the second heroine, Edna, is hurt. It is most realistic. We do not see the accident, but see the train going at full speed and then the burning wreck. This is the point, it will be remembered at which the forces that are working for the hard-hearted St. Elmo's salvation begin to get the advantage over the suggestions, symbolized by the devil, that are working to keep him the bitter souless thing around whom, wherever he goes, misfortunes are thick.

There is one point in which this production is preeminent; its photography. The nature of the story give a big chance for double exposures and for the fading out and in of visions, and in accomplishing these effects the camera work has been perfectly accurate. There is often great picturesqueness in the scene-making, and these are set forth before us in clearly drawn, life-like pictures. On account of the popular appeal of its story and of its many excellent qualities, we commend this picture to exhibitors as a safe and pleasing feature.

LOOKING FOR J. HOWARD-LEE.

Motion Picture Supply Men in Edmonton, Alberta, Can., Want Him to Pay for Camera and Some Other Things.

On complaint of the North-West Theaters Co., Ltd., and others of Edmonton, Alberta, Can., the police throughout the United States and Canada are being asked to apprehend a man who used the names of J. Howard-Lee and J. Howard while in Edmonton and obtained motion picture merchandise valued at more than $400, under false representations and pretense.

J. Howard-Lee, alias J. Howard.

John Hazza, general manager of the North-West company, says that the stranger made his appearance in Edmonton the latter part of last March and, representing himself as a colonization agent for the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, received from the North-West company for purchase by his purported principals, one Urban motion picture camera, a leather case, a stand, and developing outfit valued at about $400. It is also claimed that, making the same representations, he secured from an Edmonton photographer a quantity of positive motion picture film. After the man had left town it was discovered that he had positively no connection with the Grand Trunk Pacific people but, according to their claim, had fleeced them out of approximately $700. The North-West company immediately set about to secure the fellow's arrest on the grounds of false pretense and theft.

Mr. Hazza believes that the stranger is a motion picture man for the reason that he seemed particularly conversant with the operating part of the picture business, and is asking motion picture people throughout the country to assist in causing the man's arrest. It is thought that Howard-Lee or Howard is at present doing camera work either in the States or in Europe and it is Mr. Hazza's request that any one who thinks he knows of the present whereabouts of such a man as is pictured in connection with this article, communicate all available information to the North-West Theaters Co., Inc., Edmonton, Alberta, Can.

J. Howard-Lee, alias J. Howard, is about five feet nine inches tall, fair or medium in complexion, clean shaven, stout of build, weighing about one hundred seventy pounds. He professes to be a graduate of an eastern States university and to have been a player on the foot-ball team, and a former coach of a University foot-ball team.

"THE WRATH OF THE GODS" DRAWS CROWDS.

The New York Motion Picture Company's six-part feature production entitled "The Wrath of the Gods" drew tremendous crowds at Ebbet's Field, Bedford avenue and Sullivan street, Brooklyn, N. Y., the field of the National Baseball League, when that place was opened as an airdome on Monday, June 22, by Marcus Loew for the presentation of moving pictures. This feature picture was the initial production shown at the Field. Although the Field has seating accommodation for 20,000 persons, a great many thousands were turned away. So determined were the crowds to gain admission that a part of the fence of the enclosure was torn away, and the reserves from three police precincts had to be called out to restore order. The admission prices are 10, 15 and 25 cents.

"Romany Rye"

Marion Leonard Puts Life and Passion in Her Four-Part Picture of the Gypsy Girl who Falls in Love with the Husband She Marries to Please.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

ONE OF THE BEST of gypsy stories is told by this new Marion Leonard film, and it makes an interesting, clean and wholesome offering. Its central point of interest is the gypsy girl herself, and her heart experience is revealed with depth and sincerity by this talented leading woman who fits the part perfectly. The idea is to show how true love is stirred in the breast of the conscienceless gypsy by the implicit trust that her husband has in her. Her object in marrying him had been to get his money, and the dramatic struggle comes from the contest within her between the new and the old motives. All this is very effectively shown, and the offering holds with ever-increasing interest in spite of the picture's one noticeable drawback, which is the number of often meaningless young women who crowd some of its scenes. They too often act like a chorus and give an intrusive touch of artificiality to parts of it. It carries well in spite of this defect; but the short-coming is noticeable.

Scene from "Romany Rye" (Warner's Features)

The story is set in an ordinary American rural country and many of its scenes are taken out of doors. The photographs are clear and have the tones of life; they help a good deal. Stanner E. V. Taylor, the picture's producer, shows his usual skill in choosing the scenes, and makes, as was necessary in telling this story, the background impress one as a whole. We see but a scrap at a time; but it lies before us in imagination as though it were all in sight and our attention merely picking out the point of greatest interest at any time. We are shown the young man's home, where he lives with his old mother and we get a glimpse of the gypsy camp near by. The man is no great lover of women. The girls of the neighborhood know the trait and tease him a bit. He and his mother with some others visit the camp and we see that one of the gypsy fortune tellers has impressed him not a little. In a few days he visits the camp again and shows that he has quite a deal of money with him. It would be a dull gypsy who wouldn't be impressed by such a thick wallet. The girl tells one of the men of the camp about it and he tries to get the money he has given to her. She refuses and he thereupon begins to beat her. Her cries bring the young man to her assistance and he returns with interest the strokes inflicted upon the girl.

The gypsy man now arms himself to rob the youth on his way home and the girl sees him start out. She thinks out an easier way to get the money and takes a still shorter way to head the youth off. Meeting him, she tells him that the men of the camp are about to rob him and gets him to intrust his roll to her for safe keeping. There is little doubt that she will safe-keep it for him where he will not be able to waste it. He continues and the gypsy man meets him and tries to rob him by force, but after a struggle, is left senseless by the roadside, to be found by the girl who, in a cleverly portrayed scene, makes gypsy scorn of him, he doesn't know quite why.

The dramatic part of the picture begins when he has persuaded her to marry him and she plots to get the rest of his money. The pivotal thing in her character is her simplicity. She is fond of children and the young girls of the village plainly scorn her. The climax approaches when she has plotted with the gypsy man to rob her husband's safe. She has been intrusted with the key to it and after a struggle with her newly awakened conscience tries to deceive the man; but he has peeped through the blind and knows that there is more money and where it is. A few skilfully planned steps lead to a struggle for a pistol which goes off so that the husband hears it and comes to her rescue. There is a reconciliation scene needed for the picture's poetic ending. We have given but the bare outline of the story which is filled with much that bolsters and makes it naturally convincing. This is another successful picture by a markedly talented company.

"The Perils of Pauline"

Eighth Episode, in Two Parts, by Far the Most Interesting of the Series.

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

THERE IS ONE THING which everybody enjoys about these "Perils of Pauline" pictures. They are getting better and more interesting with every episode. It were needless to emphasize the splendid photography.

Hero, heroine and villian, seem to grow fonder of their parts with every new adventure and certainly manage to not only sustain but to stimulate the interest of the spectator. There are fine touches of poetry, romance and adventure in this latest installment. Pauline, a prisoner in her cave, watches a fox come into her prison and decides to follow the animal's trail to liberty. The realism of the movements of the fox, who is being hunted to his lair, would do credit to the best animal picture ever made. Just as Pauline emerges from her cave, the Indian oracle has promised a white queen to the tribe. The Indians are the real thing. They want poor Pauline to race down hill with a heavy stone to prove her immortality and make herself solid with the oracle. This was asking too much of Pauline, who, however, did not shrink a bit and actually races down hill with the "Stone of Death." Of course, our Mr. Crane Wilbur is right there to prevent the worst. Pauline is saved and for once there is a happy ending. I cannot help paying a special compliment to Miss Pearl White, who in this episode surpasses her previous efforts. The part has evidently grown dear to her and she just revels in it. Mention must be made, too, of the nice double exposure work in two of the scenes.

Scene from "The Perils of Pauline" (Eclectic)

E. D. HORKHEIMER SAILS ON IMPERATOR.

E. D. Horkheimer, of Long Beach, California, secretary and treasurer of the Balboa Amusement and Producing Company, a concern which is coming to the front with astonishing rapidity, is in New York and is to sail on Monday, June 29th, to Europe, on the Imperator. Mr. Horkheimer has been in New York for the last fortnight attending the convention and boosting Balboa films. He has, we believe, fifty thousand feet of new film ready. All of this the Box Office Attractions company has taken and will put out during the summer and fall. His object in going abroad is to keep in touch with the foreign market and he expects to be gone a month. These Balboa films are deservingly attracting a great deal of attention. The stories are clear, effective and full of popular appeal. But perhaps the most noteworthy thing about them is their photography which is well nigh perfect and often daringly progressive. We have never as yet seen a double exposure scene in any Balboa picture that was not absolutely perfect and the blocking out work is invariably handled to give lively suggestions to the imagination. We wish Mr. Horkheimer bon voyage and a safe return.

"The Chimney Sweeps."

Pasquali American Feature Is Given Unusual Interest by Clever Work of Child Actor.

Reviewed by Randall M. White.

EXHIBITORS and their patrons will find much to interest them in "The Chimney Sweeps," a new feature in a prologue and four parts which is being released by the Pasquali American Company. The subtitle, "How True Love Overcomes Class Prejudice," is apt in suggesting the story, which has to do with a mesalliance between a young man of high family and a peasant girl on his father's estate.

The principal character in the action is a youngster who seems to be no more than five years old but handles his role in a manner which would do credit to an actor of fifty. Another youngster of nine or ten does well in an important part.

Scene from "The Chimney Sweeps" (Pasquali)

Most of us have read a lot about chimney sweeps but few of us have seen these little workers who belong to an epoch which has passed in this country, but is still at hand in a few foreign countries where such modern conveniences as steam heat and gas ranges are not generally known. For its mere fairy tale and educational value, therefore, the introduction of a chimney sweep in a story will generally be found pleasing.

Scene from "The Chimney Sweeps" (Pasquali)

The story runs this way: A baby is born to a young gentleman and a peasant girl, but opposition on the part of the young man's father results in the mother's being cast adrift with her infant son. At the age of about five, the baby boy is apprenticed to a master chimney sweep and enters upon his picturesque but dangerous duties in a large city to which the mother and her father come some time later. Tony (the little hero of the story) has just been discovered by his mother when his abusive master orders him to sweep a chimney at a certain given address. The youngster's pal, who knows that Tony has been ill, volunteers to do the job for him and is suffocated while at work. The master chimney sweep, who did not know that Tony had been fortunate enough to secure a substitute, tells Tony's mother that her little boy has been killed. The mother is driven insane with grief. Later Tony is found by his father who takes a firm stand against his parent's wishes and determines to marry the mother of his child, peasant though she be. The mother's reason is restored by the sight of her little boy in his garb of chimney sweep and the little family is united.

Besides having an interesting story, the picture is of value because of a number of instances of perfect photography. A few of the distressing scenes necessary to the representation of the mother's mental collapse were toned down soon after the feature's trial projections at the Pasquali American offices in the World Tower Building.

PASQUALI AMERICAN REORGANIZED.

Group of New York Financiers Put New Blood into Enterprise to Push Well Known Turin Features.

THE announcement of the reorganization of the Pasquali American Company, after a most successful year, by a group of prominent New York financiers, has just been made.

This company, which came into prominence last September, through its elaborate production of "The Last Days of Pompeii," attracted the attention of a group of New York capitalists, with the result that the entire company has been reorganized and its policies of operation completely changed to meet the demand which has arisen for the production of the new company.

The interests that are now back of the Pasquili American Company and in control are one of the most powerful groups in the country and, it is said, unlimited capital stands ready to push the company's features.

The reorganization has been effected by Alberto Amato, the former president of the Pasquali American Company, who has been in Europe for the last four months on behalf of the syndicate, and is to be the vice-president and general manager of the new concern; he has closed contracts with several of the largest foreign producers whose productions the syndicate believes adaptable to the American market.

It will not be the policy of the company to restrict its productions to the leading foreign producers, and arrangements have already been completed for the organization of a large subsidiary producing company to make feature pictures of a carefully selected number of popular American novels and plays, the rights to which have been quietly acquired. Besides these pictures the American producing company is also at work upon several original and startling dramas by well-known authors, and is also opening exchanges throughout the country from which all of its productions are to be marketed.

One of the most important features of the company to moving picture buyers is a long term exclusive contract which the company holds with Pasquali & Company, of Turin, whereby the new company and this company will show these wonderful spectacular plays simultaneously in Europe and America.

REGULAR ECLAIR EDUCATIONALS AT STRAND.

Through special and exclusive arrangement with the Strand Theater, of New York, six hundred "Scientia" films have already been made by the Eclair Film Co. and four educational subjects are now being turned out regularly each week. The Eclair films embrace a wide variety of educational subjects including scenics, scientific demonstrations, travel-films in various countries, geographical instruction, and wonderful natural history lessons fascinatingly told.

"Scientia" films will be leased or sold to educational societies, universities or reputable theaters.

A considerable amount of money and a great deal of time and energy have been consumed by the Eclair Company in producing and cataloging their library of scientific and instructive films and in order to show them in a manner and place befitting their value and influence, it was decided to present them at the Strand Theater, the de Luxe motion picture house of the world.

The first releases of Eclair "Scientia" films shown at the Strand commencing Monday, June 1st, and the two films "Niagara Falls" and "Butterflies" were received by the patrons in a most appreciative manner. Regularly each week from now in Eclair "Scientia" films will be offered Broadway patrons and it is fair to assume that these films will prove one of the Strand's big drawing cards.

Gene Gauntier and Players in New Studio

Remodeled Church Makes Ideal Studio and Is Full of Life and Atmosphere When the Talented Player and Her Company Are at Work.

By Hanford C. Judson.

THERE IS a distinct atmosphere of individuality in the Gene Gauntier studio, at 515 West 54th street. Perhaps it is more marked than in most studios; for here but one company is at work and but one picture is "on" at any time. Every studio to an untrained eye is a place full of litter and often of seemingly inextricable disorder. One sees the unpainted outsides of stage sets, with above and around them banks of Cooper Hewitt lamps set in corrugated reflectors. They are blinking on and off at the will of the man at the switchboard and fill the whole place with their peculiar purple ink color which, if we may use the expression, the camera's sensitive film "likes" better than does the human eye. The Gauntier studio is a remodeled church and gives possibilities of glorious depth to any big scene that is wanted, especially a church scene.

Scene from "The Maid of '76" (Gauntier Players)

We found Miss Gauntier hard at work taking a scene for a new picture, named temporarily "Glory" which it seems is its heroine's nickname. And certainly it was interesting to watch these clever picture makers rehearse it again and again. Courteously discussing the scene among themselves, the players showed that one and all were deeply interested in the motives behind what the script required them to do. Suggestions were offered and listened to respectfully and the action explained anew in a different light so that full sincerity might give truth to the actor's interpretation of his role. It is seldom that any scenes are taken in the order of their appearance in the story. So, to make the story coherent, it is absolutely imperative that there be one single authority to keep it true to its object. Perhaps in any case of difference of opinion the final authority rests with Miss Gene Gauntier; for she is responsible for the story, even though she may have bought the rough plot and idea from some outside photoplaywright. Most of the plays in which she has appeared, as is well known by this time, have come wholly from her imagination which seems to be tireless in its weaving of new plot and incident. It is not very much to have written four hundred photoplays; but in the stories that are told in those fine old Kalem pictures of the South in war times, and also in the feature offerings and in the more recent multiple-reel pictures that Miss Gauntier has written and played in, there is a fresh ingeniousness and a lively play of fancy and a sincerity in more imaginative emotional moments that makes this feat of hers wonderful. There is no truer sign of genuine genius than this tireless flow of output and all of it new, fresh and lively. Her work shows that her sympathies are very broad.

One feels this breadth of interest when talking with her. It is hard to keep her talking about her own work. We were talking of pictures long ago that she had made and of the players whom she was associated with—she seems to think with invariable kindliness and pleasure of these old friends. Only a few were mentioned but with what delightfulness her words called them up! One almost sees the people or things that she talks of; for there is a vividness in her word pictures that is another trait of the true picture-making mind. Yet while we were discussing these former things some association in them would hook on to something in the present and she would break in with enthusiastic praise of "The Escape" and of the wonderful work that Griffith is doing or perhaps how well some other of her associates were doing, making pictures for themselves. And one can surmise that now, when she herself has risen so far above the struggle, her advice and recommendation has been of great help to many of them.

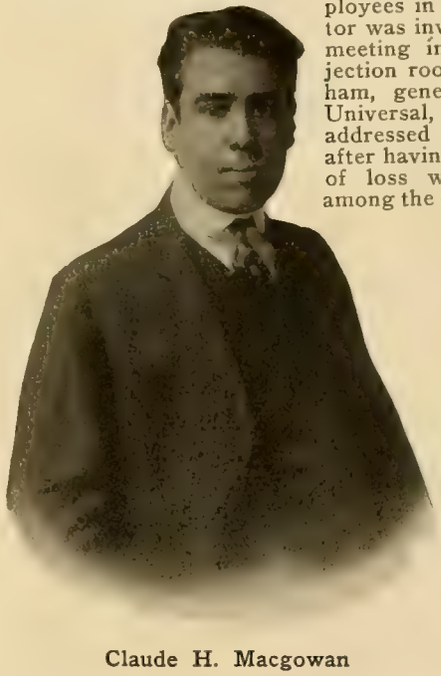
Caulfield to Coast for Universal

Auditor in the New York Offices Since 1912 Given Nice Send-Off by his Associates Upon the Occasion of His Transfer.

HARRY P. CAULFIELD, general auditor of the Universal Film Corporation since its inception, has been transferred from the New York offices of the company to the Universal offices on the Pacific Coast, where he will assume active charge of the auditing department. Accompanied by his wife, Mr. Caulfield left New York some days ago. Claude H. Macgowan, who had served the Universal as cashier for some time, has been promoted to the position made vacant by the transfer.

Harry P. Caulfield

Mr. Caulfield is among the most popular men in the employ of the Universal and the day before he set out for the West the esteem in which he was held by his associates in the New York offices was shown in a touching and thoughtful way. In company with other Universal office employees in New York, the auditor was invited to attend a little meeting in the Universal projection room. There J. C. Graham, general manager of the Universal, acting as spokesman, addressed Mr. Caulfield and after having expressed the sense of loss which would be felt among the employees of the New York Universal offices at his departure, presented him with a handsome gold watch.



Claude H. Macgowan

"With the watch," Mr. Graham said, "go the sincere wishes of all of us that you will be as successful in your undertakings on the Coast as you have been here."

The watch presented to Mr. Caulfield was a Howard, selected by a committee made up of Joe Brandt, John W. Grey, Claude H. Macgowan, and George U. Stevenson.

Mr. Caulfield left the employ of the International Correspondence Schools to join the Universal, in 1912. Early in his business career he had worked in Wall street.

Mr. Macgowan, or "Mac," as he is familiarly called, is a New York boy who had served the Unitype Company as general bookkeeper and cashier for a long time before going with the Universal. He is regarded as a worthy successor to Mr. Caulfield in the New York office and since his promotion has been kept busy receiving the congratulations of his many friends in the motion picture industry.

The Motion Picture Exhibitor

DAYTON CONVENTION LOOMS BIG.

All Signs Point to a Record-Breaking Assemblage of Exhibitors—Exposition Will be of Rare Interest.

NOTHING short of a calamity will prevent the Fourth Annual Convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, to be held at Dayton, Ohio, from being a record breaker in point of attendance of exhibitors. Many things have happened during the past month to put the members of the League on their mettle, and they propose to prove that their organization is very much alive and able to take care of itself and its policies without outside interference.

A recent visit to New York, of National President Neff, brought the information that wherever he went in attending conventions of State organizations, he found great enthusiasm and the further fact that a better class of exhibitors were taking an interest in the League. He also reported that the necessity for organization was being felt and that the League was benefitting through that necessity.

As an example, he cited an instance in Virginia, where the National Vice-President, D. P. Wine, had been instrumental in securing a material reduction of a proposed State tax which would have hit the picture theaters hard.

Delegates have been elected to attend the Dayton Convention by very State branch of the League that has held its convention up to this writing. There are a few more meetings to be held in the States to make the roster complete.

Aside from the delegates and alternates, there will be a large attendance of exhibitors from all over the United States and Canada. A big delegation are coming from San Francisco and the Northwest. Texas and the Southwest will be well represented. The Southeastern States will send delegates to a National Convention for the first time. The great Middle West will turn out en masse, and the East will be fully represented by exhibitors of the highest class.

Hotel accommodations at Dayton are reported as already taxed to the limit, but provisions have been made to find lodgings in private homes when the hotels have been filled.

A special effort is being made by the business men and citizens of Dayton, to turn the Exhibitors' Convention into a gala day. The city will be decorated and the citizens will put on their best bib and tucker.

A long and interesting program of entertainment has been framed for the visitors. The schedule for the Convention is as follows:

MONDAY, July 6.—Exposition opens at 10 o'clock by address of Mayor Shroyer, of Dayton. Review of leading feature pictures in Memorial Hall, at 7:30 o'clock. Entertainment and cabaret at Algonquin Roof Garden, at 10 o'clock, P. M.

TUESDAY, July 7.—Opening of Fourth Annual Convention. Address by the Mayor of Dayton, at 10 o'clock. Entertainment by National Cash Register Co.; pictures, luncheon and trip to Country Club, at 1:30 o'clock P. M. Convention in executive session, 1:30 o'clock. Exhibitions and demonstration in Hall, 7:30 P. M.

WEDNESDAY, July 8.—Election of officers, 10 o'clock. Aeroplane flights at Wright's Field, 2 o'clock P. M. Opening meeting of Convention, 2 o'clock P. M. Reception of players at 7:30 o'clock P. M.

THURSDAY, July 9.—Grand Parade and prize distribution, 9:30 o'clock. Convention at 10:30 o'clock. Visit to National Soldiers' Home, 1:30 o'clock P. M. Exhibitions and receptions at Memorial Hall, 7:30 o'clock P. M.

FRIDAY, July 10.—Open meeting of Convention at 10 o'clock. Afternoon session at 2 o'clock. White City Park at 2:30 o'clock. Annual banquet at 7:30 o'clock.

SATURDAY, July 11.—Convention at 10 o'clock; afternoon session at 2 o'clock, and awarding of prizes at Memorial Hall at 3 o'clock.

According to the plans of the committee in charge of the exposition, the general public will be excluded from the exposition hall during the mornings to give the exhibitors a chance to inspect the various exhibits. Every effort will be put forth to make the exposition profitable to the manufacturers represented.

The list of exhibitors is large and the exhibits varied. Up to the latest information received, these firms will be represented: General Film Co., Inc., Famous Players Film Co., Eclair Film Co., Inc., All Star Feature Corp., Burns International Films, Inc., Atsco, Inc., Warner's Features, Inc., Colonial Motion Picture Corp., Sawyer, Inc., Great Northern Film Co., L. E. Forup & Co., Bausch & Lomb Optical Co., Mirror Screen Co., Reisinger, Hugo, Great Northern Spec. Fea. Film Co., Jesse Lasky Feature Play Co., Nicholas Power Co., Bell & Howell Co., A. Blinkhorn, G. Melies, Picture Theatre Equipment Co., Elberhard Schneider, Clarence E. Sinn, Pathe Freres, Novelty Slide Co., Manhattan Slide & Film Co., Balboa Amusement Producing Co., Erneman-Cloud Publishing Co., Eastman Kodak Co., Erneman-Photo-Kino-Works, Recording & Computing Machine Company, Selig Polyscope Film Co., Egry Register Co., Automatic Ticket Selling and Cash Register Co., Theater Specialty Co., Columbus Theater & Equipment Co., A. J. Miller & Co., General Electric Co., Cosmograph Projector, National Cash Register Co., Rex Film Renovator Co., Kraus Mfg. Co., Essanay Film Co., World's Film Corporation, Schroder, Art Floral Co., Golden Radium Condenser Co., Gentry C. Walburn, Electric Specialties, Motion Picture Apparatus Co., Mutual Film Corp., Rudolph Wurlitzer Co., American Slide Co., Animated Advertising Co., Universal Film Co.

WASHINGTON SCREEN CLUB BANQUET.

Washington Exhibitors Make Merry at Festive Board at Second Short Circuit of the Club—A Pronounced Success

THERE WAS ANOTHER short circuit in Washington, D. C., when the exhibitors of the National Capital gathered together, nearly one hundred in number, in Castelli's private dining rooms and started the ball rolling for the formation of a permanent organization and clubrooms to house the membership. The club is just about two months old.

But that's getting away from the subject a bit, although this project was greatly enlarged upon by Alan Bachrach, a hustling member of the Brylawski contingent, who has been working hard to bring into being a constitution and by-laws for the club. He told what could be accomplished by this little band of pilgrims if they would only get together and stick.

Fulton Brylawski was introduced by President Dresner as the toastmaster of the evening and immediately got himself into trouble for he was called upon to make the opening remarks. Mr. Dresner expressed his appreciation at the large number of representatives of the moving picture business present and stated that the club was moving along Success Road and that the next short circuit would probably be a greater affair than its predecessors, so great is the interest being taken in the new club.

A surprise of the event came when Fulton Brylawski turned over the position of toastmaster to the club as a whole and announced that the Washington men were going to have a reel ball in the fall, at which a number of prominent picture actors and actresses would be present. He said he had attended a ball in Baltimore given by the Exhibitors' League of that city which was a great success.

"This affair did more to boost the business in that city," said Mr. Brylawski, "than anything the exhibitors could have done. Those who attended it were so enthusiastic that at a recent meeting of our league here, Dr. Herbst appointed a committee of seven members, an executive committee, for it will appoint other committees, to complete the necessary arrangements for our ball. The people are very anxious to meet the screen favorites. I attended the recent convention in New York, and while there received the assurance of co-operation of many of the producers, and their actors and actresses are willing to come to Washington for the occasion. We are going ahead with the arrangements and when the time is ripe, we will ask your co-operation as well. This ball will be the biggest thing that ever happened here and will be the best thing in the world for pictures."

Mr. Campbell, of the Olympic theater, supplemented Mr. Brylawski's remarks and told what further was to be expected in the fall.

The managers of the various exchanges all told how glad they were to be present, the chorus being composed of Mr. O'Brien of the Eclectic, Mr. Worthington of the Eclectic, Mr. Irvine of the World Film Corp., and Mr. Lust of Warner's.

Tom Moore gave an interesting account of how he entered the moving picture field, what has been done and the outlook for the future. The representatives of the press all had their say and Louis Glaser, of the Washington Herald, told of the manner in which his newspaper is endeavoring to arrive at just what the Washington public wants in the way of films. He stated that coupons are being printed in each issue and when 20,000 are received the replies to the questions contained therein will be tabulated and copies furnished the manufacturers. Four hundred coupons have already been returned and these show that comedies are preferred, with dramas running second. If these can be taken as being authentic of the desires of the people, serial pictures are undesirable for of these four hundred replies, only two are in their favor.

A. W. Dresner, President, Preparing Plans for Second "Short Circuit" of the Washington Screen Club

Humorous Speech by Dr. Herbst.

The scream of the evening was the lecture delivered by Dr. William P. Herbst on "How to Become a Successful Exhibitor." "First pick out a location where there are two or three established places, ever bearing in mind that competition is the life of trade (for confirmation of this ask Joe Morgan)," he said. "Then put up a house seating under three hundred, and do as litle as you can or need to do to get by the inspectors. Next go to a junk shop and secure a Lubin head of the vintage of 1900, the magazines of a Power's 5, a lamp house of an Edison of 1902, a couple of music stands and you will have a machine par excellence, guaranteed not to show any swaying motion on the screen.

"The next step is to secure a boy operator, one who will get a list of questions and memorize them and then go before the board and obtain a license. Do not forget to secure a tinpanny square piano and a rag-time player.

"When you have progressed thus far it will be time to see about getting films and if you cannot get first runs at twenty-five dollars a week from one exchange, try another, and if you are there told that service is sold to so-and-so, try the other exchange and if they tell you the same thing, send out of town and get service de luxe without titles or leaders—your patrons will never know the difference and will think they are great.

"Now, in order to keep on good terms with the exchange, do not pay for the service until you are urged to do so with the threat of having your service sold to someone else.

"You must be sure that your machine is in such a condition that it will tear out sprocket holes and scratch the films every six inches and also apply plenty of oil that the dust in the booth may become attached to the films. This will save your boy the trouble of sweeping up. Never be so foolish as to pay attention to communications received from your exchange in regard to the condition of the films returned from your house because your fellow-exhibitor, who shows after you do, might drop dead from surprise upon getting a film in a 'showing' condition. Remember, you are the only one who pays for the use of the films, and forget that stale moral 'Do unto others as you would be done by.'

"As to the posters, when you get a nice new one, be sure that before returning it to the exchange you have stepped all over it a number of times and smear in oil and dust—it will then be in the best of condition for the next fellow (we should worry). If after such consideration on your part towards the exchange and your fellow exhibitors, you should be dissatisfied with the exchange, do not think of giving notice of your intention to switch the service but do so immediately for the exchanges prefer this method of doing business.

"Oh! By the way, in advertising your show be sure and get the largest poster that you can; those that give the least idea of what you are exhibiting are the best, and have enough posters to cover the whole front of your house—the people do not care if they are seen entering a place that looks like a country fence in circus season for no respectable person would think of going anywhere else but to your house.

"Don't pay any attention to the sanitation of your house; it takes time and it is troublesome to wash it out daily. Ventilation is unnecessary, the closer the house is in winter the less coal you will have to burn and in the summer the people are generally too warm to worry much about such a slight thing as an unpleasant odor.

"In order to show your superiority as an exhibitor; that you never require any assistance; that you are positive that Congress would never think of closing the moving picture houses on Sundays, or enact any law that would be detrimental to your business, do not become a member of the Exhibitors' League as they are only banded together to shoot off a lot of hot air and the assistance they might get through the National League would not be of vital importance to you. I am president of the local league and I know what I am talking about. And last, but not least, do not on your life join the Washington Screen Club for there you might meet a bunch of jolly good fellows and you might be so contaminated with good-fellowship as to overcome the chronic grouch with which you are blessed."

Among those present were A. Dresner, president; Morris Davis, vice-president; Harry Crandall, secretary; Joseph Morgan, treasurer; Fulton Brylawski, Thomas Moore, William Moore, M. Moore, Mr. Plunkett, S. Flax, Mr. Osborn, Mr. Whitaker, Mr. Worthington, Guy Barrett, George Campbell, Louis Glaser, William Notes, M. Coleman, Mr. Frazier, Mr. Harris, R. H. Wood, A. C. Joy, Sidney Lust, Mr. Ashby, Mr. Payne, A. N. Waters, Mr. Watson, Mr. Sloat, Mr. Yates, G. Brandt, Fred G. Stein, Earl Taylor, Mr. Murray, Mr. Beddell, Mr. Boone, Mr. Powers, Mr. Herman, Julian Brylawski, Dr. William Herbst, Mr. Shipam, A. Brylawski, Alan Bachrach, Ira J. LaMotte, D. M. O'Brien, J. Payette, Victor Stonesifer, N. Stein, N. Weiser, J. Anderson, Mr. Maceron, Francis Painter, Mr. Simonds, William Alvine, William Airy, William Gain, Mr. Irvine, William J. Quinn, Mr. Tracey, Mr. Abby, Mr. Atkinson, Mr. Cunningham, Mr. Evans, Samuel Greenberg, Mr. Minnis, Mr. McConnell, Mr. Duff, George E. Weigle of the Washington Star, W. Ben Weissblatt of the Washington Times, Clarence L. Lintz representing the Moving Picture World, and others.

AN ECHO FROM IOWA.

Editor Moving Picture World, New York.
Dear Sir:

The writer has delayed a report of the Convention in full because I have had innumerable letters of inquiry regarding the legislative program that has been mentioned before in your columns. We took this matter up at the Convention, and it was by far the most important thing that has been done in Iowa for moving pictures for a long while, for the reason that something in a definite line has been established.

Mr. Getchell, of Elbert & Getchell, of Des Moines, Mr. A. J. Diebold, President of the League, of Cedar Rapids, and the writer will constitute the new legislative committee. We expect to secure the co-operation of the most influential members of the League in the different principal towns in Iowa. And we expect to publish articles from time to time to show that there is an over-production of moving picture houses in Iowa, also that the price of admission is too low to be consistent, figuring twelve months in the year. Also, we are now securing the names of each legislator selected by the June primaries in each party, and we will address him from the position that the League takes in Iowa, favoring no censorship of any kind, and we will endeavor to secure the co-operation of each local exhibitor.

It depends upon the business acumen of the exhibitor as to how much support we will obtain. Politicians in Iowa are easily influenced—when it is a fact in Iowa that eighty-five per cent of the people, if not ninety-five per cent, are satisfied and more than pleased with the programs that are shown throughout the state of present.

Now, as to the legislative program in other states: There seems to be a wide difference of opinion between the exchange men and some of the national officers and exhibitors throughout the United States as to the position the moving picture interests should occupy as to censorship. Every partisan of censorship, whether in the state or nation, or whatever plan he is in favor of, will tell you upon the main question, that he is in favor of censorship because he is afraid of the ultimate ruin of the business. This is the rock upon which we split. He does not realize that the business is institutional, in other words, a recognized institution in this United States, and as such is entitled to freedom of movement as much as any great religious body. The moving picture business is too well established at present in the minds of the people in the United States to be displaced from its position of confidence. The profession or the business is here to stay. It is out of its swaddling clothes and experiments. The people are critical. For example, the bogus features have come and almost gone, and the way to handle the salacious or indecent picture is to turn it loose and let it reap its own reward. The business itself will not receive a scratch, because it is established in the affections of the people.

Should some clothing manufacturer turn out a spurious piece of goods, the clothing industry would not suffer to-day; should some irresponsible jewelry manufacturers foist upon the people illegitimate work, the business would not suffer. The bicycle industry went through this metamorphosis, from crookedness to the legitimate; the piano business also. Illegitimate newspapers have come and gone, likewise magazines, and the only sure method of establishing any industry is to allow the wolves which prey upon it to come out of the woods.

Censorship is not a remedy but a disease. In the first place, state censorship is legal. Any lawyer can tell you this. The United States government has never been able to do much with states who wish to pass their own laws of this character. Many times the United States Supreme Court has upheld the constitutionality of a law operating within a state, as, for instance, the molasses cases in Wisconsin, the paint manufacturers' cases in South Dakota, the railroad two cent fare case in Minnesota. The Supreme Court of the United States has upheld the legality of the state to jurisdiction, and also has passed upon the constitutionality of the law. Any state censorship law is legal and all the lawyer can do is to delay its operation by means of injunction and numerous "days in court." There is only one way to whip a state, and that is with a legislative program. Reach the legislator in the lower house and secure his co-operation before next November, as it applies in Iowa, and eighty-five per cent of them will stand with the ninety per cent of the people of the state as against censorship. Then next May, in 1915, when this proposed law, or any proposed law aiming to maltreat or manhandle any department of the motion picture industry, comes up for legislation, you already have his confidence and support, and it is an easy matter to secure results. The only chance one of these censorship laws has to get by in the legislature is because the man who fathers the law can show to the appropriation committee an income exceeding the expense of its operation, which can be used as "sinews of war" in some other direction, and of course naturally the officers themselves are appointive in character.

This program seems to be a slow one to impatient people. However, destiny can never be hastened. We can only progress in morality as regards the motion picture business as the morality of the nation progresses. This is our hope. And the recent instance of commercial morality in other directions, which means that honesty is not a policy in business any more but a necessity, is the attitude of the large newspapers throughout the United States. They have cleaned house in their advertising columns, without help. Quack medicines, bogus mining ventures, get-rich-quick schemes of all description, are taboo, and one large western newspaper even refused to publish liquor advertisements. Are we not progressing? Is there an exhibitor, after thinking it over, who is afraid to trust public opinion with his business? The newspapers have the confidence of the people and so have the exhibitors, which is always necessary. And the legislative program is merely a method to reach the legislator with the views of his constituents, whether they have ever been expressed to his knowledge before or not. And any legislator who attempts to fly in the face of such a legitimate propaganda will get rapped hard on the knuckles shortly after, for what a wonderful force will he awaken to encompass his downfall!

Yours very truly,

W. C. EDDY,

Secretary Iowa Motion Picture Exhibitors' League.

VIRGINIA LEAGUE CONVENTION.

THE Virginia Exhibitors' Convention was held at Staunton, June 18, at the Virginia Hotel. About thirty-five members were present. More would have been in attendance, but the notification was very short.

The chief business was the election of state officers and delegates and alternates to the Dayton Convention. The following is the result of the election:

D. P. Wine, of Harrisonburg, president and national vice-president; J. W. Myrtle, Staunton, first vice-president; Albert Schultz, Staunton, second vice-president; W. W. Preston, Lexington, secretary and M. M. Collins, Covington, treasurer.

Delegates: J. W. Myrtle, E. A. Jones, O. E. Fisher, M. M. Collins and W. W. Preston. Alternates: J. F. Pryor, G. L. Myers, J. H. Trout, Geo. Karamicholus and M. L. Hoffheimer.

Legislative Committee: D. P. Wine, J. W. Mrytle, M. M. Collins, L. M. Hoffheimer, Geo. Karamicholus and J. H. Trout.

The list of delegates chosen were such as could attend the Dayton convention.

WEST VIRGINIA CONVENTION.

The West Virginia Convention was held in Wheeling at the New Windsor Hotel, June 16. The following state officers were elected for the ensuing year:

R. Robinson, of Wheeling, president; O. F. Langworthy, Sisterville, first vice-president; Philip Kochert, Wheeling, second vice-president; M. A. Sybert, Moundsville, secretary; P. W. Barrett, Parkersburg, treasurer, and R. E. McCray, Fairmount, national vice-president.

The following delegates and alternates were elected to attend the Dayton convention: Delegates: A. B. Brinkmeyer, O. F. Langworthy, Frank C. McCray, P. W. Barrett and M. A. Sybert. Alternates: Leopold Miller, L. N. Ashcroft, H. G. Hoffman, T. W. Butcher and R. Robinson.

MULLER GENERAL MANAGER OF GREAT PLAYERS.

H. B. Muller, formerly of Warner's Features and Industries Motion Picture Company, has been appointed General Manager by the Great Players Film Corporation to exploit their productions.

The Great Players are the producers of "Escaped From Siberia," a five-reeler dealing with the atrocities of the land of the Czar, and they have just finished "Uriel Acosta," five reels, an adaptation from the book and play by the eminent author, Karl Kutzkou. Mr. B. Adler plays the title role and is assisted by a notable cast.

EXPOSITION AT TORONTO.

The First Show of the Motion Picture Trade Opens Rather Slowly in Canadian City.

THE first exposition of the Canadian picture industry opened in Toronto, Ont., the city of magnificent churches, on Saturday, June 20. Up to the present writing, June 23, the exhibitors presumably attending their third convention, have held no meeting, although there seem to be numbers of them in evidence. The public so far has shown scant interest in the exposition, although it is probable that events will begin to move faster from now on. The show is being held in the Arena, a great amphitheater seating, when chairs are placed on the main floor, about seven thousand persons.

Among the concessionaires are the following:

Charles Potter, Canadian jobber for Victor goods.

Ontario Safety League, the honorary president of which is, we note, his honor Sir John M. Gibson, K.C.M.G., K.C., LL.D. The motto of the association is "Safety first; safety always."

Pennock Mounting Co., represented by Joseph Pennock.

In adjacent booths are the Toronto World and the Moving Picture World. Across the way is the Motion Picture News.

The Canadian Union Electric Company, Ltd., is in charge of A. B. Wearing, and shows lamps, carbons, motor generators, switchboard apparatus, fans, etc.

The Remington Typewriter Co.

Chapman & Walker, Ltd., in charge of George Burton, R. E. Smythies, and A. G. Milton. The company is showing an extensive line of motor generators, lamps, fans, signs, carbons, etc.

The Pyrene Fire Extinguisher is being shown by the Ontario May-Oatway Fire Alarms, Ltd., under the direction of William Whalen and E. H. Boechk. The display includes fire protective apparatus of several kinds.

The National Cash Register Company has a good display of its vending machines. In charge of the booth is J. C. Laird, Canadian manager.

Warner's Features of Canada is represented by General Manager Feldstein of Montreal. David Warner is also on the job.

The Famous Players Film Service of Canada, handling Famous Players and Lasky films, is represented by General Manager Phil Kaufman and Manager S. C. Kingsbury.

The Canadian Universal Film Exchange is represented by James E. Finch, in charge of a good display. It is announced that George Magie, of New York, will be here tomorrow.

Practically the entire exhibit of the Nicholas Power Company was transferred from the Palace show in New York to the Arena here. It is in charge of Herbert Griffin and Bert Bohannon. In the display is a motor drive never before publicly shown in Canada. The novel dissolving stereopticon for churches, schools, etc., is receiving much attention.

The Wurlitzer instrument is being shown by R. S. Williams & Sons, Ltd., under the demonstration of Malcolm Wood. Fred White is in charge of the exhibit.

The Wyanoak Publishing Company has an elaborate showing of pictures and frame. The former are not limited to screen players, but include theatrical and public interest service. Vice-President A. H. Byrd is in charge.

The World Film Corporation is represented by its Canadian agents and also by men from the New York office.

The Precision Machine Company is showing two machines. The exhibit is in charge of David Cowen. BLAISDELL.

PENNSYLVANIA LEAGUE AGAINST CENSORSHIP.

The third annual convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Pennsylvania was held on Tuesday and Wednesday, June 23 and June 24. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President, Samuel F. Wheeler, Philadelphia; vice-president, Gilbert Miller, of Plymouth; first vice-president, Benjamin F. Zerr, of Reading; second vice-president, Francis E. Devlin, of Wilkes-Barre; secretary, J. G. Hansen, of Philadelphia; treasurer R. F. McAfee, of Reading; publicity agent, Frank A. Gould, of Reading.

The convention went on record as unalterably opposed to state censorship of motion pictures. The league decided to take an active part in the agitation against the censorship now on the statue books and money was appropriated to aid in the fight. City Treasurer Daniel L. Hart made an address in favor of a liberal Sunday and the opening of motion pictures on Sundays.

M. A. Neff made an address telling the delegates that they had it in their power to defeat any man who they thought was an enemy to motion pictures. He also said that he was opposed to censorship.

The delegates elected to the Dayton convention were: Miss Mae Carr, of Hazleton; Ben H. Zerr, of Reading; Samuel F. Wheeler, of Philadelphia; Walter S. Wilson, of Plymouth; Martin P. Meyers, of Hazleton; M. Spiers, of Philadelphia, and F. P. Gilligan, of Wilkes-Barre.

"The Will 'o the Wisp"

Story of a Flooded Country Told by a New Four-Part Balboa Picture that is Sure to be Greatly Liked by Spectators.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

ONE doesn't often see pictures with a flooded country for a background, for waters of devestation carrying away bridges and dwellings are fortunate—for real people—not common. Southern California was visited by rushing floods early this spring and the Balboa producer saw his chance for a sensational and quite extraordinary climax. As a result we have this picture, "The Will o' the Wisp," that shows little or no traces of its hap-hazard origin. Perhaps the bigness and realness of the floods excited the producer's imagination to the benefit of the story, for, while in the best sense it is splendidly commercial, it is not at all so in the bad sense, that of being written under compulsion by a tired brain for the week's salary.

The quality of the offering comes especially from one character, a girl who gives to it its name, "The Will o' the Wisp"—a little ragged girl, daughter of a blind miser. She runs wild in the wooded country along the banks of a small river and has blond, thick hair which makes around its curly edges an aurora when the sunlight strikes it. She is played by Jackie Saunders who mixes an elfin unreality in her realistically human portrayal. This keeps her wholly charming and will add new leaves to the young actress's already considerable fame. In the early scenes of this picture, her work can be compared only with that of "Little Mary" Pickford; at times it delightfully suggests it. There is a something not easy to define in such characters as this that goes right to the heart of the spectator and it can be depended upon that whenever the spectator's heart is warmed toward any character of a story, the story will surely be enviably popular. We take pleasure in commending it to exhibitors as a sure offering. The story is clear and effective. It is full of exciting incident; it has felicitously spontaneous humor, is sincere in its humanity (for the most part), and is logical and convincing enough to please the average spectator who is apt to condone and even like touches of conventional villainy or heroism in a picture that provides, as does this, plenty of substantial and perfectly plausible action.

The opening scenes of the story, a sort of prologue, are, as it were, off the main stage of the picture, and, by contrast, are not pleasing. They explain how the novelist comes to be tramping along a country road in search of local color, and toward the country where the "Wisp" lives. There is a delightful scene where this man, King, changes clothes with a tramp. He meets him by the way and the meeting is as natural as life itself. Every instant we are led to believe that the conversation of the two is done, and again and again it is taken up revealing the fresh inner working of two minds in a way so naturally unexpected to themselves and to the spectator that it is sure to coax a smile and then another and then awaken a hearty laugh. It is indeed a touch of the very surest genius.

We are now introduced to the "Wisp," a ragged little elf with flying hair which she tosses in the air like any wild creature of storm and summer wind. There is a man of the neighborhood who has taken a fancy to her. He comes upon her out in the woods and is about to force a kiss from her, but she flees from him. He follows and she darts out on a bridge over a stream, that we are soon to see swollen with wild floods, and threatens to throw herself over if he dares touch her. There is something in this that catches the spectator's heart and from now on she is real and he watches her progress with the truest sympathy.

Shortly she is pouring a glass of milk for the tramp, King, at the door of her father's shanty. He, too, is taken with her simple prettiness, all ragged as she is, and gives her a half dollar. The coin is the means of introducing to us the old father. He takes it from her and hides it with his treasures in a box concealed under a loose board, but not until she has climbed up to the ragged quilts of her cot in the garret. King, asleep in the open country, finds a snake crawling over him and decides to build a shack up in the trees. Perhaps in the scene in which the rough man comes to buy the girl from her father whom he knows will do anything for money, there is more melodrama than realism, but there surely is competent staging. From the garret she overhears and escapes out of the window. Running away through the woods, she falls into a quick-sand pit and her cries are heard by the novelist who comes to her assistance. He takes her to the home of an estimable woman from whom he had bought some carpenter's tools and while they are in this farm house the rains that are to bring the flood begin.

These flood scenes that follow are not only pictures of real conditions when a country over-flowed, but they are convincing as a part of this story, and we have no doubt at all that the old miserly father is in real danger since he is locked in the cabin at the already overflowed banks of the rising stream. King's rowing to the rescue of the old man seems really dangerous and the reconciliation makes a good climax. The real interest stops at this point, but the picture continues for the happier ending that is generally supposed to be necessary.

The acting is fair all through, but that of the girl, of her blind father, of King, and of the tramp, is noteworthy. The photography is fine. There are some of the most poetical vision double-exposures that we ever saw and they are all perfectly accomplished. The vision scenes are not all even in their effectiveness, but the progressive producer of this offering deserves a reviewer's praise and God-speed for the perfect picture to come. It makes a fine offering.

MISS IVA SHEPARD.

MISS IVA SHEPARD, well-known emotional actress, has been cast for the lead in "Northern Lights," the six-part forthcoming release of the Life Photo Film Corporation. Miss Shepard was a member of Sir Henry Irving's company for three seasons, and played leads opposite Richard Mansfield.

Miss Iva Shepard.

The Life Photo Film Corporation interviewed no less than twenty-eight film stars before casting the part assigned to Miss Shepard in "Northern Lights." Miss Shepard is better known in the western states than in the east, having worked in motion pictures in several of the largest studios on the coast. The part assigned to her in "Northern Lights" calls for the transition in character from a courageous, fearless girl to that of a dope fiend, the subject of her husband's machinations. Those who have been privileged to see Miss Shepard in the making of the picture have pronounced her to be an artist of the superlative degree. It is expected that the picture will be released July 5th.

PATHE STAFF GIVES DINNER.

With Messrs. Bonvillain and Roussel as the Guests of Honor —Rare Spread at Rector's and a Big Time Enjoyed.

The members of the executive staff of Pathe Freres gave a delightful dinner to L. P. Bonvillain, vice president of the company, and Mr. A. Roussel, general manager of the Eclectic Film Company at Rector's on the evening of Friday, June 20. The menu was a delight and the company was in the best of spirits. Besides the guests there were present: Herbert Hoagland, Louis Gasnier, Charles Van Arsdale, C. A. Parsons, Sales Manager Ramerez, John Pelzer, William Hurst, Messrs. Rothsford, Kyle, Martin, Powell, Panzer, Jillson, Davidson, Hodupp, Groves, Williams, Seitz, Wilbur, Elkin, Wright, Arling, Van Buren, Bardet, Franconi, Wagner, Nicolet and Loprieno, of Pathe Freres; Arthur Kane, Jules Bernstein of the Eclectic; E. A. McManus of the New York American, E. H. L. Denig and Fred Beecroft of the Mirror and James L. Hoff of the Moving Picture World.

There were no speeches, but one or two of the guests sang songs, including Franconi. The eatables were excellent and the drinkables refreshing. After leaving the table the party adjoined to the "tango" room and several near prize winners were developed.

EDISON FILMING BUSTER BROWN.

A new series of split-reel comedies from the famous "Buster Brown" cartoons will be launched by the Edison Company. Norris Millington, who has played in juvenile roles with Viola Allen and Robert Bennett, is an ideal type of Buster Brown. Constance Robertson, the Mary Jane in the original production, will appear in that role throughout the series. Charles France will be the director.

Fire Department Evicts.

Ramo, Life Photo Film, and Commercial Motion Picture People were Inconvenienced but Little, However.

AS a direct result of the recent fire which destroyed Universal Film Manufacturing Corporation property in the building at No. 102 West 101st Street on May 13, three well known moving picture manufacturing concerns were evicted from the quarters which they had been occupying in the same building Thursday and Friday, June 18th and 19th. Those affected were the Ramo Films, Inc., the Photo Life Film Corporation, and the Commercial Motion Picture Co., Inc. The evictions were the result of drastic rulings by the New York Fire Department after inspections which had been made.

While the descent of the Fire Department people upon the film men was attended with considerable excitement, it now appears that everything accomplished was for the best—and all those interested seem happy and satisfied.

At the Fire Commissioner's office it was said evictions made had resulted from the fact that the companies had failed to secure the required permits for the conduct of their business in the building uptown and that this fact had been forcibly called to the attention of the department by the recent Universal fire. It was found, the Fire Department officials declare, that the building occupied by the film concerns was not the kind in which it would be safe to manufacture and store films and that the pursuit of the film industry there was endangering the lives of hundreds of people in the building. It was also announced by the Fire Department officials that, while there had been no sweeping movement against similarly operated places in the city at the time the three evictions were ordered, a careful inspection of the film manufacturing plants in Greater New York was to be made and the laws governing the film business in its relation to the Fire Department were to be rigorously enforced, no matter what its effect upon the business might be.

When summary notice to "get out" was served upon the Ramo people, they came back with the statement that before moving into the building at 101st Street they had commissioned an attorney to investigate the requirements of the law in order that they might be complied with and that this attorney had later assured them that everything had been satisfactorily arranged with the city departments. When informed of this Commissioner Adamson very considerately granted an extension of time for the removal of the business, prohibiting, however, the manufacture and storage of films in the building. As a consequence, the Ramo headquarters are still maintained in the building although none of the company's work is being done there. The Ramo people are just now engaged in making a big picture called "The Conquerors" and had been making a lot of exterior scenes at Fort Lee on a piece of property just back of Cella's Hotel which they had engaged for the purpose. With their place in New York closed, the company at once set about rigging up a big outdoor studio on the Fort Lee plot and will soon have it in shape for use throughout the summer for the staging of both interior and exterior scenes. Arrangements had been made with the Eclair Film Company some weeks ago to develop all of the negative on "The Conquerors," and there was no need of the New York factory for this part of the business. Following the Fire Department's action, arrangements were made with the Standard Film Print Company, of Yonkers, for the removal of the Ramo printing and assembling force to a part of that big plant, and this arrangement solved the problem which the eviction had brought up, at least for the present. At the Ramo offices some days ago it was announced that permanent studios would be erected within the next few weeks, probably in Mt. Vernon.

The Life Photo Film Corporation and the Commercial Motion Picture Co., Inc., allied concerns, were in such shape when the evictions came that they have not been inconvenienced to any great extent. A deal had been on for some time whereby the film concerns were to purchase a studio and factory site in Grantwood, N. J., and had progressed to such an extent that it was possible to close it the day following the descent of the Fire Department. The new quarters were ready for occupancy in a few days and the film people are now nicely located in the little Jersey town. The property which they have purchased consists of twelve city lots improved with a fine stone structure formerly the home of Blake Brothers' Animal Training School. The building has been found to be admirably adapted for use as a moving picture factory and but few alterations have been necessary. There was plenty of room on the plot for a glass studio, and construction work on this new building will be compelted within a week or two. The Life Photo Company's players left for Canada the day following the Fire Department's action for the purpose of filming "Northern Lights" and, by the time they return, everything will be in readiness at Grantwood. Such a good bargain did the Life Photo concern make in arranging for their new home, it is said, that the day after the deal had been closed another film manufacturing company offered to take over the property at an advance of $8,000 over the purchase price.

"TOM" MOORE, MOVING PICTURE KING.

By Clarence L. Linz.

FROM the ownership of one reel to that of sixteen moving picture houses is the remarkable record of a remarkable man—"Tom" Moore, moving picture king of Washington, D. C.—and his record is a notable one considering the comparatively few years of the existence of this now great industry.

Thomas Moore.

Tom, as he is more familiarly known, started out as a singer—of a song of his own composition. However, his real start was made in moving pictures when a circus man offered him Edison's "The Great Train Robbery," for $21. Now it happened that this was quite a sum of money to Tom in those days. He raised as much as he could but still found himself some few dollars short which, after some persuasion, he obtained from his father. He carried this reel round with him exhibiting it at nearby places, acting as ticket-taker and operator, while his wife was alternately cashier and pianist.

After his trip came to an end he "swapped" the reel for a horse, buggy and a cow, with a farmer of Anacostia, D. C., and then sold the cow to the farmer's hired man for $25, at a profit alone over the reel's original cost. He bought $25 worth of feed to fatten up the horse and then he sold the animal and the buggy for $85.

This capital was immediately invested in films and he worked up his business until it became a large exchange. This he sold in 1910 to the General Film Company. From time to time he acquired a theatre here and there until in six years he had collected sixteen, of which Moore's Orpheum Theater, with a seating capacity of 2240, is the largest.

Up to the present time he has never built a house, having bought up those the other fellows failed to make a go of. Now, however, he is about to commence the erection of the Red Mill, located in the moving picture block of Ninth Street, and which will contain many innovations including a roof garden

BROADWAY ROSE GARDENS OPEN.

The Broadway Rose Gardens and Danse de Pierrette, Broadway and Fifty-second street, were formally opened Saturday evening, June 27. Moving pictures, dancing and dining are offered in the novel place of amusement. "A Million Dollar Mystery," new Tanhouser serial, is to be the feature of the picture show for months to come. Another feature on the opening photoplay program was "The Terrors of the Deep," also a Thanhouser product.

Charles J. Hite, president of the Thanhouser Film Corporation, is also president of the Delta Theatre Corporation, which has built and will operate the new place. George F. Kerr has been named as general manager and Ben H. Atwell as director of publicity.

A LETTER FROM MARY PICKFORD.

Editor, Moving Picture World,

Dear Sir:—An unauthorized report, detrimental to both myself and the Famous Players Film Co., has been circulated to the effect that I intend to leave that concern and become associated with the Universal Film Co.

This story is entirely without foundation or authority, and you will do me and the Famous Players Film Co. a great favor if you will contradict this report in the strongest language possible.

As is commonly known, the Famous Players Film Co. have supplied me with opportunities and play material unequalled by any other company, and the report is therefore unjust and injurious to everybody concerned.

Very truly yours, MARY PICKFORD.

LETTER FROM A "LEGIT."

Editor, Moving Picture World,

Dear Sir:—I have been an ardent reader of the World for the last few years and consider it to be one of the best trade journals in the field of motion pictures. I believe that it is read by every director in "the game" and, therefore, as a director, I am addressing you that you might place it before them "just as it is." It is to be remembered, however, that this is all said in good will with a view of raising the standard of the photoplays of to-day.

In the first place—and it is the fault of the director for the poor man that wrote the script didn't stop to think—when was it made a national law for people to marry without a marriage license? And yet in how many pictures do you see the handsome hero propose, the heroine accept, and the minister grabbed as he is passing, and after taking his bible from his pocket, the marriage ceremony is performed. This is comedy, indeed, but it is practised habitually in the dramatic photoplays. Time and time again good dramas, with this weakness, have been laughed at and the effect of the entire story dampened. It isn't convincing that it should be the sole purpose of the director, "overwalking" the photoplaywright, to convince. Photoplays can be made more realistic and just because the people accept these conditions now there isn't any reason why some practice toward better work should not be indulged in. Why not have several feet of "leader" flashing "Married" if it is too "inconvenient" to send the couple to the clerk after a license? Who argues for the continuance of this practice?

Again and again when a young woman, in the story, desires to command the attention of the passing hero and for which purpose the "fall-off-of-a-log-and-sprain-your-ankle" method is used, this part of the action is ridiculed for its lack of naturalness owing to the fact that "her ankle is entirely too easily sprained." It is unlikely for a young woman to jump from a log three feet high and fall with a sprained or wrenched ankle. This was seen in one of the cleverest stories of the day some few days ago with one of the most popular motion picture actors in the leading role and the entire story was ruined by this flaw. Indeed these little absurdities are flaws and the whole blame is traced direct to the director.

I confess, I hail from the legitimate stage, but have made a careful study of the "movies" and hope to be in a position, some day, to speak authoritatively upon every phase of the work. Let us all strive to correct these mistakes.

Yours very truly,

Shreveport, La. H. A. PETERMAN, JR.

UNIVERSAL COMPANY ENJOINED.

The Universal Film Manufacturing Company has been enjoined by Judge Mayer of the United States District Court from manufacturing and leasing machines alleged by the Motion Picture Patents Company to infringe the Edison patents controlled by the latter company.

Counsel for the defendant urged that "the damage which the Universal would suffer should it be enjoined from doing business for the shorest period of time would be irreparable and beyond computation," so Judge Mayer decreed that the company might file a bond of $80,000 to indemnify the Motion Picture Patents Company against loss in the event the courts sustain its claims and have the injunction suspended.

John L. Lotsch, counsel for the Universal interests, is preparing an appeal to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals from the decision sustaining the validity of the Edison patents.

"KISS ME GOOD NIGHT" (Lubin).

Shannon Fife, author of Lubin's recent two-reel comedy, "Kiss Me Good Night," is receiving letters from all parts of the country praising the work of Mr. Johnson and Miss Briscoe in the piece. The play has "caught on" from the start. The three Philadelphia exhibitors who have handled it so far report it as easily the "best Lubin comedy of the year." Herschel Stuart, of the Queen Theater, Dallas, writes that hundreds were turned away during the showing of the play there, and other letters from every section attest to the fact that the Johnson-Briscoe combination has never met with happier of more lucrative results than in "Kiss Me Good Night."

WILD STILL WITH GAUMONT.

Contrary to the general rumor about town to the effect that John Wild has or is about to resign his position with Gaumont, he may be found any day comfortably seated in a private office of that firm at 110 West 40th Street and daily attending to the duties of publicity and sales manager of the company.

ELSIE WILSON AND RUPERT JULIAN WITH REX.

THE moving picture industry has again drawn members of the legitimate drama into its fold. Rupert Julian and Elsie Jane Wilson will lead a new Rex company at the Universal West Coast studios, Los Angeles, Cal. Rupert Julian is already known in pictures, having played heavy leads with the Smalley Rex company for some time. Miss Wilson, who is Mrs. Julian in private life, is well known before the footlights of the English province of Australia, New Zealand and Africa.

Rupert Julian.

During one season she played the woman in Robert Hilliard's performance of "A Fool There Was." That was followed by a tour of the United States in the title role of "Everywoman" with Henry W. Savage's production. At the close of the engagement Manager Blackwell engaged Miss Wilson as star for the Little Theatre, Los Angeles, as flower girl in "The Pigeon," and as lead in the last episode of "Anatole," she became a favorite of local audiences.

She was offered an engagement to play the leading role in a new play by Cosmo Hamilton in New York City for next fall, but Manager Bernstein of the West Coast Universal added his persuasions to those of Mr. Julian and the little lady decided to accept the engagement with the Universal.

Joseph de Grasse will direct the Julian company, and Joseph King will be the juvenile.

"SNOWDRIFT" (Eclair).

A two-reel Northwestern drama, featuring O. A. C. Lund and Barbara Tennant. The story carries the action from the woods of Canada into a Fifth Avenue society club and the denouement is entirely unexpected.

Scene from "Snowdrift" (Eclair).

Several of the scenes were taken during a blinding snowstorm at Lake Placid, N. Y., and at Cobalt, Canada, and a wonderfully realistic effect is obtained. Mr. Lund had his right hand severely frozen during the making of the exterior scenes and the pain expressed on his face during the action of the story is not simulated.

A CORRECTION.

The attention of our readers is called to the error which crept into the "Index to The Film Stories" for the last volume published in last week's issue. On page nine of the Index a Solax pour-part feature was erroneously listed as "The Million Dollar Mystery," when it should have been recorded as "The Million Dollar Robbery."

Mexican War in Solax Features.

MANAGER JOSEPH SHEAR, of Solax and Blache Features, has returned from Mexico with Director Harry Schenck and a large company of Solax players, including Miss Vinnie Burns. Miss Burns proudly exhibits a bullet which ploughed up the ground within three feet of her, passing between her horse and the horse of Mr. Schenck, who rode beside her.

Harry Schenck

The company entered Mexico by way of Eagle Pass, Texas, and made their way under a strong guard furnished by General Francisco Murguia of Villa's army to Monclova. They not only succeeded in getting motion pictures of the battle of Monclova, but also several hundred feet of film showing the departure of trains loaded with the troops bound for Mexico City where the decisive battle of the war is in preparation. The stories they tell of the terrible sights they were compelled to witness easily explains the fact that no other motion picture company has ventured into the same locality.

The company's departure from Monclova was hastened by the punishment of two soldiers who were severely beaten for insulting the Americans. The insults were hurled at Director Schenck, whose inability to understand Spanish kept him in blissful ignorance of the affair until he was invited to witness the flogging of the culprits with the flat of a sword.

The news of this incident caused such bitter feeling that the company was placed upon a special train and escorted across the border into Texas. Several days were then spent in making scenes in which Mexican and American cowboys posed in battle scenes staged especially for the benefit of the camera. Two of the Mexicans became enraged because the story called for their capture by the Americans and fired their guns into the faces of their opponents. The guns were only loaded with blank cartridges, but the affair started a fight which took the combined diplomatic services of Manager Shear and Director Schenck to settle.

Miss Vinnie Burns is the only member of the company who is anxious to return to the land of strife. She brought back to the Fort Lee studios a little Mexican dog which bears the name of Jesus Carranza and says that as soon as she can have a rubber stamp made she is going to return to Mexico with a pad and a pen and make a million dollars in Mexican money. As a proof of the value of her scheme, she has a choice collection of Mexican legal tender (Constitutionalist) which any school girl ought to be able to make with the aid of a twenty-five cent rubber stamp. But as the million dollars "Mex" is only worth about two dollars and thirty-two cents (Broadway), making Mexican money is not as attractive as it might seem to the casual observer.

Miss Vinnie Burns, the Popular Solax Actress.

BEULAH POYNTER WITH HECTOR FILM CORP.

Hector J. Streyckmans announces the formation of the Hector Film Corporation, which is already at work on a five-reel feature in which Miss Beulah Poynter is playing the leading rôle. The title of the play will be announced later.

Miss Poynter is well known to the public as a star and a writer. She dramatized "Lena Rivers" and "The Hoosier Schoolmaster," in which she played the leading rôles for several seasons. For five years she was under the management of Frank Burt, being starred in "The Little Girl that He Forgot," "Mother's Girl," all from her own pen, and also "The Doll's House," "The Call of the Cricket," and "A Kentucky Romance."

Miss Beulah Poynter

Miss Poynter's popularity it attested by the fact that she has repeatedly broken the house records for box office receipts. She is not lacking in pulchritude, as she has been featured as "The most beautiful woman on the stage," and "The second Maggie Mitchell." For a number of years she was the youngest star on the stage.

The film is being directed by Wray Physioc, who produced "Hearts of Oak," and whose ability is well known. Miss Poynter is supported by John J. Bowers, who is at present playing in "The Family Cupboard" at The Playhouse on Broadway. Mr. Bowers is well known as a "matinee idol," being very handsome as well as a finished actor.

BIG DOINGS AT LUBINVILLE.

THIS will be a very busy summer at the Lubin studios at Philadelphia and at Betzwood. Raymond Hitchcock will appear in the Lubin films in a scenario elaborated with much care at the Lubin studios with a special regard to the humorous capabilities of the well known comedian. After this first original film comedy Hitchcock will appear in filmed versions of "The Yankee Consul" and "The Galloper."

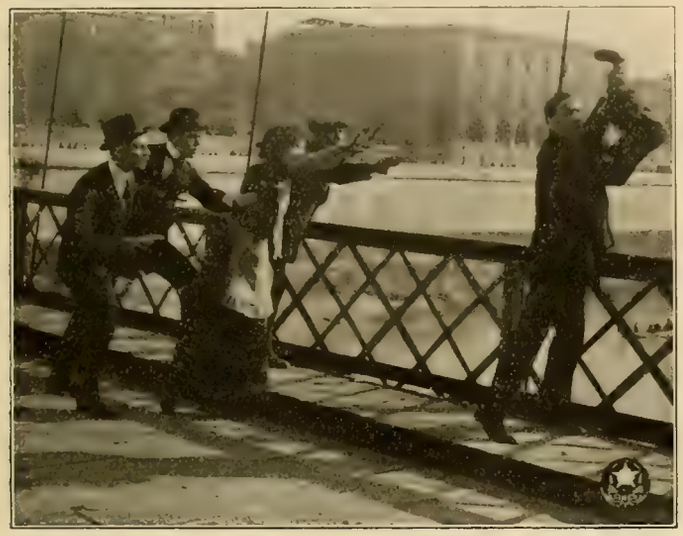
Work on the filmed version of "The Ragged Earl" with Andrew Mack in the leading part has been begun and the picture promises to be very successful.

Great features in preparation are "The Great Divide" and a big Russian play with Evelyn Nesbit Thaw in the leading part. This last mentioned picture will have no reference to the history of Mrs. Thaw but will represent a romance of Russian life. The Thaw pictures will be made in Paris and Fred Mace will also have a prominent part. "The Fortune Hunters" is another big play in preparation with a big star in the leading part.

Manufacturers Advance Notes

"A MIDNIGHT GUEST" (Kleine-Cines).

Rapid, thrilling action, strong situations and superfine acting characterize George Kleine's two-part "Cines" subject "A Midnight Guest," scheduled for release through the General Film Company Tuesday, June 23. It is a picture that will hold the interest of any audience from beginning to end. The story, too, strikes a note new to filmdom.



Scene from "A Midnight Guest" (Kleine Cines)

George Lemont, recently divorced, has been given the custody of his little son, and, thoroughly embittered against his former wife, refuses to allow her even to see the child. Desperate, the mother hires "Gentleman Joe" to steal her boy and bring him to her. Once the lad is in his hands, however, Joe resolves to profit as much as possible from the situation and refuses to give him up unless a price entirely beyond the mother's means is forthcoming. After Lemont's detectives have failed to find the child, the mother sets herself to the search and is successful, but only after a series of exciting events, including an automobile chase and a plunge from a high bridge many feet to the raging river below.

A number of the most famous actors of the notable "Cines" organization take part in the action of "A Midnight Guest," and American audiences will recognize faces already made familiar to them by the great Kleine-Cines multiples "Quo Vadis?" and "Antony and Cleopatra."

FROOME LIVES IN THRILLS.

Albert C. Froome, who worked in New York Hippodrome productions for several years, has joined the Thanhouser forces at New Rochelle. Mr. Froome drove a racing automobile over a cliff into the water in the "America" show this season.

In "The Million-Dollar Mystery," Thanhouser's new serial, Mr. Froome plays a conspirator assisting Marguerite Snow and Frank Farrington in the machinations of the "Black Hundred." His work will carry many of the thrills in the big production. A scene was recently taken in which a racing motor boat was set on fire and demolished by an explosion. Mr. Froome was in the boat. As in all racing boats, there is very little room for passengers, so when the fire broke out, Mr. Froome was almost on top of it. The flames circled around him, but he went right on with the action. Then, just as the boat was rent to pieces by the explosion, Mr. Froome leaped into the water, his clothes aflame, a piece of realism not written into the scenario. Frank Farrington, who was with Mr. Froome, made the leap at the same time. Mr. Froome and Mr. Farrington clambered aboard the Thanhouser.

"THE EAGLE'S MATE" (Famous Players).

Another Mary Pickford picture will be released on July 1st, when the Famous Players Film Co. presents this captivating young star in the stirring drama of splendid emotions and heroic action, "The Eagle's Mate," by Anna Alice Chapin, which, as a novel, has been tremendously popular. The scenes are laid in the heart of the West Virginia mountains where the wild and lawless mountain-folk live by the rule that might is right and that to the strong belong the spoils. In the midst of these primitive surroundings, where civilization is scorned and the gentler emotions derided, Anemone Breckenridge, a gentle, refined, young girl, accustomed to all that wealth and culture can bestow, who has been kidnapped by one of the mountaineers, is suddenly confronted with life in its most brutal and savage form. At first she is appalled and disgusted as she sees the souls of men and women without the veneer which comes from the influences of civilization, but before long her admiration is won by the underlying courage and heroism of the people around her, and in time she struggles with herself to adopt their standards as her own.

Scene from "The Eagle's Mate" (Famous Players)

Miss Pickford's art makes the character of Anemone a dainty slip of beauty, adorably girlish, tantalizingly willful, gloriously feminine and in the course of the story she realizes the sternest self-sacrifice for love, by which she eventually attains the full accomplishment of her womanhood. "The Eagle's Mate" is a novel, yet typical Mary Pickford characterization. It is the first production to be directed by James Kirkwood since he joined the producing staff of the Famous Players, and is unique in that he also assumes the leading masculine rôle, that of Lancer Morne, the leader of the mountain clan.

"THE JOKE THAT KILLS" (Eclipse-Urban).

There's a great deal of heart interest in "The Joke that Kills," a new Eclipse-Urban two-reeler which has recently been added to the Hepworth American Film Corporation's program. The story is a comedy-drama which will come nearer drawing tears than laughs. Its action fails to ring true at times but the release is acceptable.

UNIVERSAL TAKES POSSESSION OF NEW RANCH.

The new Western ranch of the Universal Film Company in the fertile San Fernando Valley, where Universal City will be located soon, is already occupied by the cowboys and stock of the film company. Under the direction of Joe Flores, the several hundred head of stock, cattle, oxen and horses were moved to the new ranch. Corrals have been built for the stock, but the cowboys are bunking, range fashion.

"THE PEARL OF THE PUNJAB" (Eclectic)

A touching story of gratitude and devotion. The film was specially made for the Eclectic by Pathè Fréres, and is in three parts. The scene is laid in India. It deals with the faithful devotion of a native woman who falls in love with an army doctor. The latter gets into trouble with his superior officer on account of a love affair and decides to flee. The woman slave aids him in his flight and takes him to her native village where he is safe from his pursuers. He practises his profession among the natives who revere him. On a hunting trip his old rival is stricken with heart disease. The doctor to whose hut the attendants bring the stricken man is unable to save him despite his best efforts. The officer dies and the woman who had rejected the doctor now proposes to him to return with her to civilization. The doctor indignantly refuses and rewards the devotion of the native girl by making her his wife.

Scene from "The Pearl of the Punjab" (Eclectic)

Miss Nellie Craig takes the part of the native woman, Miss Lillian Wiggins portrays the sweetheart of the doctor, while the part of the doctor is taken by Walter Seymour.

"THE SHADOW OF TRAGEDY" (Lubin).

Emmett Campbell Hall has written an intense story in which a mystery lies buried for twenty years at last to burst forth with a fury that near causes a tragedy. All parties to the drama are extremely worthy, but fate worked mischief and came near wrecking the happiness of a family. The writer of a beautiful love letter to his wife, drops dead in the library of a far off town and the letter lies hidden in one of the books for twenty years and is finally mailed. It reaches the son who has married and thinks that it comes from a paramour. Other evidences tend to conform suspicion and it is only at the crucial moment that fearful consequences are averted. The Lubin picture will lift Mr. Hall into the limelight of photoplay story tellers, especially as it is produced by Arthur Johnson, with Lottie Briscoe and the choice company of that master director and player. It is a two-reel play and will attract attention.

Scene from "The Shadow of Tragedy" (Lubin)

"A BEGGAR PRINCE OF INDIA" (Victor).

"A Beggar Prince of India," as it unfolds on the screen, tells a story that smacks strongly of the "Arabian Nights." In its construction of plot and treatment, it is modernized and the impossible incidents that characterized the Arabian Nights are absent, but still there is in this play the delicate sentiment, that wealth of romantic incident, intrigue, passion and jealousy, and costuming and settings rich in their composition and delightful to the eye.

The play is in three reels. It is directed by Edward Warren and acted by Walter Miller and Irene Wallace in the lead roles. It is a play that will interest, amuse, and will give one solid pleasure in witnessing.

Scene from "A Beggar Prince of India" (Victor)

As the story goes, Prince Hyzem has been raised within the castle walls as a beggar. Hyzem does not know that he is the rightful heir to the throne which his villainous uncle occupies. Time comes, however, when the young beggar prince longs to go beyond the walls of the castle. The opportunity is given him one day by his uncle's minister, who, not recognizing him, offers to take him on an expedition to the capital of one of the neighboring states. Here the young prince meets a princess whom he falls in love with. She exercises a great influence upon his life and afterwards is responsible for his regaining the throne. It will be released July 10th.

"THE LITTLE HOUSE IN THE VALLEY" (American).

Thomas Ricketts as producer of the "Flying A" subject, "The Little House in the Valley," a two-part Western feature, has again registered a remarkable success. He has interwoven a series of dramatic incidents with the atmosphere and beauties of nature in a manner that will thrill and delight the most fastidious critics.

Winifred Greenwood plays the lead and does very creditable work, she throws her heart and soul into the picture. Ed Coxen and George Field play the hero and villain, respectively, and with the able support of a large company work out a series of climaxes. George Field as leader of a band of Mexican brigands portrays a character study that it would be difficult to surpass. The photographic quality is excellent. The release will be made June 29th.

Scene from "The Little House in the Valley" (American)

BUY "THE GREYHOUND" FOR NEW YORK.

The Noted Plays Film Exchange, with offices at 1482 Broadway, New York, have purchased the rights of Paul Armstrong and Wilson Mizner's "The Greyhound" for Greater New York City and New York State.

"The Greyhound" was enthusiastically received by those who saw the advance prints and was introduced to thousands more people at the Strand Theater when it was used as the feature extraordinary during the week of June 21st. The cast is one made up of famous players and the story of the original play which ran for months at the Astor Theater has been closely followed in the photoplay version.

JUDITH OF BETHULIA (Biograph).

When Judith of Bethulia was released, which was but recently, it was at once acclaimed as a great film production. Nothing comparable to it had ever been seen before in this country. It transports one to the harvest fields of ancient Judea. You are living in the past. And before one realizes it, he is swept from the tranquil scenes of harvest and romance and caught in the swirling flood of war, famine and death.

In this production, war as practiced by the ancients is depicted with faithfulness. The storming of the walls of Bethulia by the army of Holofernes is valuable to the student of history. The chariots, the battering-rams and all the engines of ancient warfare are used as they were of old, and before one's eyes is a scene such as Cyrus might have witnessed.

With stirring scenes of war with whole armies sweeping across the scenes, and the entire inhabitants of the beleaguered city hovering behind its walls, the story of the drama runs through it all like a thread and is never once lost sight of. The plot unfolds rapidly and clearly and with the deft touch of genuine art. No phase or lighest shade of the drama is lost.

"DAN" (All Star).

The latest All Star Feature Corporation's production, a tense comedy-drama of Civil War days in which Lew Dockstader, the world famed minstrel and black-face comedian, is featured in the title role of "Dan," is rapidly nearing its completion and will be ready for release about July 4th.

In support of Mr. Dockstader, the All Star Company presents a most noteworthy cast of Broadway celebrities, among whom are Lois Meredith, the young ingenue who jumped to fame in one night in the New York presentation of "Help Wanted," Gail Kane, of "Seven Keys to Baldpate" and who has appeared in "Arizona" and "The Jungle" for the All Star Company, Beatrice Clevenger, a prominent stock star, George Cowl, W. D. Fishter and Hal Reid, the author.

"DAISY DOODAD'S DIAL" (Florence Turner Comedy).

"Daisy Doodad's Dial" is a new Florence Turner comedy which has just been released through the Hepworth American Film Corporation. In it Miss Turner creates gales of laughter by the simple expedient of "making faces"—a comedy trick which the average child learns quite early in life. As Miss Turner does the stunt, however, it is professionally known as "mugging" and has been elevated to a high art. A slender thread of story gives the well known comedienne abundant excuse for her facial contortions and with the firm conviction that "Daisy Doodad's Dial" will prove popular in every theater in which it is shown it can freely be said that the release is an exceptionally good one.

BRIGGS TO OPEN NEW HOUSE.

Harry E. Briggs, who formerly owned and operated the Bijou Theater in Crosby, Minn., is now building a moving picture theater and vaudeville house in Perham, Minn. The dimensions of the new structure are 25 by 90 feet and the cost will be about $5,500. The new house will be named the Bijou, and Mr. Briggs expects to open it on July 30.

Scene from "Judith of Bethulia" (Biograph)

"THE MEXICAN MINE FRAUD" (Pasquali American).

"The Mexican Mine Fraud," new five-part Pasquali American feature belongs to days that have passed in the history of the moving picture industry in this country. Its slender story is too evidently the excuse for the introduction of sensational incidents which are expected to appeal, not because of any dramatic strength but merely because of their sensationalism.

Scene from "The Mexican Mine Fraud" (Pasquali)

Much of the action is supposed to have taken place in Mexico, a country with which, unfortunately for the Pasquali American people, the average American is a lot more familiar than was the director who made the picture. In their make-up and mannerisms, these Pasquali American "Mexicans" while intended to be true to life, are the kind of "Mexicans" Americans most frequently encounter in burlesque comic opera. A sad slip, too, is the introduction in the big scene of the picture of a half dozen fine looking lions that might have been perfectly at home in South Africa, but fail to convince when introduced apparently as a group captured in Mexico and being handled there by a band of lion tamers. This big scene, however, will find favor in the motion picture theaters throughout the country—and there are not a few of them—where sensation of any kind sells away above par. The hero of the story makes his escape from the lions after spending hours almost within their clutches and after they have been liberated from their cage through a fire which destroys the cage house.

"THE LADY OF THE ISLAND" (Imp).

An Imp company, under the direction of Frank Crane, and headed by Dorothy Phillips and Alexander Gaden, is at present situated on Twin Island, an ideal place for summer work and camping. "The Lady of the Island" is the first picture

Scene from "The Lady of the Island" (Imp)

they have produced there and, what with its entrancing atmosphere and vigorous, dramatic story, a more appropriate subject could not have been chosen for release at this time of the season.

Among other stirring features of the play is a race between a motor boat and an eight oar shell containing college athletes. The college boys seek to rescue a girl, while those in the motor boat seek to prevent it. Another fact worth mentioning in connection with picture, is the use made of a trained dog. This dog plays an important part in the story; it was shipped specially for the picture from Rhode Island, and is said to be one of the best trained and most intelligent animals in America. Practically all of the scenes are laid out of doors. There is boating, yachting, camping and hunting. The story is rife with surprising twists; of course there is a romance, but just how it is all going to come out keeps one guessing to the end. In two reels, the picture will be released July 6th.

FIRE AT WHITMAN'S STUDIO.

Fire came within an ace of putting the Whitman studio, Cliffside, New Jersey, out of business recently, and only because of rapid action by the studio employes and cast were the flames confined to the exterior settings.

During the garret scene of "Jane Eyre," a five reel feature, written by John William Kellette and directed by Martin J. Faust, wherein the maniac, portrayed by Alberta Roy, is supposed to destroy herself in a fire she creates, too much realism almost added Miss Roy's name to the list of photoplayers sacrificed upon the altar of daring. During the beginning of the scene Miss Roy's kimono caught fire, and she fortunately stepped upon the spot where flames were beginning to make inroads, and tossed herself upon a bed already smoking, and which later burst into flames. Hand grenades, chemical tanks and the factory hose, were put into play and the fire confined to the garret set. About $300 worth of property was destroyed.

Realistic Fire Scene in "Jane Eyre"

The Whitman cast now includes Misses Lisbeth Blackstone, Mary Frye Clements, Alberta Roy, Viola Allen Frayne, Mary Moore, Valerie Sheahan, Mesdames Frayne and Middleton; Harrish Ingraham, Edwin Brandt, John Charles, F. E. Nevin and Emile LaCroix.

EDISON MADE "ACROSS THE BURNING TRESTLE."

Through an unfortunate typographical error, the last issue of the Moving Picture World was made to indicate that the Edison picture entitled "Across the Burning Trestle" was made by the Kalem Company. Descriptive captions on the illustrating cuts credited the picture to Kalem, although the accompanying review of the release made it plain that the Edison Company had made the picture.

The numerous complaints which were made of this perfectly obvious error were gratifying in that they showed with what careful attention the columns of the World are perused by moving picture people throughout the country from week to week.

WILLIAMS NO LONGER WITH HODKINSON.

William W. Hodkinson, the president of the Paramount Picture Corporation, is sending an announcement to the industry to the effect that J. D. Williams is no longer in the employ of Mr. Hodkinson or Bosworth, Inc. Mr. Williams was never connected with the Paramount Picture Corporation in any capacity.

THE CALL OF THE NORTH (Lasky)

In the production of "The Call of the North," which the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company is now producing, with the original star of the stage play, Robert Edeson in his original role, use is being made of the knowledge of Stewart Edward White, author of the piece, who is also a noted explorer. Mr. White has an intimate knowledge of the Canadian Northwest, where he has spent practically all his life.

"The Call of the North" is being staged partly in the Great Bear Valley in Southern California, and the final stages will be set at Moose Factory, Canada, at the trading post of the Hudson Bay Company.

WILL MAKE PICTURES IN A BREWERY.

Bon Ray Film Company Secures Consumers' Plant at Woodside as Manufactory—F. E. Holliday, President of New Concern.

That moving picture theaters have been putting the saloons out of business is an argument that moving picture supporters throughout the country have been advancing in pleading for a more liberal treatment of their business at the hands of legislators and others.

It may not be absolutely in support of this argument, but it is a fact, nevertheless, that in Greater New York City, within the past couple of weeks a big brewing plant, partial source of supply for many saloons, has given way to a moving picture factory.

The Bon Ray Film Company is the concern that has encroached upon the brewing business, having taken over the thoroughly modern plant of the Consumers' Brewery Company, at Woodside, L. I., for the purpose of producing and manufacturing moving pictures.

The Bon Ray is an enterprise promoted by F. E. Holliday, its president, whom moving picture people will at once recall as having been prominently identified with the Gaumont Company's activities in the United States for the past four years. The company is incorporated under the laws of the State of New York, with a capitalization of $150,000.

In negotiating for a site, the Bon Ray people discovered that the Consumers' brewing plant was ideally equipped for their purposes. Strange as it may seem, the requirements for making good beer are about the same as those for making good moving pictures, insofar as the technical processes are concerned. Breweries have the best of water filtering devices, good refrigerating plants and cool dark rooms by reason of walls of thick construction. Strictly pure water and cool, dark rooms are also essential to the making of pictures.

It is not of record that any of the Bon Ray's products are to be developed in the beer vats. New equipment for this and other processes of the picture business is at present being installed under the direction of J. Roy Hunt, who will be in charge of the company's factory; some of the machinery has already been purchased in Europe and the remainder of it is being constructed in this country. When the plant is ready for operation, in about thirty days, it will have a capacity of 80,000 feet of film per day.

Surrounding the present buildings at Woodside are twenty acres of land, and the Bon Ray Company is erecting a studio there in which to make its pictures. The company will also operate in California.

The Gaumont Company, with which Mr. Holliday, president of the new concern, was formerly associated, has built up quite a business in the United States in manufacturing pictures for Independent producers, and during the past year and a half Mr. Holliday has devoted a great deal of his attention to this particular line. At various times he has had much to do with the editing of various pictorial weeklies, including the Animated and the Mutual weeklies.

Notes of the Trade.

THE MAN ON THE BOX," with Max Figman and Lolita Robertson in their original roles, will be the next Lasky release. The picture is now complete, and Mr. Figman is on his way East with the negative. Work on "The Call of the North," with Robert Edeson, is going forward at the Lasky studios.

* * *

The first motion picture studio in New England to produce feature plays —Dadmun, of Boston, is working on a three-reel drama entitled: "Where Life's Cross-Roads Meet," which will be completed this month.

* * *

The New York State, City and Northern New Jersey rights on "Uriel Acosta," five reels, produced by the Great Players' Film Corporation, has been sold to the Dee Gee Feature Film Company, 220 West 42nd Street, New York City.

* * *

It is officially announced that George Kleine has secured all rights to "Stop Thief," for the picturization of that famous comedy. The picture will be made in New York City at one of the big licensed studios.

* * *

The Vitagraph Company of America has purchased from Dr. Cyrus Townsend Brady, the eminent divine and author, the rights to three of his best novels. They are "The Fetters of Freedom," "Sir Henry Morgan, Buccaneer," and "The Chalice of Courage."

* * *

Our National Anthem, "The Star Spangled Banner," and the motive that inspired the writer, Francis Scott Key, will be produced in two parts by the Edison Company.

* * *

Gagriel Pollock, who has been the general scenic director of the Selig plant in Chicago, has gone to the California plant and taken a carload of "property" recently purchased from the Chicago Auditorium Association, for use at the Edendale plant. This paper-mache work is of most remarkable character, and was made by Robinson, of Drury Lane, London.

* * *

Atsco, Inc., have just installed their radium gold fibre screen at the Lyric, and one Simplex machine and a radium screen at the Casino theater, in New York City; two Simplex machines in the Booth Theater, together with the ventilating and wiring of the Lyric.

* * *

Atsco, Inc., has opened an office in the New York Building, at Seattle, Wash., in charge of Mr. F. F. Merriman.

* * *

In support of Ethel Barrymore in "The Nightingale," the All Star Feature Corporation has engaged a cast which would be a credit to any premier Broadway production. Among those in her support will be seen Charles Stevenson, George Andrews, William Courtleigh, Jr., Conway Tearle and many more. Work has been progressing at the Yonkers studio of the All Star Feature Corporation towards the completion of "The Nightingale," which was written especially for Miss Barrymore by Augustus Thomas, director general of the All Star.

* * *

Robert Leonard and Lloyd Ingraham (Universal West Coast studios) are producing an exceptional romance of artist life in Paris which affords Mr. Leonard and Miss Hall a fine opportunity to display their art in new rôles. The story is a one-reeler and is entitled "As Fate Disposes."

* * *

At the Dayton Convention, Atsco, Inc., will distribute the few remaining coins they have on hand, entitling the exhibitor to $5 credit on the first $100 worth of supplies which he purchases. This coin was one of the hits of the New York Convention.

* * *

Atsco, Inc., has been appointed exclusive sales agent for the Strong Nitrogen lamp, which will hereafter be known as the Atsco lamp.

The twentieth annual edition of the Kleine Optical Company catalogue is just off the press and ready for distribution. It contains one hundred and seventy-five pages, printed on a highly enameled stock and bound in dainty blue "Advertiser's cover." The catalogue this year contains many valuable treatises on lenses, theater construction and kindred subjects, in addition to a complete list of motion picture accessories and supplies of all kinds.

* * *

Director Charles Giblyn (Universal West Coast Organization) has recently completed a two-reel military drama, entitled "Kate Waters, Secret Service." The production is of special interest because Captain Herbert Ford, late of the U. S. Cavalry, not only took part in the drama, but was consulted in prescribing military usage and in rendering the production true to military ethics.

* * *

The story of Babe Baxter, her rise to fame and public favor, her decline from this exalted position, her journey to the county poor and her transition to celestial realms, make a touching and intensely dramatic production by Harry Pollard in a "Beauty" subject entitled "The Other Train," to be released July 7th, 1914.

* * *

"Cabiria," the Itala Film Company's motion picture production of Gabriele d'Annunzio's scenario, which is being exhibited to capacity audiences at the Knickerbocker Theater, New York, has proven to be a spectacle of unusual proportions, and of great interest to the theater-going public.

* * *

A print of Kalem's five-part historical feature production, "Wolfe, or the Conquest of Quebec," was consumed in a fire which destroyed the Grand Theater, at Crookston, North Dakota, recently. The Kalem production was scoring a big success at the time of the fire, was of incendiary origin.

* * *

Within the past two weeks the Broadway Theater, New York, has played "Soldiers of Fortune," "Checkers," "Paid In Full," "In Mizzoura," "Pierre of the Plains" and "Arizona," and each one has succeeded in topping the business of its predecessor.

* * *

Weber Theater, New York, which opened on June 22d, with the latest All Star production, "The Jungle," reports unprecedented business.

* * *

Max Davidson is making such a hit in the character of "Izzy," that the Reliance Company is issuing the film regularly through the Mutual program. The film for release July 1st is "Izzy, the Detective.' It portrays the adventures of an amateur sleuth who goes about with pictures of various persons wanted by the police. A portrait of a nobleman gets in the bunch and "Izzy" arrests him. The arrest gets them both into trouble.

* * *

Jacques Jacquard is now co-director with Jack Warren Kerrigan, of the Kerrigan-Victor Company, of the Universal. The famous star will hereafter be seen in both society and Western dramas in order that the varying tastes of his many admirers may be satisfied.

* * *

George J. Beihoff, formerly District Manager of the World Film Corporation, in Indianapolis, has been transferred to Philadelphia, in the same capacity.

* * *

W. S. Hart, who will be remembered by theater-goers for his strong and convincing work in the original productions of "The Squaw Man" and "The Virginian," has been added to the company used in producing the plays put out under the Kay Bee, Domino and Broncho brands by the New York Motion Picture Corporation. He will be featured during the summer in a series of stories by Director General Thomas H. Ince.

* * *

Charles M. Seay, the Edison director, is not downcast when he walks with bowed head. He is simply ambitious and picks up whatever he can. He has found a button that was shot from the coat of General Sherman, and a coin so ancient as to not bear a date. All that is needed is a twenty dollar gold piece to make up the fob for his new gold watch.

* * *

George Kleine has just completed arrangements to produce that popular Cohan & Harris success "Officer 666." The rights were obtained recently, and negotiations completed with one of the big New York studios to produce the story in this country.

* * *

"Feast and Famine" is a beautiful little drama depicting the wisdom of conservation of resources in the hour of plenty for a time of need. Excellent dramatization with a superb and thrilling climax. The versatility of "Flying A" actors is attested by the extensive variety of subjects being produced. "Feast and Famine" will be released July 8th, 1914.

* * *

Harry Weiss, of Chicago, has been made district manager for the World Film Corporation, with offices at No. 37 South Wabash Avenue.

* * *

Word has just been received from Mt. Clemens, Mich., that William Bechtel, the man of a "thousand faces," is rapidly convalescing from his illness, and may be expected back in harness at the Edison studio within the next three weeks.

* * *

Pretty little Ella Hall, so long a favorite ingenue with the Rex Company, has been selected as leading woman in the Robert Leonard Rex Company. "Out of the Darkness" and "At the Foot of the Stairs" were the two first Leonard offerings with Miss Hall as lead. In the last Leonard production, "An Awkward Cinderella," Miss Hall is co-star with Leonard.

* * *

"I saw 'Quo Vadis?' while I was in New York a year ago," writes Judge Ben. B. Lindsey to George Kleine. "It is the finest film I ever saw and its educational value is beyond estimation. I wish all the kids in the world could see it—and grown people, too!" Mr. Kleine never received a letter he values more highly than that from the famous Denver jurist.

* * *

The Cincinnati branch of the World Film Corporation will be under the supervision of Mr. Clay E. Brehm, formerly manager of their New York Exchange. Mr. H. G. Siegel, formerly manager of the Cosmos Feature Film Company, has been named as Mr. Brehm's successor.

Arthur Levey is manager of the New York office of the James McEnnery Syndicate, of New York and London, with offices at 229 West 42nd Street (Candler Building).

* * *

The Mercantile and Financial Times, date of June 15th, contains a lauding and timely article on the Nicholas Power Cameragraph, which was demonstrated at the Central Palace Exposition last week. The display was a fine one and reflected great credit on the genius of Mr. Power, who in the spheres of invention, stands side by side with Edison and Marconi.

* * *

Andrew Mack writes in from Philadelphia to say that he is much pleased with the way his old stage success, "The Ragged Earl," is being produced as a big feature picture for Popular Plays and Players, Inc., of 1600 Broadway, New York City.

* * *

Samuel Goldfish, executive head of the Lasky firm, is sojourning at Berlin. After negotiating in England for the output of the Paramount Pictures Corporation, Mr. Goldfish started a tour of the big cities of Europe, and will return to New York July 29th.

* * *

Paul West's series, based on his stories of the alert office boy and to be known as "Bill," will be released earlier than was at first announced. The first film will be released by the Komic, through the Mutual program, July 5th and other reels will follow at frequent intervals. "Bill" is a one-reel feature and each reel will be complete though there will be consecutive interest.

* * *

George D. Baker, of the Vitagraph Company, who directed the film comedy, "Mr. Bingles' Melodrama," now at the Vitagraph Theater, New York City, is an old time trouper and received his knowledge of things theatrical in the school of experience.

* * *

Horace G. Plimpton, manager of the Edison studio, is returning from Europe on the S. S. "Aquitania."

* * *

"Othello, or the Moor of Venice," the big Shakespearean production made under his direction, George Kleine announces, will be released through the General Film Company, the week of July 6th. The picture is about five reels in length, and was made by the Photo Drama Company, in Venice, Italy.

* * *

Thos. Ricketts one of the "Flying O" directors is producing a one-reel subject under title of "Her Secret." It remains to be seen whether it is a parody on woman's inability or a drama that will tear the heart strings as the nature of the secret is disclosed.

* * *

Letters are coming in to the Selig Polyscope Company from various large cities concerning the success of "The Adventures of Kathlyn" as a serial run in association with newspapers in the places where these films have been shown in the larger theaters. The issuance of the thirteenth and concluding number of the series has apparently been marked by as much interest as the three reels that were shown in introduction.

* * *

Mr. Nat. I. Brown, western sales manager of Atsco Inc., has been appointed general sales manager with headquarters in New York.

One sample of this beautiful slide for 10c. Player slides $2.00 per dozen. Release slides 6 for $1.10, $1.80 per dozen, any company. Stock slides 25c each, 6 for $1.10, $2.00 per dozen. Why pay enormous prices for slides when you get as good as any made at these prices. If you are skeptical send 15c for any announcement slide. We'll furnish it.

NIAGARA SLIDE CO.
LOCKPORT, N. Y.

New York, June 20, 1914

NOTICE---We wish to announce that Mr. J. D. Williams is no longer in the employ of William W. Hodkinson or Bosworth, Inc., nor was he ever connected with the Paramount Pictures Corporation in any capacity.

WILLIAM W. HODKINSON

"The Spitfire"

A Melodramatic Farce that was Produced More than One Thousand Times on the Dramatic Stage—Picturized by the Famous Players Film Co.

Reviewed by Harry W. De Long.

CAST:

Bruce Moson	Carlyle Blackwell
Valda Girard	Violet Merserau
Marcus Girard	Redfield Clark
James Ormond	Lionel Adams
Tracy	Robert Cummings
Beasley	W. R. Dunn
Aunt Mary	Lois Arnold
Polly	June Dale

IT WAS a happy thought of the director's when he chose Carlyle Blackwell for the leading part. The four reels of this thrilling romance embrace all the elements of interest and intensity that it is possible to jam in a melodramatic, nautical comedy-drama, or rather a melodramatic farce, as it contains both laughs and thrills. It was written, that is the dramatic version, by Edward Peple, and has been visualized and directed most meritoriously. The humorous situations and the absorbing dramatic elements combine to make this offering pleasing, not only to those who enjoy light drama, but to the other class, who have a preference for the punch and heart-throb of tenseness and overpowering incident and episode.

Scene from "The Spitfire" (Famous Players)

The director has happily balanced the two extremes, so much so it is difficult to distinguish whether the subject is comedy or serious drama; until the culmination of the plot brings the conviction to the spectator that it is only real life, as it is enacted.

Mr. Blackwell is an ideal type for the role of Morson, about whom revolves the principal action of the play. In the big dramatic situations and in the lighter moments he does not fail to give a perfect characterization.

The story captioned "The Spitfire" is as follows: Bruce Morson, a young American, returning from Egypt, is robbed of some valuable jewels in a London hotel, and pursues the thieves to the yacht "Spitfire," at Calais, which the crooks have boarded and taken command of under forged orders from its owner, Marcus Girard, who is in London. The yacht is just about to sail out of port, but by a ruse, Morson manages to get aboard, and promptly falls in love with Valda, Girard's pretty daughter, who is also a "spitfire." The crooks tell Valda her father is a smuggler, show her the jewels they have stolen, and convince her they are guarding them for her father, and that Morson is a customs officer, spying upon her in order to trap Girard. Valda indignantly turns upon the helpless Morson, orders him into seaman's costume, and compels him to work his passage to New York.

Morson undergoes many ordeals, both humorous and dramatic, and is even finally accused of the theft of his own property, before the final denouement, which shows the burning of the yacht and the heroic rescue of Valda by Morson, who is at last able to right himself, baffle the thieves, and win the woman he loves.

The scenes on the yacht are very pleasing and gripping, and the photography is of a superior order. The acting of those in the cast is natural and artistic. This picture production is certainly worthy of a place in any theater.

New Wild Animal Company Formed

Tom Nash and "Big Otto" Will Manufacture Wild Animal Features at Los Angeles.

ONE OF THE latest moves among the many important ones that have occurred recently in the picture industry in this country became known within the past few weeks, when rumors appeared in trade papers to the effect that Thomas Nash and "Big Otto" had formed a company of their own to manufacture big feature pictures under their own brand.

Thomas Nash.

These rumors were verified by Stanley H. Twist upon his arrival in New York last week. Mr. Twist, through the medium of the Inter-Ocean Sales Co., 110 West 40th Street, of which he is president, will act as the eastern representative of the new combination, which is to be known as The Nash Motion Picture Company.

The new company has as its immediate policy the production of big wild animal features averaging from three to five reels in length, and produced along elaborate lines with careful attention to detail.

For this purpose the new company has purchased an extensive tract of land, some forty acres in area, situated in one of the most beautiful parts of suburban Los Angeles, about half way between the city and Pasadena. At present Nash and Otto are busily engaged in superintending the construction of a large studio and animal zoo upon this property and in beautifying the grounds.

A large and carefully selected company under the direction of a well known producer are already working on the first picture, which will be called "The Mysterious Man of the Jungle." This feature will be in four reels and no expense is being spared to make it set a high standard

By virtue of his long and successful career and wide experience in the manufacturing end of the business, Thomas S. Nash is to-day one of its best known men. He is one of the industry's veterans, having entered the business seventeen years ago in Chicago. "Big Otto" has been a well known figure in the animal and circus world for two decades. With the new company Mr. Otto will personally supervise all productions.

"Big Otto."

With this combination in the field, the trade will look forward eagerly to their product. Mr. Twist states that, despite the tempting offers which have been received, no definite policy of marketing will be decided upon until Mr. Nash arrives in New York next month, with his first sample pictures.

WRONG ACTOR GIVEN CREDIT.

In our issue of June 13 in the review of "Bringing in the Law," by the Colorado Motion Picture Co., it was stated that Will E. Ellis played the lead opposite Miss Josephine West. This was an error as Edwin F. Cobb, late of the Lubin Company, played the part in question.

Exhibitors News

Interesting Information Concerning Moving Picture Men Gathered By Moving Picture World Correspondents Everywhere.

CINCINNATI

CINCINNATI boasts of possessing the champion moving picture fan of the world in the person of Joseph M. Isador, a merchandise broker, living at 2817 Eden street, who has the proud record of not having missed attending at least one show a day for seven years. Usually, as a matter of fact, he sees several, but during the period mentioned not a day has passed without his witnessing at least one performance.

Sedamsville, one of Cincinnati's many populous suburbs, is to have a new motion picture house, in the shape of an airdome, which will probably be converted into an indoor theater before the advent of the winter season. A lot 46 by 90 feet has been acquired by the Sedamsville Motion Picture and Entertainment Co., which was recently organized for the purpose. The airdome will be constructed at once. Albert E. Huseman is president of the company, the other officers being Charles White, vice-president, A. F. Gordon, secretary, Edward B. Harris, treasurer, and Lee White, general manager. The amount to be expended at first is $2,000.

Notwithstanding an earlier engagement, some weeks ago, at the Walnut street theater, the Bosworth film production of Jack London's "Sea Wolf" came back last week for a full seven-day showing at the Grand, and again drew large audiences. Cooler weather during the latter part of the week helped to bring the attendance up to a good average, the heat during the first few days of the week being extreme, and injuring attendance everywhere.

Manager Willis Jackson, who has been with the Walnut street theater for the past four years, turning a losing venture into one of creditable success, has been appointed manager of the Gayety, and will enter upon his new duties with the beginning of the coming fall season. During the summer he will continue to run feature film productions at the Walnut, where attractions of this sort have been drawing well for some weeks. The Gayety, which ran films and vaudeville for a time with a fair degree of success, following the closing of the regular season, has been closed for a thorough renovation, and will be practically new for Mr. Jackson's regime when he takes charge.

The liveness of the average exhibitor in the smaller towns of Ohio is pretty well indicated by the fact that one of the editorial writers on a leading Cincinnati daily paper, who sees a good many of the country exchanges in the course of his work, was recently moved to comment favorably on the amount of advertising which is done by the moving picture houses. An interesting excerpt from his editorial on this subject reads as follows, offering, incidentally, a good tip as to the way to go after business: "In one town, with a population scarcely more than five thousand, three theaters advertise with liberality. The programs are given with accuracy in detail and with mention of the stars appearing in the films. At one of the theaters one of the shows displayed the burial of the heroes who fell at Vera Cruz. That is almost up to date, and in all probability by next week it will show the arrival of the Colonel in New York and the doings at Oyster Bay."

Montgomery & Lines, of Dayton, O., have completed plans for the construction of one of the handsomest houses in that city at Fifth and Ringgold streets, Oliver Ritzert being the architect. The structure will be elliptical in shape, and is to have a seating capacity of about 500. It will be of concrete and brick fireproof construction, one story high, 68 feet wide by 96 deep, and will cost about $20,000, the first-class nature of the work being pretty well indicated by this figure, in view of the comparatively small size of the house. Work will begin as soon as possible, as the firm desires to have the house completed before the beginning of the fall season.

Lubin's production of "The Gamblers" was seen last week at the Majestic, in Dayton, O., for two days, and met with an enthusiastic reception on the part of large houses, according to the management. The reputation of the film had preceded it, and it operated as its own advertisement.

The Alhambra theater, in Canton, O., is meeting with considerable success in the Edison "Dolly of the Dailies" series, the seventh installment of this popular serial, "The End of the Umbrella," being one of the best so far shown.

The Star theater, recently built by John D. Kesler in Sandusky, O., was opened last week with large houses which were interested in seeing the interior of one of the most up-to-date photoplay theaters in the city as well as in the special attraction which Manager Kesler has secured for the opening—Mary Pickford in "Hearts Adrift." Mr. Kesler was "turning them away" all day during the opening Sunday, and has since been handling capacity houses.

Manager Hanley, of the Marion (O.) Family theater, made a hit with a Warner feature "The Pirates of the Plains," recently shown in connection with a pair of vaudeville acts, the combination bringing capacity attendance to the little house.

CASEY.

KENTUCKY.

KENTUCKY exhibitors have been finding things slightly quiet during the past week or ten days, a condition which has been attributed to the excessively hot weather. The houses with good ventilation and plenty of electric fans have managed to draw fairly good crowds, but as a whole the public has held away from the picture shows. However, business is about on a par with what it was at the corresponding season of last year.

R. S. Shrader, manager of the Central Feature Film Company, Louisville, has returned from a short pleasure and business trip to Indianapolis, Ind., where his wife is spending a few days with friends.

A recent visitor to Louisville was Julius G. Reeder, managing director of the Ohio Motion Picture Company, of Cincinnati. Mr. Reeder has made a trip to every town in Kentucky, even taking in the small tank towns, in an endeavor to book Paul J. Rainey's "African Pictures," which were produced by the Jungle Film Company. Results have been very good, and Mr. Reeder is more than pleased by the interest displayed by the Kentuckians in the new pictures. Mr. Reeder was formerly of New Orleans. One of the best features of his trip is the fact that he managed to pick up a mailing list including practically every picture show in the state, showing the number of seats in the houses, the locations, and the managers in charge.

Manager Ed Klapheke, of the Baxter Airdome, on the Bardstown Road, Louisville, had a special free attraction for the newsboys of the Highlands. A special two part Kalem picture was ordered for the occasion, entitled, "The Detective Sisters," featuring Carlyle Blackwell. This was in keeping with the annual treat of the Louisville Herald to the newsboys of the Highlands in which all orderly newsboys are invited to participate. The boys met at 7:15 o'clock sharp on Highland avenue, near Baxter, and were escorted by the Boys' Brigade to the theater. The only compensation asked of the boys was that they keep good order.

The National Theater, Louisville, will shortly present a motion picture show for the benefit of the Parent-Teacher Association of the George Rogers Clark School, of Crescent Hill.

The Rev. George W. Bunton, of Newport, Ky., recently officiated at the marriage of James A. Day and Miss Clara Schroth. Mr. Day was formerly with the Heuck & Fennessy interests, and is at present managing a motion picture show in Newport. The bride is a daughter of W. A. Schroth, of Clifton Heights. The couple left for an Eastern honeymoon.

Mandamus proceedings were instituted in the Circuit Court recently against the City of Louisville. Building Inspector William J. O'Sullivan and the Board of Public Safety by Annie M. Steuerle and the Broadway Theater Company to compel the defendants to issue to the plaintiffs a permit for the erection of a theater on Broadway between Shelby and Logan. It is alleged by the plaintiffs that they have expended a sum in excess of $1,200 with architects and others in the formation of plans for the proposed $50,000 building, but that permission was denied by the Building Inspector and the Board of Public Safety. City Building Inspector O'Sullivan, in a statement, said that his refusal to issue the permit was due to the fact that the plans and specifications for the proposed structure did not provide for enough court spaces to accommodate the exits, affording insufficient protection in case of fire or panic. He said that he had informed the plaintiffs through their architects Joseph & Joseph, that if they would alter the plans to conform with his ideas he would issue the permit. Joseph & Joseph were the architects on the recently erected National theater.

The M. & C. Film Company, which recently obtained quarters at Straws Mills, Ind., near Sellersburg, Ind., are now manufacturing regular releases and staging Kentucky Comedies and Dramas, in one, two and three reel subjects. A picture has just been completed of the plant of the Courier Journal, of Louisville. This picture is entitled "The Making of A Modern Newspaper" and in connection with this the "Winner of the Fortieth Kentucky Derby."

Manager Joseph Desberger, of the Star and Gem theaters of Paducah, Ky., has discontinued pictures at the Star during the summer months, and is now running tabloid performances which are taking extremely well. Pictures are being shown as usual at the Gem theater. This condition is brought about by the fact that the regular show houses are not operating at this season, and there was some demand for other than straight run pictures. Manager Desberger formerly owned the Arcade theater which was sold to the National Moving Picture Company, of Louisville.

R. M. Brown, of Shelbyville, Ky., was recently in Louisville, where he contracted with the Central Film Exchange, for a higher grade of Universal Service that he had been using. Shelbyville is a good picture town for a small town, and Manager Brown is doing nicely.

J. J. Hebert, of the Warner Feature Film Company, was recently taken ill at Dawson Springs, Ky. He is on his feet again, however, and is back on the job.

Harry Evans, of Mayfield, Ky., is doing well with his airdome this summer. As long as the weather is good he operates the big open air theater which has a seating capacity of 1,200. During bad weather he switches over to his regular house which has a seating capacity of 300.

A. L. Hunt, of Henderson, Ky., is doing nicely with the Park theater which is located in the old opera house. He is runninng the Mutual program, and managing to fill the 1,200 seats fairly well. He is also running "Tabloid" twice a week. He is considering the purchase of two new machines for the operating booth. Formerly he was in the motion picture business at Jacksonville, Ill.

Roy Threkeld, of Dawson Springs, Ky., will have his new theater ready for the public by July 1. This house is located near the Century Hotel and in one of the most desirable locations in the city for such an enterprise. The house has a seating capacity of 300.

The Grand theater, of Owensboro, Ky., is operating a light stock company in conjunction with the regular run of motion pictures. The plan is taking well at present, and good houses are being played to.

The Dixie Theater Company, of Russellville, Ky., according to Manager George B. Edwards, will be ready to open on June 25. This house is a great deal larger than the old Dixie theater and has about double the seating capacity. The first pictures to be shown in the new house will be Paul Rainey's "African Pictures."

Manager M. Switow, of the Switow Amusement Company, Louisville, has sold the Garrick theater, of Madisonville, Ky., to R. Sacks, of Indianapolis, Ind. This house has the distinction of being one of the few if not the only motion picture house in the country to put a circus out of business. This theater and one other, The Princess, happened to have unusually good bills recently when a circus hit town, and although the circus remained on the lots for three days it was unable to get together enough money to move on to the next town. Manager Ansil E. Waltrip, who is still in charge of the house, is a very popular Madisonville boy and is making himself strong with the patrons in various ways. He spends a good deal of his time on the door so as to be able to greet his friends on arrival at the theater.

Manager W. E. Rash, of the Idle Hour theater, Earlington, Ky., is making arrangements for remodeling and improving his theater. One hundred additional seats will be put in. This theater is in the mining district of Kentucky and has a good patronage.

Manager W. P. Scott, of the Auditorium, Dawson Springs, Ky., was very much disappointed last week in the failure of some pictures to arrive in time for a special show which he was giving while the Kentucky Press Association was in session at Dawson. A special program of speeches and pictures had been arranged and advertised. There are between 800 and 900 visitors at the springs at present, and business is very good.

G. D. CRAIN, JR.

ILLINOIS.

THE "pictures for children" idea is uppermost in many Illinois communities. At Joliet, the Joliet "Herald" and Manager Ray McMullen, of the Colonial are doing some unusual work. The newspaper is sponsor for the plan which is conducted by Mrs. C. J. Johnson, who is at the head of its woman's department. Specially chosen films for children will be shown, at the Colonial, the youngsters being enabled to buy tickets at the rate of two for five cents. If there are any who cannot afford this the Herald has effected a plan whereby they can secure them free through the teachers. The films were selected by Mrs. Johnson who made a trip to the Chicago exchanges. She was assisted by Manager McMullen. The first program included a fairy play, "A Day in the Life of the Naval Reserves" "Scenes in Ireland" and a comedy. The shows are made distinctive by the title "Children's Hour," and prizes are given by the paper for the best letters relating to the experiences of the children during that hour. The plan of free shows at the Deddick Library in Ottawa, under the auspices of the Woman's Club, is in its second successful year. Like the shows at Joliet, the Saturday morning programs at the Star theater in Evanston are especially for children at the suggestion of a local newspaper. The Evanston News urged a trial of the plan and although the attendance at first was not encouraging the parents are rallying and the attendance has been increasing each week. Local pictures with especial interest for children have been shown at the Court in Pekin where films of the school field day exercises did big business and at the Palm in Rockford where the youngsters witnessed on the screen the parade of all the pupils in the city. The Rockford film was the work of the Commercial Art Shop which is putting out its product under the brand of "C A S" films.

Illinois has been having some hot weather that slowed up business for the moving picture men, except the airdome shows. Springfield tied with Yuma, Ariz., for the hottest place in the country one day and few felt the lure of the photoplay houses.

Negotiations were under way at Cairo for the sale, by Fred Teichman of the Bijou moving picture theater, to Peter Lind II, who has been connected with the Alexander County National Bank.

Travis A. Kimmell has again assumed charge of his theater in Cairo, and the title Grand Central Theater has given way for the old name, the Kimmell. Dooley & Demos operated it under a lease for about three months.

The City Council at Grafton is up against the annual problem of financing the city and has passed a resolution to tax moving picture theaters $50 a year.

Now that Wilmette has two moving picture houses the Board of Censorship, created by an ordinance last fall, has come to the front and will see, it is announced, that no films will be exhibited which are not fit for children to see. Mrs. C. N. Roberts, chairman and Mrs. Harry Norghman, represent the Woman's Club, and Fred D. Buckman is the village trustee on the board. The body already has given its commendation to the manner in which the new Village theater ot 1150 Wilmette avenue is operated.

Picture programs for parks do not have to be made up comedies and thrillers according to the management of Dellwodd Park near Joliet. This resort which is using Kinemacolor has found that educational and nature study films draw well.

A drug store in Galesburg gave a free ticket to the Cozy theater with each fifty cent cash purchase.

Additional light upon the value of the moving picture in the treatment and life of the insane is shown by developments at the institutions in Illinois. At the Kankakee asylum the pictures have been shown to 1,800 patients, including many who have been classed as dangerous and raving maniacs and who have been confined in the cage rooms and relief wards. A pleasant evening generally is selected for the 800 patients who ordinarily are violent. The effect of these few hours of freedom and entertainment is shown by the fact that no acts of violence have been reported and not one of the eight hundred have ever stepped out of the line of march. The shows for the 1,000 other more rational and more dependable patients are given the first half of the week. The picture shows at the Watertown Hospital are to be given out-of-doors this summer. An airdome, seating 500 has been erected and will be used by both patients and attendants. Five reels of pictures, blackface and other vaudeville and music by the hospital orchestra make up a typical program.

Evidently there is little money in the profession or trade of moving picture operating. Walter S. Reese, an operator of Streator, has filed a petition in bankruptcy in the United States District Court at Chicago, scheduling liabilities of $1,317 and assets of $28.

Sign-laden wagons, advertising moving picture shows, will be classed as billboards in Danville as the result of an opinion given by the city attorney and the police, following the complaint of the activities of one house, have been given orders to keep the wagon off the streets.

W. V. Schmidt will be manager of the new Grand moving picture theater which is nearing completion at Breese. The house will seat 450 persons.

The Princess theater at Woodstock had the booking there of the interesting and business-bringing pictures of "The Illinois State Penitentiary."

William Harding, owner of the Rose theater at Palestine, was installing a new electric light plant in his show when the gasoline engine fell on his right foot. It was necessary to amputate a part of one of the toes.

The first features shown at the new Washington Garden on St. Louis avenue in East St. Louis, were the seven reels of the Pageant and Masque held in St. Louis. Pictures will be changed daily by the Landau Amusement Company and vaudeville three times a week.

The Grand Opera House at El Paso was given over to free moving pictures the day the merchants acted as hosts to the people from the country round about. The fete was known as Play-Day and everything except the "eats" were furnished free.

Manager Grampp, of the Grand theater at Rockford feature Griffith's "Home, Sweet Home" the week of June 22d, 23d.

Fred E. Sterling, of Rockford, prominent in the affairs of the Orpheum, Palm and Princess theaters, is a candidate for Republican State Central Committeeman from Illinois.

In order that Dr. Sutton, one of the chief figures in the Fulton County Exiles pictures made at Los Angeles, Cal., might see himself on the screen the films were sent to his home at Port Orchard, Wash., where he had arranged for a special performance. These are the pictures made by the Canton Register of Canton, Ill., so that former residents of Fulton county might have a home-coming by proxy.

The Palace theater at Roseville recently, showed "100 Pictures of Life in Roseville."

The management of the Aledo Opera House at Aledo made an event of the exhibition of "Samson." A special matinee was given for the Sunday school children, and the evening performance was for the benefit of the Aledo Band.

The Lakin Airdome at St. David, has been completed and is now housing the moving picture shows formerly given in the Lakin theater.

The Gem theater, redecorated, has been re-opened in the Venable building at Keithsburg.

R. C. Augustine, at Decatur, in a talk before the Parents'-Teachers' Federations on playgrounds, used moving pictures and slides for illustrations.

Manager R. H. Griffin, of the Western Hippodrome at Ninth street and Ninth avenue, in Rock Island, had his place thoroughly remodeled before the summer season of pictures.

Motion pictures were made June 13 at Mooseheart Lodge, near Aurora, when 1,500 workmen dedicated and built a road 1,500 feet long in front of the lodge home. Films also were made of a parade which was a part of the ceremonies.

A special musical program by Taylor's Orchestra marked the opening of the Airdome at Woodhull.

"Caprice" did such a nice business at the Varietie theater in Canton that the management has decided to use Famous Players features every Tuesday night.

R. W. Gracy, of Barrington, has gone over to the "under canvas" idea and will use a tent for his moving picture show this summer.

One of the Illinois papers remarks: "Looking at the 'bathing pictures' printed in some of the Chicago papers today, one cannot help but think: 'they wouldn't be permitted to show them in movies.' Perhaps, however, it's art."

J. C. Seyster, of Oregon, is reported to be contemplating the erection of a new opera house on the site now occupied by the Star theater in that city.

Photoplay houses have knocked out so many saloons that there is little novelty in the announcements, but news comes from Utica that E. Marshall has closed his moving picture theater because the building has been leased for dramshop purposes.

Moving pictures and dances are the attractions at the Collinsville Park, at Collinsville on Saturday and Sunday nights.

J. S. Alexander, until recently a conductor for the Quincy Street Railway Company, of Quincy, has purchased a half interest in a moving picture theater at Kansas City, Mo.

Frank Alexander, who has been appointed manager of the Royal theater at Monmouth, has installed a three-piece orchestra and a new screen. Alexander formerly was in the photoplay business in Omaha, Neb.

E. Sweeting will be in direct charge this summer of the Lyric theater, at Danville, which has been leased by Powell & Sweeting and will turn from vaudeville to pictures. Keystone comedies will wind up a program running from five to seven reels. A five-piece orchestra has been secured for the musical features.

J. E. Myers has been giving week-stands of moving picture shows under canvas at Lima, Marcelline and other towns near Quincy. For Sunday programs he has been using "The Passion Play" and "The Prodigal Son" and doing good business.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

SAN FRANCISCO.

NO name has been chosen yet for the new theater of Ben Michaels opened recently on Broadway, but the contest is nearing a close, and an announcement will be made shortly. It is likely that the new house will be called either the Verdi or the Columbus, as it is located in the Italian district of the city.

A one-story amusement building is to be erected by Edward Martin on Montgomery Street, near Pacific, at an estimated cost of about $25,000. It is understood that provisions will be made for the installation of moving picture apparatus.

Turner & Dahnken have let contarcts aggregating more than $10,000 for alterations and additions to the Globe theater in the Mission district, and this work will be completed at the earliest possible date. The work was to have been commenced several weeks ago, but unavoidable delays prevented the plans from being carried out. When the alterations are finished the house will be one of the largest and best equipped of any moving picture theater in the city.

The Illinois Commission has awarded a contract to Lange & Bergstrom for the erection of the Illinois pavilion on the grounds of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition. A large moving picture theater with a pipe organ will be a feature of the building.

The Pressmen's Union of San Francisco recently took a few kicks at the nicks, the charge being made to the Labor Council that "practically all of the nickelodeons in this city use tickets purchased in the East." An effort will be made to have the owners of moving picture theaters patronize local printing firms.

Robert G. Fowler, who made the only hydroplane flight across the Isthmus of Panama several months ago, delivered a lecture last week at the Young Men's Christian Association building, showing moving pictures taken by the operator who accompanied him. The films show the completed canal along almost its entire length, as well as glimpses of the jungle-grown remains of the old French canal.

The California Motion Picture Corporation is erecting a large kitchen and dining-room on its grounds at San Rafael for the accommodation of the members of its company, and now has its studio buildings in good shape. This concern has given up the making of a weekly, for the time being at least, and is busily engaged on a number of important subjects.

The La Bonita theater, located in the Richmond District, is now a member of the Exhibitors' League of San Francisco.

The Glen Odeon, located near Glen Park, in the Diamond street section, has changed hands, and is now being conduced by F. Ferrara.

The Premium theater has closed, and it is doubtful whether or not it will be reopened at an early date.

The Golden Gate Film Exchange, which recently purchased the California rights for "The Christian," at a price said to be the largest ever paid for a feature in this state, is receiving many inquiries for the attraction. It will be shown at an early date in the Auditorium, the well-known moving picture house of Los Angeles, which seats 3,000 persons. W. H. Clune of this theater came to San Francisco recently to arrange for the attraction, and Sol Lesser, president and general manager of the exchange, returned to the Southern city with him. This feature will be shown at the Portola theater in San Francisco within a few weeks.

Louis Loeb, formerly assistant manager at the local office of the General Film Company, is no longer connected with the firm in that capacity, his place having been taken by Thomas Malcom, formerly of Los Angeles.

Max L. Newman, representing the California Film Exchange, is back from a trip through the San Joaquin Valley territory. He states that conditions are rapidly improving in that section as immense crops are being harvested and large sums of money placed into circulation.

Since the arrival of Arthur S. Hyman on the Coast to take charge of the San Francisco office of Warner's Features, Inc., a number of important changes have been made. The booking department has been rearranged and a system placed in operation whereby the exchange keeps in close touch with the exhibitor and endeavors to be of the utmost assistance. Three new men have been placed upon the road, and business has shown a great increase during the past month.

George Breck, of the supply house bearing his name, and member of the Vitaslide Company, made a business trip to Portland, Ore., this week.

Marion H. Kohn, president and general manager of the Globe Film Exchange, Inc., will start for New York shortly on a business trip and will be absent for apout three weeks.

Sol Lesser, president and general manager of the Golden Gate Film Exchange, Inc., will also start for New York shortly to attend to business matters.

In addition to being an experienced exhibitor, Ben Michaels is earning an enviable reputation as a director. While enjoying an outing this week with notable residents of the North Beach section he presided over the making of a farce comedy named "The Perils of Paul Rosa," the camera work being done by members of the National Film Producing Company, 111 Turk street. Some prominent waterfront characters of San Francisco appear in the picture.

A new moving picture theater is being erected at San Paplo avenue and Twenty-seventh street, Oakland, Cal., by J. W. Jespersen and A. C. Dippo and will be opened on July 27th. The house will seat 400 persons.

The Pastime Theater at Sisson, Cal., is now being conducted by Arens & Morgan.

The airdome recently opened at Weed, Cal., was wrecked recently by a severe thunderstorm and was placed out of commission for several days.

A splendid theater building is being erected at San Jose, Cal., adjoining the Market, and will be ready for occupancy within a short time. The house will seat about 1,000 on the ground floor and about 400 in the balcony. The owner, Mr. Beatty, has not decided whether it will be leased or whether he will operate it himself.

Bailey & Son, of Corning, Cal., have purchased

Calendar of Licensed Releases

Current Releases

MONDAY, JUNE 29, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—The Honor of the Law (Special—Two parts—Drama)
EDISON—The Revengeful Servant Girl (Seventh of the "Wood B. Wedd" Series) (Comedy)
KALEM—The Flaw In the Alibi (Special—Two parts—Drama)
PATHE—Visit to Paris (Travel)
—Rapids and Water Falls of New Zealand (Scenic)
SELIG—The Leopard's Foundling (Special—Two parts Drama)
—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 35 (News)
VITAGRAPH—The Gang (Drama)

TUESDAY, JUNE 30, 1914.

CELIO—The Bondage of Evil (Spec.—Two parts—Dr.)
EDISON—The Mystery of the Fadeless Tints (Eighth of the "Chronicles of Cleek" Series) (Drama)
ESSANAY—The Daring Young Person (Com.-Dr.)
KALEM—The Wire Chief's Reward (Drama)
LUBIN—The Walko Sisters (Comedy)
MELIES—One Suit of Clothes (Comedy)
PATHE—A French Village in Senegal, West Africa (Travel)
—Venomous Serpents (Zoological)
SELIG—Hearts of Men (Drama)
VITAGRAPH—The Poor Folks' Boy (Special—Two parts—Drama)

WEDNESDAY, JULY 1, 1914.

EDISON—Back to the Simple Life (Comedy)
ESSANAY—The Fable of "The Good Fairy" (Comedy)
KALEM—The Fatal Portrait (Special—Two parts—Drama)
LUBIN—The Living Fear (Special—Two parts—Drama)
MELIES—The Monk's Sacrifice (Drama)
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly, No. 43, 1914 (News)
SELIG—The Empty Sleeve (Drama)
VITAGRAPH—The Circus and the Boy (Comedy)

THURSDAY, JULY 2, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—The Goat (Comedy)
—The Firemen's Social (Comedy)
ESSANAY—Sophie Gets Stung (Comedy)
LUBIN—The Shadow of Tragedy (Special—Two parts—Drama)
MELIES—Womanly Curiosity (Comedy)
—The Prescription (Special—Two parts—Dr.)
SELIG—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 36 (News)
VITAGRAPH—Two Stepchildren (Drama)

FRIDAY, JULY 3, 1914.

EDISON—The Shattered Tree (Special—Two parts—Drama)
ESSANAY—Trinkets of Tragedy (Special—Two parts—Drama)
KALEM—Fleeing from the Fleas (Comedy)
—Trooping the Colors (Topical)
LUBIN—The Doom of Duty (Drama)
SELIG—Making Good with Her Family (Comedy)
—Doc Yak Wishes (Comedy)
VITAGRAPH—A Train of Incidents (Comedy)

SATURDAY, JULY 4, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—The Cracksman's Gratitude (Drama)
EDISON—Molly, the Drummer Boy (Drama)
ESSANAY—Broncho Billy's Punishment (Drama)
KALEM—The Political Boss (Drama)
LUBIN—It's a Shame (Comedy)
—The Kidnapped Bride (Comedy)
MELIES—Hidden Death (Special—Two parts—Drama)
SELIG—The Little Hobo (Drama)
VITAGRAPH—The Toll (Special—Two parts—Drama)

Advance Releases

MONDAY, July 6, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—Eva the Cigarette Girl (Comedy)
EDISON—Her Spanish Cousins (Comedy)
KALEM—The Weakling (Third of the Alice Joyce Series—Special—Two parts—Drama)
PATHE—The Heart and the Circulation of the Blood (Biology)
—Modes of Travel in Japan (Manners and Customs)
SELIG—Reporter Jimmie Intervenes (Special—Two parts—Drama)
SELIG—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 37 (News)
VITAGRAPH—The False and the True (Drama)

TUESDAY, July 7, 1914.

CINES—Heirloom (Special—Two parts—Drama)
EDISON—Face to Face (Seventh of "The Man who Disappeared" Series—Drama)
ESSANAY—A Night with a Million (Comedy-Drama)
KALEM—Kaintucky Bill (Drama)
LUBIN—Fooling Fanny's Father (Comedy)
—While Auntie Bounced (Comedy)
MELIES—(Title not yet announced)
PATHE—A Tiger Hunt (Indo-China—Scenic)
—The Ice and Snow (Drama)
SELIG—Algie's Sister (Comedy)
VITAGRAPH—The Moonstone of Fez (Special—Two parts—Drama)

WEDNESDAY, July 8, 1914.

EDISON—Andy Has a Toothache (Eighth of the "Andy" Series—Comedy)
ESSANAY—A Boarding House Scramble (Comedy)
KALEM—A String of Pearls (Special—Two parts—Drama)
LUBIN—The Incompetent (Special—Two parts—Drama)
MELIES—(Title not yet announced)
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly No. 44, 1914 (News)
SELIG—Caryl of the Mountains (Drama)
VITAGRAPH—Doctor Smith's Baby (Drama)

THURSDAY, July 9, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—A Romance of Pueblo (Comedy-Drama)
ESSANAY—Slippery Jim, Diplomat (Comedy)
LUBIN—The Debt (Special—Two parts—Drama)
MELIES—(Title not yet announced)
SELIG—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 38 (News)
VITAGRAPH—Prosecution (Drama)

FRIDAY, July 10, 1914.

EDISON—In the Shadow of Disgrace (Special—Two parts—Drama)
ESSANAY—Night Hawks (Special—Two parts—Drama)
KALEM—Rube the Interloper (Comedy)
—In Old England (Scenic)
LUBIN—The Tribunal of Conscience (Drama)
SELIG—Did She Cure Him (Comedy)
VITAGRAPH—The Vases of Hymen (Drama)

SATURDAY, July 11, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—Primitive Model (Drama)
EDISON—Dolly at the Helm (Eleventh of "The Active Life of Dolly of the Dailies"—Drama)
ESSANAY—Broncho Billy and the Sheriff (Drama)
KALEM—Lame Dog's Treachery (Drama)
LUBIN—How He Lost his Trousers (Comedy)
—Mandy's Chicken Dinner (Comedy)
MELIES—(Title not yet announced)
SELIG—His Fight (Drama)
VITAGRAPH—Lillian's Dilemma (Special—Two parts—Drama)

INEXPENSIVE AND ATTRACTIVE!
Beautiful and durable, ornamental as well as useful. POSTER FRAMES. Write for illustrations and special prices.
AMERICAN SLIDE & POSTER CO., First National Bank Bldg., Chicago

Klaw & Erlanger

PRESENTING

Well-Known Plays in MOTION PICTURES

PRODUCED IN

BIOGRAPH

STUDIOS

ANNOUNCE

WOMAN AGAINST WOMAN

IN THREE PARTS

A Portrayal of Woman's Inhumanity to Woman

Now Your Program Headliners

THE FATAL WEDDING
IN THREE PARTS

STRONGHEART
IN THREE PARTS

CLASSMATES
IN FOUR PARTS

LORD CHUMLEY
IN FOUR PARTS

THE BILLIONAIRE
IN THREE PARTS

SEVEN DAYS
IN THREE PARTS

BOOKED THROUGH GENERAL FILM COMPANY EXCLUSIVELY

Special photographs and two styles of one and three sheet posters and three styles of eight sheet posters available

Calendar of Independent Releases

Universal Film Mfg. Co.

SUNDAY, June 28, 1914.

ECLAIR—Prince Willy (Comedy)
—Nutty and His Father (Comedy)
FRONTIER—On the Verge (Drama)
REX—Lost by a Hair (Comedy)

MONDAY, June 29, 1914.

IMP—Adventures of a Girl Reporter (Two parts—Drama)
STERLING—It's a Boy (Juvenile-Comedy)
VICTOR—A Twentieth Century Pirate (Comedy-Drama)

TUESDAY, June 30, 1914.

CRYSTAL—The Girl in Pants (Comedy)
—Her New Hat (Comedy)
GOLD SEAL—Lucille Love, the Girl of Mystery (Series No. 12—Two parts—Drama)
UNIVERSAL IKE—Universal Ike, Jr., and the Vampire (Comedy)

WEDNESDAY, July 1, 1914.

ECLAIR—Snow Drift (Two parts—Drama)
JOKER—Bess, the Detectress; or, Tick, Tick, Tick (Comedy)
NESTOR—The Lost Arrow (Drama)
UNIVERSAL—Animated Weekly, No. 121 (News)

THURSDAY, July 2, 1914.

IMP—The One Best Bet (Comedy)
REX—The House Discordant (Two parts—Drama)
STERLING—The Crash (Comedy)

FRIDAY, July 3, 1914.

NESTOR—Those College Days (Comedy)
POWERS—Pearl of the Sea (Drama)
VICTOR—(Title Not Yet Announced).

SATURDAY, July 4, 1914.

"101" BISON—The Hopes of Blind Alley (Three parts—Drama)
JOKER—Captain Kid's Priceless Treasure (Comedy)

SUNDAY, July 5, 1914.

ECLAIR—The Greatest of These (Drama)
FRONTIER—The Broken Barriers (Drama)
REX—On the Rio Grande (Western—Drama)

MONDAY, July 6, 1914.

IMP—The Lady of the Island (Two parts—Drama)
STERLING—Billy's Vacation (Comedy)
VICTOR—At Mexico's Mercy (Western—Drama)

TUESDAY, July 7, 1914.

CRYSTAL—Nearly a Stepmother (Comedy)
GOLD SEAL—Lucille Love, the Girl of Mystery, Series No. 13)
UNIVERSAL IKE—Me, Him and I (Comedy)

WEDNESDAY, July 8, 1914.

ECLAIR—Duty (Two parts—Drama)
JOKER—Bess the Detectress, or, The Dog Watch (Comedy)
NESTOR—A Rranch Romance (Western—Drama)
UNIVERSAL—Animated Weekly No. 122 (News)

THURSDAY, July 9, 1914.

IMP—The Old Rag Doll (Drama)
REX—When Fate Disposes (Two parts—Drama)
STERLING—Snookee's Flirtation (Comedy)

FRIDAY, July 10. 1914.

NESTOR—The Great Universal Mystery (Comedy)
POWERS—Passing the Love of Women (Drama)
VICTOR—A Beggar Prince of India (Three parts—Drama)

SATURDAY, July 11, 1914.

"101" BISON—Prowlers of the Wild (Two parts—Drama)
JOKER—Love, Roses and Trousers (Comedy)

Mutual Film Corporation

SUNDAY, June 28, 1914.

KOMIC—The Wild Girl (Comedy)
MAJESTIC—The Tavern of Tragedy (Two parts—Drama)
THANHOUSER—The Widow's Mite (Comedy)

MONDAY, June 29, 1914.

AMERICAN—The Little House in the Valley (Two parts—Drama)
KEYSTONE—Caught in Tights (Comedy)
RELIANCE—Our Mutual Girl, No. 24 (News)

TUESDAY, June 30, 1914.

BEAUTY—Via the Fire Escape (Drama)
MAJESTIC—Suffragette Battle in Nuttyville (Comedy)
THANHOUSER—The Harlow Handicap (Two parts—Drama)

WEDNESDAY, July 1, 1914.

AMERICAN—Nature's Touch (Drama)
BRONCHO—Shorty Gets Into Trouble (Two parts—Comedy)
RELIANCE—Izzy, the Detective (Drama)

THURSDAY, July 2, 1914.

DOMINO—His Hour of Manhood (Two parts—Drama)
KEYSTONE—(No release this day)
MUTUAL WEEKLY—Number 79 (News)

FRIDAY, July 3, 1914.

AMERICAN—Mein Leiber Katrina Catches a Convict (Comedy)
KAY-BEE—The Heart of a Crook (Two parts—Drama)
PRINCESS—The Decoy (Drama)

SATURDAY, July 4, 1914.

KEYSTONE—(Title Not Yet Announced).
RELIANCE—The Weaker Strain (Two parts—Drama)
ROYAL—Did She Run (Comedy)

SUNDAY, July 5, 1914.

KOMIC—"Bill," No. 1 (Comedy)
MAJESTIC—The Angel of Contention (Two parts—Drama)
THANHOUSER—The Cooked Goose (Comedy)

MONDAY, July 6, 1914.

AMERICAN—Cameo of the Yellowstone (Two parts—Drama)
KEYSTONE—(Title not yet announced)
RELIANCE—Our Mutual Girl, No. 25 (News)

TUESDAY, July 7, 1914.

BEAUTY—The Other Train (Drama)
MAJESTIC—The Only Clue (Drama)
THANHOUSER—Bevorah (Two parts—Drama)

WEDNESDAY, July 8, 1914.

AMERICAN—Feast and Famine (Drama)
BRONCHO—The Final Reckoning (Two parts—Drama)
RELIANCE—How Izzy was Saved (Comedy)

THURSDAY, July 9, 1914.

DOMINO—The Curse of Humanity (Two Parts—Drama)
KEYSTONE—(Title not yet announced)
MUTUAL WEEKLY—Number 79 (News)

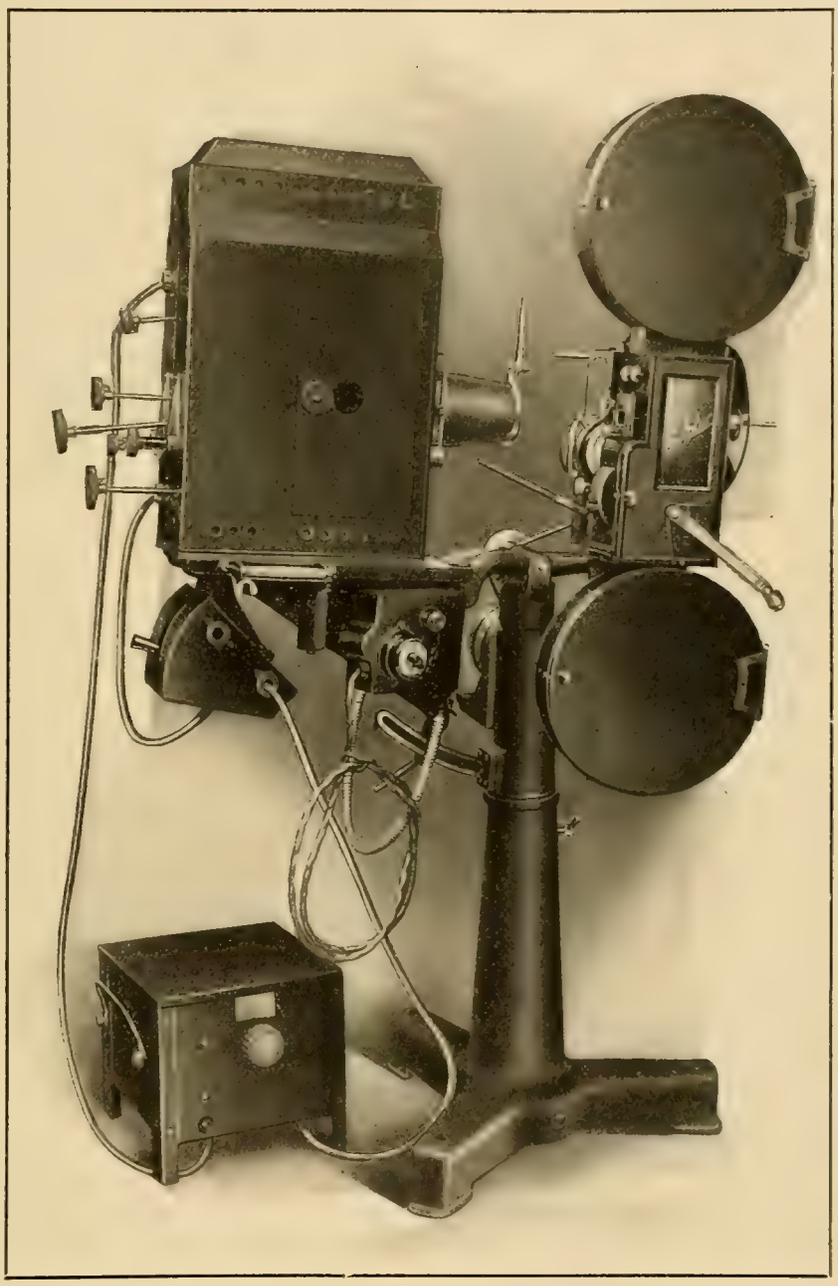
FRIDAY, July 10, 1914.

KAY-BEE—The Feud of Beaver Creek (Two parts—Drama)
PRINCESS—The Girl of the Seasons (Comedy)

SATURDAY, July 11, 1914.

KEYSTONE—(Title not yet announced)
RELIANCE—Blue Pete's Escape (Two Parts—Drama)
ROYAL—Mistakes Will Happen (Comedy)

Simplex



A Good Remedy for Bad Business

MADE AND GUARANTEED BY

THE PRECISION MACHINE CO. INC.

317 East 34th: St··· New York

Write today for Catalogue A.

the Perrington moving picture house at Turlock.

D. D. Heagerty has purchased the moving picture house conducted at Maricopa, Cal., by Mr. Spencer. He was the original owner of the theater.

The Olympia Theater at Taft, Cal., has been sold and is now being conducted by Glen McCartney as the Photoplay Theater.

Sadie Clarkfield, chief film inspector of the California Film Exchange, Inc., San Francisco, is to be married shortly. The management is hopeful that her services will not be lost to them, as she is an expert in her line of work.

The Star Theater at Fruitvale, Cal., is to be opened at an early date.

The Arrowhead Film Corporation has been incorporated at San Diego, Cal., with a capital stock of $100,000, the incorporators being Elmer H. Young, W. T. Pearle, Frank W. Young and E. L. Johnson.

Articles of incorporation of the Nash Motion Picture Company have been filed at Los Angeles by T. S. Nash, J. I. Pittman, O. Breitkretuz, I. O. Levy, and F. Browning.

The Sacramento Movie Weekly has been launched at Sacramento, Cal., the journal containing the programs for the week in five of the leading moving picture houses and information of interest to the general public concerning moving pictures.

L. E. Cheneweth, of San Francisco, has again called the attention of the State Board of Education to the value of moving pictures in the public schools and recommends that moving picture apparatus be placed in every school building.

The Majestic Theater at Tulare, Cal., has been closed for the summer and an airdome has been opened at Tulare and K streets.

Cottle Bros., Tulare, Cal., are considering remodeling a large brick building owned by them and fitting it up as a moving picture house.

Numerous signed petitions have been received by the City Council, of Dinuba, Cal., asking that the question of Sunday closing of business houses and places of amusement be submitted to the people. A drastic Sunday closing ordinance was recently passed, but this will be held in abeyance until an election is held.

The Episcopal Church of Modesto, Cal., has established what is termed a "Friday Popular," consisting of a motion picture program every Friday afternoon and evening in which various religious subjects are shown. The experiment has been tried for three weeks with great success.

The Empire Theater at Fresno, Cal., has closed for the summer months and the Plaza airdome at Fresno and K streets has been opened under the management of Frank Hesse. Vaudeville and moving pictures constitute the program, admission prices being 10, 20 and 30 cents.

The Princess Theater, Kern and J streets, Fresno, Cal., recently showed pictures taken on Raisin Day by the Fresno Film Company.

A splendid new school house is being erected at San Jose, Cal., which is being equipped with a first class operating room for moving pictures. Alexander Sheriffs, superintendent of schools of that city, is a firm believer in the value of moving pictures in the public schools and is working to have equipment placed in every school in San Jose, this to be in charge of an experienced operator. Five of the churches in the Garden City have moving picture equipment, making this quite a center for educational work of this character.

The A. H. M. Feature Film Manufacturing Company has been incorporated at Los Angeles, Cal., by C. B. Siugh, M. V. Sanchez and J. de la Cruz.

The Navajo Film Company has been incorporated at Los Angeles, Cal., with a capital stock of $100,000 by M. N. Vassar, P. H. Kent, G. L. Bissell and L. D. Pepin.

The plan of the Eclectic Film Company to install moving picture apparatus in the basement of the store occupied by it at 67 Turk street, San Francisco, is still being held up through the action of the building inspectors, but the matter is to be settled shortly by J. P. Horgan, chief inspector, who will make a personal examination of the premises. It is difficult to see why this permit should be held up when it is intended that the projection machine shall be placed in a fireproof booth, especially in view of the fact that pictures are being shown at many other places where the machine is operated in an open room.

CHURCH.

MISSOURI.

A COLD wave emerged from the West and struck Kansas City with sufficient force to cause a sudden drop in the temperature. Business, which had been languishing somewhat under an exceptionally hot June, took a brace and showed the effects of more comfortable weather conditions. The improvement was particularly noticeable in motion picture houses in the retail business district, which were the first to feel both the decrease resulting from hot evenings and the change.

The Royal Theater, the latest addition to moving picture theaters of Kansas City, formally opened to the public on June 10. The house is under the management of Frank L. Newman. The opening was extensively advertised and local residents turned out en masse to look over the latest home of the silent drama. Lasky's "Master Mind" was the initial offering. About 3,500 persons witnessed the feature on the opening day, while that mark was surpassed on the following Sunday. A number of unusual conveniences are offered by the Royal, which has been referred to as the Strand, of Kansas City.

The Missouri State Labor Department has expressed itself on the question of child labor in theatrical performances, and has ordered managers of vaudeville to cease the use of children. Most of the small time vaudeville acts have utilized the services of one or more youngsters in the past. Fortunately, the number of exhibitors who are using vaudeville in conjunction with motion pictures is decreasing, and the profession will not suffer any particular inconveniences from the edict.

The Gem Theater at Marceline, Mo., has been closed for the summer.

R. W. Smith has opened an airdome at Billings, Mo., and will give daily performances during the summer.

The Lyric Theater, at Thirteenth street and the L road, opened in Kansas City, Kan., recently. The house is under the management of C. Rosenberg.

A new ventilating system, whereby the air is cooled by passing over ice, has been installed in the Gem Theater at Clinton, Mo.

Competition among some of the Kansas towns has resulted in a decrease in admission fees. The Princess Theater, of Salina, Kan., has reduced its price to five cents.

B. L. Murrell, owner of the Willis Theater at Nevada, Mo., has purchased the Photoplay, and will operate both theaters in the future. L. H. Haggard, the former owner of the Photoplay, probably will re-enter the business in Kansas City.

The Missouri State Board of Prison Inspectors has followed the lead of similar bodies in other states and will give a weekly performance of moving pictures at the state penitentiary at Jefferson City. Only prisoners whose conduct has been exemplary during the week will be allowed to attend the performances, which will take place every Sunday afternoon.

Joseph Stiebel, manager of the Apollo Theater Company, has leased the Iliad airdome at Thirty-first street and Terrost avenue and will operate both houses. Only one will be used at a time. In inclement weather, Mr. Stiebel will use the closed theater, while the airdome will be opened on other evenings. The Apollo will undergo alterations during the summer, and will be reopened in the fall.

An interesting story of conditions at Marshall, Mo., was given by E. L. Harris, who was a recent visitor to Kansas City. Mr. Harris, who is the owner of the Cozy Theater, recently closed a long siege against a series of prayer meetings. The exhibitor asserted that while he had no grudge against the meetings, it was impossible to close down, and he concluded his only course was to continue the show. Unusually good attractions drew well and business held up as usual. Mr. Harris has closed the Cozy for the summer and will shortly reopen with an airdome. The Orpheum Theater at Marshall also has closed.

The Blache Feature Service has opened quarters in Kansas City, its offices being at 823 Lloyd building. A Chapman, formerly in business at Des Moines, Ia., is in charge of the new exchange.

Paul A. Englers, manager of the Kansas City branch of the Mutual Film Corporation, is contemplating hiring a guard to protect his photographs of stars of the moving picture world. Mr. Englers' collection of photos of celebrities is perhaps one of the finest in the Southwest. All are framed and every exhibitor who enters the Mutual quarters casts greedy eyes on them. Inasmuch as the pictures are neither for sale nor hire, Mr. Englers probably will have to secure some one whose sole duty is to protect the collection from members of the profession.

Tentative plans for the remodeling of the Willis Wood Theater in Kansas City call for an expenditure of about $35,000. The old house is to be thoroughly remodeled and will open early in the fall in its new role. It will have the distinction of having the largest seating capacity of any moving picture theater in Kansas City.

MURRAY.

ST. LOUIS.

THE Mutual Film Corporation moved into its new building at 1311-1313 Pine street on Friday, June 12. The move from the old quarters in the Benoist building, five blocks away, was made at night so that the regular business of the exchange would not be interrupted. The new building is of the very latest design and construction, with a miniature theater for the exhibition of films, roomy film vaults of steel and concrete, with self-locking doors, a large and well lighted poster and booking department, and offices of the newest and most approved pattern. The entire building is equipped for rapid and efficient handling of films, and for the comfort of the employees.

The Business Men's League has sent a hundred reels of the films made to advertise the city to as many different towns in St. Louis trade territory.

Russell T. Edwards, moving picture editor of the St. Louis Times, has finished a feature that will be of great interest to baseball enthusiasts. The reel is entitled "Inside Stuff About Baseball," and will show a number of things about the popular game that onlookers from the grandstand and bleachers never get a chance to see. For instance, Branch Rickey, manager of the St. Louis Browns, is shown pitching a ball to catcher Hamilton, first a close up is made of Hamilton as he signals for the kind of ball he wants, then the scene flashes back to the ball as it leaves Rickey's hands, then back to Hamilton when the catch is made. The reel is a thousand feet and will be released as a feature.

The Columbia Airdome, 6240 Columbia avenue, is now open for the summer. H. M. Romberg, manager of the Columbia, has tastefully decorated his airdome with moon vines and other climbing plants. The place seats twelve hundred. The Columbia is the only airdome in Clifton Heights, an exclusive residence section of the city.

The Washington Theater, 4961 Delmar avenue, has closed for the summer months, and the unfinished run of the Kathlyn series can be seen at the Maple airdome at Kings Highway and Page Boulevard.

The New Delmar Theater Company has opened its airdome at 4936 Delmar avenue, which adjoins the theater. The audience is received in the lobby of the theater, tickets sold through the regular box office, and they then pass through into the garden, where girl ushers show them to their seats. C. E. Maberry, manager, has had long experience as a dramatic manager, and is making a success of the Delmar.

A company headed by James Fortee is planning to build a new theater at 1422 Market street. The theater will be first class throughout, seat twelve hundred, and will have a roof garden on top of the building. It will cost $25,000 and will be ready to open on August 15. Hays, Barnett & Hays are the architects.

George Lloyd, who is managing the Pageant and Masque pictures that have been running at the Columbia Theater, says that they have taken so well that he will continue to show them indefinitely. The films are colored and run two hours.

Jos. Bloom, who has been in charge of the World Feature Corporation in the Navarre building, has been ordered to go to Minneapolis to take charge of the exchange there, temporarily. Mr. Bloom is to be general supervisor over all the World Feature offices, and will visit and remain a few weeks at all the offices in the United States and Canada.

Henry R. Slocum has been made assistant manager of the General Film Company's branch at 3610 Olive street. Mr. Slocum is one of the pioneers in the film industry in this state. He has literally grown up with the business. He was one of the original employees of the old O. T. Crawford exchange when it was first organized nine years ago, and later he put in several years as traveling representative of the Swanson-Crawford Company. Nearly two years ago he became associated with the General Film Co. as local and traveling solicitor, which place he held until his elevation to his present post.

The St. Louis Times has originated a novel scheme whereby readers of the paper are asked to nominate prominent citizens for a "Whos who" department. If the candidate named is of sufficient importance, a moving picture is made of him, or her, as the case may be, and added to the Times Movie Review, a current events film that is being shown at thirty theaters in this city.

F. Wehrenberg, manager of the Best Theater, 3360 South Jefferson avenue, has bought the state rights for Missouri and Illinois for "The Shelling of Vera Cruz," and is renting it out to exhibitors throughout the city.

The executive committee of the Nation's Birthday Association are planning to make moving pictures take the place of fireworks as a means of entertainment for the Fourth of July celebrations that will be held in the many parks throughout the city.

Manager Edward Schwartz, of the St. Charles Theater, 6th and St. Charles streets, has life sized photographs of Rosemary Theby, the Lubin star, and Gilbert M. Anderson, head of the Essanay's Western company, framed and displayed in the lobby of the theater. It is claimed that these players are both natives of St. Louis, and were recently features in a full page of the Sunday Globe-Democrat.

GIEBLER.

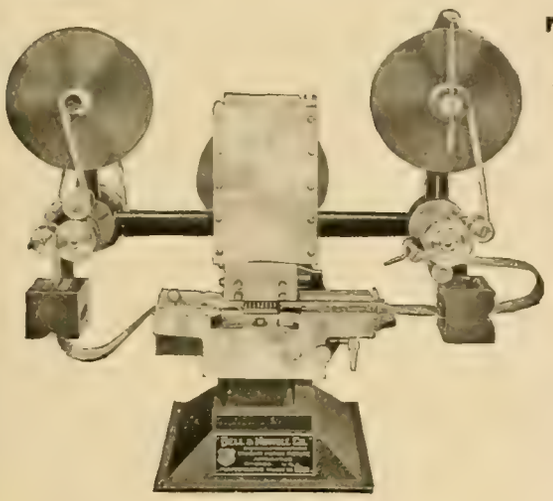
OHIO

WITH but one clue, a blue hat picked up near the scene of the crime, police and detectives of Cleveland, Ohio, have been unable to trace the murderers of Leo C. Goldman, manager of the Monarch Theater, E. 105th street and Euclid avenue. The Motion Picture Exhibitors' League is offering a reward of $1,000 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderers. Goldman was accosted by two men just after he had closed his theater. He had $500 in his pockets. Eye witnesses, who were about a block away, declare they saw the two men knock Goldman to the sidewalk and one then drew a revolver. As several men rushed to Goldman's assistance the thug with the revolver shot Goldman. They fled with but a small amount of money and no trace of them has been found. The murder of Goldman is the second of the kind in Cleveland in a year. The first was that of Sam Chagrin, another theater manager, who was returning home from his theater with the day's receipts.

At the convention of chiefs of police at Grand Rapids, Mich., Chief W. S. Rowe, of Cleveland,

(Continued on page 94)

BELL & HOWELL COMPANY



THE B. & H. FILM PERFORATOR

ESTABLISHED NEW AND HIGHER STANDARDS OF ACCURACY—UNIFORMITY — SPEED — DURABILITY

HAS NO EQUAL IN DESIGN WORKMANSHIP—PERFORMANCE

Used and indorsed by the following:

American Film Manufacturing Company, (3); Centaur Film Company, (3); Crystal Film Company, (2); Essanay Film Manufacturing Company, (10); Eastman Kodak Company, (9); Thos. A. Edison Company, (8); Eclair Film Company, (3); Evans Film Manufacturing Company, (2); Horsley Laboratories, (3); Kalem Company, (7); Kinemacolor Company of America, (2); G. Melies, (2); New York Motion Picture Company, (5); Pathé Freres, (2); Reliance Motion Picture Company, (2); Solax Company, (2); Thanhouser Film Corporation, (2); Universal Film Manufacturing Company, (9); Willat Film Manufacturing Company, (12); and many others.

ORDERS ARE NOW BEING RECEIVED FOR PERFORATORS FOR JULY AND AUGUST DELIVERY. WRITE FOR PRICES AND FURTHER INFORMATION

THE B. & H. STANDARD PROFESSIONAL CINEMATOGRAPH CAMERA

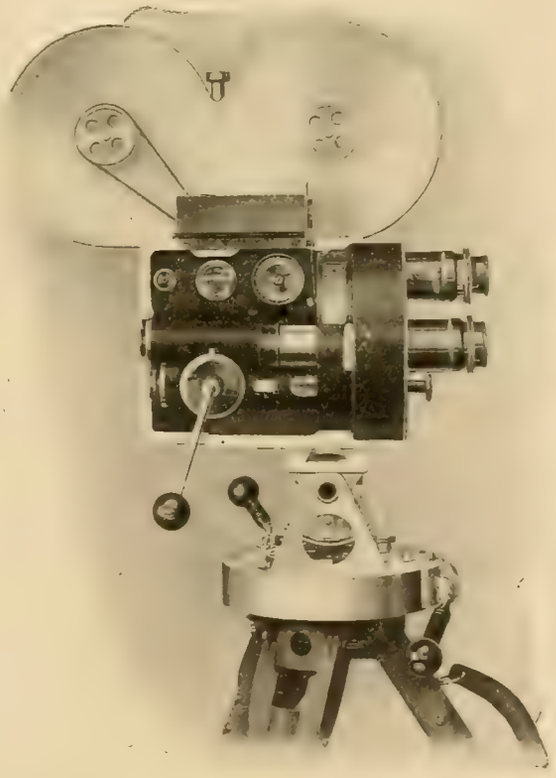
Pronounced by expert camera men the world's best means of taking motion pictures.

DISTINCTIVE FEATURES

Frame and magazines—aluminum. Revolving turret carrying lenses. Focused outside camera frame without waste of film or time. Automatic "dissolve" by means of shutter. Film movement mechanism free from tension. No rubbing contact with film. Self-adjusting ball bearings throughout. Simple. Compact. Efficient.

HOBART BOSWORTH WRITES: "We have made over 200,000 feet of negative with my Bell-Howell in all altitudes, humidities and thermometric changes * * * without a foot of static or any form of camera retake. * * * Can that record be approached? I doubt it."

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CORP. SAYS: "We do not propose to use any other than Bell & Howell cameras because they are film savers; they dissolve on the shutter and not on the lens; they show less static than any other machine we have used, and because of the indestructible way in which they are built."



Orders now being received for cameras for August and September shipment. All cameras in last lot were sold before any were completed. Half those now in work already sold.

The Bell & Howell Company

1803 Larchmont Avenue : Chicago, Illinois

CORRESPONDENCE.

(Continued from page 89)

made an address and offered a resolution urging film producers to discontinue the practice of caricaturing policemen. The chief went to Grand Rapids armed with a letter from Safety Director A. A. Benesch, of Cleveland, declaring that disrespect for the law and authority is engendered by such pictures. "There is no doubt that the attitude of the general public toward the police must be influenced more or less by such pictures," said the director. "There are comedy films which show long pursuits, and in these pursuits someone will stumble over a sleeping policeman or some other incident will occur that is bound to have an effect far from helpful to those who are striving to maintain law and order. The policeman should be presented as he is in real life. This constant ridicule cannot increase the respect of the public toward the men who are appointed to enforce the law. I believe the moving picture producers should be requested to drop this style of comedy."

The contract has been let to the Potters Lumber Company to build a brick and hollow tile reinforced concrete theater for J. C. Walsh at East Liverpool.

Bids have been taken by Architect E. S. Matheny, of Crooksville, for the erection of a $15,000 brick fireproof constructed theater and office building for E. Jarvis and S. C. Ruble at Logan.

Architects Knox & Elliott, Cleveland, have completed plans for a brick and reinforced concrete fireproof theater and arcade on West Federal street, Youngstown, for the Youngstown Hippodrome Company.

Architects Wachter, Beelman & Scrieber, of Toledo, have completed plans for a two-story theater building to be constructed at Fostoria for F. C. Crocker at a cost of $17,000.

Bids were taken by Architect W. S. Ferguson for a brick, steel and reinforced concrete theater building for Mrs. J. T. Trippit, Cleveland. The structure will cost $20,000.

The Oakley Building and Theater Company has been incorporated for business at Cincinnati with $60,000 capital. J. R. Carrington, J. V. Poole, George E. Rockwell, C. T. Ryan and Frank Cook are the incorporators.

The Madison Square Theater Company has been chartered for $30,000 to do business in Cleveland with Fred A. Desberg, E. P. Strong, I. Grohs, M. J. Roan and F. A. Cooke as incorporators. Plans have been drawn by A. M. Gordon, owner of property at East 70th Street and Hough Avenue, Cleveland, for a big theater building and work on the structure will be commenced, it is believed, before the summer is over.

The Fireproof Theater Company is building a motion picture house at 1112-14 Prospect Avenue, Cleveland. The plans for the structure were drawn by George F. Hammond, architect, and provide for brick and frame construction. The theater will cost $8,000.

Joseph Grossman opened the new Standard Theater at Prospect Avenue and East Eighth Street, Cleveland, on June 12th. The house is pretty from an architectural standpoint and its interior decorations are pleasing. Dedication was observed in showing Klaw & Erlanger productions. It will be Mr. Grossman's policy to present the big, commanding films of the day and he has booked several Klaw & Erlanger and George Kleine features.

Charles Settos, Ralph Kretzer, Fred Hill, Phil Chakeras and H. A. Brenner have incorporated the Public Amusement Company at Springfield for $4,000.

The Grotto Theater, at Akron, has changed its policy in that it is booking big features in addition to a regular program of motion pictures.

The Columbia Film Company showed enterprise in having a picture of Cleveland's million-dollar lumber yards fire on the screen in less than twenty-four hours from the time the big blaze started. The film was added to the regular bill at several Cleveland houses and booked for a number of others.

Motion pictures will be shown in conjunction with lectures at the City Hall and in various Cleveland theaters in the Cleveland Welfare Council's fight on infant mortality.

RARIDAN.

IN THE NORTHWEST.

THE fight which began over the Sunday theater closing ordinance in Wenatchee, Wash., is likely to continue. The Washington State Supreme Court has declared that vote trading by legislative officials is a misfeasance, or malfeasance, in office and declined to interfere in the recall proceedings brought against E. T. Pybus and C. R. Zener, two Wenatchee councilmen who were charged with trading votes on the Sunday show measure.

The Pacific Brewing Company (William Virges, secretary and treasurer) has announced that it will build a $60,000 theater at Ninth and D Streets in Tacoma, Wash. C. L. Richards and Benjamin J. Weeks will take a fifteen-year lease on the house.

A moving picture theater has been opened at Iroquois, S. D., by C. H. Karns.

C. H. Henderson is reported to be contemplating opening a moving picture show at Alden, Minn.

The new Liberty moving picture theater being erected on First Avenue, between Pike and Pine Streets in Seattle, Wash., for Jensen & Von Herberg, will have the distinction of having the largest steel girder ever made on the Pacific Coast. This girder, eighty-four feet long, weighing 70,000 pounds, is to prevent any supporting posts under the balcony, which will prevent a clear view of the pictures. It was delivered to the builders wrong end forward and it took two days to haul it to a place where it could be turned around and headed right. Instead of a stairway to the balcony, there will be an inclined walk. A big Hope-Jones unit orchestra will be a feature. It is hoped to open the Liberty, which will be operated in conjunction with the Alhambra, about August 20.

Harry Waldron has closed his photoplay theater at Valley City, N. D.

The Opera House at Bertha, Minn., has been sold to R. A. Prettyman, of Hewitt, Minn.

Louis B. Christ, of Portland, Ore., is making a number of improvements in the Weinhard Theater at Dayton, Wash., which he recently leased. The interior is being redecorated.

Motion pictures of Spokane girls in a beauty contest were an attraction at the Spokane Theater in Spokane, Wash.

Frank Gilbreath is now manager of the Topic Theater at Mandan, N. D., succeeding Wuerst & Foster.

The Commercial Club, of Eveleth, Minn., has a project for taking over the ruins of the Carpenter Building as a site for a municipal theater.

A moving picture show has been opened in Kimpel's Hall in Bingham, Mont., by T. C. Penny and W. L. Dynes.

Frank D. Bligh has sold the Bligh Theater in Albany, Ore., to Laflar & Guthrie, owners of the Globe Theater of Salem, Ore. Bligh has returned to Salem where he has amusement interests.

Regular moving picture theaters have a hard time in the summer months and should be protected, declared Alderman J. M. Kistler, of Minneapolis, Minn., in a talk before the license committee of the city council in which he opposed granting a license for a moving picture and vaudeville airdome at Tenth Street and Hawthorne Avenue to W. M. Duke.

A moving picture theater in the Giles Building at Waterville, Minn., has been contemplated by Thos. J. Slechta.

Robert F. Keene, who has sold his moving picture theater at Whitman, Mass., has been at Dickinson, N. D., and may locate in that vicinity.

George W. Trone has sold his moving picture theater at Belgrade, Minn., to Frank Brookins.

After nearly a year, the Saturday matinees for school children at the Ansonia Theater in Butte, Mont., inaugurated by Manager Levy, have been pronounced a success.

The loan of enough Sioux Indians from the Cheyenne Reservation to take part in a picture, "The Last Buffalo Hunt," was asked in a letter to Congressman Burke by the Commercial Club, of Pierre, S. D. The Scotty Phillip herd of buffaloes is to be sold, and John E. Sloat and Carson Williams, of Pierre, have been promoting a feature film. It was hoped to stage the picture July 4, as an attraction to the celebration.

A new moving picture theater will be erected at Tyler, Minn., by Westlund Brothers.

Motion pictures were the principal attraction on Commercial Club night at the chautauqua at Fargo, N. D.

Manager C. T. Smithers, of the Idle Hour Theater at Aberdeen, S. D., has installed a new Wurlitzer orchestra.

Secretary Frank A. Hazelbaker, of the Montana Exposition Commission, is endeavoring to interest the heads of commercial clubs of that state in having films made of their communities to be shown at the exposition in San Francisco.

The Grand Theater at Starbuck, Minn., has been opened.

A box of candy with each five-cent admission at the children's Saturday matinee was the stunt of the Lyric Theater at Aberdeen, S. D.

Manager J. J. Novak, of the moving picture theater at Foley, Minn., has made a number of improvements to his house which was closed during the making of the changes.

F. G. Schied has sold the Majestic Theater at Belle Plaine, Minn., to Gus Greugerm, John Mangan and Joseph Pango, of St. Paul and Minneapolis.

Addresses by Mayor Nye and other city officials of Minneapolis, Minn., were scheduled for the opening of John C. Karlson's new Garrick Photoplay Theater at Nicollet Avenue and Twenty-sixth Street. The house, erected at a cost of $30,000, will seat 600.

"We will have no mechanical music in the new Apollo," said Manager A. C. Anderson, of Tacoma, Wash. "We expect to attract people to our house with the music." A new Kimball organ has been installed at the new house at 1131 South C Street, which was expected to open some time in June.

Moving pictures of the manufacture of hog cholera serum at the University of Idaho under the supervision of Dr. W. L. Caryle and a staff of experts were taken by J. W. Jones, of the state immigration department, and will be used to show how the state protects its live stock raisers.

Tuesday and Friday afternons have been set aside at the state penitentiary at Stillwater, Minn., for moving picture shows for the convicts.

St. Paul, Minn., business men carried motion pictures with them to entertain the cities in which they visited on their trade boosting tour, starting June 15.

Moving picture theaters of St. James, Minn., are reported to have been engaging in a price and program war.

The Savoy Theater at Duluth, Minn., has discontinued vaudeville and will run feature pictures for several months.

The Mission Theater in Seattle, Wash., has in its advertising a trade character — an angular little Mission Movie Man — the illustration bringing out the three M's. He talks in a sort of editorial fashion about the pictures at the Mission, "Where the Famous Players Play."

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

IN THE SOUTHWEST.

FOR summing up in a few words all the ideas of cool comfort in a moving picture theater, the Cozy at Shawnee, Okla., has hit upon the phrase, the "front porch" theater. After the impression is made the suggestion of low temperatures is verified by a description of the cooling devices employed.

F. R. Marcell, of Maryville, Mo., has secured a camera and will film events in Northwest Missouri and Southwestern Iowa. He plans to put soon a semi-industrial reel called "Maryville Has It."

Tickets for "Washington at Valley Forge" at the benefit given by the Lona Theater in Sedalia, Mo., for the Daughters of the American Revolution sold so well that the picture was given a two days' booking instead of one as first planned.

Arthur E. Ford has proposed to the City Council at Wichita, Kan., to give free moving picture shows every night in Riverside Park. He will finance the enterprise by securing an advertising slide clientele.

Fred Burge and Will F. Stewart have sold their interest in the Healey No. 2 moving picture theater on West Exchange Avenue in North Fort Worth, Tex., to R. A. Healey, who has many other motion picture interests.

A new theater, costing $50,000, will be erected in Okmulgee, Okla., by O. D. Riggs, of Kansas City. Seats for the opening performance will be sold at a premium.

C. O. Akard has sold a half interest in the Gem Theater at Snyder, Okla., to C. A. Roberts. The house is running pictures and vaudeville.

Moving pictures of the Oklahoma State Interscholastic Track meet are being shown by the Oklahoma Panama Exposition Commission to help the fund for the state building. The local interest in the athletic events caused capacity business at the Empress in Oklahoma City.

William Taylor has purchased the Lyric Theater at Collinsville, Okla., from Robert Foster.

Manager Jorganson, of the Crystal Theater, at Dallas, Texas, has booked a number of the pictures produced at the Daltex Studios in Dallas. Francis Cole and Archie Bishop are featured in many of the W. R. Stewart and R. W. Teegarden, of Oklahoma City, Okla., have purchased the Broadway Theater at Anadarko, Okla.

The Cape Girardeau Amusement Company, of Cape Girardeau, Mo., has been incorporated with a capital stock of $2,000. The incorporators are W. D. Block and T. P. Fristoe.

The Grand Theater at Bartlesville, Okla., has been leased by J. E. Feeny, of Franklin County, Pa., who remodeled the place before opening for business.

Every purchaser of a ticket at either the Jewel or the Crystal Theater in Beaumont, Tex., is given a coupon worth five cents at the other house.

Six pastors in Dallas, Tex., are now using slides in connection with their church work, a step toward the adoption of moving pictures for religious services.

Multiple reel features have gone into the Royal Theater at San Antonio, Tex. The Royal had turned away business on "The Siege and Fall of the Alamo," the atendance being due to the fact that the picture was made in that vicinity.

Regulations for operating booths and exits are provided in an ordinance passed by the city council at Livinston, Tex.

Manager Lloyd Ware had capacity business at the re-opening of the Varsity Theater in Lawrence, Kan. Ware purchased the Varsity from Lee Cohn and substituted pictures for vaudeville.

A lease on the building at 118 East Douglas Avenue, in Wichita, Kan., for use as a moving picture theater, has been taken. W. A. Vincent, of the Western Lithograph Company, was active in the transactions.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

MICHIGAN.

MICHIGAN'S citizen-soldiers will have moving pictures in camp at Grayling this summer, following the generally adopted idea that militiamen are better off when they are amused in this manner than when they are chasing off to the cities. Major M. J. Phillips, of Owosso, who has been selected for similar work for the guardsmen in the Dominion of Canada, will pick out a number of films likely to prove attractive to the Michigan soldiers.

Hillier & Jorgenson, of Grand Rapids, have installed projecting apparatus in Highland Park, a summer resort, and will give shows this summer to the resorters. This firm was awarded the contract for taking moving pictures of the launching of the new United States light vessel at Muskegon.

One hundred and fifty charges of the juvenile court at Grand Rapids were entertained at a free

I have bought the exclusive rights for the states of

Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin and Illinois

except Cook Co.

for Selig's wonderful production of
REX BEACH'S MASTERPIECE

The Spoilers

Featuring William Farnum and Kathlyn Williams

The greatest picture ever produced in America. Broke all records at the Strand Theatre, New York, and the Studebaker Theatre, Chicago.

Elaborate lithographs, heralds, lobby displays and other advertising matter

WRITE OR WIRE FOR BOOKINGS

F. O. NIELSEN

720 Schiller Building CHICAGO, ILL.

moving picture show by Manager George Spaeth, of the Majestic Theater.

The pictures of the dedication of the Michigan Building at the Panama Exposition were shown at the Wenonah Theater in Bay City.

Every Monday night has been made prize night at the Lyric Theater in Marquette.

Manager Kerredge, of the Kerredge Theater, of Calumet, has discontinued feature pictures at his house and closed it until some time in September.

Charnas & Sons, of Altoona, Pa., have purchased the Orpheum Theater at Benton Harbor.

A. L. Sawyer, of Menominee, chairman of the upper peninsula committee of the Michigan State Historical Society, has begun a research for all characteristics, songs and legends of the Indians to be preserved by the use of moving pictures and phonograph records.

The Commercial Club, of Jackson, sent its boosting film to Lansing where it was viewed by the Chamber of Commerce. The Paragon Feature Film Company, of Omaha, Neb., has been trying to interest the Lansing business men in a similar project. Among the novel methods for increasing the advertising value of the Jackson film were a guessing contest on the length of the film, a ticket-selling contest by the Boy Scouts of the city and sending free tickets to the theater to all delegates to a convention, which was held in the city.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

IOWA

THE Elite Moving Picture Theater which was operated on West Second Street, between Harrison and Ripley Streets, in Davenport, by Olaf Klintz has been closed.

G. W. Curtis is remodeling a building in Redfield for use as a moving picture theater.

L. C. Burwell has purchased an interest in the lease on the opera house at Marathon from Elmer Floren and Enoch Richeson.

Edward Neiman has sold his moving picture theater at Wellman.

The Photoplay Theater at Manson is being enlarged to a length of one hundred feet and otherwise improved.

P. J. Grace & Sons, who operate a moving picture show in Adair, have succeeded I. J. Swarzman in the management of the Adair Opera House.

The Palace Theater at Cedar Rapids has installed a $7,000 pipe organ.

C. W. Dibbern has purchased the Crystal Theater at 328 Harrison Street, in Davenport, from John F. Scherer.

It is reported the site in Sioux City, known as the Grain Exchange Building corner, is being sought for theater purposes.

R. Butterfield has opened his airdome moving picture show at Aurelia.

Exhibitors in Des Moines have agreed to raise their admission prices from five to ten cents for all persons over twelve years of age and to increase the shows from three to four reels.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

WISCONSIN.

THE Society for the Suppression of Commercialized Vice ought to favor the bill for the federal censorship of moving pictures, according to Senator Howard Teasdale, chairman of the Wisconsin State Vice Commission. He told the meeting in Milwaukee little more than that there were some bad films and that there was no necessity for a board of censorship in every state. Lieutenant Governor Barrat O'Hara, of Illinois, a vice crusader who is a great endorser of anything likely to use his endorsement in print, was at a Milwaukee meeting and saw "Traffic in Souls" at the Davidson Theater.

Fred M. Rehfuss has sold the Star Theater on Main Street in La Crosse to William L. Johnson.

Thomas Saxe, of the Orpheum Theater in Milwaukee, was host to the members of the Rotary Club and their wives and members of the city club at a presentation of "Les Miserables."

Most of the houses in Madison had special war pictures on their programs when the Grand Army of the Republic held its annual state encampment in that city.

H. Zilihart has sold the fixtures of the Pastime Theater at Delavan to George Kulke, of Bowers.

The Majestic Theater at Milwaukee has gone into pictures at ten cents for a while. R. J. Wakeman with the Majestic orchestra and a pipe organ are furnishing the music. Attendance has been stimulated by an arrangement with the Free Press which has been publishing free admission tickets in its columns.

Seide & Bruhn have purchased the Badger Theater at Neillsville from Thomas Gosling.

B. F. Newman and his wife, formerly Myra Dietz, recently were at Chippewa Falls, arranging for a series of pictures of that city and its beauties. Newman was also at Rice Lake for the Dietz-Newman Motion Picture Company, where he took a number of pictures to be used by the commercial club for advertising purposes.

The Park Theater on Mitchell Street in Milwaukee will be remodeled at a cost of $8,000.

That the multiple-reel features are self-advertising is evidenced by the demand in Two Rivers for "The Lion and the Mouse." The Opera House found a return engagement profitable.

The Bijou Theater at Appleton used a nine-piece orchestra in connection with its presentation of "Ben Bolt."

Mrs. Harry Jones is now manager of the Park Theater at Waukesha, retaining the management of the Colonial as well.

Otto L. Meister, who secured a site on Third Street, in Milwaukee, for the erection of a new moving picture and business building, will call the theater the White House. It will seat 2,000 persons. Meister is proprietor of the Vaudette Theater at 183 Third Street.

The Crystal Theater in Milwaukee gave up vaudeville for a week to show the labor picture, "From Dusk to Dawn." The Milwaukee Leader, a paper popular with the laboring classes, shared in the profit.

Manager Frion will give shows at the Auditorium in River Falls put four nights a week during the summer months.

Moving pictures are not a detriment to the public. The judges said so after the question was debated by the Lincoln Dramatic Club in Milwaukee.

Manager George Fischer, of the Alhambra Theater, of Milwaukee, planned to visit Boston, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Buffalo and Detroit before returning from the convention at New York, seeking new ideas in the photoplay business. James Cochrane, manager of the Bell, North Avenue and Fourteenth Street, announced before his departure that he was planning a new $125,000 picture house on Third Street.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

DETROIT

THE National Theater announces that it will discontinue vaudeville, starting with June 29, and instead will run feature films. The National is at present a ten-cent house, but with the feature-film policy the prices are to be raised to 10 and 15 cents for the boxes. C. R. Hagedorn, manager, states that if feature pictures prove a paying proposition during the warm-weather months, it is very likely that the directors will decide to continue them indefinitely. Monroe Avenue, which is Detroit's "Gay White Way," has four legitimate ten-cent vaudeville houses, so that Mr. Hagedorn feels that there should be room for at least one high-class theater devoted exclusively to photoplays.

A hold-over of the Indianapolis Speedway race pictures, and the George Kleine feature film, "Antony and Cleopatra," was the bill at the Washington Theater the week ending June 21. While this house had not done a big business for the first two weeks of pictures, Manager Faetkenhauer says every day is showing improvement and that within another month he expects to build up a steady patronage. Matinee prices are ten cents, with 25 cents in the evening.

The Esperanto Film Manufacturing Company has been organized in Detroit by Will Levington Comfort, the author; W. H. Pipp, formerly reporter on the Detroit News, and several others. The capital stock is $75,000, all of which is subscribed and paid in in cash. Mr. Comfort has written the scenario for the first production, and he will also assist in the making of it. Norman Hackett, well-known Detroit actor, will enact the leading male role. Work on the first picture is to start almost immediately. Most all of the outdoor scenes will be in and around Detroit. Belle Isle Park will be used considerably for that purpose.

When George H. Wiley was in Detroit to attend the fourth annual convention of the Michigan State Exhibitors a point he brought out very forcibly in his talks was that members should read the Moving Picture World or any other trade journal for which they may be subscribing. "Every exhibitor should read his trade journal. Not only to take the paper and look through it hurriedly, but to read it and read it carefully," he said. "Every issue is worth five dollars to him if he will just take advantage of the opportunity. I don't know of a single thing that has uplifted the moving picture business as much as the trade journal, and such an excellent trade paper as the Moving Picture World is deserving of your very best support. The advertisements are just as instructive as the editorial pages. They keep you in touch with what the various film companies are turning out both in this country and in Europe. It will enable you to discuss the moving picture business intelligently."

President Jeup, of the Detroit Motion Picture Exhibitors' League believes the day is coming when there will be fewer theaters. "The time is not far distant when the dirty, unsanitary and not-properly managed moving picture theater will be out of business. The man who is 'on to his job' and who knows the business from every angle will survive, but not the inexperienced chap who simply uses the moving picture business as a side line. The industry is getting down to a business basis and men of finance and brains are gradually getting in control. For that reason it should behoove every theater owner to be constantly in touch with every detail of the business and to watch his house thoroughly and cater to the likes and dislikes of his patrons."

F. R. Rumley, proprietor of the Warren Theater, is recovering from an attack of pneumonia which has confined him to his home for the past month.

Morris Sazk is having a theater built at 341 Dix Avenue, which will seat 400 persons. It will be devoted to photoplays.

George McArthur, Jr., who is the operator at the Bell Theater, 396 Dix Avenue, owned by his father, George McArthur, Sr., was married on July 10. He will be away a total of four weeks on his honeymoon.

Plans have been completed for a $25,000 theater to be erected on Woodward Avenue, near Pasadena Avenue, in Detroit's North district called "Highland Park." The building, which is to be owned by Mrs. Mabel Wills, will have two large stores on the ground floor, beside the theater. It will be two stories high and built of brick. According to the plans, it will be one of the finest playhouses in the northern suburbs.

A feature of the "open house" at the Cass Technical High School recently was moving pictures illustrating the processes of manufacture in some of Detroit's leading plants. These pictures are used in the regular course of instruction. The purpose of the "open house" was to show the public what the students could do in the way of woodturning, printing, etc.

Assistant Attorney General F. C. Martindale appeared before the Michigan Supreme Court on June 15 and argued in favor of the constitutionality of the motion picture theater law passed at the last session of the state legislature. The Jewell Theater in Detroit appealed the case, claiming the law under which the state fire marshal is given supervision over the motion picture houses to be unconstitutional. The Jewell was an upstairs theater and was forced to close a few months ago by order from the State Fire Marshal.

Phil Gleichman, vice-president of the World Film Corporation, who has for some years been residing in Detroit, gave up his residence June 13 and moved east. Mr. Gleichman and his family have taken a summer home at Far Rockaway, and during the winter will live in New York City.

In connection with the announcement that the Ford Motor Company, of Detroit, will put on the market (free to motion picture theaters) a Ford-Detroit Weekly, A. B. Jewett, who is manager of the motion picture department, states: "It is not Mr. Ford's idea to feature the Ford plant in the pictures. Of course, that industry, as one of the most widely known in the city, has a legitimate news value in the films, but we hope rather to make the films a record of significant events in Detroit."

It is reported that A. J. Gillingham, of the General Film Company, and proprietor of the Empire, has closed negotiations with David Stott for the ground in the rear of the Arcadia Dance Hall at Woodward Avenue and Stimson Place, with a view toward the erection of a motion picture house. With Mr. Gillingham will be associated several eastern men. C. Howard Crane is preparing plans for the new structure which will cost $75,000 and will seat 1,500, with special attention to ventilation and roomy seating capacity. When seen by the Detroit correspondent of the Moving Picture World, Mr. Gillingham would not confirm the above story, but yet did not deny that negotiations were under way and that in all likelihood would materialize.

Owing to the popularity of the pictures, "Neptune's Daughter" was held over for a fifth week, starting with June 28.

SMITH.

MONTREAL

BUD LENNON, formerly Ontario manager for the Famous Players Company, has been in charge of the Canadian Film Company pending a change of management.

The management of the Tivoli has installed a new Peerless Projector. Mr. English, the manager, announces that he has pooked "The Million Dollar Mystery."

The Montreal office of the Famous Players Film Service of Canada is now situated at 198 St. Catherine Street, West. The new quarters are fully equipped in the most modern way for the convenience and comfort of their customers. Harry A. Kaufman, formerly of the Canadian Film Exchange, is in charge.

Louis B. Hecht is now managing the Scala, pending the decision of the courts. Sometime ago, the Mark-Brock Amusement Company, of Buffalo, sublet the Scala to Lawande Bros. Owing to the nonpayment of rent, Mr. Hecht had the building seized during the Messrs. Lawande's absence. On their return, Mr. Hecht was brutally and cowardly assaulted by the two brothers, and had it not been for the timely interference of the authorities, Mr. Hecht would have been sorely at a disadvantage to protect himself. One of the Lawandes harangued the audience, and there would have been a riot but for the coolness and fairness of Mr. Hecht who explained everything to his patrons, and thus poured oil on the troubled waters. At the time of writing, the case has not been finished, but the popular opinion is that the Mark-Brock people will win out.

Peter Gravel has just been appointed by the Provincial government to the position of inspector of moving picture theaters for the province of Quebec. The office, which is a new one, was created at the last session of the Legislature, when the act governing the board of moving picture censors was considerably strengthened. For the first year the board had no means of enforcing its decisions, and had to rely on the police who only occasionally visited the

Do You Find Your Box Office Receipts
Falling Off During The Hot Weather?
Here Is The Antidote

The Perils of Pauline

Everyone is Talking about The Perils of Pauline.
Did you see the big article in the July Cosmopolitan about Miss Pearl White?

Nary a Kick from a single exhibitor—
Many a Boost from Public and Exhibitor—
A Wonderful Record.

Pauline Pulls People—She's A Gold Mine

Here is Another Big Theatre Filler

Giants-White Sox Tour of the World

No Exhibitor is really alive to his opportunities who passes up the chance to book this 6 part feature. We could write pages about it and then not do it justice—There is one thing we are sure of—You will count it one of the Red Letter Days in your career when you book it.

ECLECTIC FEATURE FILM EXCHANGES FOR YOUR USE

ATLANTA Rhodes Bldg.	BOSTON 3 Tremont Row	CHICAGO 5 So. Wabash Ave.	DALLAS Andrews Bldg.	LOS ANGELES 114 E. 7th St.	MINNEAPOLIS 4th & Hennepin Sts.
NEW YORK 115 E. 23rd St.	PITTSBURGH 715 Liberty Ave.	SAN FRANCISCO 67 Turk St.	ST. LOUIS 3210 Locust St.	SYRACUSE 214 E. Fayette St.	CINCINNATI 217 E. 5th St.
CLEVELAND 622 Prospect Av., S.E.	PORTLAND 392 Burnside St.	PHILADELPHIA 1235 Vine St.	WASHINGTON 7th & E Sts., N. W.	NEW ORLEANS 910 Gravier St.
SEATTLE 810 Third Ave.	OMAHA 1312 Farnam St.		DENVER Nassau Bldg.	KANSAS CITY 928 Main St.

THE ECLECTIC FILM COMPANY
110 West 40th Street New York City

"The Cream of American and European Studios"

Feed Your Patrons Eclectic Features

Eclectic Features Make Permanent Pleased Patrons—Increase Box Office Receipts—Make Bigger Profits—Pull People During the Hot Weather—Give Complete Satisfaction.

THE LITTLE WAIF IS ADOPTED

A Pearl of the Punjab

(3 Parts)

A Pathé Made Dramatic Tragedy that will increase your faith in humanity. A tale of faithfulness from a source least expected, but strong and willing to overcome the greatest difficulties to protect and save one in danger. Intense feeling. Daring nerve. Absolute trust. A picture that will send your patrons away thrilling through and through.

THE TRAMP SECURES SOME PROVISIONS

The Tramp

(3 Parts)

A depiction of character all too rare in this day. The convict intent on securing booty. The tramp wanting only a living. Circumstantial evidence that places the life of the innocent one in danger. Kindness personified. Sympathy aroused—and, finally, the thrilling accident that leads up to the identification of the real criminal and his confession clearing the innocent.

Business Dull? Boost It With Eclectic Features

ECLECTIC FEATURE FILM EXCHANGES FOR YOUR USE

ATLANTA Rhodes Bldg.	BOSTON 3 Tremont Row	CHICAGO 5 So. Wabash Ave.	DALLAS Andrews Bldg.	LOS ANGELES 114 E. 7th St.	MINNEAPOLIS 4th & Hennepin Sts.
NEW YORK 115 E. 23rd St.	PITTSBURGH 715 Liberty Ave.	SAN FRANCISCO 67 Turk St.	ST. LOUIS 3210 Locust St.	SYRACUSE 214 E. Fayette St.	CINCINNATI 217 E. 5th St.
CLEVELAND 622 Prospect Av., S. E.	PORTLAND 392 Burnside Ave.	PHILADELPHIA 1235 Vine St.	WASHINGTON 7th and E Sts., N.W.	NEW ORLEANS 910 Gravier St.
SEATTLE 810 Third Ave.	OMAHA 1312 Farnam St.		DENVER Nassau Bldg.	KANSAS CITY 928 Main St.

THE ECLECTIC FILM COMPANY

110 West 40th Street — New York City

"The Cream of American and European Studios"

"The Jungle, the last word in realism."
—Ada Patterson in N. Y. American.

THE FILM OF SENSATIONS

A subject replete with startling situations, vividly depicting the awful scenes which prompted the author's writing of the story which startled the world

THE JUNGLE

in

5 Tremendous Soul-Stirring Acts 5

Featuring the eminent character actor,

George Nash

Former star of "The Gamblers" and "Officer 666,"

And a superior cast of All Star Broadway Favorites, including

Gail Kane and Upton Sinclair

COMING

LEW DOCKSTADER

In a big 5-Act Play of Civil War Days.

"DAN"

By Hal Reid

with

Gail Kane and Lois Meredith

THEN

Ethel Barrymore

IN "THE NIGHTINGALE"

by AUGUSTUS THOMAS

BOOK OF OUR DISTRIBUTORS

ALL-STAR-FEATURE-CORPORATION

HARRY R. RAVER, PRESIDENT

EXECUTIVE OFFICES
220 W. 42nd ST., NEW YORK

AUGUSTUS THOMAS, DIRECTOR GENERAL OF PRODUCTIONS

EXCLUSIVE AGENTS IN PRINCIPAL CITIES OF THE WORLD

theaters. Mr. Gravel's duties will consist of visiting the various theaters and seeing that all pictures shown have been passed.

The moving picture theaters of this city have been giving their aid to the local "Safety First" campaign, by projecting slides on the screen bearing messages to careless school children.

The Montreal Star, the local paper that so successfully ran the "Adventures of Kathlyn" in serial form, has made arrangements to publish "The Million Dollar Mystery." This subject is being extensively advertised locally.

The Imperial has a new stage setting. The general idea is that of a garden adjoining a chateau. An electric fountain is in the center of the stage, and two marble pillars tower on each side of a Radium Gold Fibre Screen. "Goodness Gracious" and "A Million Bid" were shown to large audiences recently. There was appropriate music on the Hope-Jones Unit Orchestra by Prof. MacClymont.

Messrs. Paul Keith and E. F. Albee have decided on a site for their new theater. The new theater, which will seat four thousand and will cover 25,000 sq. ft., will be erected on St. Denis Boulevard, a little above St. Catherine Street. The building is expected to be finished next winter.

The Allfeatures, Limited, with offices in Montreal, Toronto and St. John, N. B., is doing good business. The Montreal representative, James T. Malone, reports that business was never any better. "Hot weather, and the resulting decrease in the attendance at the theaters," he says, "is hardly perceptible."

Mr. Kashin, manager of the London, is putting up some exceptionally fine shows. "Nina of the Theater" and "Samson" were recent features. Mr. Kashin had a special cameraman take views of the local Corpus Christi procession, and pleased his patrons with this topical subject.

Kleine's "Antony and Cleopatra" opened in Montreal at the Francais. Mr. Hooley, the manager, extensively advertised this subject. The music for this subject was very good and appropriate.

G. GALLAGHER.

PITTSBURGH.

AN application has been made to the Governor of Pennsylvania by Louis J. Schick and Phillip Selling, both of Pittsburgh, for a charter to provide for the incorporation of the Fort Pitt Film Company, the object of which will be the manufacture of moving picture machines, films and slides, and all accessories pertaining to the moving picture business.

The leasehold and business of the Olympic Theater at 199 Main street, Greenville, Pa., has been sold by F. E. Henry to F. Rosenberg. Mr. Rosenberg has started a general overhauling of the theater, and many new improvements are under way.

A number of improvements to the Star Theater, of Chambersburg, Pa., are being made. The seats have all been rearranged and besides the other improvements being made throughout the building new plush carpet will be laid in the aisles.

A building permit has been granted G. Gauding to build a two-story building in Boggs avenue, the bottom floor of which will be used for a motion picture theater. This is a much needed project in that section of the city and there is no doubt that it will meet with success. Mr. Gauding will expend $9,500 in the erection of the building.

A most unusual moving picture theater is being constructed at Altoona, Pa. It is to be formed of two large train coaches, and will be so arranged that they can stand side by side, with one roof covering both. The "auditorium" will be used for exhibition purposes at the World's Fair in San Francisco.

Plans have been started for the construction of a motion picture theater and vaudeville house in Republic, Pa., which, when completed, will cost $10,000. The plans will be completed about July 1 when the bids will be entertained.

The Orpheum Theater, of Sharon, Pa., has closed down for the summer. Preparations are being made by Manager Murray for the coming season, and he is on the lookout for the best bookings.

The Victoria Theater at Cambria, Pa., has been purchased by George Panetogas, of Johnstown. This makes the third motion picture house now owned by Mr. Panetogas in that section of the state.

Work has been started on the construction of an addition to the "Theatorium" in Pittsburgh street, Connelsville, Pa. The theater will be remodeled completely, and much new equipment will be installed. The new addition will cost about $6,000 and will be two stories high, 26 by 65 feet.

Another new theater has been built in Johnstown, Pa. The Auditorium which until a short time ago was used as a skating rink, has been remodeled to be used as a motion pitcure theater. The new theater is one of the largest in Johnstown and has a seating capacity of 3,000.

Over twenty-five moving picture men of the Beaver Valley met last week in Monaca, Pa., and formed the Motion Picture Men's Protective Association of Beaver County. The object of the organization, according to members, is to protest against unfair laws made regarding the production of motion pictures and to give the public good, clean photodramas. William A. White, of the Colonial Theater, Beaver Falls, was elected president, and Frank M. Adams, of Monaca, was elected secretary. All meetings will probably be held on Sundays in the Majestic Theater, Rochester, Pa.

Another Clark & Rowland theater will shortly be erected in Pittsburgh. The newest theater of the chain controlled by the big local amusement syndicate will be built at 4763-65 Liberty Avenue, between Mathilda and Edmond Streets, in the Bloomfield district of this city. A deal was closed this week by which Clark & Rowland became the owners of the plot of ground at this location. The plot is 50 by 120 feet and was sold for $20,000. The new theater will comprise the entire first floor of a three-story building, the two upper floors to be used for offices. The house will have a seating capacity of about 800, and will be elaborately decorated and equipped with the latest innovations.

"The Grand" is the name of the new theater opened this week in Butler on the site of the old Lyric. The new theater is owned by an incorporated concern and is managed by J. D. Dunmyer, a former motion picture exhibitor of Butler, but more recently engaged in the show business in Ohio. The new building occupies a front of 24 feet and extends back to Jackson Street. The front is beautifully ornamented in gold and white and makes an imposing appearance. The interior of the building is modern in every respect and has many features possessed by no other picture theater in Butler and by but few in the state. The auditorium is 24 by 140 feet and has a seating capacity of about 500.

The Majestic motion picture theater of Elwood City, Pa., has been closed and extensive repairs are being made. The entrance steps have been taken away and the entire front wall will be removed. The new entrance will be constructed of marble. The operating booth will be enlarged and a new machine and an electric motor will be installed. The changes will give the theater an abundance of light and air, and will add much to the appearance of the house.

Work has been started on the remodeling of the piano pit at the Luna Theater in Brackenridge, Pa., for the accommodation of the big, new Seeburg organ that is to be installed. The new instrument is a piano and organ combined, with an orchestral attachment that imitates twenty-four other instruments. It is run by a motor and can be played either by roll or by hand. Manager Bowers has plans for several other new features that will increase the attractiveness of the Luna.

A handsome electric sign is being erected on the William Penn Theater, Federal and Isapella Streets, this city. The sign is about 15 feet long and when completed the blazing lights will outline the name of the house in such a way as to be discernible for many squares.

John E. Orr has sold the lease and fixtures of the Orpheum Theater at Butler, Pa., to Dominic Pagenell, who has taken possession and will conduct the motion picture theater hereafter.

MANLEY.

PHILADELPHIA.

THE builders are estimating on plans for an addition to the Stenton Avenue picture theater for Walter R. Flaherty, 407 Drexel Building, this city. The annex will consist of a one-story terra cotta and brick structure, 42 by 92 feet. The cost will be in the neighborhood of $4,000.

The exhibitors who opened their theaters on Sunday, June 7th, were brought into court and charged with the violation of the city law. Fines of $10 each were imposed.

An application will be made to the Governor of the State of Pennsylvania on July 7th, for a charter for the Walton Amusement Company, the object of which is to acquire, sell and maintain moving picture houses and other amusement enterprises. The incorporators are Robert B. Ayres, Robert McCoy and John P. Burwell.

The following rules and regulations of the Bureau of Health and Sanitation, Harrisburg, Pa., were passed by the city council and signed by His Honor, the Mayor.

1.—Each theater, vaudeville, moving picture or musical theater, tightly closed, must established a proper system of ventilation and heating.

2.—The floor in moving picture houses giving a continuous performance and having a frequently changing performance must not be covered with carpet or other dust and dirt gathering material; also in such houses plush or velvet covered seats, or other unnecessary draperies are prohibited.

3.—A careful, thorough fumigation of the entire house at least once a month, or more frequently, if deemed necessary by the health officer, must be made during the play season. Violation of these rules would be subject to a fine of $100 or thirty days in jail.

James A. Tanner, former assistant district attorney, at Washington, D. C., has been appointed to inspect the Philadelphia moving picture houses by the Pennsylvania Board of Censors. It is expected that he will begin his new mission within the immediate near future.

The new cash register that has been but recently placed upon the market by the National Cash Register Company is being experimented with by A. & L. Sabloskey, in conjunction with their various moving picture theaters in and about Norristown, Pa. The new register, which is the most complete of its kind, prints tickets, dates and totals them, and gives the receipts therefrom. Four of these machines will be used in that borough, two in Reading, Pa., and two in this city. If they prove as satisfactory as is expected many more will be installed in the other moving picture houses controlled by this and other firms. Several of the local moving picture theater proprietors are watching the outcome of the test of this new device with great interest.

Members of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association visited the Commercial Museum, Thirty-fourth and Spruce Streets, this city, on a tour of inspection of the thousands of interesting exhibits of moving picture films. The methods of manufacturing various commodities were compared and discussed as they were thrown upon the screen.

Settlement has been made by Green & Altman for the Susquehanna Theater, 1710 Susquehanna Avenue, this city, which was recently purchased by them, through Comly & Maugle, real estate brokers, from the Susquehanna Amusement Company. Conveyance was made subject to a mortgage of $40,000.

Point Breeze Park, one of the largest amusement centers of this city, has added a novel attraction to increase their drawing powers in the building of a moving picture house which is to be free. The number of reels to be run has not yet been decided upon, but it is expected to be in the neighborhood of six.

Samuel Harris, manager, of the World Film Corporation, 1316 Vine Street, has severed his connection with that company. G. J. Biehoff is temporarily taking charge.

A. P. Lombard, of the American Film Exchange, 211 North Thirteenth Street, is considering a new location. Arrangements are being made as quick as possible to have the company in perfect readiness about July 1st. Mr. Lombard has just returned from a business trip to Lebanon, Reading and Pottstown, and reports business in that section of the state as being favorable.

The employees of the Victor Talking Machine Company, numbering 6,000, were formed in the streets and park in front of the company's plant for the benefit of motion picture men who kept their cameras focused on the crowd and a concert that was playing on a stage erected for the Victor orchestra. The motion picture men have been very busy making pictures of the Victor plant.

CONGDON.

INDIANA.

WORK has been started on the new Switon Theater at North Vernon, one of the Switon Amusement Company chain.

M. Weiss of the Park Theater, West Tenth Street, ndianapolis, has booked a week of Blache features. He heard Manager Trulock, of the Jefferson Airdome, say that he had been doing a "mighty good" business with them, and fell for the boost.

The Princess Theater, Vincennes, is giving away spoons each Wednesday night to the women holding two coupons. Envelopes containing coupons are handed at the door. Those containing two get silver spoons. A dozen spoons are distributed each Wednesday night.

The Grand at Terre Haute has two fans on a large cake of ice. The fans oscillate, and the cool breezes and the ice are getting the crowds. It's a great system and has made some talk that is helping to fill the Grand regularly. Ice is 30 cents a hundred in Terre Haute. Figure it out, the expense is something enormous—90 cents a day.

The Indiana Motion Picture Exhibitors' League is giving thought to a war chest to employ lobbyists for the coming legislature. There is a censorship idea sure to spring up from many portions of the state, and other things are certain to be offered by the busy little legislators. As Dr. J. M. Rhodes, president of the Indiana League, explains it, "there are a lot of fellows who want everybody to know how moral they are."

Connersville women, members of the Woman's Franchise League, have obtained permission of the picture show owners of the town to put on some benefit performances. The ballot chasers are after campaign funds.

Walter Tally has opened an airdome in Osgood which seats 500.

Mayor Christen, Decatur, served notice on the exhibitors that when houses were closed Saturday night they must stay closed until Monday. The Rex was opened three Sundays before the order went into effect, but none since.

The American, South Bend, is to be renamed by a popular contest. The theater is being overhauled and the entrance remodeled.

During a field day meet at Princeton, some seats collapsed. The motion picture man on the job had the collapser in focus and has been making money with the exhibit in the southern part of the state.

The American Theater, nc., Terra Hause, has been incorporated, with $50,000 capital stock, to operate theaters, with Maurice Less, L. Less and S. Uffenheimer as directors.

Tony Berger will move his theater to Union Hall, which he has bought.

Neither hot nor cold weather seems to effect business in the Alhambra, the Cozy or the Airdome theaters in Shelbyville. Each of these houses, it is estimated, are being visited by 5,000 persons a week.

James Alcorn has opened a new house in Greensburg, in which he is offering three reels for five cents. The house is built according to Alcorn's own planning, and he says it is all it should be in the way of seating arrangement and projecting apparatus.

Stockholders of the Blinn Theater, Frankfort, met and re-elected Jesse C. Blinn, president; T. C. Paris, vice-president; W. S. Hines, secretary-treasurer; and directors M. S. Hufford, J. B. Meifeld and H. F. Campbell.

Lyman Howe and his pictures drew crowds at the Lyric, Indianapolis.

W. H. Gappinger, manager of the Princess, Kendallville, has installed a Simplex of the latest type. Manager Gappinger is showing a specialty act with each show.

WILLIAM.

The Midnight Marriage
IN FOUR PARTS
Adapted From Walter Howard's Big Lyceum Theater Success in London. A Splendid Study of Court Life in the European Capitals
THE DEVIL'S EYE—A Forceful Feature Full of Miraculous Stunts 4 Parts
THE SECRET SEVEN—Weirdest of Wonderful Detective Tales 4 Parts
AN ALPINE TRAGEDY—A Human Drama of Peasant and Prince 5 Parts
THE DARE DEVIL DETECTIVE—Hayes, Marvel of the Movies 4 Parts
BROTHER AGAINST BROTHER—A Russian Play Made in Russia 4 Parts
APEX FILM COMPANY
145 WEST 45th STREET, NEW YORK P. P. CRAFT, MANAGER
EUROPEAN OFFICE—H. WINIK, 35 LITTLE NEWPORT ST., LONDON
HUGH HOFFMAN

LICENSED FILM STORIES

EDISON.

HER SPANISH COUSINS (July 6).—Hepzipah Perkins was very wealthy indeed, but in spite of all her money, she continued to live in the old New England farmhouse that had belonged to her family for generations. However, when Hepzibah received a letter from some distant cousins in Spain, inviting her to pay them a visit for the purpose of discussing a business venture in which the Spanish cousins were interested, Hepzibah decided that the novelty of a trip in foreign parts would offset the incidental expense. So, in spite of the fact that the day was Friday, the 13th, and hence inauspicious, she packed up her things and sailed on the first boat.

The fact that her stateroom and steamer chair both bore the number "13" did not materially improve Hepzibah's peace of mind. But she soon forgot her superstitious fears in the excitement of having a man pay her marked attention. The man was Gustave Schmidt, a retired merchant. When the ship arrived at its destination, Hepzibah was separated from her newly-found beau. But the next morning, she saw him walking along the road that led past her cousins' estate. Hepzibah beckoned to him and Schmidt promptly came in to see her. He was promptly ejected by the scandalized guards, in spite of Hepzibah's infuriated protests.

Hepzibah's cousins were very nice to her indeed. In spite of their gorgeous surroundings, they were in desperate need of money, and Hepzibah seemed to them whatever the Spanish equivalent may be for "an easy mark." But Hepzibah was so much interested in Gustave, that she had not time to listen to her affectionate cousins. Learning from a smuggled note that he was leaving by the next steamer, she escaped from her cousins, and rode to the port on a bicycle, only to find that the steamer had just left. That evening, when her cousins attempted to persuade her to sign a certain paper of innocent appearance, Hepzibah told them exactly what she thought of them. She sailed for home soon afterwards, wondering if she would ever see Schmidt again. She did. He called on her the day she got home, and proposed on the spot.

FACE TO FACE (Seventh Story of "The Man Who Disappeared"—July 7).—In the weeks following Perriton's dashing and successful attempt to stop Earle's train, the four partners, Perriton, Jenny, Henry Horn and Earle, despite the determined opposition of President Carter, managed to land the court house contract which meant so much to them. A newspaper paragraph, seen by chance, changed their comfortable feeling of assurance to vivid alarm. The paragraph was to the effect, that, owing to the determined efforts of President Carter, a bill was on the verge of passing the legislature, restricting all state contracts to residents of the state. Since none of the four was a resident of the state in which the court house was to be built, the bill, if passed, would be certain to ruin them.

Knowing Carter's methods, Perriton decided that the best means of blocking the passage of the bill was to bring forward proof that Carter had been guilty of bribery. In order to keep a close watch over their enemy, an office was hired in the building next to the Construction Company, with windows directly opposite those of Carter's office. By means of a high-powered telescope, the partners obtained ample optical proof that Carter had bought the services of several members of the legislature. They discovered also that an actual transfer of money was to take place that very night in Carter's country house.

Unknown to Perriton, Carter had a hold over Mary Wales, the girl Perriton loved. A document forged by Nelson, her scapegrace of a brother, had fallen into Carter's possession. Fearing to take the money to the corrupt legislators himself, he decided to use the girl and her brother as catspaws. So, using the forged mortgage as an incentive, he directed Mary and her brother to take the money and deliver it to the proper parties at his country house. So it happened that when Perriton burst into the house ahead of Earle and the detectives, he was confronted face to face by the girl for whose sake he had given up position and reputation. There was no time for love. Turning, he slammed the door in the faces of his friends, and then lowered Mary to the ground through the window. He had the proofs of bribery, and it was absolutely impossible that the detectives should find Mary in any such situation!

ANDY HAS A TOOTHACHE (Eighth Adventure of Andy—July 8).—In spite of the fact that he was utterly contemptuous of any of the terrors which might beset the lives of a highwayman or a pirate chief, Andy discovered that some of the ordinary ills of every-day existence were occasionally somewhat hard to bear. When he awoke one morning with a burning pain in his tooth, his actions did not at all suit the stern warlike soul he prided himself upon having. Aroused by her son's lamentations, Andy's mother attempted a variety of remedies for the aching tooth. But neither hot nor cold water seemed of any avail, for when she attempted to remove the tooth by means of a string tied to a doorknob or a flatiron, Andy broke from her kindly grasp and fled.

When he arrived at the messenger office, the toothache returned with redoubled vigor. The superintendent sent Andy to a dentist. Andy decided on reaching the dentist's office that there really wasn't much the matter with his tooth—certainly not enough to bother the dentist about. His decision was strengthened by the terrible things which seemed to be happening to a large man who preceded Andy in the dentist's chair. Andy would have left immediately if it has not been for a lady and a little girl in the dentist's office. The fact that the little girl did not seem a bit alarmed goaded Andy's lagging spirit to the pitch of heroism. He assumed an attitude of haughty indifference, entirely in conflict with his real emotions.

The haughty attitude served to get Andy as far as the dentist's chair, but one look at the fearful array of instruments completely changed his attitude. He jumped down from the chair and fled like a deer, back to the telegraph office. The other messenger boys teased him and scoffed at his cowardice. Goaded beyond endurance, Andy challenged Lanky to combat. In the fight which followed, Lanky hit Andy in the jaw but Andy was so busy that he never noticed his tooth had come out till the fight was ended.

IN THE SHADOW OF DISGRACE (Special—Two Parts—July 10).—It was no wonder that Seth loved Norah. She was by all odds the prettiest girl in the country, and she had such a sympathetic, pretty way about her that every man she met became her willing slave on the spot. But Norah did not love Seth. Young Arthur Maitland, the new squire, had told Norah that she was the only girl he could ever consider for a moment as a possible mistress of Maitland Hall and Norah, to whom the well-bred, clean-cut young man was an utter revelation, fell in readily with his visionary schemes. When Maitland learned that his regiment would be ordered to India in the near future, he married Norah secretly at the little village church, explaining to her that no news of the wedding must come out until he had been able to explain things to his uncle, after the India campaign was finished. Shortly afterwards, Maitland sailed for India, arranging that his letters to Norah should be sent to his groom, and placed in a hollow tree at their old meeting place.

In the months that followed, idle village gossip grew busy with the names of Norah and Maitland. Seth discovered the hiding place of Maitland's letters, and, fearing the worst, abstracted them and kept them from Norah. At last the gossip reached the ears of Norah's family. Unable, because of her promise to Maitland, to answer the outburst of their bitter wrath and half crazed with the fear that Maitland had deserted her, she crept away from home. In the home of some simple, kindly people, who welcomed the desolate woman, Norah's child was born. Shortly after Norah disappeared, a letter arrived from Maitland, which Seth, who was unable to read, took to a friend to be interpreted. The letter announced that Maitland was dying and enclosed his and Norah's marriage certificate. The repentant Seth immediately set out in search of the poor girl. He found her, half insane, in the act of hiding her child in the fields. Seth brought Norah back to her family and showed them the marriage certificate. Under their care, she soon regained her health and strength. A letter arrived from the solicitor, announcing that Norah, as her husband's heiress, was now entitled to the Maitland estate. Norah, draped heavily in black, went sadly up the great road to Maitland Hall to take possession. But her sadness was changed suddenly to ecstatic joy, for waiting at the gate stood Maitland himself, miraculously recovered from his wounds, and filled with wonder that his wife had received no word from him.

DOLLY AT THE HELM (Eleventh of The Active Life of "Dolly of the Dailies"—July 11).—When the city edtor of the Comet burst into the managing editor's office and told him that his child was desperately ill with diphtheria, Malone, the managing editor, naturally told him to take as much time off as he wanted. Malone himself was feeling very badly at the time, and his resolution to take charge personally of the city editor's department was never carried out. Shortly after the city editor had left, Malone fainted at his desk. Dolly Desmond, the Comet's star reporter, found him there when she came into the room. She revived Malone from his stupor and had him taken home. In nine cases out of ten, both Malone and the city editor might well have been absent without any particular disturbance in the ordinary routine of the office. It was four o'clock on an unusually dull summer afternoon. The likelihood of anything happening semed extremely remote.

However, scarcely had Malone been taken away when things started. A terrible excursion boat catastrophe was the first. Right on its heels came the news that a great hotel was burning. In the excited chaos into which the Comet office was plunged, Dolly showed the stuff of which she was made. Her small hand seized the deserted tiller and with the quick incisive decision which was her chief characteristic, she wearied the legs of messenger boys, and kept the telephone wires hot with the dispatching of her swift Napolenic commands. When it was all over, and the day was won, Dolly received a letter from home telling her that her father's bank was on the verge of ruin, largely as a result of the hard feeling which had been stirred up by Dolly's story, "The Perfect Truth" ("The Perfect Truth," released January 31st, 1914). Poor Dolly, at her wits' end, went to Malone for advice. She took the manuscript of "The Perfect Truth" with her. Malone's illness was a blessing in disguise for it gave him a chance to read the story, the first installment of which had had such a disastrous effect. He was amazed by its brilliance of style and theme. In a gush of unwonted enthusiasm he told Dolly that he was willing to publish the story at his own expense as a speculation. So Dolly, with her hopes once again raised, went away with the dim belief growing in her that "The Perfect Truth' might not be so bad a thing for her father as it had at first seemed.

KALEM.

THE WEAKLING (Special—Two Parts—Third of the Alice Joyce Series—July 6).—Nancy, daughter of Judge Berry, devotes her time to the education of the illiterate mountaineers. Litt Largin, whose physical cowardice has won for him the nickname of "The Weakling," is her brightest pupil. Litt's prother Dave falls in love with Nance. The girl despises Dave and is later insulted by him in the presence of Litt, who fears to interfere. Later however Litt rescues Nancy when she struggles to free herself from Dave's embrace. The two brothers engage in a desperate battle. Dave is beaten down. Fearing he has killed his brother, Litt flees. Dave recovers. Nancy traces Litt and persuades her father to send him to college. There, Litt's cowardice again makes him an object of contempt, but he graduates at the head of his class. Nancy and her father attend the commencement exercises. The girl promises to wed Litt. A sneakthief enters the cloakroom of the building. Nancy enters the room just as he is about to escape with his loot. Litt finds her confronting the crook, but his cowardice causes him to run. Filled with contempt, Nancy breaks their engagement.

Litt's father is arrested in a revenue raid. In the fight that followed, the man slays one of the government agents. He is placed on trial on charge of murder. Judge Berry tries the case. Litt overhears Dave and several of the mountaineers planning to shoot up the court and rescue his father. Not wishing to betray his brother, he seeks a means to frustrate the plot. The boy enters the court room during the trial. A move by Dave causes him to spring forward. A shot rings out. Litt falls with the bullet intended for Nancy's father in his own body. When the boy recovers, he finds that his superb heroism has restored Nancy to him.

KAINTUCKY BILL (July 7).—The old sheriff dies. In jest, the mountaineers nominate Kaintucky Bill, the worst moonshiner in the State, for the office. Considering it a huge joke, Kaintucky Bill takes the oath of office. Bill is brought to the realization of his duty when the revenue officials remind him he has sworn to uphold the law. Despite the pleas of his sweetheart Annie, daughter of old Zeb, a member of his gang, Bill decides to break up moonshining. Denouncing him for turning traitor to his friends, Annie hastens to the still. The band laughs at her story, but Kaintucky Bill arrives a few minutes later. Holding up the gang, he sets fire to the still. The moonshiners cower before Kaintucky's pistol. By a clever ruse, Annie disarms the new sheriff. Requesting permission to reach for tobacco concealed in his shirt, Bill shoots the revolver from Annie's hand with a concealed pistol. Bill enters the burning still to get away from the band. While the moonshiners believe the man burned to death, the new sheriff escapes from the opposite side of the still.

One of the band sees Kaintucky Bill return to his office. He sees the sheriff remove his badge of office and resign. The moonshiner hastens to the rendezvous where he reports Kaintucky Bill's actions. The news that her sweetheart has not perished fills Annie with joy. Thirsting for revenge, her father resolves to have his former chief's life. Annie warns Kaintucky Bill of his peril. The man informs her that he intends starting life anew elsewhere and bids her goodbye. Zeb, his rifle raised, aims at his foe's heart. The tears which rise to his sweetheart's eyes tell Bill she still loves him. He seizes her in his arms. Zeb slowly lowers his rifle and turns away.

A STRING OF PEARLS (Special—Two Parts—July 8).—In Batiste, an Italian woman, Haldeman, finds the very type he desires to use in his next picture. Securing the consent of Dominick, Batiste's worthless husband, the artist employs her as a model. A messenger brings Haldeman the pearl necklace which he has purchased as a gift for his fiancee. Batiste sees the jewel and plans to steal it. She tells Dominick about the pearls. The

TOM NASH AND BIG OTTO

SPECIALISTS IN WILD ANIMAL PHOTOPLAYS, WILL SOON OFFER FOR YOUR APPROVAL A SERIES OF EXTREMELY SENSATIONAL

WILD ANIMAL PICTURES

NOW BEING MADE UNDER THEIR IMMEDIATE PERSONAL SUPERVISION. THE FIRST RELEASE OF THIS SERIES WILL BE ENTITLED

THE MYSTERIOUS MAN of the JUNGLE

AN EXCEPTIONAL STORY OF THE AFRICAN VELDT—FOUR REELS, DRAMATIC IN THE EXTREME—FILLED WITH PUNCHES—CERTAIN TO INCREASE RECEIPTS—DISTINCTIVE PHOTOGRAPHY. THESE FEATURES WILL BE KNOWN AS

THE "BIG OTTO BRAND"

AND WILL CERTAINLY SURPASS ALL FORMER EFFORTS IN THIS FIELD. BID FOR TERRITORY AT ONCE. WRITE OR WIRE US.

NASH

MOTION PICTURE CO.

EXECUTIVE OFFICES: GARLAND BUILDING;
STUDIOS: BAIRDSTOWN, LOS ANGELES, CAL.

Stanley H. Twist, Inter-Ocean Sales Co., 110 West 40th Street, New York. Telephone, Bryant 5667 man plans to be outside the studio building the following day to catch the necklace when Batiste steals it and throws it out of the window. Batiste appropriates the necklace the following day, but throws it out of the window too soon. Cadio, an old organ grinder captures the necklace in his hat. He later sells it to an unscrupulous pawn broker. Dominick arrives at the designated spot but returns home disappointed.

Haldeman misses the jewel just as Batiste has thrown it out of the window. Suspecting her, he summons the police. Batiste breaks down and announces she has tossed it to Dominick. The detectives hasten to the man's house. The Italian, who has taken several drinks to drown his disappointment, sees them coming. Believing one of his old crimes has been discovered, the man engages in a pistol duel with the police. Dominick escapes from the house. Jumping into an auto, he compels the chauffeur to speed ahead. The police follow. A running pistol duel takes place and the Italian is finally captured. Batiste has also attempted to escape but is caught and taken to Police Headquarters with her husband. The necklace is traced to the pawn shop and recovered.

RUBE, THE INTERLOPER (July 10).—Rube discovers that Helen and Dolly occupy the room next door. The girls, actresses, learn that the inquisitive chap is peeping through the key hole. Taking a hat pin, Helen sends Rube away howling. Later the girls rehearse their new act. Rube hears Helen vow to kill Dolly's sweetheart the moment he appears. Ignorant of the fact that the two are actresses, he believes that Helen intends to commit murder. The girls discover his error and decide to play a joke on him. The two secure the aid of Teddy, who is also on the stage. Rube bores a hole through the door in order that he might see what goes on. Teddy enters, and to Rube's horror, Helen stabs the man and then places the body in her trunk. Rushing out, Rube goes to summon the police. Upon hearing Rube's story, the chief of police orders his men to the scene. After numerous mishaps, the officers arrive at the hotel. The men break into the room. Instead of a scene of slaughter, they find Teddy, Helen and Dolly devouring a meal of crackers and cheese.

IN OLD ENGLAND (July 10).—The artillery salute fired in front of Buckingham Palace in honor of the King, is the first of the highly interesting English topical scenes shown in this feature. The events which follow show the game of rugby between Scotland and Ireland; the Southern Counties Cross-Country Run, in which hundreds of men took part, and the King and Queen, attended by prominent members of the nobility, on their way to the Royal Ascot Races.

LAME DOG'S TREACHERY (July 11).—Lame Dog conceives a deadly hatred for Two Feathers, his rival for the hand of Atahka. Two Feathers is the nephew of Lone Bear, the chief of the tribe. The old chief falls ill. Thunder Cloud, the medicine man, is unable to aid the doomed man, whereupon Two Feathers announces his intention of bringing a doctor from the fort. Furious, the medicine man vows vengeance. Lone Bear, meanwhile, sinks rapidly and before his nephew returns with the white doctor, the chief is on his death bed. Calling Big Thunder, Lone Bear tells the medicine man it is his wish that Two Feathers be the next chief. Lame Dog overhears the conversation and plans to rob his rival of his inheritance. Upon the chief's death, Lame Dog secures the medicine man's aid and proclaims himself chief. His first act is to declare war upon the whites. Two Feathers, however, reminds the tribe thew have received many favors at the hands of their white friends. The redskins thereupon refuse to follow their new chief.

In his anger, Lame Dog resolves to punish his people. With the aid of Big Thunder, the chief poisons the stream from which the women of the tripe draw water. Atahka overhears the plot, however, and goes to warn her people. One of the squaws, ignorant of the fiendish scheme, drinks of the water and perishes. Two Feathers and his people come to the stream and find the body of the woman. Seizing Lame Dog and the medicine man, the Indians compel the plotters to drink of the water. The two die in agony. Surrounding Two Feathers, the redskins hail him as their new chief.

"HALLBERG" VS. THE FAKER

A man in West New York fell for the ad. of an Operators' School in New York City. The ad. was by one of the oldest schools. He joined, paid for his tuition, and after he graduated he and a relative decided to open a theatre. This school also has a supply department (?), and secured from this unwary and unsuspecting scholar an order for two Power's No. 6-A machines complete with motors. He paid over $600.00, and when the machines arrived they were found to be imitations. The mechanisms were of Power's make, but the numbers were more than one year old. The balance of the machines was made by an imitator and was worth half of the regular price, and would give consequent poor service! This is not all. The motors which were paid for were never delivered. As a result, this purchaser, after trying to get his money back on the machines which were never set up, came to me and got the real goods at the right price. He has had to pay $50 to a lawyer in advance to enter suit against the proprietor of this Motion Picture Operators' School, and he has a good chance of not only getting his money back but of putting the proprietor of the school in jail for selling goods under false pretenses. This is poor satisfaction, and has cost the exhibitor lots of money, worry and expensive delay. MORAL: Come to "HALLBERG," THE HOUSE OF QUALITY and dependence, in the first place. I have the exclusive trade of this country in the equipment of theatres.

VITAGRAPH.

THE FALSE AND THE TRUE (July 6).—Betty, the only daughter of Jenkins, a wealthy farmer, is secretly loved by Tom Saunders, a farm hand. Tom's scapegrace brother, Dick, returns from the city and is befriended by Tom. Dick later wins Betty's love. While Jenkins is blasting out a tree stump with dynamite, Betty and Dick are passing close by unnoticed, and the explosion destroys Betty's sight. Believing she is dying, the girl asks to be married at once to Dick. When told of her request, he refuses, saying he doesn't want to marry a blind girl. Tom offers to take his brother's place, pretending he is Dick, and the deception is carried out. Contrary to expectations, the girl recovers her health, although still remaining blind. A few years later, they are blessed with a child. Tom holds a good position and secures work for Dick, who is later discharged for intoxication. After several more trials, in Dick's behalf, Tom, disgusted, will have nothing further to do with him. They quarrel, Tom thrashes his brother and Dick vows revenge. He sets a case of dynamite outside Tom's office and lights the fuse. Tom's child sees the box with the sputtering fuse and calls its mother's attention to it. Betty instinctively grabs the box and throws it away just before it explodes. She faints and it is found the second shock has restored her sight. Then she learns whom she has married. Dick is caught and begs Betty to save him from prison, but she turns coldly from him. Tom later succeeds in freeing the wretch and sends him West, leaving Tom and Betty to their love and happiness.

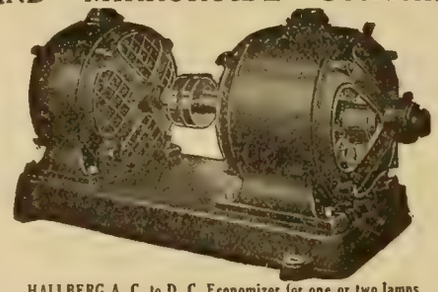
THE MOONSTONE OF FEZ (Special—Two Parts—July 7).—While touring Algiers, Mrs. Osborne and her daughter, Winnifred, make the acquaintance of Schuyler Van Norden, a young American banker. At a little booth, Mrs. Osborne purchases "The Moonstone of Fez." On their way to their hotel, Winnifred and her mother are accosted by a beggar, who seizes Mrs. Osborne's hand and insists upon telling her fortune. The following night they retire in adjoining rooms. In the morning, Winnifred is frightened to find her mother has mysteriously disappeared. When all the hotel attendants tell Winnifred she arrived at the hotel alone, proving it by the hotel register, the poor girl begins to fear she has lost her senses. In despair, she writes to Van Norden for help. He learns, by investigating, that the beggar who annoyed Mrs. Osborne, had since died from the Black Plague. He examines the register closely and finds Winnifred's name as been erased. Passing along a narrow street, Van Norden sees "The Moonstone of Fez" owned by Mrs. Osborne in a shop window. The shopkeeper confesses that a maid from the hotel sold it to him. Under cross-examination, the maid admits Mrs. Osborne died of the Black Plague, and fearing a panic in the hotel, the management had spirited away the body and denied her existence. The proprietor admits the truth, the guilty ones are punished and the mystery explained, Van Norden and Winnifred immediately start for America to forget in the happiness of their future, the fearful incident of Algiers.

DOCTOR SMITH'S BABY (July 8).—Two young doctors, Henry and Harold Smith, strangers to each other, have apartments in the same building. Harold invites some of his bachelor friends to a party and while they are playing cards, the doorbell rings. He goes to the door and is handed a basket and a note by a stupid-looking servant. The note, which is addressed to "Dr. Smith," is signed "Your loving wife," and asks him to "care for the CHILD while she is visiting mother;" adding, "Uncle is in Bermuda, so there is no danger of discovery!" In

DISTRIBUTOR OF THE CELEBRATED MIRROR GLASS SCREEN AND "MIRROROIDE" CURTAIN

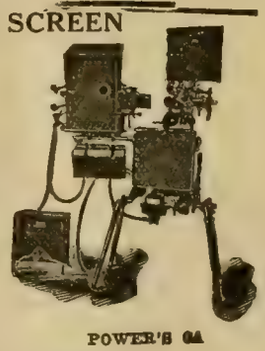
SIMPLEX

Distributor Simplex Machines



HALLBERG A. C. to D. C. Economizer for one or two lamps

Distributor Power's 6-A Machines



POWER'S 6A

Factory Selling Headquarters for POWER'S, SIMPLEX, MOTIOGRAPH and EDISON MACHINES, "HALLBERG" STANDARD A. C. ECONOMIZERS, "HALLBERG" D. C. ECONOMIZERS, MERCURY ARC RECTIFIERS, MOVING PICTURE MACHINES and FLAME ARC CARBONS. I EQUIP THEATRES COMPLETELY

Free Circular on all makes of M. P. Machines, but Hallberg's Big Catalogue, 100 pages, costs you 25c. by mail

J. H. HALLBERG "THE HOUSE OF QUALITY" 36 East 23rd Street, New York

THE STERLING CAMERA & FILM CO.

PRESENTS

—THE POPULAR AMERICAN STARS—

MR. ARTHUR DONALDSON, MR. JAMES VINCENT

AND

MISS VIOLET STUART

IN

"THE LAND OF THE LOST"

REPRODUCTION OF 9 SHEET

A GRIPPING DRAMATIC PRODUCTION IN FOUR PARTS

SPLENDID ASSORTMENT OF PUBLICITY
INCLUDING 1, 3 AND 9 SHEETS

STERLING CAMERA & FILM CO. 145 W. 45th STREET, NEW YORK CITY

the basket a healthy youngster of about two years is found. His friends chaff Harold about the affair terribly, but are finally convinced he knows nothing about it. The boys then try to entertain the child, whom they name "Teddy." They gorge him with cake to stop his crying and all take part in the ceremony of putting him to bed. "Teddy" has had entirely too much cake, and as a consequense, Harold has an awful night with him. Next day, Harold's wealthy aunt arrives with his sister. Aunty cannot understand the child's presence, and tells him he must send it to a Foundling Home, but Harold and his friends resolve to stick by "Teddy." Fortunately, Mrs. Henry Smith, the baby's mother, arrives and claims it, explaining the servant came to the wrong Mr. Smith's apartment. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Smith had kept their marriage a secret because a rich old uncle objected to the match, which explains the mysterious note, but they receive word of his death, making Henry his heir, so everything is cleared up to aunty's and everybody else's satisfaction. Harold and his friends enjoy many a hearty laugh as they think of the comical predicament in which "Dr. Smith" found himself.

PROSECUTION (July 9).—The miners of a large Western mining camp, informed of a general cut in wages, hold a meeting of protest, and the rougher element prevailing, they in revenge determine to blow up the mine hoist. Cliff McClellan undertakes the job and that night places a box of high explosives under the hoist house and puts the mine out of business. Collins, the mining company's local attorney, who is in love with Marcia, Cliff's sister, confronts brother and sister and charges Cliff with the crime. He is sneeringly told to prove it. The attorney is ordered to prosecute and as he feared, Marcia turns from him coldly. A couple of nights later, the miners kidnap Collins, carry him far out in the desert and leave him there, with a single canteen of water. Marcia hears of the abduction and, her sympathies aroused, induces her brother to drive out into the desert with her to find Collins. They arrive in time to save the suffering man from death, nurse him back to health, and knowing Cliff is guilty, Collins' gratitude prompts him to offer to resign his position as attorney, withdrawing from the prosecution, but Marcia insists that he go on with it. As the warrant is about to be served on Cliff, Collins, for her sake, commands the officer to stop. Marcia, however, turns to Cliff and says, "You committed the crime and he shan't suffer fot it." She orders the officer to do his duty, kisses her brother good-bye and as he is led to prison, she buries her face on her lover's breast, to hide the tears that give expression to her intermingled sorrow and joy.

THE VASES OF HYMEN (July 10).—While passing Roberts' antique shop, Annette Kershaw sees twin vases in the window, is fascinated and decides to purchase them. She takes one and asks Roberts to try and hold the other one for her. After she has gone, Bunny, a collector of bric-a-brac, sees the other vase in the window and hurries inside to buy it. The storekeeper tells Bunny the vase is partly promised to a lady and gives him her card, saying she has bought its mate. Bunny induces the storekeeper to sell the vase and orders to sent to his address. Annette returns for the other vase and is furious on discovering it has been sold. She then decides to call on the purchaser to see if the party will not sell it to her. Bunny, meanwhile, wants the mate to his vase and decides to call on the lady who purchased it. On his way, he meets Annette. Both are mutually charmed with each other and, in the same breath, state they desire to purchase the mate to his or her vase, but of course neither wants to part with the vase already in their possession. After arguing a while, both become angry and go home in sulks. The mutual attraction proves too strong, however, and Bunny calls again on Annette. Unfortunately, the subject of vases is brought up again and after a severe quarrel, Bunny goes home. Both feel remorseful and simultaneously send their vases to each other, leaving them no better off than before. Bunny at last hits on a way to settle the matter. He takes the two vases, sets them side by side and with his hand on his heart, says, "We also should be paired." Annette consents to become his mate, while both look lovingly at each other, then at the two ornaments which have proved to be veritable "Vases of Hymen."

LILLIAN'S DILEMMA (Special—Two Parts—July 11).—While attending Professor Whippem's School for Boys, Dick Denby writes home, asking his mother to send him a suit of clothes. Mother sends her daughter Lillian to the school with the clothes, but on her arrival she is told plainly that girls are not admitted. She angrily determines to see her brother, despite the rule, goes to a hotel, puts on the suit and thus disguised, she gains admittance to the school. Dick is out playing baseball, and by mistake, she gets into a room belonging to George Burton, one of the young teachers. She starts out again to look for Dick, leaving her own clothes on the bed. Tom, a small boy, sees the girl's clothes, and as a joke, dresses up in them. He is seen and runs into Professor Whippem's rooms to hide. That gentleman's wife catches a glimpse of him, and after finding a petticoat Tom had dropped, accuses her husband of harboring a girl. Meanwhile Lillian meets Dick, goes to his room and discover her clothes are in somebody else's rooms. Dick's friends come noisily in from the ball-field, causing further complications. The Professor catches Tom, learns the lady's attire was found in Burton's room and the teacher is ordered to leave the school at once. At Dick's suggestion, Lillian puts on her own clothes, tells Burton the truth and then goes to Whippem's room to plead for him. There she is discovered by the professor's wife, and an awful row follows. Dick and Burton are called in and after explanations, Burton is reinstated and everything cleared up. Lillian returns home, where Burton is a regular caller. Wedding invitations have been issued and we can guess the rest.

Bona Fide Sales Indicate Superiority

$1000 CASH REAL MONEY $1000

That we ship more screens weekly than the entire output of all other concerns do monthly.

THERE'S A REASON

$1,000.00 that no other screen on earth can stand the tests—the real tests that this world's famous MIRROROIDE screen will and can stand. No screen on earth, regardless of cost, can compare with

MIRROROIDE

The proof is the evidence of the eyes that God gave you. The results—an increase in your banking account. You who saw the tests at the recent exhibitors' convention, New York City, know we tell the truth.

MIRROROIDE

Is the screen—the result producer. Make us show you. To prove that you do not get a real (our) guarantee from others, get samples from them. Also from us. Subject their tests with our samples. Then subject our tests with theirs. It's to laugh. No, we dont apply our coating with a brush—we are not in the calico business.

We have the factory—the resources—the experience. If you want any kind of tinted screen, and desire same results that others claim they can give you, write us. We will send you a guaranteed coating. Better than theirs. But not as they apply same, with a brush or a piece of cotton or an air brush.

MIRROROIDE

IS THE WORLD'S BEST. $1000

We defy any test any other screen manufacturers may make or suggest. $1,000 that we will subject Mirroroide to tests they can't—they don't dare, make. Be wise. Get the best at a lower cost; because we have the factory, the facilities. We don't use a paint or air brush. We have machinery of almost human intelligence. Orders filled.

WATCH! WAIT! SEE!

what our latest production will do. Mirroride can be had in Gold, Silver, and Silver Flesh. No, our screen don't lose the picture if your seats are close up or at an angle. Get our free samples. Let us show you.

J. H. GENTER CO., Inc.
NEWBURGH, N. Y.

Any color Bronzes you may desire ready mixed. Ready to use. Dip Lacquers for Incandescent Lamps, etc. Sample cans 25 cents, postpaid.

ESSANAY.

A NIGHT WITH A MILLION (July 7).—Judson Clarke, a broker, goes to spend a week-end with his friend, Mr. Dwight, at Meadowbrook, and leaves Jack Wilton, his clerk, in charge of the office. Saturday afternoon, while Jack is sitting quietly alone in the office, a stranger rushes in and throws a package on the desk. "I want action, Clarke, I want action." Jack upon finding that the package contains a million dollars in railroad bonds, catches the first train for Meadowbrook, to deliver the bonds to Clarke. When he arrives he is arrested, the officer thinking he has captured a famour crook. He finally gets out of the calaboose and jumps into an automobile. He is unable to stop the car and is again arrested for speeding. After going through fire and water he finally reaches Dwight's home, only to find the gentlemen who delivered the bonds is a crank and the railroad has been out of business for twenty years. He is not left unrewarded entirely for his efforts, as Clarke recommends him for a position as private secretary to one of his friends, and he is accepted.

A BOARDING HOUSE SCRAMBLE (July 8).—Tom and Dick live at the same boarding house and are rivals for the hand of their landlady. One evening the crowd decided to play all of the old fashioned games, and the antics that they go through will keep one in a constant fit of laughter. Tom is determined to make Dick look foolish, and vice versa, so they are continually in a scramble.

SLIPPERY SLIM—DIPLOMAT (July 9).—Slippery Slim is in love with Sophie Clutts. He is also postmaster of Snakeville, so when Sophie decides to give a party in honor of her 18th (?) birthday, Slim gives the Parson his invitation, but holds the others back. On the night of the big Snakeville society event, Slim and the Parson are the only ones at the party, so Sophie consents to be Slim's wife. The next day, Slim delivers the delayed invitations and the boys all go, as they think, to Sophie's birthday party. They all faint as Sophie introduces Slim as "My Husband."

BRONCHO BILLY AND THE SHERIFF (July 11).—Broncho Billy, a cowpuncher, is elected to the office of deputy. The sheriff is in love with Gertrude Scott and fears that his deputy is smitten with her. An outlaw has been terrorizing the town and the sheriff determines to capture him. He meets the outlaw in the woods, gives him money and promises him his release the following day if he will give himself up. The sheriff is proclaimed a hero. That night the outlaw escapes and the deputy captures him. The bandit squeals—the sheriff is ousted and Broncho Billy not only wins the office but the love of the pretty Gertrude.

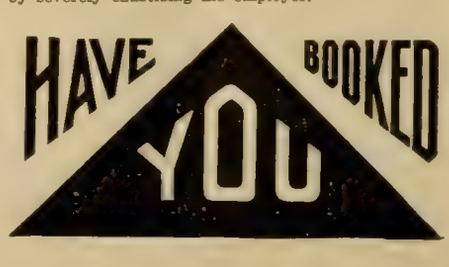
(Essanay Stories Continued On Page 108)

BIOGRAPH.

THE HONOR OF THE LAW (Two Parts—June 29).—The District Attorney came face to face with the man who he believed had murdered his father years before. This man was held for murder. The District Attorney made every effort to find his victim guilty. The night before the execution, however, a dying companion's confession placed the guilt where it belonged. Should he now, as District Attorney, destroy the confession or uphold the honor of the law?

THE CRACKSMAN'S GRATITUDE (July 4).—The young lawyer took the cracksman's part when he was falsely accused. Later, the chemist, in revenge for his fancied wrong, refused the lawyer's wife the serum which would save her husband's life. It was then the cracksman showed his gratitude.

THE GOAT (July 2).—Uriah Wright is the editor of "The Weekly Balloon." His criticism of the rural population occasions vehement protests from some of his irate victims who visit his office in a belligerent spirit. To sidestep physical injury, Uriah substitutes Simp, his printer's devil, as the author of the obnoxious items published in "The Weekly Balloon." The consequences to Simp are painful, but he takes all that comes as a part of his journalistic duty until Uriah criticises his best girl, when "the goat" turns and shows his horns by severely chastising his employer.



The Littlest Rebel

"The Littlest Rebel," by Edward Peple, scored one of the greatest successes ever known to the legitimate theatre, running a whole season in New York and forty weeks in Chicago.

No play from the speaking stage ever lent itself more perfectly to motion picture reproduction. No one can resist the throbs and tears and laughs and thrilling exultation of its truthful and pathetic story. It appeals with equal force to every class of picture goers—cultured or ignorant—rich or poor—young or old—upon the face of the earth.

Back of these natural advantages stands a definite idea of production which will make "The Littlest Rebel" a five-reel photo play masterpiece of surpassing excellence.

THE PRINCIPAL PARTS ARE PLAYED BY FAMOUS MOTION PICTURE PLAYERS. THERE IS NO DOUBT ABOUT THEIR ABILITY TO BRING OUT ALL THE DRAMATIC VALUES AND GIVE SATISFACTION IN THEIR WORK.

E. K. LINCOLN, star of the Vitagraph Company, one of the finest and most popular picture actors in the world, heads an organization which includes two Universal stars, an Edison lead, a Mutual director and a crack Edison camera man. The scenes in the picture are those of the picturesque and sunny Southland described by the author. Every detail of production has been studied out with care. The original flags of battle are unfurled to the breeze once more—the genuine declaration of war is flashed upon the screen. Veteran officers of the Confederate and the Federal Armies assist in directing the sensational battle scenes.

Whole troops of United States Army Regulars, a thousand uniformed men with hundreds of horses, complete cavalry, infantry and artillery equipments, arms and ammunition, are employed to furnish action, color and atmosphere to the most sublime and beautiful war story ever written.

The Photoplay Productions Releasing Company of Chicago

(A. M. GOLLOS, Pres.)

beg to announce that the above described feature and "SHOULD A WOMAN TELL?" a five reel APEX SPECIAL, will be distributed in Illinois and Wisconsin through the offices of the G. & G. FEATURE FILM CO., at 37 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

The most attractive lobby display receivable accompanies these features—(24 sheets in two styles), (8 sheets in three styles), (6 sheets n three styles), (3 sheets in three styles), (1 sheet in four styles); also half sheets, hand-colored photographs, heralds, etc.

THE FIREMEN'S SOCIAL (July 2).—Milly, the village belle, invites the volunteer firemen to attend a ball at her house. They install a fire gong in Milly's house to give the alarm in case of fire. Spruce Binks has not been included in the list of invited guests and, out of revenge, he turns in several false alarms. These interrupt the festivities. While escaping from the fire-house, Spruce tears his trousers and goes to Levy to have them mended. While waiting, he turns over the stove, sets fire to Levy's shop and the terrified tailor escapes, taking Spruce's pants with him and locking him in the burning building. Levy gives the alarm, but it is regarded by the fire-laddies as false until Levy appears to verify it. The hose is then gotten out and run to the conflagration, arriving in time to extinguish both Spruce and the tailor shop.

PATHE.

THE HEART AND THE CIRCULATION OF THE BLOOD (July 6).—Though detached from the body, thé heart of many animals and among them especially the porpoise, can be made to "beat," showing the muscular pulsations as in the living creature. Likened to a pump, the heart in action is seen to alternately draw in salt water from one receptacle and then force it into another. A closer view exhibits the successive dilations and contractions of the auricles which receive the blood, and of the ventricles which force it on and into the blood vessels. The exterior view of the heart of an ox shows the orifices of the arteries, while a sectional view of the same shows the wall of the left ventricle to be much thicker than that of the right. The heart when dissected shows the valves which separate the cavities or blood chambers. A study of the construction of the artery and the vein shows the one to be of strong elastic tissue, while the other is made up simply of muscular fibre. The circulation of the blood of birds and frogs is interesting as compared with that of the human being.

MODES OF TRAVEL IN JAPAN (July 6).—Although but recently opened to the commerce and general educational and industrial advancement of the Western world, Japan has not been slow to accept and benefit by modern means of transportation. Due to the peculiar typographical construction of the country, nowever, many of the more picturesque and characteristic modes of travel such as the jinrikisha and the palaquin are still in general use.

A TIGER HUNT—INDO-CHINA (July 7).—The beautiful Indian tiger, whose striped hide is so highly prized by European and American furriers, is a veritable pest to the Hindoo natives; not infrequently, when driven to it by hunger, he makes inroads upon the smaller outlying settlements and is the cause of the loss of considerable animal as well as human life. To put an end to his depredations, hunting parties are formed and the tiger is tracked back into the jungle or the hill.

Abandoned prey frequently serve to indicate the path taken by the beast but great caution has to be exercised to avoid a sudden spring by the great cat from his cover in the low hanging branches of the jungle underbrush. Generally the dogs used are able to point him out, and the hunter "pots" him with a rifle without venturing too near, though, mortally wounded, the wonderful vitality of the tiger enables him to crawl still farther into the jungle, where, after succumbing to his wounds, the hunters find him quite dead. Slung from a pole, he is carried back into the village amid great rejoicing. Fear of the tiger then becomes a thing of the past and the natives all turn out to celebrate the good fortune of the hunters.

THE ICE AND SNOW (July 7).—The simple experiments connected with the changing of water into snow and ice in the laboratory are the source of much interest even to the casual observer. When one stops to realize that water in its various forms, frozen or liquid, covers considerably over three-quarters of the surface of the earth, one appreciates how great is the fundamental importance of this natural phenomenon.

A RUSSIAN BOAR HUNT (July 13).—The great Russian boar hunts held on the royal preserves are always spirited occasions among the nobility who regularly take part in them. In the presence of the Grand Duke under whose supervision the hunt is held, the sportsmen prepare for the chase. The Grand Duke assigns shooting places to his guests in order to give each an equal chance. It is not always the hunter, however, who frightens the game, as is seen here when a large flock of wild duck are put to flight by the passing of a herd of deer

The real object of the royal hunt is the shooting of the great Russian wild boar. At the close of the chase, the sound of the horn in the hands of the whipper-in calls the dogs together where the boar lies dead. It is then seen that many of the dogs have been seriously wounded by the fierce onslaught of the boar who uses his sharp tusks freely and to great advantage in holding the pursuing pack at bay. The game secured, which includes besides a score or more of wild boar, deer and various water fowl, is indicative of a good day's sport and the hunters' gathering at the royal lodge celebrate and make merry over their good fortune.

THE WINE INDUSTRY, MARSALA, SICILY (July 13).—The wine industry of southern Europe and especially Sicily, forms the principal occupation of the large peasant-folk, many of whom frequently know no other kind of employment. The best wines of the world, worth many thousands of dollars, are exported from Sicily annually, and increase very materially the revenues of the government.

THROUGH BOSNIA AND DALMATIA (July 14).—Southern Austria at once quaint and picturesque, holds forth many joys for the traveller who delights especially in rambling through those portions of the world that lay away from the beaten path. Of particular interest is the curious little town of Bistrick in Bosnia, which although now under Austrian rule, was up until 1875 a possession of the Turks. Bistrick's bustling market place is a point of interest and amusement for all visitors. The old Turkish quarter, with its oddly shaped houses and narrow streets, typical of the days when Turkey ruled in Bosnia, never fails as an attraction, while the Isle of Lacroma, situated in a crystal lake with high wooded hills about it, minds one of some half-forgotten story out of the Arabian Nights.

The Port of Spalata, with its varied craft and stevedores, is the principal commercial centre of Dalmatia. Farther back from the water front in the beautiful mountainous country, surrounding the quaint old town of Eldelitze, springs the source of the river Bosnia. Like all southern European countries, Bosnia has its share of ruins. Those at Spalata, called by the Romans Salomia, force a serious thought and in their stern architecture impressively remind one of the ancient times when Rome ruled the world.

THE TOMBS OF THE ANCIENT JAPANESE EMPERORS (July 14).—The tombs of the Emperors of Annan, carefully erected and ideally located, represent to-day the finest surviving specimens of the beautiful Japanese architecture of this ancient period.

PATHE'S WEEKLY, No. 42 (June 24, 1914).—London, England.—Militant Suffragettes attempt to see King George in his palace, but are seized by the police and sent to jail.

Cincinnati, Ohio.—The Latonia Derby classic of the turf is won by John Gund.

Cambridge, Mass.—Class Day at Harvard when new made graduates desport themselves in the Stadium and give battle with confetti to pretty girls.

Washington, D. C.—The largest American flag ever made is unfurled by Secretary of State Bryan.

Princeton, N. J.—Comes now the solemn hour of parting at Princeton when the Alumni of 1914 lay aside cap and gown and go their way.

Paris, France.—Here are latest Parisian styles in afternoon gowns and millinery.

Dakar, Sengeal.—Three blocks of the city, infected by the plague, are burned by order of the authorities, to prevent an epidemic.

New York City, N. Y.—Five thousand pupils at the Washington Irving High School, largest in the country, observe Flag Day with Mrs. John Purroy Mitchel, the Mayor's wife, hoisting the flag.

Meadow Brook, L. I.—England's crack polo team wins its second game with the American "Big Four," 4 to 2¾, and with it the international trophy.

Portland, Ore.—The National Balloon Race, during which one balloon was struck by lightning and abandoned in a forest.

MELIES.

ONE SUT OF CLOTHES (June 30).—Joe and Dave are two impecunious youths with literary aspirations. Dave has written a play which he has failed to land, and the boys are reduced to the embarrassing position where they have but one suit of clothes between them. This makes it impossible for them to leave the house together, so that when Dave goes forth to present his play, Joe must spend his time in a suit of pajamas. It is at this interesting stage in their careers that Marian and her father come to New York on a visit, Marian being the fiancee of Joe. Marian later calls at the apartment of the two boys by appointment, but they have taken time by the forelock, and Dave has escaped in the suit of clothes, leaving Joe feigning illness in bed. Marian is greatly distressed at Joe's condition and rushes madly to a drug store for medicine. In her excitement she gets the wrong bottle and returns to the apartment. In the meantime, Dave has come in and Joe has forcibly taken the clothes off of his associate and escaped, leaving Dave in bed in the same position that Marian last saw her fiance. She rushes into the apartment in a high state of excitement, pours out a spoonful of medicine and forces it down Dave's throat before she discovers that it is not the same man she saw in bed a few minutes before. At this embarrassing point, Joe returns and makes a frank confession of their situation. Marian takes it all in good part and states that her father is fully conversant with Dave's playwriting ability and has agreed to finance Dave's efforts, so that now each

Ready for Immediate Delivery

"THE KING OF THE BEGGARS"

A powerful drama in 4 parts showing the ragged edges of society. Interesting and sensational.

"THE HUMAN WOLVES"

IN 5 PARTS

The pulsing triumph of the Photoplay Art.

COMING

"The Mysterious Mr. Wu Chung Foo"

IN 4 PARTS

Advertising matter for all of the above: One, three, nine sheets, heralds, slides, colored photos.

Write for further particulars. You'll be pleased, so will we.

FEATURE PHOTOPLAY CO.
220 W. 42nd St., New York City
Candler Bldg. Phone Bryant 8486

of the boys can immediately become possessed of a new suit of clothes, much to the joy of all concerned.

THE PRESCRIPTION (Special—Two Parts—July 2).—A medical society is to hold a banquet and just as the doctors are about to leave the hospital a woman with a very sick child appears. One of the doctors attends the patient, but in his haste does not properly diagnose the case, giving the mother a wrong prescription. While returning from the banquet the head physician at the hospital noticed a woman walking the streets apparently in distress. He approached her and heard her sad story of her child's illness. He volunteered to go to the child and while making his examination discovered the prescription given the woman at the hospital. He gave a correct prescription and when the child had fully recovered requested the mother to bring it to the hospital. This was done and while they were there he called in all the physicians asking each in turn if they had prescribed for the child. One admitted he had and after a very severe rebuke the physician realized that duty in their profession should and would come before pleasure.

HIDDEN DEATH (Special—Two Parts—July 4).—The Countess of Nantil, a wealthy American girl who had married a French nobleman, bought Jordan Castle and came to live there with her husband, daughter and younger sister, Sybil Dumont. The original owner had left a collection of books in great disorder and Miss Newcastle, secretary to the countess, was given the task of straightening them. Among the books she found an old manuscript giving directions as to the working of a certain "Canopy of Death." The secretary envied the countess and tried to win the count's love. Just as they were embracing the countess discovered them and ordered Miss Newcastle from the house. An hour later the countess was found dead. Although the cause of her death was a mystery the countess' sister, not satisfied with the work of the local police, called in the celebrated detective, Fred Upton. He posed as her fiancee, whom the members of her family had never met, thereby causing no suspicion. The secretary and the count continued their courtship, but as the countess had left the castle and practically all the money to her sister, it was necessary to make way with her, too. The secretary planned a clever scheme. She suggested taking Sybil's picture and very cleverly had her sit under the "Canopy of Death." Just as Sybil was to meet the same fate as the countess, the detective, who had previously discovered this horrible machine, pulled her from beneath it. Proof was then brought forward to show the secretary was responsible for the mysterious death of Countess Mantil.

A MONK'S SACRIFICE (July 1).—The king and queen of a small Polish village were on the verge of a ruption due to the cruel ways of the king. Their subjects loved the queen and were endeavoring to raise sufficient funds for her to fight the king. An old monk of the Order of Cordeliers endeavored to assist the queen's cause by searching for the Philosopher's Stone. He was arrested for practising magic and sorcery, brought before the Holy Inquisition, found guilty, but was saved by the queen. He continued his search, but instead of finding the magic stone, he discovered gunpowder. The king became very suspicious of the old monk and had him constantly watched, therefore when the monk sent a letter to the queen informing her of his discovery, the letter bearer was captured and killed by the king's men and the note reached the king instead of the queen. A knock at the old monk's door did not surprise him as he expected a visit from the queen, but upon opening it much to his astonishment there stood the king with the monk's letter in his hand. The king threatened him with instant death, but the monk asked for one more day with the promise of revealing his discovery to the king. It was granted, but rather than let his enemy, the king, obtain his discovery the old monk blew up his house, himself and his discovery.

WOMANLY CURIOSITY (July 2).—The fact that Mrs. Gwendoline Joy had an extremely inquisitive nature is not surprising to anyone who has an intimate knowledge of the fair sex. Inquisitiveness is a failing of the average woman, and to be quite fair the male sex cannot be ruled out. Very frequently they show quite as keen an interest in matters which do not concern them as do their wives, or sisters, or cousins, or aunts. The fact that his wife was an extremely inquisitive woman annoyed Andrew Joy, and just like a man, he gave in at the last moment, and all his good intentions were shattered by his weakness, which in this instance rivalled his wife's inquisitiveness.

ESSANAY.

NIGHT HAWKS (Special—Two Parts—July 10).—Howard Varing, the district attorney, is waging a war on political crooks in his city, and is using every means possible to obtain evidence which will convict them. Wardell, the leader of the bunch, has read in the newspapers of Varing's intentions, and decides that the attorney must be put out of the way at any cost. While conferring with two of his henchmen as to how he will accomplish this work, Stone enters. When Stone demands his money for a deal in which he was implicated, he is refused and thrown out bodily. He is thoroughly angered and swears revenge. Stone goes to Varing's office and tells all he knows about the underhand work of Wardell's crowd, and that evening leads the way to the gang's rendezvous. They enter and a fight ensues in which Murphy is killed. Wardell accuses Varing and has him put under arrest. Stone escapes, but is fatally wounded and manages to drag himself to the room of Kerns, where he writes a confession clearing Varing and accusing himself of the murder. Kerns promises to deliver the message to Mildred, Varing's daughter. Stone also writes a letter telling Wardell of his revenge. He asks Kerns to deliver this to Wardell. He then dies in his pal's room. Kerns delivers the confession safely to Mildred, but at the rendezvous is not so lucky. He is caught by one of Wardell's men while in the act of slipping the note under the door. His life is threatened if he refuses to tell the whereabouts of Stone's written confession, so he tells all. Meanwhile, Mildred alone in her home, has placed the letter in a brass box for safe keeping. Before retiring she starts to hide it, when she is confronted by Wardell and Nichols, who have been watching her through the window. She quickly extinguishes the lights and throws the box out of another window. She then rushes out, locks the door, and after finding the box, darts out into the darkness. The two brutes overtake her and are about to take the box when her cries are heard by Humphrey, who has been motoring and lost his way. He goes to the rescue, but is forced to pursue Nichols to get possession of the box. When he returns, Mildred and Wardell have disappeared. Being at a loss as to what to do, he takes the box home with him, where he very shortly receives a telephone message from a woman who says she is Mildred's friend, and "for him to bring the confession to her home." Humphrey, suspecting that the call is a fake, leaves the box at his home and proceeds to the given address. Upon arriving he tells the woman that he did not bring the box, and is about to leave when he is dealt a blow by Wardell, rendering him unconscious.

Humphrey regains consciousness and finds himself alone. He hears the low moans of a woman in the next room, and upon finding the door locked, goes to the window. He is horrified to find that the street is eight stories below, but decides to take a long chance and crawl along a ledge to the window in the adjoining room. He breaks the window and much to his surprise finds Mildred bound and gagged. He releases her, and she explains that she had overheard Wardell telling Nichols that he intended entering Humphrey's home, and securing the brass

MAUDE FEALY
Thanhouser Feature Star

"Maude Fealy pictures have unquestionably been the biggest winners of the year in Canada, and this has been unquestionably admitted, even by The General Film Exhibitors, so you can realize to what an extent your pictures draw in this territory."

(Signed) G. H. BOOTH,
Manager of The Mutual Film Corporation of Canada.

DO YOU USE GAS?
TANKS OR PORTABLE
The "Guil Pastil"
DOUBLES YOUR LIGHT
"FULCO" Pastil Adapter
Makes Pastil fit any burner. PRICE, each $1.00
GUIL PASTIL, large size, $1.25 each
GUIL PASTIL, large size, 6 for $6.75
E. E. Fulton Co. 152 W. Lake St. CHICAGO
Projection goods, accessories and supplies of every conceivable kind.
Sole American Distributors for GUIL PASTIL

TYPE W FLAME ARC
Powerful LAMPS Economical
For brilliantly illuminating the outside of your theatre.
General Electric Company
General Office, Schenectady, N.Y. 4987

LOCAL PICTURES
Your negative developed, printed and titled complete
5c per foot
delivered within 12 hours
We Set the Pace, Let Those That Can, Follow
Feature Work Our Specialty
Titles 6c per foot
GUNBY BROS., Inc.
145 West 45th St. N. Y. City

BEST OF CAMERA MEN
Furnished for all Occasions
CHICAGO FEATURE FILM CO.
4108-22 Lincoln Ave., Chicago, Ill.

SUBSCRIBE FOR THE
Moving Picture World
Oldest, most reliable trade paper, covering every department. Has the largest direct circulation. The recognized representative paper of the industry.
Domestic $3.00 per Year
Canada $3.50 per Year
Foreign $4.00 per Year

THE CATALOGUE OF BRUSH ELECTRIC LIGHTING SETS
contains much that is valuable about electric lighting in general, and moving picture work in particular. Send for it.
THE CHAS. A. STRELINGER CO.
Box MP-2, Detroit, Mich., U. S. A.

box. A wild automobile ride then follows and, upon arriving at his home, he catches the crooks as they are about to leave. Humphrey is victorious in the struggle that follows and rescues the valuable box. After reading the confession he understands what it is all about and is glad that he fought to return it to Mildred. Varing is released after the confession is produced, while Wardell and his crowd pay the penalty of their crime. Later, Humphrey wins Mildred for his wife, with the hearty consent of Varing, who rejoices in the selection of his daughter and welcomes the handsome young chap into the family.

LUBIN.

WHILE AUNTIE BOUNCED (July 7). — John Bunco is a circus acrobat working on the "bounding net." He is in love with Alice Bliss, a niece of Aunt Mary Belding, who has no idea of letting her niece marry a mere circus actor. When Jack tries to argue the point with her, she pelts him with potatoes. Jack has a scheme; he sends a note to Alice to try and coax Aunt Mary over to see him practice. Aunt Mary doesn't want to go, but the prospect of seeing a free show finally gets her. Clad in her gladest raiment she chaperones Alice to the practice yard where Jack is perfecting a new act. There he pushes her onto the trempoline. She doesn't know how to get off and bounces up and down, utterly helpless, while Jack and Alice go off to be married. Then they come back and Jack helps her off the "infernal machine." It's a pretty even break for a moment whether she kills or kisses him; but Auntie has a sense of humor and that wins. She forgives him.

FOOLING FANNY'S FATHER (July 7).—Professor Copdyke is working on a machine to advance or reverse a person's age. He knows he can do it if he keeps at it long enough, but it gets on his family's nerves, for when he wants a subject for experiment he takes a wheelbarrow, a bottle of whiskey and some chloroform and brings home a tramp.

Fanny's sweetheart, Jim, is a man of resources. He wires a circus agency to send him a dwarf. The dwarf arrives just as the professor has concluded some improvements. He is about to start out with his wheelbarrow when Jim offers himself as a substitute. He is placed in the cabinet, and while the professor is answering a fake telephone call, Jim and the dwarf change places. Presently the professor returns, and when he sees the dwarf come from the cabinet in Jim's clothes he knows he has made a success. The "child" is given proper clothing and fed, but when the dwarf throws food at the professor and breaks up the china, the professor shoves him back in the cabinet. Another switch is made and Jim comes out. While the professor is exulting over his double success, Jim blows up the cabinet. The professor laments that he can never make another one, but Jim, Fanny and her mother rejoice that the cure has worked.

THE INCOMPETENT (Special—Two Parts—July 8).—Howard Gardner, an incompetent broker's clerk, marries Mildred for her money, having won her by pretending to hold a responsible position. He opens a brokerage office with his wife's money, speculates and loses all. Mildred then begins to realize her husband's incompetence. In order to be close to him constantly and to spur him to better efforts, she works as his secretary; but as it lowers a broker's prestige, to have his wife act as his secretary, she poses as his sister.

Later she is introduced to George Hilton, a wealthy stock speculator, whose admiration for her brings valuable business to her husband, whom Hilton believes to be her brother. Mildred soon falls in love with Hilton, but conceals it. Gardner, having an appointment with Hilton's secretary, and Mildred's maid having her night off, Mildred is alone in the house and receives an unexpected visit from Hilton, who persuades her to go out for a ride in his auto. Mildred leaves a note for her husband, saying that she accepted Hilton's invitation for fear of offending him and losing his business. This note she leaves on the table. As Gardner is changing from one car to another on his way home he sees his wife with Hilton and becomes furiously jealous. Hilton and Mildred arrive home before he does and Hilton begins to declare love to Mildred.

Gardner enters and accuses them of misconduct. Hilton is astonished to learn that Mildred is Gardner's wife. Gardner orders Hilton out of the house. Hilton seizes the gloves he has thrown on the table, not knowing that they fell on top of the note Mildred left for her husband and with them he unknowingly takes the note. As he leaves the house, he discovers the note and that he has been deceived. The following morning Gardner calls on Hilton to apologize as he fears to lose his valuable patronage. Hilton having received information that Consolidated Copper will go crashing down on the following day tricks Gardner into believing that it will boom high. Gardner falls into the trap and, having no money of his own, borrows money on his clients' securities with which he speculates in Consolidated Copper. Hilton learns of this and gloats over the fact that Gardner is now in his power. He phones to Mildred to visit him in his house at night, or else her husband will be in jail by morning. Gardner overhears Mildred telling Hilton to expect her at 8 o'clock, and follows her to Hilton's house. Mildred pleads with Hilton and succeeds in appealing to his nobler instincts. Gardner enters and tries to shoot Mildred, but Hilton throws himself in front of her and drops wounded. Gardner believes that he has killed Hilton and tries to make his escape. Policemen hear the shot and, rushing to the house, try to block the way. Gardner tries to cover the policemen with his gun and as they wrestle, the gun goes off and he drops dead. Hilton regains consciousness and the wound turns out to be a slight one.

THE DEBT (Special—Two Parts—July 9).—Out of work, Helen Desmond is forced to go on the stage in order to support her invalid mother and sister, Elsie. She meets a rich society man, Dan Appleby, who places a fifty-dollar note in her pocketbook at dinner one night. At home she finds it and, thinking Mr. Appleby will understand, sends it to her mother for an operation which the doctor claims will save her life. The operation is performed with success, but Appleby refuses to believe her story and is sure she is a shrewd, calculating girl in spite of her baby face and air of innocence. He takes his defeat in sportsmanlike manner, laughing at her promise to pay it back.

Soon after this Helen meets Philip Gardner, who was an old friend of her deceased father. She does not know that Gardner is an old rounder, but, acting upon her mother's suggestion, places herself practically under his protection and mistakes his attentions for fatherly interest. About this time the show closes, and Helen, broke and discouraged, is an easy prey for the wily Gardner. Through her chorus girl friend, Maysie, Gardner gets Helen to join him and a party who are going south on a yachting trip. They leave and Helen is extremely happy. Appleby hasn't forgotten Helen and goes to see her. He finds her rooms vacant, but gets her mother's address. He meets the mother and Elsie and learns of how he has misjudged the girl. He does not tell the mother of the kind of man Gardner is, but decides to go south to try to get her to go back home before trouble comes. On the night of his arrival south he swims out to the yacht and watches a dinner party going on in the salon. It is the first time that Gardner has shown his true character and he tries to force wine upon Helen. She objects and goes on deck, Gardner, drunk, following. He struggles with her there, but Appleby comes upon them and knocks Gardner to the deck, telling Helen to get away in the small boat. This she does, and he follows. On shore she asks him to take her home. There, later, he calls upon her and when she asks how she can ever repay her great debt to him he simply tells her "Be my wife." Forgiveness and a better understanding come with her answer.

THE TRIBUNAL OF CONSCIENCE (July 10).—Simms, a retired banker, realizing that his son, Albert, is fast becoming a worthless spendthrift, cuts off his allowance, hoping thereby to bring him to his senses. Albert, having learned the combination of his father's private safe, robs him, and with the proceeds goes out with a lot of low companions on a wild round of dissipation. Simms, almost heartbroken, had given up all hope of saving his son when Jones, the old family servant, comes to him with a scheme for the redemption of the boy, if there is any manhood left. Simms disappears after having taken the family lawyer into the scheme. The old servant told of having seen Simms throw himself over the deck of a ferryboat into the bay. On Albert's return he reads in the newspapers of his father's suicide and finds his home in the hands of creditors. Upon going to the lawyer is informed that his father left nothing but debts. Without money, Albert finds that he has no friends and son descends to the pawnshop, and from there on down to where a bench in the park is a welcome bed.

Meanwhile, Simms, in disguise, with the aid of the trusty Jones, always keeps Albert in sight, and without his knowledge keeps him from actual starvation. The boy falls in with evil companions, and would have become a criminal but for a memento of his childhood days which brings him to a realization of his folly and sets him on the right path. He finds honest work digging in a sewer trench for a big construction company, and when Simms sees that he is in earnest and a real reformation has begun he secretly bought the company and raised his son higher and higher. Albert, in the meantime, thinking his father dead, and feeling lonesome, wanders back to his old home. Standing across the street and gazing at the house with sorrowful recollections he is surprised to see the old servant in the doorway beckoning to him. Entering the house in response to the summons he is ushered into the library, just as of old, and at the fireplace finds his father waiting to take him to his heart—his boy a man.

MANDY'S CHICKEN DINNER (July 11). — Aunt Mandy invites her preacher to a chicken dinner. The next day she takes her last penny and sends her trifling husband, Mose, to market to buy the chicken. Mose buys a large rooster and brings him to Mandy, but through his clumsiness the rooster gets loose and escapes through the window. Mose goes after the rooster and Mandy goes after Mose. The rooster makes good his escape. Mandy is in despair, so that night she sends Mose out to get another chicken by fair means or foul. Mose gets another chicken and the preacher comes to dinner. But when the conviviality is at its height, the constable and owner of a nearby poultry farm enter, and Mose, on extremely strong circumstantial evidence, is taken into custody. The preacher, like the first rooster, makes an exit through the window. Mose vows vengeance on the preacher, and attempts to execute him as soon as he is released from jail, but the preacher turns on Mose and runs him out of breath. He keeps Mose going around the block at such a rapid pace that Mose passes his gate several times without being able to open it. At last Mandy comes to his rescue.

HOW HE LOST HIS TROUSERS (July 11).—Jack Thompson, a young naval officer arriving in port, receives a letter from his friend, Tom Bolden, offering his regrets at not being home to receive him, but encloses a letter of introduction to his mother and sister, and trusts he will call. Jack, overjoyed, immediately gets leave of absence and starts on his journey. Sometime previous a harmless lunatic has wandered away from the asylum. An extra edition of the newspaper has been issued, and states, "that should the lunatic enter anyone's home, the occupants can readily notify the authorities by waving some white object out of the window." The paper arrives in Nellie's home previous to Jack putting in an appearance, and has wrought fear and anxiety into the hearts of Nellie and her friends, so instead of receiving the anticipated hearty welcome the young officer is immediately mistaken for the crazy man and forced behind a screen at the point of a revolver. There being no other white object in the room he is requested to remove his trousers. Very much against his will, he does so. Nellie rushes to the door with the trousers and calls a policeman. Jack, taking in the situation, realizes his predicament; he takes the lampshade, places it around his waist, and emerges from the screen looking very much like a ballet dancer instead of the refined young naval officer. He finds the doorway blocked by the officer and makes a heroic jump through the window followed by the officer. A short chase ensues, at the termination of which Jack collides with the real crazy man. The letter of introduction is produced from Jack's trousers, and all ends in a merry uproar of laughter.

Be Sure You Get a Copy of our NEXT WEEK'S ISSUE

It is the most interesting number we have published so far, and contains a fund of information on the moving picture industry.

If not already a regular subscriber, permit us to suggest that you send in your subscription at once.

You can only keep in close touch with every side of this wonderful business through a careful weekly study of our pages.

One issue often worth a year's subscription.

Domestic $3.00 Per Year
Canada $3.50 " "
Foreign $4.00 " "

Remit today to the

Moving Picture World

17 Madison Ave., New York City

THE SHREWD EXHIBITOR

Will soon be intimately acquainted with the Magnificent Photo-Extravaganzas of L. Frank Baum

(With Louis Gottschalk's Original Music)

WHICH BEAR THIS MARK OF DISTINCTION:

He will eagerly await the release of

"The Patchwork Girl of Oz" 5 Reels. (Now making)

"The Magic Cloak of Oz"

"His Majesty, The Scarecrow of Oz"

and other wonderful Photo-Extravaganzas of L. Frank Baum's World-famous Creations.

The Oz Film Manufacturing Company
STUDIO AND LABORATORIES
Santa Monica Boulevard, from Gower to Lodi Streets
Los Angeles, California

INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES

UNIVERSAL

ECLAIR.

DUTY (Two Parts—July 8).—Dr. Alexander is devoted to his young wife, but she longs for excitement and the company of young people. He deems it necessary to reprove her because of her noisy friends. A breach is opened, which widens day after day. At a tango tea she is attracted by Welby, an artist. A brother physician of Alexander's borrows some serum for a case of croup. Meanwhile the wife draws farther apart from the doctor until she consents to a proposal of elopement by the artist. She writes Welby where to meet her. On the same evening a child, afflicted with croup, is brought to the doctor and he finds his serum exhausted. In order to save the patient's life he decides to apply his mouth to that of the boy and force a passage of air by respiration. He sends for his wife to help him, but she refuses. As she is packing her bag he enters and tells her that his work may cost him his life and she must be present. She obeys. As she sees the brave act of her doctor husband a swift revulsion of feeling comes and with it an overpowering love.

Meanwhile, Welby iswaiting impatiently. His life saved, the boy is carried home. Isabel renounces Welby. As he tries to commit suicide she seizes the gun. The cartridge explodes and wounds him. Isabel begs them not to send to Dr. Alexander and a messenger is sent to the drug store. Welby's cousin, making a purchase, suggests that the doctor be called, out of jealousy for Isabel..

Astounded at finding his wife at the studio he hesitates but a moment and then turns to write a prescription. He picks up Isabel's letter to Welby. Silently handing her the letter he writes the prescription. With pardon in his eyes he leads her out and at last wife and husband have found themselves.

WILLIE AND THE PARISIANS (July 12).—Another gorgeously beautiful hand-colored production in which Willie, the phenomenal child artist, a "kiddie" of three years old, concurs with his parents at their displeasure on receiving a visit from two Parisian cousins who intend to spend a month. The cousins reveal themselves as gluttons and become generally objectionable. Willie decides to bring the visit to an abrupt end and to this end fills their eggs with pepper. To make things more pleasurable, Willie places lime in the milking pail from which they drink, and after their stomach has somewhat recovered they find their room occupied by the denizens of the farm yard. The next day the cousins make a hurried departure much to Willie's joy.

LILY AS A MOTHER (July 12).—Little Lily is exceedingly fond of her dog, Gyp. She dresses and feeds him like a human. While out for an airing, although wrapped in a heavy coat, Gyp takes cold and Lily assuming the duties of a mother becomes a devoted nurse, finally bringing Gyp back to good health and he is fed with jam.

NUTTY AND HIS FATHER (June 28).—The leading character in this film is an amusing little fellow of two and one-half years. He plays the part of the little son of a young married man who is prone to indulge too strongly in the wine cup. This habit causes the young wife much sorrow.

One day when he leaves the house for one of his usual sprees, the little fellow follows, and after many adventures finds him in a restaurant with a young lady. The young man's son disguises himself as a messenger and during the meal his father, completely fooled, orders him to summon a cab. The child gets into good graces of the cabman and tells him, that as the lady enters the cab, to drive off at a fierce pace. The driver, taken by the little fellow's smartness, does as he is told. The little man manages to bring his father home and by his sweetness and innocence effects a reconciliation between his mother and the gay husband, who sees his fault in a true light.

NESTOR.

A RANCH ROMANCE (July 8).—John Preston, ranch owner, owes a large sum of money to Don Jose Praz. The Don's rascal son, Raphael, with the aid of an accomplice, steals some of Preston's cattle. Raphael loves Kate Preston and urges his father to press the matter of the notes as a lever to win Preston's consent to the marriage.

Kate's heart, however, belongs to the foreman, Jack Deering. Unable to force Preston's consent, Raphael kidnaps the girl and carries her to a lone cabin. Game as every Western girl who has ridden the free plains, Kate fights him, but the villain's strength beats her down. The girl's horse has meanwhile run home. Jack, accompanied by the cowboys, starts on the trail. He arrives at the cabin and, after a death duel with the Mexican, kills him as the cowboys come up.

FRONTIER.

THE FIGHT IN LONELY GULCH (July 12).—Joe, who carries the mail in Lonely Gulch, suddenly disappears. His horse returns riderless to the post office. It is feared that Joe has been robbed and, perhaps, killed. Dolly refuses Arthur, although it is apparent that she cares for him. On the morning that Joe had disappeared Dolly had given him a letter to mail. This Arthur found laying in the road. He read it, and learned that Dolly had a husband, but that she has left him and was begging him to allow her freedom. The sheriff's posse find the envelope of this letter and, later, when they see the letter sticking out of Arthur's pocket he is accused and locked up on suspicion.

Dolly observes a suspicious character in the Gulch and brings the sheriff and his men to the scene. A fierce battle ensues between the men of the law and three bandits, one of whom proves to be Joe. Two of the outlaws are captured and another dies of his wounds. Dolly discovers that the dead man is really her husband. The sheriff presents her with the keys to the jail, and she rides back to release Arthur, whose innocence is established beyond a doubt.

IMP.

AN OLD RAG DOLL (July 9).—At the opening of the story we see Mr. and Mrs. Bill Wright with their two children, Katherine and Jane, happy. Bill takes a little drink, but never too much. He bids his family farewell and goes to work. It is evening. The mother is getting supper. Bill has stopped in the saloon. He drinks too much, quarrels and goes home. He is not staggering; he is just whiskey-cranky. Mother can see that something is wrong. He loses his temper, and smashes the dishes. Wife approaches him; he shouts; she cries; babies run away and hide. Up to the old attic they go; Katherine with her little rag doll in one hand, her two-year-old baby sister in the other. Into the trunk they crawl. We see the lock catching. The rag doll has fallen in the front of the trunk.

Downstairs one word leads to another; the husband turns the wife from the house. She wanders the streets. Father returns to the saloon. Mother is sitting on park bench, heartbroken. The children scream. There is no answer. Mother comes home determined to take her children away with her.

The children cannot be found. She is frantic. She rushes across to the saloon and tells father his children are lost. That pulls him together. Together they go home. The husband and wife arrive in the house and search. Slowly Katherine becomes unconscious. At length the little tots are found through the ragdoll on the floor. Husband and wife resuscitate them and the last picture shows a lapse of time, and peace and happiness in the home again.

VICTOR.

THE SILENT WITNESS (Two Parts—June 22).—Jack comes into the cattle town broke, looking for work. This he secures with a ranchman and in that this ranchman has a pretty daughter, Vera, the position particularly appeals to the young cowboy. As the days pass, Jack and Vera become attached to each other much to the disgust and anger of the foreman, George, who seeks Vera for himself. This foreman is the secret head of a gang of cattle thieves, and he has been planning raids on his own boss's ranch.

Jack, in the course of his work, comes to suspect the foreman, but can find nothing on him. The foreman, on the other hand, schemes to compromise Jack in the cattle raids with the assistance of a Mexican. They plant on Jack's saddle an iron used in making over the brand on the horses that have been stolen.

Vera has purchased a small camera—the only one to be had in the town. Of an afternoon she rides into the hills with Jack to take some pictures. They forget the camera on starting back home, and Jack returns to get it. Before joining Vera again, Jack runs into the cattle rustlers, and he snaps a picture of them from behind bushes, with the foreman in the foreground. Soon after the rustlers are attacked by the cowboys. But the foreman escapes without being detected.

Once back at the ranch the foreman accuses Jack as being the leader of the gang and produces the iron concealed in Jack's saddle. In the meantime, Vera is in the dark room developing her pictures. Among them she finds one of the cattle rustlers. As Jack is about to be led off with a rope around his neck by the furious cowboys, she rushes out and displays the incriminating picture. The Mexican is captured and the two culprits are led off to jail. Jack and Vera, later, find many happy days together with Jack, promoted to the position of foreman.

CRYSTAL.

NEARLY A STEPMOTHER (July 7).—Vivian, a pretty country girl, lives with her father. She meets Dick Townboy who falls in love with her. Her father objects. Townboy pretends that he is a boarder looking for lodge rooms. Pa puts Dick to work. Dick finally asks him for Vivian's hand in marriage. Pa refuses, saying that if Vivian were married he would be without a housekeeper. Dick then writes a letter to his friend, Charlie, telling him of his love suit, and the reason for his being unable to mary the girl. He asks Charlie to come up disguised as a woman and make love to the old gent.

Charlie arrives and introduced to Pa who admires him, then he is introduced to Vivian and immediately kisses her. Dick is furious. The old man primps up and tries to fascinate the newcomer. He proposes and is accepted. Charlie introduced to his stepdaughter and kisses her. Dick loses control of himself and kicks Charlie out. Pa grabs a pistol and chases Dick. Meanwhile Charlie is making love to Vivian. Pa returns and is surprised when Vivian tells him that the woman is a man. Pa chases Charlie, who overtakes Dick. They blame each other and proceed to fight.

BISON.

THE OLD COBBLER (2 parts—June 27).—Old Nathan stumbles upon Dick, his son, while the latter is going through his purse—robbing his father. He remonstrates, but instead of being touched, Dick becomes insolent. Nathan turns him out of the house with the hope that the world will remedy what the father cannot. Nathan's wife is now all that is left to him. He goes upstairs to commiserate with her. He finds her dead.

After the funeral Nathan goes West and settles in a mining camp. Despite his troubles, he still radiates charity and kindness. One day Wild Bill, a "give-take-and-be-damned" sort of fellow, visits Nathan and throws down a damaged boot for repairs. This is the first and last time that he bullies the old cobbler. Nathan kicks him out of the shop. Bill comes to respect the old cobbler, and when Jess, Bill's sweetheart, and a dancer in a resort, must have one of her slippers repaired, it is taken to Nathan. He places a note in the repaired slipper. That touch of kindness is the saving of Jess. She casts aside her gaudy clothes.

Nathan and Bill become good friends and the cobbler shows his friend Dick's picture and gives his history.

One day the stage is held up. Bill captures the highwayman and recognizes him as Nathan's son. He takes Dick back to his father and when he displays the bags of gold to the miners, he explains: "He must have heard me coming, for he vacated in a hell of a hurry and left this."

Nathan goes on spreading sunshine, making people happy, marrying and preaching sermons to the end of his days.

PROWLERS OF THE WILD (2 parts—July 11).—Landers, dishonest foreman of the trapping post, falls in love with Anna. She, in turn, retains a warm place in her heart for Bert Bixby, the handsome son of the owner of the circus. A letter from young Bixby announcing his coming to the trapping post, falls into the hands of Landers. He immediately plots against his white employers. He trades guns to the Kaffirs in exchange for ivory. When Bixby arrives an animal trapping expedition is arranged. Landers is soundly thrashed and then discharged by Bert Bixby when he permits his jealousy to take violent form. The expedition starts. Anna and Essie are left behind at the trading post. Landers, in a nearby Kaffir village, plots to get Anna into his power.

While the expedition is trapping lions, the child of a chief in the Ka¼r village becomes ill. Landers suggests that Anna be sent for. She comes and leaves medicine for the little Kaffir baby. Landers puts poison into the medicine and the baby dies. The ignorant Kaffirs are then incited to declare war upon the whites by Landers, who declares that Anna has killed the child. The Kaffirs attack the trapping post. Annt and Essie escape with Landers, who warns them just before the attack. The two girls are hidden away by Landers, while he secures horses. When he returns he refuses to take blind Essie to safety, telling Anna that he will save her only. When she remonstrates Landers seizes her. In the struggle Anna secures Landers' gun and shoots him.

Meanwhile the trapping post has been burned by the Kaffirs and its defenders killed. Bixby and Graham, returning from the expedition, see the flames and hurry to investigate. In the battle with Kaffirs which ensues, Graham is killed and the natives are about to annihilate the entire party when timely assistance arrives in the shape of a party of hunters sent to the post by Bixby's father. The Kaffirs are attacked and beaten. Anna makes her way back to the post and there meets Bixby, who tells her of his love.

POWERS.

THE MYSTERY OF WICKHAM HALL (3 parts—June 26).—The story opens in England two hundred years ago. The lands of Sir Henry Marston are

Meets long-felt need for better box-office system

THE moving-picture and amusement business has long waited for a system which would safeguard money received for admissions. This protection is now provided by the "National" Ticket-Issuing Register.

A strong box-office system is essential.

The difference between a strong and a weak box-office system may mean the difference between continuing in business with financial success or retiring from business with financial loss.

Ticket issued by National Ticket-Issuing Register.

The protective features of the "National" Ticket-Issuing Register makes the proprietor's success more certain. It insures him the proper amount of cash for every person who enters the theater.

Some advantages of the new "National" System.

Tickets cannot be duplicated or resold. A new ticket is issued for each admission. The register makes a positive, unchangeable record of each ticket issued, and the amount received for it. This record is under lock and key inside the register.

The customer takes the ticket from the machine. The cashier need only to press the keys and make change.

A continuous audit.

At any time—morning, afternoon, or evening—the proprietor can tell exactly how many tickets have been sold and how much should have been received for them. He can demand the exact amount from the cashier.

An instant audit of the day's business is obtained and the proprietor knows that he gets all his money.

Tickets recorded and printed at one operation.

Tickets are printed and recorded as issued. There is no waste in unused or lost ticket rolls.

It is the fastest admission system ever devised. Crowds are handled quickly and without confusion.

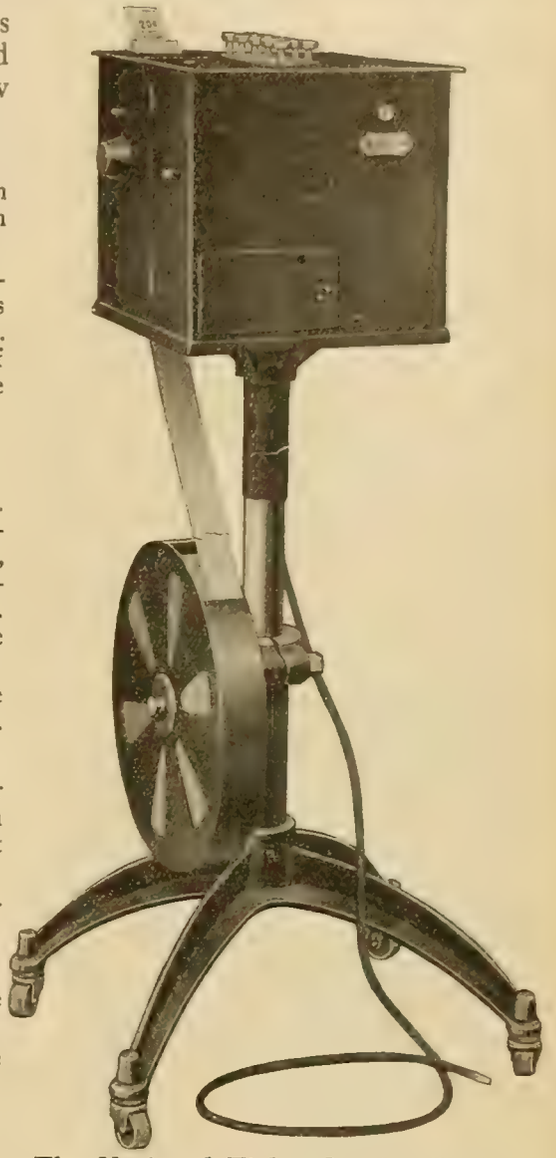
"National" System can be used in many businesses.

This system can also be used in other businesses, such as—

Lectures.
Circuses.
Exhibitions.
Race meets.
Ferry boats.
Toll bridges.
Lunch counters.
Excursion boats.
Subway railways.
Elevated railways.
Unreserved galleries.
Dance halls and pavilions.
Fairgrounds and concessions.
Baseball and athletic associations.
Summer gardens and concessions.
Soda fountains in drug and department stores.

This register was shown at the New York Exposition and will be on display at the Toronto and Dayton conventions.

Let our representative tell you more about how this register stops worry and losses, removes temptation, and increases profits.



The National Ticket-Issuing Register.

Quick, easy, and economical to operate.
It stops losses and protects your money.

Register has ten keys in two banks of five each. Left hand bank controls the number of tickets issued, the right-hand bank governs the price of the tickets issued.

The keys in the left-hand bank are as follows: 5-4-3-2-R.

When five tickets are wanted, the "5" key is pressed. When four are wanted, the "4" key is pressed, etc. The "R" key is a release key, used to release the key pressed, if an error is made.

The register is 10½ inches wide, 10½ inches deep, and 10⅝ inches high. The top of the machine has a flange which extends over the sides ¼ inch on three sides, and on the front side, ½ inch. This makes the top of the register 11 inches wide and 11½ inches deep.

Cabinet is of pressed steel and is finished in black enamel.

The printing mechanism is contained in the left-hand side of the machine, and the motor is in the right-hand side of the machine. Both sides have a large door.

The stands are, in all cases, furnished with the register.

The register is guaranteed against breakage, or getting out of order, due to ordinary wear, for a period of two years, the same as all National Cash Registers. It is a perfect-working machine, and is as carefully made in every detail as our highest-priced cash registers.

The National Cash Register Company, Dayton, Ohio

forfeited to his neghbor, Sir John Wickham, for debt. Nadine, Marston's daughter, loves Arthur, her cousin.

Wickham has tired of Netta, his mistress, and he offers to cancel the debt if Nadine will be given to him in marriage. Nadine sacrifices herself and marries Sir John Wickham. Netta, intensely jealous of her new mistress, wins back Sir John's affections, although Nadine has already borne him a daughter. To further her interests, Netta writes Arthur to come at once. To this letter she signs Nadine's name.

Arthur rushes, as he imagines, to Nadine's aid. He encounters Sir John. There is a duel and both men are killed.

Four generations later, the drama is again taken up.

Among the ancestors of the actors in the ancient tragedy are, Nadine Wickham, her father, Sir John Wickham; Arthur, the betrothed of Nadine, and Sir Henry Marston. Netta, a coquette, is suing for the favor of Arthur, whom she loves.

On this occasion the lands of Wickham are forfeited to Marston for debt. Marston offers to cancel the debt if Nadine will consent to be his wife. She flatly rejects this proposition even at the risk of ruining her father.

However, Netta is at work with her evil intrigues. Knowing that Nadine has an appointment with Arthur, she precedes her to the rendezvous and pretending a sprained ankle, allows Arthur's arms to encircle her. Nadine sees and misinterprets the situation. Stunned, she returns home and accepts the marriage proposal of Marston.

It is an old family tradition that the ghosts of Wickham Hall appear only to the daughter of the house on her wedding eve. Nadine is left alone at midnight in the ancient hall. She sees again the tragedy of Wickham Hall.

In the meantime Arthur imagines that he hears Nadine calling him. He rushes to Wickham Hall. He finds Nadine prostrated and determines that she will not marry Marston. Wickham dismisses Sir John Marston and Arthur enfolds Nadine in his arms.

PASSING THE LOVE OF WOMAN (July 10).—"Nifty" Smith and "Killer" Joe are pals. Both are gunmen. "Nifty's" sweetheart is Annie. She has extracted a promise from him that he will never shoot a man again. Big Bill Rosen also loves Annie and jealousy prompts him to "get" "Nifty." He promises to deliver the gunman to the police. He makes the killer an offer of a thousand dollars to shoot Reed in a certain alley that night. With a thousand dollars "Nifty" can marry Annie and start fair. He accepts and Rosen notified the police. Despite the pleadings of his friend and sweetheart "Nifty" starts out. The police trap is laid. Only a miracle can save him.

But the miracle is already worked—in the heart of his friend, whose love passeth that of woman. For "Killer" Joe has but two loves, the one for "Nifty" and the other for Annie. But she does not know it and her heart belongs to "Nifty." So Joe takes "Nifty's" place and goes to prison for five years. "Nifty" and Annie go West. Their child is born and the five years pass. Joe comes out of prison and follows them. Still bent on vengeance, Rosen shadows him to Nifty's home. The latter sees the man who would have ruined him and would shoot. But Joe takes the gun and does battle with Rosen. Both are killed. Dying, Joe tells "Nifty" and Annie of his love for each, the pearl in the shell in the slimy mud of the river bottom.

FILMS FOR SALE
40 THREE-REEL FEATURES
20 TWO-REEL FEATURES
250 SINGLE REELS
MACHINES AND SUPPLIES
ISIDOR WENIZ FILMS CO., 133 N. Gay St., BALTIMORE, MD

NEWMAN BRASS FRAMES AND RAILS

Read what C. A. Morrison of The Princess Theatre, Hartford, Conn., says about Newman Quality:—

Gentlemen:
We have purchased quite a number of Brass Frames and Easels, together with Brass Ticket Rail and Three-sheet Brass Poster Frames of your Company.
All of these goods reached us in perfect condition and the quality was the best. I have told several other managers in the city of your goods and in several instances orders have been sent you—all of which goes to show that your best advertiser is a satisfied customer.
Yours truly,
PRINCESS THEATRE CO., INC.,
Hartford, Conn.,
C. A. Morrison, Mgr.

Insist on the name "Newman" when buying frames
Write for New 1914 Catalog

THEATRE FOR SALE
TO SETTLE AN ESTATE
THE AUDITORIUM THEATRE
BURLINGTON, N. J.
WILL BE OFFERED AT
PUBLIC SALE at Two O'Clock P. M.
ON THE PREMISES
THURSDAY, JULY 9th, 1914

GOLD SEAL

LUCILLE LOVE, THE GIRL OF MYSTERY (No. 10—June 16).—When Lucille again finds herself in the hands of Hugo Loubeque all the spirit of fight is temporarily taken out of her. She is overpowered and crushed down by her utter helplessness in the hands of the unscrupulous spy. Consequently, she allows herself to be led to another of Loubeque's strongholds.

To make easy his plans for removing the girl to his Mexican estate, Loubeque orders her drugged. Realizing the uselessness of combating him, Lucille agrees to drink a potion of drugged wine, providing that a lady attends her during the trip to Mexico. Loubeque agrees to this, and she swallows a powerful sleeping potion.

Thompson, Loubeque's right-hand man, knows that Lucille has the costly ruby necklace she found in the sunken city, and as soon as the drug takes effect he plans to take the jewels from her. He attacks her, however, before the drug has completely done its work. She struggles with the thief and is rescued from the situation by Loubeque.

Lucille is now overcome by a deep, unnatural sleep. Friends are at hand, but they come too late, as Lucille cannot combine with them against the spy. Detectives again locate Loubeque. A battle ensues, and the detectives are again defeated by the cunning spy, who prepares for every emergency. When Lucille awakens from the effect of the drugs she finds herself on Loubeque's estate in Mexico. She has the liberty of a large hacienda, but is forbidden to go outside of its walls; indeed, she cannot go outside, as every avenue of escape is guarded by armed men. Considering that Lucille is now safely out of his way, Hugo Loubeque returns to San Francisco to search his house for the fateful papers which Lucille hid there. Howbeit, coincidence and chance play a part in the affairs of men which the most sagacious cannot foretell. After Loubeque's departure a Mexican bandit ventures into the hacienda in a spirit of mischief, and thus Lucille finds a friend in her dire need.

Thompson again plans to steal the ruby necklace from Lucille, and to forward his design he saws the iron bars of Lucille's window with the purpose of entering her room that night and stealing the jewel. His trivial act becomes a means of succor to Lucille. When Thompson enters her room and attacks her that night, the bandit is called to the scene by her cries. He shoots Thompson, and with his help Lucille escapes from her prison house and from the hacienda.

Even while she is escaping a new element of mystery enters into the story. The guards stand upon the hacienda walls firing at Lucille and her escort, when a veiled woman arrives and directs operations against the fugitives. When they have arrived almost at a point of safety, Lucille's good friend, the bandit, is shot and the girl rides forth alone into a foreign country embroiled in civil wars.

REX.

THE BOOB DETECTIVE (June 21).—The Boob is reading of a big city graft case when the girl reporter and her brother from the city come hunting sub-

PRINTING AND DEVELOPING FILM TITLES
Give us a trial. All work guaranteed.
Prompt service. Prices right.
If there is any event that you want photographed, we can furnish expert camera men.
STANDARD MOTION PICTURE CO.
Telephone, Central 2853, 5 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago

TRADE MARK
CHILDREN PHOTOPLAYS for Children by Children
TRADE MARK

"KIDS OF THE MOVIES"

A Two Reel Comedy that brings forth continual chuckles of genuine laughter from the heart; and yet withal thrills as one follows the wonderfully clever plot to its climax

The Superbly Spontaneous Acting Astonishes and Amazes Beyond Realization

STATE RIGHTS NOW SELLING

CHILD PLAYERS CO. OF AMERICA, Inc.

45 WEST 34th STREET
NEW YORK

MARTIN P. KORN
President

TELEPHONES 6270 6271 GREELEY

Jack London's Great Story—John Barleycorn—Produced by the company that made the famous "Sea Wolf."

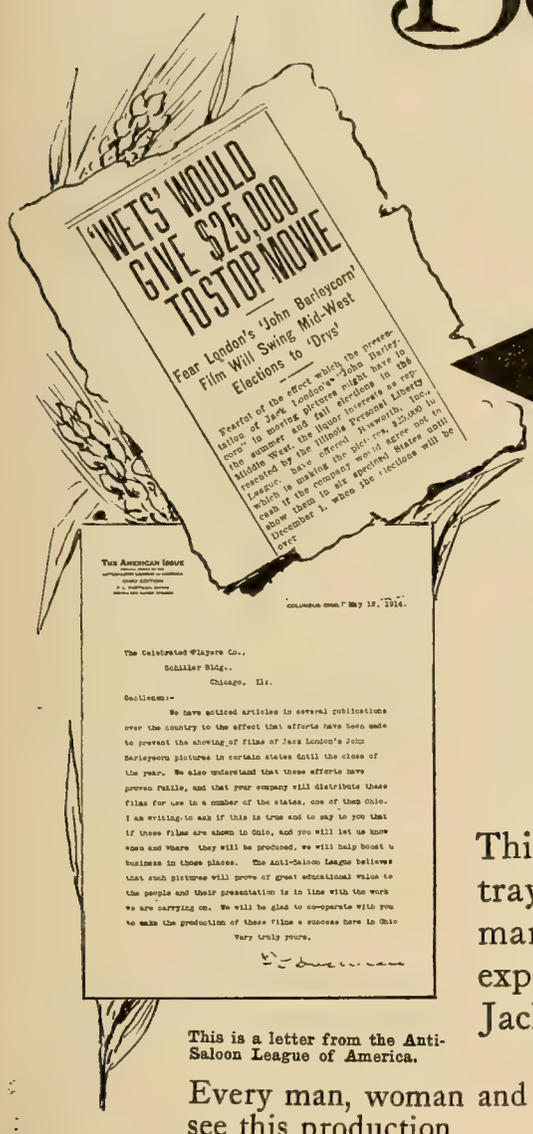
BOSWORTH INC.

648 So. Olive St.
Los Angeles

Present Their Second Release

John Barleycorn

By Jack London



'WETS' WOULD GIVE $25,000 TO STOP MOVIE
Fear London's 'John Barleycorn' Film Will Swing Mid-West Elections to 'Drys'
The Celebrated Players Co.,
Schiller Bldg.,
Chicago, Ill.
Gentlemen:-
We have noticed articles in several publications over the country to the effect that efforts have been made to prevent the showing of films of Jack London's John Barleycorn pictures in certain states until the close of the year. We also understand that these efforts have proven futile, and that your company will distribute these films for use in a number of the states, one of them Ohio. I am writing to ask if this is true and to say to you that if these films are shown in Ohio, and you will let us know when and where they will be produced, we will help boost the business in those places. The Anti-Saloon League believes that such pictures will prove of great educational value to the people and their presentation is in line with the work we are carrying on. We will be glad to co-operate with you to make the production of these films a success here in Ohio
Very truly yours,

This is a letter from the Anti-Saloon League of America.

$25000 was offered to suppress this film —and refused

The strange and interesting story that was published with great success in the

Saturday Evening Post

This story in film portrays in vivid and realistic manner the true alcoholic experience in the life of Jack London.

Every man, woman and child in America should see this production.

The Story Appeals to Everyone

William W. Hodkinson

Distributor

(After September 1st, all of Bosworth's Productions will be released through the Paramount Pictures Corporation.)

110 West 40th Street
New York City

Increase your volume of patronage by booking this release immediately with the following exchanges:

Wm. L. Sherry Feature Film Co., Inc., N. Y. State, 126 W. 46th St., N. Y.

Master Productions Film Co., Inc., 31 Beach St., Boston, Mass.—New England States: Massachusetts, Connecticut, Maine, Rhode Island, New Hampshire and Vermont.

Famous Players Exchange, 1331 Vine St., Philadelphia, Pa., and 71 West 23d St., N. Y. City—New Jersey, Eastern Penn., Delaware, Maryland, Washington, D. C., and Virginia.

Famous Players Film Service, Pittsburgh, Pa., and Chicago, Ill. — Western Penn, West Virginia, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Kentucky, Michigan.

Famous Players Star Feature Film Service, Temple Court Bldg., Minneapolis, Minn.—North and South Dakota, Minnesota and Wisconsin.

Notable Feature Film Co., Salt Lake City, Utah—Utah, Colorado, Montana, Wyoming, Idaho.

Progressive Motion Picture Co., 3 Offices. Head Office, 642 Pacific Building, San Francisco, Cal.; Seattle, Wash., Central Building; Los Angeles, Cal., Marsh-Strong Building; California, Oregon, Washington, Nevada, Arizona and New Mexico.

Jack London's Great Story—John Barleycorn—Produced by the company that made the famous "Sea Wolf."

urban news. The latter laughs at the Boob, not knowing that they will reckon with him later.

The Boob decides to track the grafters, goes to the city, is robbed and dragged to the police station. Hazel, who has been put on the graft case, recognizes Boob and he is freed. Explaining his mission, Boob so amuses the chief of police that he tells him, for a joke, to follow the chief of detectives who has just gone out.

Boob follows the detective all day. The latter becomes uneasy and writes a note to the Mayor to meet him at a cafe. The girl is interviewing the Mayor when the note arrives. His agitation prompts her to steal the note and she realizes that the Mayor and chief of detectives are the principals in the graft case. She follows to the cafe. Boob has lost the train and wanders by accident to the cafe for food.

Hazel has meanwhile secured a place near the booth where the grafters are dividing their money. She sneezes and is discovered. After a struggle he drags the two criminals to the police station. He gets the reward and the curtain drops as the ignorant country boy divides the money with the smiling girl reporter.

PLAIN MARY (July 12).—Plain Mary has been for years the confessor for the college boys in trouble. She had scolded them and praised them and helped them back to their own self respect. But the lads took their hearts to prettier girls. Mary's hair was always brushed pack in a firm, close knot. Mary's clothes were clean nad neat and gingham. Among her visitors is a professor, but he always goes home at nine and never a word of love is spoken.

A traveling smart shop arrives in town. Passing the hotel, Mary sees several girls come out in gala attire. The modiste offers to fix her up and Mary goes slowly inside. An hour later, the modiste curled and puffed Mary's hair and dressed her beautifully. Mary goes out. In the lobby the clerk stares at her and offers to take her home. The modiste is angry, for she likes the clerk.

Clothes do what the years of kindness and sympathy have failed to accomplish—the boys turn to Mary. The professor comes, but Mary, drunk with her power over the younger men, turns away from his gray hairs. Mary's troubles begin the next day. She tries to dress, but her hair doesn't curl properly and the coils won't lie flat. The dress won't fasten. At last with tousley locks and a shawl over her shoulder, she hurries to the hotel. The modiste, jealous, says she has no time. The girls laugh at Mary's appearance. Crying, she starts out and into the professor's arms. Gently he leads her home. She appears later with her gingham dress. The professor takes her into his arms and the story of Plain Mary is over.

JOKER.

WILLIE WALRUS, DETECTIVE (June 3).—"Detectin' iz the art of figgerin' out what the other feller did from what he didn't do."

This might have been the working motto of "Willie Walrus, Detective," but it is not. Willie figures what the fellow didn't do from what he did do. Willie is the town constable with an office full of special formulas, special traps and special weapons for special varieties of crimes and misdemeanors.

Willie is called upon to find Dolly, the missing bovine of Mr. and Mrs. Farmer Hicks. With true Hawkshaw instincts, Willie carries along a magnifying glass, his ally in the search for evidence. The glass reveals several strands of red hair. Willie sets out to find those who have or have not red hair. Finally when the embryonic Sherlock purloins a young woman's "store curls" she gives chase. He is pursued into his own trap. At the critical juncture a neighboring farmer returns to Mr. and Mrs. Hicks their missing provider of lacteal fluid. Willie escapes with a little rough handling by his victims.

BESS, THE DETECTRESS; or THE DOG WATCH (No. 3—July 8).—Bess is still busy at her job of detecting everything in sight. A favorite of Fate, she always starts on the wrong trail only to be gently lifted by the wind of chance and planted with her feat success. Blackie Crow, a crook, well known to the police, borrows a gold watch from a helpless old man. The old man objects and Jack runs to the police station with him. After describing the crook, the old man identifies a photo of Blackie as the hero of his adventure. Blackie has meanwhile disguised as a sailor. Jack tells Bess of the trouble. She too disguises as a sailor. The chief of police, thinking to earn the $200 reward, also disguises as Blackie. Bess thinks him the real crook, follows to the ship where Blackie is hid. After complications, the crook is caught and Bess gets the reward.

LOVE, ROSES AND TROUSERS (July 11).—Sy has courted Jane for fourteen solid years. Jane still waits for the all important question. In desperation she tries to stir Sy up. Boarding with Jane for the summer are the two young city folks, Bob and Mandy. Bob has fallen in love with Mandy and has proposed to her forty times without avail.—Bob, exasperated, declares to himself that he must do something to arouse Mandy to an appreciation of himself. Jane and Bob, being both in the same frame of mind, meet and start a flirtation with each other in order to make their respective sweetheart jealous. This scheme certainly does work, as is proven by the lengths to which Sy went in order to reinstate himself in favor with Jane. The scheme still further proving its worth in the rapidity with which Mandy gave utterance to the truthful dictates of her heart when it seemed positive that Bob had been won over to Jane.

UNIVERSAL

ANIMATED WEEKLY, No. 120 (June 24).—England Regains International Polo Cup.—Forty thousand enthusiasts from all parts of the world witness Lord Wimburne's team recapture the coveted polo cup—Meadowbrook, L. I., N. Y.

Uncle Sam Captures Aerial Derby.—In face of gale, W. L. Brock, American aviator, triumphs over John Bull's crack birdmen—Hendon,, London, England.

World's Largest Flag.—One hundred and fifty feet long, seventy-eight feet wide and weighing 600 pounds, it is borne aloft in Flag Day parade—St. Louis, Mo.

Everybody Loves a Winner.—John Gund, a Lexington colt, runs off with the grand prize in the classic Latonia Derby—Covington, Ky.

Coaching Marathon.—London society treated to remarkable test of coachmen's skill and pace and courage of horses—Olympia, London, England.

German Day in Chicago.—Heroic bronze statue of Goethe, the noted German composer and poet, is unveiled in Lincoln Park.

Knocker's Buried. — Board of Trade's slogan of "quit knocking and boost" causes burial of the hammer—Paterson, N. Y.

I. W. W. Ousted.—Miners of the Western Federation hurl I. W. W. crowd out of union headquarters, destroying records and wrecking the building—Butte, Mnot.

New York's Police Drill.—Annual exercises and manoeuvres of the metropolitan defenders—New York City.

Racing in the Clouds.—The "Kansas City," "Springfield," "Million Population Club" and "Uncle Sam" compete in the National Balloon Race—Portland, Ore.

River of Fire.—Flames leap from river forming spectacular sight as oil tanks explode near Ardmore, Okla.

Yale Wins Big 'Varsity Race.—Annual four-mile contest between the rival universities decided when Yale crosses the finish line 4 minutes ahead of Harvard—New London, Conn.

Cartoons by Hy. Mayer, World Famous Cartoonist of Puck.

MUTUAL FILM CORP.

THANHOUSER.

FOR HER CHILD (Two Parts—June 23).—Robert Harper, a wealthy business man, lives happily with his wife and their little daughter, but their domestic happiness is disturbed by the advent of the wife's worthless brother, whose constant demands for money and chronic disinclination to work finally make Harper order him from the house. The wife, believing that her brother has not received fair treatment, broods over the affair, and during her husband's absence, leaves the home, taking the child with her.

The husband, angered at his wife's action, institutes suit for separation on the ground of desertion, and the child is awarded to him. Desperate at the prospect of losing her little daughter, Mrs. Harper conceals the child in the country and convinces her husband that his daughter is dead.

Harper is grief stricken at the news. A miniature of his wife and child given to him in the old days is his most precious possession, and when his life is almost sacrificed in an attempt to take it from him, the wife realizes that he still cares for her and their child, and the little family is once more reunited.

THE WIDOW'S MITE (June 28).—The children in the little country school are devoted to their pretty teacher. Helen, the little daughter of a laundress, and Marian and Madeline, twins, and the children of wealthy parents, are her favorite pupils. The twins' uncle, a handsome young bachelor, visits them, the teacher, and falls in love with her. The teacher's birthday arrives, and all the children give her gifts except Helen, whose mother cannot afford to buy a token for Helen. The teacher comforts Helen, but the youngster grieves over her inability to give teacher a gift. Later in the day when the teacher visits Helen's home, an opportunity presents itself. The twins' mother had sent some laundry to Helen's home, and the laundress discovered a valuable pin attached to one of the waists. She showed the trinket to the teacher, and later, Helen, unobserved, by the others, slipped the pin into the teacher's bag. The loss of the pin is discovered, and the laundress remembers that the teacher is the only one who saw the pin. When the pin is discovered in the possession of the teacher her protestations of innocence are not believed, and the little romance between her and the young bachelor bids fair to be ruined when Helen confesses how she unwittingly caused all the trouble.

PRINCESS.

PROFESSOR SNAITH (June 26).—Jack Rawlings, is in love with Mabel Duncan, but Mabel is not sure whether she really cares for him or not. Charley Preston, an athlete, wins Mabel's admiration by his feats of strength, and Jack is speedily left in the background. Preston apparently has a clear field, and Jack is in despair until an opportunity presents itself to best his rival, and he quickly avails himself of the chance. He calls upon Mabel and introduces a quiet little man to her as Professor "Snaith." The athlete ridicules the professor, who bears his jest with uniform meekness.

At a little outing at the seashore the worm turns, for the professor, apparently angered beyond endurance, challenges Preston to a fight, and in the presence of Jack and Mabel proceeds to give the athlete a well deserved trouncing. The little professor departs, leaving a repentant little girl begging Jack to forgive her, and promising never to be bad again.

Jack never told Mabel the identity of the meek little professor, who was really a very muscular bartender, known for his prowess throughout the city. He believes that it wouldn't be safe, and anyway, Mabel mightn't care anyway.

AMERICAN.

CAMEO OF YELLOWSTONE (Two Parts—July 6).—Cameo, a cowpuncher, is the favored suitor for the hand of Col. Houston's daughter, Hope. On an errand to the town he incurs the enmity of Hawkins, a bad man who is beating Paecha, a little squaw and his commonlaw wife. A shooting scrape is averted by the quick action of the friends of the two men.

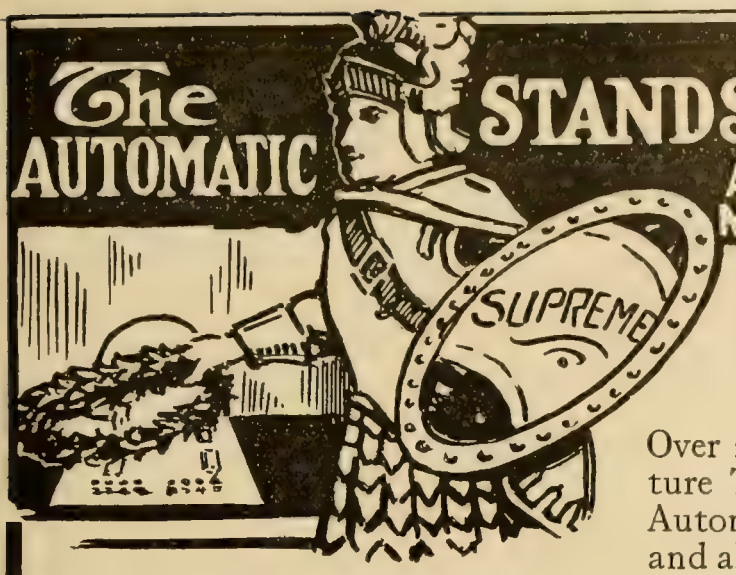
Hawkins, the secret captain of a band of cattle rustlers, is in the saloon planning a raid on a herd of cattle. Cameo, taking pity on Paecha takes her safely home. While riding the open country Cameo stumbles on to the cattle rustlers and rides to Col. Houston's roundup to sound the warning. Upon his arrival he learns from the Colonel that Hawkins, who enjoys the confidence of the cattle men, has accompanied Hope to the House Ranch. He becomes uneasy and rides for the ranch house at full speed. He arrives just in time to surprise Hawkins making love to Hope. Insane with rage for being again crossed by Cameo, the two men watch each other warily. Hawkins pretending to depart succeeds in wounding Cameo in the hand. Hope beseeches Cameo for his own good not to kill Hawkins, and he is allowed to go unharmed. Realizing the game is up, Hawkins hurries off to his men to warn them to drive the cattle out of the country.

In the meantime, the whole country has been aroused and with Cameo and Col. Houston at the head of a band of doughty cowboys, surprises the thieves and drives them on to a cliff. Hawkins makes his escape and to throw his pursuers off the track, doubles back to the ranch house. Love's instinct causes Cameo uneasiness for the safety of Hope alone at the Ranch House and after taking an active part in the posse, rides ahead to the ranch house. He falls into a trap laid by Hawkins. Paecha, the little squaw, inspired by love for Hawkins, has dogged his footsteps in order to wield a protecting influence upon him, discovers the love Hawkins bears for Hope. The revelation arouses jealousy in her and she arrives at the ranch house just in time to see him on the verge of killing Cameo, the man who was kind to her. A shot rings out in the darkness and Hawkins falls lifeless. Hope rushes to Cameo and Paecha comes into the ranch house and tells of her deed and then departs, heart broken.

FEAST AND FAMINE (July 8).—Thomas Benton, a kindly old soul, would shelter his "young fledglings" from the hard knocks of this cold, cruel world, and so keeps at home his daughter Ida, whose eyes, he decides, are not strong enough for the usual occupations open to young womanhood, and sends his son Jerry to college to study surgery in preparation for an "easy career." In spite of the aged bookkeeper's assiduous industry, however, the young man's allowance is exhausted ere he can complete the course, and he returns home.

The father's employer, dying, bequeaths a small fortune to his faithful old clerk. The son begs to be allowed to resume his studies. The father hesitates. Then parental love lights his old eyes end he remarks fondly, "No, my son. You need no profession now. I shall give Ida the money for a new gown and she shall enter society." Not a very momentous decision, eh? But when later we find the girl having squandered the inheritance and ruined her eyesight at all-night social functions, doomed to blindness unless the wherewithal for an expensive operation can be secured, and the boy striving to apply his scant and unfinished knowledge to this awful crisis in a desperate attempt to save his sister's eyesight, we find that that decision has assumed more heroic proportions. "Oh, for a little more knowledge!" cries the boy. "God turn back the Universe and give me a chance to reconsider that 'unimportant' decision," quoth the parent. He gets his chance.

The AUTOMATIC STANDS SUPREME AMONG TICKET SELLING MACHINES THE WORLD OVER



If

Over 2000 Moving Picture Theatres use the Automatic every day and all of them endorse it, why not find out something of its merits?

How it issues 1, 2, 3, 4 or 5 tickets in a flash into the purchaser's hands—and at the same time records every sale.

You don't experiment when you instal the Automatic, for it has been approved as the Standard Ticket Selling Machine the world over. For booklet and terms write nearest office.

The Automatic has been found reliable both as to accuracy, speed, convenience and safety.

If you want to place your business on the same solid basis as other commercial lines let us help to show you the right path.

AUTOMATIC TICKET SELLING & CASH REGISTER COMPANY

1476 Broadway, New York 5923 Alder St., Pittsburgh, Pa. 3rd National Bank Bldg., St. Louis, Mo.

E. M. WILBAND, President H. T. OLIVER, Vice-Pres. and Gen'l Mgr. J. F. CROWE, Treasurer T. J. PAYNE, Secretary

BIOSCOPE

Wish to Announce That They Have Some Open Territory on

"EVANGELINE"

LONGFELLOW'S IMMORTAL POEM

5 Reels

Also to be Released May 15th and Exhibited at Your Request on That Date

"MARINER'S COMPASS"

3 Part Powerful Sea-Coast Drama

"IN THE ENEMY'S POWER"

3 Part Powerful Mexican War Drama

To be Released June 1st

"SAVED FROM HIMSELF"

A Dramatic Episode of the Northwest in 3 Parts

We Print All American Prints in New York. For Immediate Delivery

THE CANADIAN BIOSCOPE CO., Limited, HALIFAX, N. S.

MAJESTIC.

THE BURDEN (June 23). — Mary Bennett was one of those women who always have to have somebody less fortunate than themselves to live and toil for. When John Bennett, her husband, was sentenced unjustly to state prison for a petty crime, she took in her brother Will and supported him in idleness on her earnings. Will did not know what it was to be grateful. He would go off for days at a time with his pals, returning at all hours of the night much the worse for liquor. One evening Mary sat alone and anxious, straining for her brother's footsteps, when someone came hurriedly up the porch and tapped on the window. John's old signal. With a rush of blood to the heart she ran and opened the door. A tall man leaped in out of the darkness, and she was clasped in her husband's arms. When Will stumbled into the cottage next morning, it was deserted. The old wallet with Mary's savings was gone.

A year later, a desperate-looking vagrant shambled up to the open door of a cabin in a remote mountainous district. He could see a woman moving about within, and in a whining voice he began to beg food. She came out into the light, a man following. A look of mutual recognition passed between the squatters and the tramp, and a cruel grin overspread the features of the latter. Will had got his sister and her escaped convict husband in a trap. Threatening to notify the authorities and cause Bennett's arrest, he extorted from Mary the little money they had in the house. Then helping himself to the one horse, he rode away.

Inside three hours, Will flattered himself, the handsome reward offered for his brother-in-law's capture would be his. He sawed and jerked at the horse's bridle. Unfamiliar with his mount and the precipitous roads, loose with shifting dirt and rock, he rode recklessly. Suddenly, on the steep side of a gully, he felt the earth slipping from beneath him. His beast crouched like a cat, quivering all over. The rumble of a landslide down the mountain above them, grew to a deafening road, filling the ravine with thunder. Mary and John, fleeing the cabin, heard it, and a horrible gladness smote their hearts. In that moment they knew that fate had lifted the burden from them forever.

RELIANCE.

OUR MUTUAL GIRL (No. 25—July 6).—Margaret had been back in town with her aunt only a few days when Madge Travers came to inquire after her. She was delighted to find Mrs. Knickerbocker's niece so well.

"Grean, the famous costumer, is coming any minute," Margaret told her with shining eyes. "Auntie is having him design me a wonderful frock. Won't you stay?"

So they spent a most interesting afternoon, watching Grean drape beautiful Oriental fabrics on Margaret as model, creating a costume which suited her to a marvel.

That afternoon, Our Mutual Girl went to the office of "Town and Country" to sit for Jean Parke, society's favorite portrait artist. On her return she was astonished to find Kid Joseph in the reception room. He was dressed in his best, and he carried a haystack of flowers.

"I've got a job as bank messenger on the street," he explained. "The boss of me district, he's gone on me bond. I wants to see Ada. Her an' me——" He stopped, and twirled the bouquet between his knees.

Margaret fixed on him her truthful gaze.

"You wish to propose to Ada?" she said. "Do you think you're good enough? But, of course, that's for her to decide.

She went out of the room and soon returned with her protege. It was rather awkward for the two young East Siders. But Margaret saw at once that Ada cared for Joseph, and was only withholding her consent because she did not feel certain of Margaret's approval. And Margaret herself felt that it would be safer first to try out the reformed gangster.

Here Dunbar, who seized every possible opportunity to ingratiate himself further with Margaret, saw another chance to win her favor. He had Kid Joseph come to his rooms, on some perfectly plausible pretext. First he offered him a drink, which the boy refused. Then he tried to bait him with some bank notes, left with apparent carelessness on the table. From the adjoining room he watched the former thief struggle with himself, and renounce the temptation. Evidently Joseph was determined to live straight.

Margaret received this news joyfully. And if she had any further doubts they were dispelled the next moment. Around the corner of the street came an excited rabble, Joseph in the lead, carrying a forlorn little dog with a tin can dangling from his tail. Evidently "the Kid" had saved the pup from his tormentors, and was bringing it to Ada.

The following day Dunbar and I talked a long while with Mrs. Knickerbocker alone. He scarcely had gone when Madge Travers arrived. When she learned that Dunbar had come to ask Mrs. Knickerbocker's consent and co-operation in winning Margaret for his wife, she said little. But in her heart she was determined to save Our Mutual Girl from the man whom she instinctively disliked. Madge had grown immensely fond of Margaret.

IZZY'S NIGHT OUT (July 4).—Izzy's wife sends him to the store to buy soap. He spends the money for booze instead, and lying down under a shady tree falls asleep. Here he is found by a party of joyriders, who get him into the automobile, take him home and put him to bed—all without disturbing his slumbers. When Izzy wakes next morning he finds himself in the lap of luxury, dressed in silk pajamas, with a valet bending over him to grant his slightest whim. He is gorged with good things to eat and given all the champagne he can drink. When he drops off to sleep again, the jokesters put him back into his old clothes and restore him to his couch under the tree. This time when he wakes, his dream of ecstasy is turned to a nightmare. Instead of a valet, Becky is leaning over him, brandishing a big stick.

BRONCHO.

THE FINAL RECKONING (Two Parts—July 8).—During a state ball given by the Secretary of War at Washington, James Daniels pays marked attention to Mrs. Groves, wife of Lieutenant Groves. Out of politeness Mrs. Groves is nice to him; he persuades her to walk in the garden with him. Lieut. James tells Groves that all Washington is gossiping about the attention of Daniels to Mrs. Groves, and to prove the truth of the gossip, points to Daniels and Mrs. Groves seated among the trees. Groves, mad with jealousy, accuses Daniels and in the struggle that follows between the two men Mrs. Groves is killed. Daniels accuses Groves of killing the woman, and Groves is found guilty upon the evidence of Daniels. So sure that Groves is innocent, his friends waylay the prison van on its way to the prison and liberate Groves, who escapes.

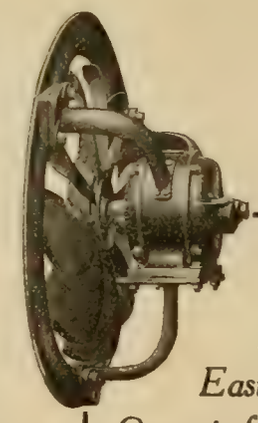
Twenty years pass; the scene of the story shifts to a Western fort, with Colonel James in command. Daniels, who is now Indian Commissioner, on a trip of inspection, breaks a treaty with the Indians, causing them to go on the warpath; Daniels in his attempt to escape becomes entangled in a bed of quicksand and is slowly sinking, when Groves, who has been watching the attack on the stage coach and the cowardice of Daniels, appears to watch the man who he has been trailing for twenty years die by an act of Providence.

DOMINO.

THE CURSE OF HUMANITY (Two Parts—July 9).—Realizing that his father, John Collins, who is a big department store owner, will object to his marrying Mary Eyton, a shop girl, Roger Collins secretly marries her. He receives a note from Mary telling him that in order to save her good name, the marriage must be made known. Roger confides his secret to his mother who visits Mary. Perceiving that the girl is good and worthy of her son, the mother advises Roger to stick to her; but the father, who has other plans for his son, and after he has failed to buy Mary's silence, turns Roger out. Roger, untrained to any kind of labor, loses position after position and drinks to drown his sorrow, leaving Mary to earn a few pennies by sewing. Several years later on Christmas eve, Mrs. Collins is grieving for her lost son. She receives a letter from the detective agency which she has employed to locate her son, telling her that they are unable to find trace of him. Mrs. Collins takes the matter in her own hands and, hoping to learn something of Roger, searches the streets of the East Side. She finds a poor little barefoot girl standing before a toy shop window. The child tells her in reply to Mrs. Collins' question that her mother is unable to buy her shoes because her daddy takes all the money for drink. With the spirit of Christmas in her heart, Mrs. Collins buys the child toys and takes her to her poverty-stricken home, only to find that the child is her own grandchild. Roger returns to the house, looks through the window, sees his baby at her prayers and hears her ask God to send her a new daddy who does not drink. He resolves to be a better man, and a reconciliation takes place on Christmas morning in Roger's humble home.

KAY-BEE.

THE HEART OF A CROOK (Two Parts—July 8.—Al Metz is accused of horse stealing. He goes to a nearby farm, owned by Rudolph Slausson, and there hides from the sheriff and a posse of cowboys. He gets away from them and boards a freight train bound for New York City, where he robs the New York National Bank. Fearing that he will be caught, he goes to the Central Station with the money on his person. While there a number of emigrants come in, among whom is a young German girl. As he is afraid he will be caught with the



Quiet
Economical
Easily Installed
Operate for years with practically no care.

Westinghouse - Ventura Ventilating Fans

Ideal for Moving Picture Theatres. Inexpensive to operate because of the low current consumption and long life.

Full information on request.

Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co.
East Pittsburgh, Pa.

BE UP TO DATE
Install
CORCORAN TANKS
Get No. 6 Price List
A. J. CORCORAN, Inc., 11½ JOHN STREET NEW YORK CITY

We Buy and Sell Second Hand Films and Moving Picture Machines
WESTERN FILM BROKERS
37 So. Wabash Ave. :: :: Chicago, Ill.

Good Power's No. 5 Machine, complete, $70.00
Edison, Exhibition Model, all complete, $90.00
200 reels of film, new lot, $4.00 to $5.00
ECONOMY FILM CO.,
105 FOURTH AVE. PITTSBURGH, PA.

"FOTOPLAYER"
the instrument that supplies
MUSIC FOR THE PICTURES
The American Photo Player Sales Co.
Berkeley, California.

PACK YOUR THEATRE!
Simple plan; brings CAPACITY business every time. Good for small house, large house, small town, large town, anywhere, any time, any admission price. Especially good for moving picture theaters, also vaudeville. Can be used one to three times a week indefinitely. Dead easy; no ability required. No expense. No premiums. No souvenirs. No goods to buy. Patrons delighted. Results guaranteed. Be first in your town. Write QUICK. G. GRAVER, Manager, Colonial Amusement Co., Jackson, Mich.

Northern Feature Film Exchange
Suite 405, Schiller Building, Chicago
Phone Central 6280

WHEN YOUR PICTURE MACHINE NEEDS REPAIRING
WHY DON'T YOU SEND IT TO US!
We have the best equipped machine shop in the country and can repair any make of machine. Write us and get acquainted.
WE BUY SECOND-HAND MACHINES.
GEO. M. HOKE SUPPLY CO.
76 N. State St. (bet. Lake and Randolph) Chicago, Ill.

The Greyhound

By PAUL ARMSTRONG and WILSON MIZNER

In Five Parts

The Strand Theatre of New York now running "The Greyhound" with a seating capacity of 3500, packed to the doors at every performance. A wonderful deep-sea drama with perfect photography. Stunning and original scenic effects.

"Let us be judged as others judge us." The critics say:

"The Greyhound" is a powerful film story. The acting of the play is beyond criticism from start to finish. The cast is one of a uniform degree of excellence. The scenes are strongly dramatic. The photography perfect. D. Sunday Telegraph.

"The Greyhound" is a play with highly wrought incidents interspersed with genuine comedy. A perfect production. Andrews. M. P. News.

"The Greyhound" is a likely winner and tells an interesting tale. It is a genuine photoplay. The abundant dramatic acting mounts steadily to a climax. Photographically this feature is a superior one. The scenes are clear and steady. D. Mirror.

"The Greyhound" is a high class feature, presenting a powerful and dramatic story in a most effective manner. Interest is held on edge to the very finish of the picture. A more appropriate and able cast would be difficult to select. Photography throughout is the best. Pete. Billboard.

The photoplay version of "The Greyhound" will take an important place among feature productions. It is a complete story interestingly told, intelligent interpretation, careful direction, adequate staging and finally good photography. M. P. World.

Wire Territory Interested In. "The House of Broadway Features."

LIFE PHOTO FILM CORPORATION

Executive Offices: 220 West 42nd Street, New York City

money, he deposits it in the bundle of the German girl. When this girl reaches her home she finds upon opening her bundle a bunch of bank notes. She shows them to her husband, who is Mr. Slausson, owner of the farm on which Metz hid. They are both delighted over the money, but are unable to explain where it came from. They finally decide to go back to Germany, but while purchasing their tickets the agent notices that the number on the check is that of the check that was stolen from the bank. They are taken to the police station and questioned as to the money and held as guilty of the bank robbery.

In the meantime Metz at a New York hotel, sees in a paper that the real robbers of the National Bank have ben caught. He recognizes the name of Slausson as that of the man who helped him hide from the sheriff and the cowboys. He then decides that the only thing for him to do is to go to the police station and confess that he is the real robber of the bank. This he does and Mrs. Slausson and her husband are released.

GREAT PLAYERS FEATURE FILM CORPORATION.

URIEL ACOSTA (Five Parts).—The story of Acosta deals with the persecution of the Jews during the time of the middle ages. Our unfortunate hero is a descendant of an unhappy family whose father was driven out from Spain on account of his religious belief. He settled down in Portugal where he fell a victim of the inquisition, leaving a wife and three children.

The church at that time issued a decree that the Jews should be burned alive unless they turned Christians. Acosta's mother, for the sake of her children, embraced the Christian religion, and Acosta, a born genius, found favor with the Cardinal of the Church. He adopted and educated him according to the formalities of the Catholic faith of those days. But the beaten path was too narrow for the born genius. As a boy of twelve, he stole out at night from the dormitory, taking with him a cross to safeguard against persecution and a volume of the Talmud which was so near to his heart. Such were the companions that accompanied him on his unknown journey, unmapped, for the present as well as for his future life.

But, luckily, the following morning he was found, exhausted and starved, by Dr. De Silva, who recognized him as a Jew by a volume of the Talmud in the boy's possession. He took him to his home and informed Acosta's mother, by letter, that he had found her boy. Dr. De Silva adopted him and gave him a liberal education.

Fifteen years later, we find the unhappy family in Amsterdam reunited. Here the Jews enjoyed more freedom than in Spain, and acquired wealth and culture. As a great teacher, Acosta, like all great men, came before his time; as a noble soul, he was too tender to fight the bigots and conventionalities of his age; and as a reformer, his ideas soared above the crowd. In his days of affliction, Judith, the daughter of Vanderstraten, shared his trials, his pains and woes with him. Her tenderness and sympathy won Acosta's admiration and their constant companionship soon ripened into love.

After he had published his first book, he aroused the attention of the most enlightened minds of his ago, and stirred up the fanatics who found his views to be detrimental to the prevailing ideas of his time and the church especially. He was brought before the Council of the Wise, and found guilty of blasphemy, excommunicated from the church, banished from the country and his book committed to the flames.

When brought in the synagogue before the Council of the Wise to renounce his teachings and repent, he said that he had nothing to renounce and repent. He wrote what his mind and heart dictated to him. And when the ban was put upon him—and when Judith heard the curses from the Rabbi's lips that—"Crave shalt thou for the love of a woman and whoever yields it be dead"—she threw herself in his arms, denounced the judges and made a declaration of love to which Ben Jochai vigorously protested.

When Vanderstraten finds himself financially embarrassed, he aplies to Ben Jochai for aid, who, in turn, asks him for his daughter's hand. The bargain is made with the consent of Judith. And when on the wedding day Acosta comes to bid farewell to his dearest, who, in his day of trial gave him so much succor, he finds that she took the vial. Acosto finds that he has nothing to live for now, but the gloomy shadows of his thoughts. Despondent and grief-stricken, Acosta dies by his own destruction.

WORLD FILM CORPORATION.

THE WORLD, THE FLESH AND THE DEVIL.—Desirous of making the child of his mistress, Mrs. Brophy, heir to his fortune, Sir James Hall bribes the nurse, Mrs. Stanger, to exchange his infant son, Robert, for the illegitimate son, Nicholas. Mrs. Stanger and her baby daughter, Gertrude, having just been deserted by her husband, has a strong motherly feeling for the wronged mother. Consequently disobeys instructions, and deceives Sir James by not making the exchange. As years pass, both sons grow to manhood and Gertrude to a handsome young woman who acts as a barmaid, under an assumed name. Her father, Stanger, a pal of Nicholas and frequenter of the tavern, does not know her as his daughter.

Mrs. Brophy, on her death-bed, gives to her son, Nicholas, a letter written by Sir James, explaining the scheme of exchange of his infant sons. Nicholas, thinking he is the legitimate son, becomes much elated, until told by her in her dying breath the exchange was never made, and the old nurse was the only living person who knew the secret. Nicholas immediately goes to see Sir James, but finding him out, meets Robert, to whom he shows the letter and succeeds in convincing him that he, Nicholas, is the rightful heir.

Robert at once departs from his father's house, but before leaving, gives to his fiancee, Beatrice, a note for Nicholas to meet him at the old mill to obtain more information about his knowledge of the affair. Beatrice reads the note before delivery, and, fearing trouble, makes her way to the mill and hides. Nicholas encounters Sir James, who is very much upset at his past being unearthed, but wishing to verify the story, makes known his intentions to visit the old nurse. Nicholas, knowing this, arrives before him, and under pretense of giving his old servant a kerchief, chokes her with it while placing it about her neck. After his escape, the police finding the kerchief to be a handkerchief upon which Robert's initials appear, seek him as the murderer. Nicholas turns the meeting at the mill into a trap for Richard, who is locked up into the same room where Beatrice is hiding. Together they make a daring escape down the mill-wheel, where a desperate battle is fought, with fatal results to one of Nicholas's confederates, Grigg, the miller. Nicholas visits the tavern and falls in love with Gertrude, who is enticed to his rooms by Stanger, known as Dyke. After being drugged and spending a hideous night, her escape is planned by Dyke, who, during the arrangements, discovers her to be his own daughter. Together they start for the trial of Robert, who has ben accused of murder, and is being defended by Nicholas, who in turn has all the witnesses bribed to testify against his client. At the critical point, Stanger and his daughter appear, giving evidence against the defendant's lawyer, which results in his suicide and the clearing up of the plot.

PASQUALI-AMERICAN CO.

THE CHIMNEY-SWEEPS OF THE VALLEY OF AOSTA (Five Parts).—Count Frederick, while hunting, meets Lucy, the daughter of Masone, a gamekeeper on his father's estate and a tender romance unfolds. Later, Lucy is tenderly rocking the cradle of her baby, dreaming of her lover's return and her approaching wedding. Frederick has confessed to his father and has asked his permission to marry, but the proud old nobleman refuses to let his son marry beneath his station in life and sends him off to France, dismissing Lucy's father from his estate. Lucy and her father journey to Polain where the former game-keeper gets a position in the stable, and after eight years loses it through old age. Starvation stares them in the face and little Tony, the son of Count Frederick and Lucy, is apprenticed to Gaspard, a chimney-sweep, who is buying poor little boys for his work in Turin.

In the meantime, Frederick has returned from France and traced Lucy and the boy to Polain, but cannot marry her because of his father's opposition. By chance, Gaspard and his boys pass the house of Count Frederick. Tony, the youngest of the crew, becomes sick and sits down at the door of his father's house. Gaspard finds him and compels the youngster to undertake a job, but Charles, his little friend, meets Tony and offers to do the job for him, arranging to meet him where he was resting. Poor Charles is suffocated in the chimney which Tony was supposed to clean.

Meantime the Count has found Tony and discovers that he is his son; he takes him to his father and declares his intention to renounce his title and marry Lucy. The old Count's heart is changed by the noble little fellow and he consents.

Lucy and her father, unable to stand the loneliness without Tony, come to Turin to beg Tony from Gaspard, but are greeted with the news that Tony has just been killed. Crazed with grief, Lucy is continually appealing to the chimney in her home to give her back her boy. Count Frederick goes to Polain with Tony, but Lucy does not recognize either. Her poor old father has thought of the novel idea of dressing Tony up as a chimney-sweep. She at last recognizes him and her reason is restored. Lucy and the Count are united and we leave them in the midst of happiness.

ECLECTIC.

THE PERILS OF PAULINE (Eighth Episode).—Satisfied that their plan to cause the disappearance of Pauline would this time be successful, Hicks and his hired assassins ride away. Mrs. Haines decides to notify Harry of Pauline's disappearance. A curious mental message seems to warn Harry that Pauline is in danger, and he prepares to leave for the West. As he is making his preparations he gets the wire from Mrs. Haines. He leaves at once. At the big powwow of the Sioux Indians the medicine man prophesies that a great white goddess will come to the Sioux from the ground and will help them to throw off the yoke of the white men. The tribe are very much excited and start out on a hunt to secure the necessary provisions to entertain their expectant guest. One of the Indians chases a coyote over the hills and is very much surprised to see Pauline rise in front of him apparently from the solid ground. Pauline had discovered a way out. He takes her to the camp and she is proclaimed the goddess of the prophesy. They try to induce her to lead them in a war on the white settlement, but she refuses. Disgusted they tell her she will have to undergo the trial by Oracle. This consists in placing her in a trench from which there is no escape and rolling down on her a huge boulder. If she is not hurt then she must indeed be what they think her. Harry, in the meantime, has arrived at the ranch and on learning the truth has set out to do what he can to find Pauline. There is one half-

VITASLIDE

Vitaslides insure a greater percentage of returns than any other advertising medium—bigger results at less expense. Equally well adapted for local or general advertising, and for almost any line of business.

VITASLIDE COMPANY
GEO. BRECK, Manager
70 Turk Street San Francisco, Cal.

MENISCUS BI-CONVEX COMBINATION CONDENSERS

have taken the country by storm. If you don't believe it ask Moving Picture World Richardson what he thinks of the Meniscus Bi-Convex Condenser Combinations. Mr. Richardson at first couldn't believe until he saw with his own eyes. Ask him what he thinks this combination will do for you. Better yet, read his comment, or ask any expert operators who are now using the Meniscus Bi-Convex Combination, and the country is full of them. Just think of us doubling our import order every thirty days. If you believe in perfect projection and will listen to experts, slip us your order immediately. Don't depend on your own dealer. We are exclusive importers and jobbers, but many jobbers are not on their job.

PRICES.

	Two Plano Fig. 1	One Meniscus One Plano Fig. 2	One Meniscus One Bi-Convex Fig. 3
Jena Imported Plano Condensers	$1.50 Ea.	Half Doz.,	$7.50
Jena Imported Meniscus Condensers	2.00 Ea.	Half Doz.,	9.00
Jena Imported Bi-Convex Condensers	2.00 Ea.	Half Doz.,	9.00
Jena Imported Meniscus Bi-Convex Combination			$4.00 per Pr.
Jena Imported Meniscus Bi-Convex Combination			Half Doz., $20.00

For information concerning improved and perfect projection address
Projection Department, Laemmle Film Service, 252 Hennepin Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.

Business Boomers

In the trade the saying goes that we "buy with a thousand eyes," meaning that we search and sift plays, players and photography with the utmost watchfulness. That accounts for our FEATURE FILM SUPREMACY. Here's evidence personified—

"BREWSTER'S MILLIONS" With EDWARD ABELES Five Parts—Comedy

"NEPTUNE'S DAUGHTER" With ANNETTE KELLERMANN Eight Parts

"SEALED ORDERS" Seven Parts

"THE BANKER'S DAUGHTER" Five Parts

"HARRY LAUDER" One Reel Comedy

These are July and August Releases

Celebrated Players Film Company

LEADERS IN FILMDOM'S PROGRESS

SCHILLER BUILDING, 64 W. RANDOLPH STREET, CHICAGO

Liberty Motion Picture Company

"The name and fame of 'LIBERTY' will circle the globe."

Our equipment is "top-notch"
Our aim is to top the "top."

We are equipped to handle any amount of outside printing.

WANTED!!

Scenarios:—Two or three reel Canadian and Northwestern stories — strong on exteriors. Let them be original.
Address, Scenario Department.

LIBERTY MOTION PICTURE COMPANY

20-52 E. HERMAN STREET :: :: :: GERMANTOWN, PHILA.

breed in the Indian encampment who has become very much attached to Pauline and he sets out to tell the settlers the peril she is in. He meets with an accident, however, and is unable to carry out his intention. Harry in scouring the country finds him and gets the message. He rides as fast as he can to the place where the halfbreed tells him the trial is to take place. He arrives just as the boulder is started on its death-dealing trip. There is no time to get Pauline out of the trench and to jump in himself means sure death. There seems to be no help within miles. Harry has been resourceful in the past, but this seems almost too much. He finally —but this would be telling tales out of school. The pictures shown here will show you just what he did and the terrible danger both he and Pauline encountered.

THE TRAMP (Three Parts).—A convict in one of the large penitentiaries makes his escape by means of a rope made from knotted bed clothes. His escape is discovered and a hot chase is started but the convict makes good his escape. He steals some clothes from a band of peasants working in the fields and goes to a lonely house which he proceeds to rob. One of the peasants, an old man, suffers from an attack of sunstroke and is taken to his home and put to bed while his daughter goes for the doctor. The old man hears the noise made by the convict and goes to the room to investigate. He is attacked by the tramp and in the struggle is fatally hurt. The convict completes his robbery and secures money to last him for some time. In the meantime an old tramp comes along and on being unable to gain admittance to the house climbs a ladder and enters through the skylight in the roof. In the attic of the house he finds a store of provisions. He helps himself and leaves by the same way he came. As he is tying his stolen provisions in his bundle, the daughter returns and sees him. When she enters the house she discovers the crime and notifies the police. A search reveals the tramp and he is accused of the crime. He pleads innocence, but the provisions and the identification of the girl lead to his conviction and he is sentenced to imprisonment for life. The convict in the meantime has been living on the stolen money and frequents the cafes and dance halls. His escape has not been forgotten and the police are still looking for him. He is recognized by two detectives and placed under arrest. As they are taking him out of the cafe he breaks away, but falls over the edge of a balcony and is very badly hurt. He is taken to the hospital in the prison in a dying condition. There he finds the attendant is the tramp who was convicted of the crime he committed. The tramp has made friends with all the other prisoners and the prison authorities on account of his docile manner and good humor. Realizing that he is dying, the convict makes a confession exonerating the tramp of the murder of the old peasant. His confession frees the tramp, whose first duty leaving prison is to give thanks for the Providence which has kept him so carefully.

GIANTS-WHITE SOX WORLD TOUR (Six Parts).—These two famous teams started from Cincinnati on a trip that took them to all parts of the world. On this trip they played games in a great many of the principal cities and created an impression that will never be forgotten. They were given an opportunity to see many places of interest that are denied the usual tourist, and the cameraman was allowed to get views of these places. Many adventures were met with, that show the trip was not all a pleasure jaunt. During the hurricane on the Pacific the waves washed right over the camera, and the man's life was in danger every minute. The teams visited Japan, China, Manila, Australia, India, Egypt, Naples, Rome, France and England. In all these places the most notable persons turned out to see the games and in many instances took part. The pictures show them and the interest they took.

The world's greatest baseball fan read of the trip and decided to go along. He did. He was not endowed with a long purse, but by riding the brake beams, stowing away, working and begging he got to see every game. His "rooting" was a revelation to the natives of foreign lands and the expression on their faces is very comical. So are some of the adventures of the players. They might be able to look after themselves in the United States, but foreign lands and foreign tongues are a different matter.

The interest displayed in the American National game was so great that the rulers in many instances came to the games. The Khedive of Egypt was there in person. So was the King of England and 85,000 of his subjects. The Pope gave a personal interview to the tourists. The Governor-General of Australia threw the first ball.

The Sphinx saw baseball for the first time. The Colosseum at Rome, the tomb of Napoleon, the Mosque of Mahommed Ali in the great Lybian Desert, the Pyramids, the great Carnival of Nice, in which the players took part, the human monkeys in New Guinea throwing cocoanuts from the tree tops at the boys, coaling ship by the women at Hong Kong, Hans Lobert's great race round the bases against a cattle horse are only a few of the many events shown.

THE LION'S BRIDE (Three Parts).—Mr. Effington and his daughters Maud and Edith hear Miss Destinn at the opera. Edith expresses a wish to meet Miss Destinn, so her father invites Miss Destinn to the birthday party to be given for Edith. Maud is very fond of animals. A friend sends her some lion cubs which she trains to do tricks. She also has several full grown lions in her private menagerie. Edith is very fond of music and loves her young teacher, Jack Harris. Her father objects to her attachment, and drives him from the house. Atwood, a business friend of Mr. Effington, asks for Edith's hand in marriage. At the birthday party he proposes to her, but is refused. At the party Maud is showing how tame her lions are, and on a dare Miss Destinn, who has accepted the invitation to be present, enters the cage with her and, with one of the lions lying on the piano, within a few inches of her, sings parts of Mignon. Atwood chagrined at Edith's refusal of his hand refuses to assist Mr. Effington in his business, with the result that the business fails. Mr. Effington does not survive the shock and the two girls, brought up in luxury, are forced to go out into the world to make a living. They consult Miss Destinn as to what they should do and receive her assurance that she will help them as best she can. They decide to use Maud's lions and advertise for a young man to play a part in a moving picture drama. Jack Harris sees the advertisement and answers it. He and the girls are much surprised to meet again and he renews his suit for Edith's heart. Edith accepts him and the preparations are made for the wedding. Maud is heart-broken and confesses that she has loved Jack for a long time. She goes with the happy couple to get the marriage license, but cannot face the ordeal. Disappointed and dejected, she goes back to the house and dressing in her sister's wedding dress, enters the cage of the lions. The lions do not seem to recognize her and she loses control of them. When Jack and Edith return they are horrified to find that Maud has become indeed "The Lion's Bride."

LEAVES OF MEMORY (Four Parts).—Jack Landon, an aviator and inventor, has almost perfected a new parachute for use on aeroplanes when he runs short of money. He writes to his rich brother, Philip, and asks him for monetary help. This Philip refuses and as a result Jack tries the parachute before it is completed. The parachute collapses and Jack has a terrible fall from which he eventually recovers, but is left an apparently harmless imbecile. Philip takes him to his home to be cared for. While he is there the sight of Philip throws Jack into a terrible rage, as the only thing he seems to remember of the time prior to the accident is the fact that his brother refused to lend him the money. Philip's secretary, Carl Roberts, is in love with his employer's wife, but she remains true to her husband. Roberts believes that she would marry him if her husband were not alive, so he uses Jack. While Philip and his wife are walking in the garden, Roberts takes Jack to a path they must pass. Roberts then shoots Philip and flees. The blame is placed on Jack, as everyone remembers that he had in his rage threatened to kill his brother. Jack is taken to an insane asylum and placed in confinement. Roberts renews his suit for the hand of Philip's wife and eventually marries her. He uses her money to have a good time, leaving her alone a great part of the time. Under the careful care of the doctors Jack gradually regains his faculties, but has no remembrance of the tragedy. The doctors write to Mrs. Roberts that her brother-in-law is almost better and suggests that she and her husband take him away. Mrs. Roberts goes to the asylum to see Jack. Sight of her seems to bring back to him something of the past. He sees Roberts from the window and the past rushes back in such a flood that he suffers a relapse. He eventually recovers, this time with a full record of the guilty man. He leaves the asylum and makes his way to the home of his brother to accuse Roberts. Roberts has been dissipating to such an extent that his brain has been playing him tricks. He several times thinks that he sees his former employer and when Jack comes into the room the strain is too much for his weakened heart.

EXCELSIOR FEATURE FILM CO.

THE TOLL OF MAMMON (Four Parts).—Dr. John Wright is a young, rising physician. His wife, who was raised in luxury, rebels at their present poverty. Having received an invitation to a great social event, she pleads with her husband to devise some means for obtaining finery, so as to be able to accept the invitation. He borrows two sets of jewels, one of which she loses at the ball. Both are panic stricken. He gives his note for $5,000 to cover the loss. Later he makes a great surgical discovery and becomes famous.

Four crooked promoters seek his endorsement to lend legitimacy to their fake tuberculosis cure and promise him $50,000. He refuses. Later the conspirators secure the promissory note and threaten foreclosure. This, and his wife's entreaties to accept the money, influence him to do so. The promoters build a sanatorium and use their dangerous "Alligator Serum."

Dr. Wright's little daughter contracts tuberculosis while her father is away at the sanatorium looking over the records. The number of deaths here astound him. Realizing the "Cure" to be a fake, he demands the elimination of his name. They refuse and a struggle ensues. The doctor is wounded and they, fearing exposure, imprison him in the sanatorium. Meanwhile the chief promoter makes advances to the shallow wife and claims the doctor has deserted her; but she repulses him and rushes into another room into the arms of her husband, who has escaped. After hearing her story, the doctor throttles the promoter and ejects him from their home. He then finds his child has been given the fatal serum.

Dr. Wright hears that a warrant is out for his arrest, on account of his connection with the sanatorium. Grieving over his threatened arrest, the possible death of his only child and his future ruin, he seizes his revolver, contemplating suicide. The three promoters rush in to buy his silence, but all are filled with fear as the police approach. The doctor, followed by the fear-crazed promoters, rushes out and jumps into a launch. They are pursued by another boat containing the police, who open fire. One of the police bullets strikes the gasoline on board the doctor's boat, which explodes, blowing boat and occupants high in the air. Dr. Wright, the survivor, is only slightly injured, and being caught, he is sentenced to "Thirty Years at Hard Labor," for manslaughter.

Broken and dejected from the fate which has follower her foolish vanity and her insistance upon her husband accepting the $50,000, and remorse over her fast failing child, the doctor's wife sits and watches her baby die of tuberculosis. She earns her living by sewing, and meets him after some years of privation at the prison gate, when he has been pardoned after contracting the dread disease. She accompanies him to the famous Adirondack Sanatorium, where he is cured within one year amidst characteristic scenes in and about the sanatorium. The two, now thoroughly restored to health and sanity through their terrible experiences, finds much to live for in their mutual, understanding love, though without riches.

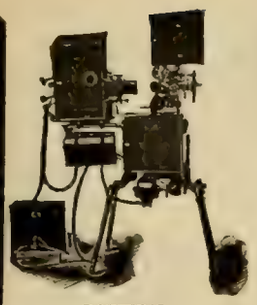
FAMOUS PLAYERS.

THE SPITFIRE (Four Parts).—Bruce Morson, a young American, returning from travels in Egypt, is robbed of some valuable jewels in a London hotel, and chases the thieves to the yacht "Spitfire," at Calais, which the crooks have boarded and taken command of under forged orders from its owner, Marcus Girard, who is in London. The yacht is just about to sail out of port, but by a ruse, Morson manages to get aboard, and promptly falls in love with Valda, Girard's pretty daughter, who is also a "spitfire." The crooks tell Valda her father is a smuggler, show her the jewels they have stolen, and convince her they are guarding them for her father, and that Morson is a custom officer, spying upon her in order to trap Girard. Valda indignantly turns upon the helpless Morson, orders him into seaman's costume, and compels him to work his passage to New York. On the homeward voyage, Morson undergoes many ordeals, both humorous and dramatic, and is even finally accused of the theft of his own property, before the final denouement, which shows the burning of the yacht and the heroic rescue of Valda by Morson, who is at last able to right himself, baffle the thieves, and win the woman he loves.

GAUMONT.

KRONSTADT (3 parts).—Kronstadt, that grim and forbidding looking pile of granite that rises out of the Baltic Sea and appears, by its very look, to give the mute but stern warning "Sheer Off" to all would-be intruders. Yes, this fortress was indeed a formidable and apparently impregnable guard to the capital of Russia, and had always defied the wiles of the ever-watchful and eagle-eyed spy. Yet its secrets and fastnesses were at length pierced by a frail girl who unwillingly lent herself to the most despicable of work, but stress of circumstances forced Marian Best to surrender both scruples and principles to the unpalpable task of "spying out the land." Left an orphan with no means of subsistence and her invalid brother to nurse and supoprt, Marian found the burden too heavy; so when a relative offered what appeared to her untold wealth and the means of saving the life of her little brother, she

FLA. GA. ALA. MISS. LA. APEX FEATURE SERVICE 315 RHODES BUILDING ATLANTA, GA. TENN. N. C. S. C. VA.



POWER'S

We are Distributors for the

POWER'S
SIMPLEX
MOTIOGRAPH and EDISON MACHINES

Quality and Quantity

YOU receive BOTH when you purchase ANYTHING from US

The Quality is the Best Obtainable
The Quantity, the Most for the Money

We guarantee everything that you purchase, and if it isn't RIGHT we'll make it RIGHT

We Equip Motion Picture Theatres Completely

MOTIOGRAPH

Picture Theatre Equipment Co.

21 East 14th Street New York City

The Largest Motion Picture Supply House in America

HAVE YOU VISITED OUR SALESROOMS?

SIMPLEX

W. S. TICKET VENDERS
MIRROROIDE SCREENS
A. C. to D. C. CONVERTER
P. T. E. OIL. 25c. A CAN. Try It.

EDISON

"Agfa"

NON FLAM POSITIVE

RAW FILM SUPPLY CO.

Sole American Agents

15 East 26th St. New York

EXCELSIOR
FEATURE FILM CO., INC.

"THE TOLL OF MAMMON"
IN FOUR PARTS

Ready for Shipment

A forcible, American-made masterpiece, featuring OCTAVIA HANDWORTH Supported by a Cast of Well-Known Screen Stars

Full of action.

A punch in every scene.

A heart-gripping story, founded on fact. Revealing a moral which appeals to every individual.

Strong, dramatic acting. Excellent in photography.

State Rights Now Selling

EXECUTIVE OFFICE
110 WEST 40TH ST., NEW YORK
SUIT 1002 - PHONE, BRYANT 8059
ARTHUR ROSENBACH Sales Mgr.

STUDIO
LAKE PLACID
N.Y.

succumbed to the tempting offer thus placed before her. This relative was a member of the International Secret Service, and he found it possible to place in the household of General Stefanovitch, Deputy-Governor of Kronstadt, an English governess. Marian's consent to do the work being obtained, she found herself established in the household of the Deputy-Governor and quickly became an immense favorite with everyone, with the exception of Colonel Bonzo, the general's chief of staff, who looked on everyone, especially foreigners, with suspicion and dislike.

This was not the case with Captain Paul Zassulic, who quickly succumbed to the charms of the English girl. After a few weeks the attachment became mutual. One day Paul proposed to take Marian and her charges on his yacht, the "Esmeralda," to explore Battery No. 3. This and other similar excursions gave Marian the sought-for opportunities. She could not, however, control her love for Paul, and when he proposed she consented, although recognizing her engagement was to a man whose country she was betraying. One day Marian received a secret letter, which to her delight, informed her that as soon as she could obtain the plan of Fort St. Peter, she could leave Russia. The same mail brought a letter to General Stefanovitch, informing him that various sketches of the fort had fallen into the hands of the enemy. The suspicions of Colonel Bonzo, ever on the alert regarding Marian were now roused into activity and he determined to trap the spy. Marian had found out that the desired documents were kept in a secret drawer in the General's desk and having secured the key she made plans for obtaining them that night. On finding the key of his study missing, the General explained to Colonel Bonzo that he must have mislaid it. The latter having a duplicate one, was able to secure the door. Marian, who always entertained the Governor and his friends, after her charges had retired, pretended that evening to be ill and left the drawing room early. She had not, however, reckoned with Colonel Bonzo's cunning, who, now thoroughly suspicious wished to find out if Paul was her accomplice, so handing him the key, sent him on some trivial pretext to the study. There Paul discovered the spy was no other than his beloved Marian. In an agony of terror and remorse, she told him the reasons for undertaking her hateful role and implored him to save her. Paul had only time to whisper "Trust me; there is only one way to save you," when the General, Colonel Bonzo and some soldiers entered the room. Paul, who had concealed the document, entirely disarmed suspicion by recounting how he caught Marian searching the room. He was then commanded to take her on board the "Esmeralda" and conduct her to the dungeon on the Island of St. Paul. On reaching the yacht, the escort was ordered to remain in their boat and allow it to be towed behind the "Esmeralda." Too late, they found they had been duped when the tow rope was severed, and they saw the yacht steaming away at full speed.

When Colonel Bonzo found the plans of Fort St. Peter missing, he determined at all hazards to have the two runaways brought back, and he instructed the Russian Secret Service agents to trap them, so that when Marian and Paul arrived in Paris these sleuth-hounds were already on their track, and one night Paul was overpowered and dragged to the offices of the society. Marian called in the services of a clever and well-known detective, Robert Stevens. Meanwhile, Paul, finding himself imprisoned, discovered means of communicating with Marian, who, aided by the detective, concocted a scheme to rescue Paul. Marian wrote a letter stating that unless a free pardon was granted to Paul within an hour, the plans would be in the hands of the enemy. This letter was delivered by Stevens, Marian waiting outside with a number of detectives. Colonel Bonzo, who had arived in Paris to take charge of the culprits, apparently agreed to Marian's terms and she was summoned to the room. Colonel Bonzo, always prone to treachery, as soon as he got the plans into his possession, gave a signal to his men to seize Marian, but the detective, who had taken precautions against such treachery, was too quick for him. With his whistle to his lips, he pointed out the guard to the Colonel, who, fearing the disclosures that would be entailed by a public fracas, was forced to capitulate and write a document granting a free pardon to Paul Zassulio.

GENERAL FILM CO.

A KINGDOM AT STAKE (Three Parts—June 28).—Prince Vladimar, of Vandalia, a small kingdom, is greatly disquieted by the attitude of the Revolutionist Party, whose inflammatory literature occasionally finds its way into the Royal Palace. Chief of these Revolutionists is Yan Kador, an earnest, conscientious worker in the people's cause and a professor in the university. One day, while strolling meditatively about the gardens of the Palace, Kador sees a pretty little girl climb a dangerous wall to pick flowers and slide suddenly down toward him. He rescues the little girl, restores her doll and goes his way little dreaming that he has saved the life of the tiny Queen Yolande.

Sometime later in an effort to show a friendly hand toward the malcontents, the Prince Regent Vladimir decides to select a tutor for the little Queen from among the professors of the university. Believing that he could vitally aid the people's cause by securing so desirable a relationship toward the hated tyrant, Kador readily acquieces in the earnest entreaties of his Revolutionist companions and applies for the position. At the Palace the professors line up with their diplomas for inspection. Yolande insists upon making her own selection and passes from one professor to the other. Imagine Kador's surprise when he is suddenly seized by the little Queen and dragged forward to the Regent, recognizing in the little girl he had saved the hated tyrant of Vandalia. He is duly sworn in and thenceforth becomes the daily companion of Yolande. A great friendship springs up between them and one day Yolande innocently shows him the secret entrance to her apartments.

Meanwhile the Revolutionists grow uneasy and urge Kador to provide them with a chart of the Palace grounds. This he does, torn by conflicting emotions of love for the little Queen and his sworn duty to his compatriots. The day comes when the test can be put off no longer. That night Kador receives a message that the "friends of liberty" will force an entrance into the Palace at midnight to murder the Queen and Prince Regent. Kador spends an evening of great mental agony. Treason—or murder. He finally decides for the latter and rushes madly into the Prince Regent's room with the fateful message in his hand. Ten minutes later the little band of Revolutionists are captured.

The day of the trial, Kador steps calmly up into the center of the room, drops upon his knees and begs forgiveness of his horror-stricken companions and electrifies the Court with the news of his duplicity. They are condemned to die, and the following day the death decree is sent to the little Queen to be officially signed. Glancing down the list of the condemned, Yolande sees the name of her beloved teacher. Across the bottom she writes: "I pardon." With a smile Prince Regent seizes the death decree and starts to tear it up when the aged minister interferes, reminding him that no death sentence can be executed without the Queen's signature. The following day the little Queen holds Court and in her presence the conspirators are shown the signature which makes them free. Thus did Yolande win the hearts of even her most disloyal subjects.

SUBSCRIBE FOR
Moving Picture World
DOMESTIC... $3.00
CANADA..... 3.50
FOREIGN.... 4.00

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS

Classified Advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted

SITUATIONS WANTED.

CAMERAMAN.—Thoroughly experienced, sober, reliable. Will go anywhere with right party. C. Fetty, 709 N. Senate Ave., Indianapolis, Ind.

MANAGER.—Experienced in all departments and lines of the business. At present employed but would like a change. Baritone singer and conductor. Can bring results immediately. Would like large house with stage that is run down. Best of references. Fred Merwin, 3041 Harriet Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.

MOVING PICTURE OPERATOR.—With new license desires position. Frank Frankle, 1280 Shakespeare Ave., Bronx, N. Y. City.

HELP WANTED.

WANTED.—Experienced cameraphone operator. Address The KaDell-Kritchfield Show, Cannelton, Ind.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES.

FOR SALE.—Finest corner lot in city of nearly 6,000, 40 ft. front, 100 ft. on side street. City has no opera house, has two store picture shows. Live man with $10,000 or $15,000 would find one of the best locations in the country. Address Theater Location, care of Moving Picture World, N. Y. City.

FEATURES WANTED.—Will handle on percentage and get the money for you. Established business, capable and experienced management. If you have the goods we will do the rest. Write or wire what you have. Lewis Film Co., Inc., Kalamazoo, Mich.

FEATURE FILM RENTERS, NOTICE.—I will let my theater out for one or more nights at $25 a day. Seats 550. This includes piano player, operator, assistant operator and ushers. All you got to do is advertise your show and get the money. Send us the paper and we will put it out for you. Only first-class attractions wanted. Pops Theater, West Orange, N. J.

FEATURE FILM EXCHANGE.—Doing good business, splendid territory, disagreement in partnership compels to sell out, act quick. Address H., care of Moving Picture World, N. Y. City.

THEATERS WANTED.

PICTURE THEATERS WANTED.—If you have one for sale in any section of the center west write The Photoplay Investment Co., Muscatine, Iowa.

WANTED.—To buy one or more Moving Picture Theaters. Nothing under 300 seats. Ind., Ill., or Ia. preferred. Will also consider opera house lease. Explain all first letter. Address Three-I-Amusement Co., Peoria, Ill.

FOR SALE.—Lease and equipment. Brand new, strictly up-to-date, 550-seat moving picture house, Chicago suburb 45,000. Cheap rent, big opportunity. Best reasons for selling. Investigate. Address THEATER, care of M. P. World, Chicago, Ill.

PRETTY NEW THEATER.—Just opened. Owner cannot operate. Only one in town. $500 cash. POSTMASTER, Roswell, Georgia.

THEATERS FOR SALE OR RENT.

FOR SALE.—Two ten year leases on moving picture and vaudeville theaters. Thoroughly equipped, new Power 6a machines, houses newly decorated. Located twenty miles apart, both county seats. Population six and eight thousand. Only vaudeville houses in the cities. Practically no competition. Don't write unless interested. Reasons for selling, etc. Write to John Falls, Box 184, Greenville, Ohio.

THE VERNON THEATER.—Corner 4th St. and Vernon Ave., Long Island City is for sale. New Steinway tunnel next door opens soon, factory and apartment houses erected daily. Big boom expected. Property fireproof brick 55 x 100. Fully equipped, 2 machines, Gold Fibre Curtain, Wurlitzer Orchestra, will seat 600. Everything the latest. License new, business good all year. One hundred per cent investment. Ten cents, Stage attached fully equipped. $10,000 cash required. Call if you mean business.

HIGH CLASS PICTURE THEATERS.—For sale. The Photoplay Investment Co., Muscatine, Ia.

FOR SALE.—At Texarkana, Texas, the best located negro picture show and vaudeville house in the country. Seating 400. New Simplex machine. Big stage and scenery. Good lease. Have business at Naples, Tex. my home and can't give this show my attention. Good opportunity, no opposition, 7,000 negro population, $600 will handle deal. Thos. C. Wickenden, Naples, Tex.

THEATER FOR RENT.—At Atlantic City, N. J., on the boardwalk, near Young's Million Dollar Pier. Seating one thousand persons, suitable for moving pictures or other productions. Must go to responsible lessee on liberal terms. Will consider generous percentage basis with successful experience manager. Owners have been disappointed by prospective tenant and are now ready to make liberal terms to right party for immediate acceptance. Address T. Wistar Grookett, care of Million Dollar Pier.

THEATER BUILDING FOR SALE.—600 seat house in seven day manufacturing city of 20,000, fully equipped for pictures and vaudeville; doing a good business; $24,000. Easy terms. Charles X. Palner, Highland Park, Ill.

FOR SALE.—Open air picture theater on one of the principal streets and in a thickly populated section. Seating capacity over 500. Must sell at once account dissension of partners. Price reasonable. Jas. J. Keating, Jr., 120 So. Park St., Elizabeth, N. J.

EQUIPMENT WANTED.

THEATER EQUIPMENT.—Of all kinds bought and sold. The Photoplay Investment Co., Muscatine, Ia.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

BRAND NEW.—Phantoscope complete, $50 C. O. D., Frank A. Holmes, Brewster, N. Y.

FOR SALE.—200 folding chairs, Powers No. 6 machine, Ft. Wayne 220 Volt Compensarc, set stage scenery 12 x 18, metal booth. All used but a short time. Write quick if you want a bargain. Orpheum Theater, Williston, N. D.

FOR SALE.—Four ten hour direct current flaming arc lamps $30. Theater, 100 3rd Ave., N. Y. City.

FOR SALE.—Model A. Williamson Perforator. Shipped for examination. Charge guaranteed one way. Charles Simons, 405 11th St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

314 OPERA CHAIRS.—Veneer seat and back, 1 Powers No. 6 machine, 1 Booth, 1 Rheostat, 4-16 in. electric fans $124 credit on piano, 19 x 12 Mirroide screen, electric sign "Rex" four long runners, electric fixtures, etc. All in good condition. $600 cash. Clarence Cable, Norwalk, Conn.

BRASS POSTER FRAMES.—For one, three and six-sheets. Also brass easels, brass railings. Write for complete catalog. THE NEWMAN MFG. CO., Cincinnati, O. 101 4th Ave., N. Y.

NEW AND SECOND HAND CHAIRS.—At cut prices. Equipments bought and sold. We save you money on outfits. Designs and plans free. JOS. REDINGTON, Scranton, Pa.

FILMS FOR SALE OR RENT.

FOR SALE.—Three reel feature "James Boys' in Missouri," plenty of paper and cuts. W. M. Hoffman, Palace Theater, Youngstown, Ohio.

DISCONTINUING OUR FILM DEPARTMENT.—We sacrifice all our films, safes, Neostyle for making lists and take machines, economizers, etc. in exchange. Condor Film Exchange, 154 Third Ave., New York.

FOR SALE.—100 single reels also 2 reel features with posters. Federal F. F. Co., 220 West 42nd St., N. Y. City.

FOUR REEL FEATURE FOR SALE.—Six cents (6c.) per foot, brand new, only run three times. "The Whirl of Destiny," a Mundstuk's Feature, 3,750 feet. Lots of paper. As I am not in the film business, will make this sacrifice. A. G. THOMAS, 1705 Fairacres Ave., Pittsburgh, Penn.

FILMS WANTED.

WANTED.—Single reel also 3 and 4 reel features with posters. Federal F. F. Co., 220 West 42nd St., N. Y. City.

WANTED.—Commercial reels, send list with name, make, condition, amount of paper and lowest cash price. H. A. P., care of Moving Picture World, N. Y. City.

CAMERAMAN.—I specialize in features, news events, educational films. Send your films. Will represent good foreign concerns. GORDON, 314 Strand Theater Bldg., N. Y. City.

CAMERAS FOR SALE.

PROFESSIONAL MOVING PICTURE CAMERAS.—Two sizes. Tripods, Zeiss-Tessar 50 m. lenses, $150, $225. Special cameras to order. Repairing all makes. R. W. PITTMAN, 50 West St., New York City.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SEE ME FIRST.—Before building your theater. Moving picture theaters a specialty. T. John Folks, Architect, 2nd National Bank Bldg., Paterson, N. J.

PIANIST.—Send 25c. for 20 pieces of descriptive music or 50c. for 75 pages. Also how to obtain music for 2c. a copy. E. A. Ahern, Twin Falls, Ida.

PHOTOPLAY WRITING.—Evening course of three months' instruction in the theory and practice of scenario writing. AMERICAN PHOTOPLAY SCHOOL, 243 West 125th St., N. Y. City.

ORCHESTRA LEADERS—PIANISTS.—$1 money order brings you eight numbers. Piano, Violin, Drums or $1 for 25 assorted copies popular vocal and instrumental sheet music. GORDON MUSIC, 207 West 34th St., N. Y. City.

SITUATIONS WANTED.

CAMERAMAN.—Expert still and motion picture photographer, understanding own laboratory work, for the past five years with several Mutual and Universal Film Companies. Wish to make immediate connections with responsible firm. Expert on lighting and effects. Address C. P. J., care of Moving Picture World, N. Y. City.

CAMERAMAN.—Wishes position. High class man for studio or commercial photography. Reliable references, with or without camera. Address R. M. S., care of Moving Picture World, N. Y. City.

HELP WANTED.

WANTED.—Operators who own projecting machines in every state in the union. $30 a week and expenses to travel. Tell name of machine and experience. Preference given men with complete traveling equipment. Tell all in first letter. Bond required. Eesee Films, 1449 Broadway, N. Y. City.

AGENTS WANTED.—For atlas work, map work and Mexican War map. Unusual opportunities for intelligent men with ability to sell. Write for particulars. RAND, McNALLY & CO., Dept. B, Chicago, Ill.

THE cheapest yet most profitable investment in the Moving Picture Business today —Advertising in

The Moving Picture World

Rates on request

INDEX

TO CONTENTS.

ADVERTISING FOR EXHIBITORS..... 55
AUSTRALIA, J. D. WILLIAMS ON..... 53
BEULAH POINTER WITH HECTOR FILM CORP. 80
BRITISH NOTES 57
CALENDAR OF LICENSED RELEASES..... 90
CALENDAR OF INDEPENDENT RELEASES.. 92
CAULFIELD TO COAST FOR UNIVERSAL.... 73
CHICAGO LETTER 48
"CHIMNEY SWEEPS, THE" (Pasquali)..... 72
CHURCH PICTURE PLAN TRIED OUT 41
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Licensed) 64
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Independent) .. 65
DAYTON CONVENTION LOOMS BIG 74
DOINGS AT LOS ANGELES 50
ECHO FROM IOWA, AN 75
"EVIL MEN DO, THE" (Vitagraph) 40
EXHIBITORS' NEWS 88
EXHIBITOR AS CENSOR, THE 37
EXPOSITION AT TORONTO 76
FACTS AND COMMENTS 35
FIRE DEPARTMENT EVICTS 78
FOREIGN TRADE NOTES 52
GENE GAUNTIER AND PLAYERS IN NEW STUDIOS 73
GIANTS-WHITE SOX WORLD TOUR 69
GUY COOMBS, SILENT LEADING MAN 45
INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES 112
INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES 128
IS NOT "OFFICIAL CENSORSHIP" 43
LICENSED FILM STORIES 102
LICENSED RELEASE DATES 130
"LITTLE LORD FAUNTLEROY" (Kineto) ... 69
LOOKING FOR J. HOWARD LEE 70
MARY FULLER SIGNS WITH UNIVERSAL .. 49
MANUFACTURERS' TRADE NOTES 81
MARTEN, HELEN 42
MEXICAN WAR IN SOLAX FEATURES 80
"MILLION DOLLAR MYSTERY, THE" (Thanhouser) 47
MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR, THE 74
MUTUAL MEN ARE RE-ELECTED 88
NEW RANEY PICTURES PLEASE 67
NEW WILD ANIMAL CO. FORMED 87
NE MOYER, MARGUERITE 46
OBSERVATIONS BY MAN ABOUT TOWN 51
OZ FILM CO., THE 54
PASQUALI AMERICAN REORGANIZED 72
PENNSYLVANIA HEAD CENSOR TALKS ... 39
PERIOLAT, GEORGE 39
"PERILS OF PAULINE, THE" (Eclectic) .. 71
PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT, THE 58
PROJECTION DEPARTMENT 60
QUESTION THE CENSOR LAW 44
"ROMANY RYE" (Warner's Features) 71
"ST. ELMO" (Balboa) 70
SANTSCHI, THOMAS 44
SINGLE REEL, THE, II 36
"SOMETHING TO A DOOR" (Edison) 42
"SPITFIRE, THE" (Famous Players) 87
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Licensed) 100
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Independent) 112
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Features) 118
"THE TOLL OF MAMMON" (Excelsior) 46
"TRAGEDY OF BASIL GRIEVE, THE" (Hepworth) 41
VIENNA AND BUDAPEST 58
VIRGINIA LEAGUE CONVENTION 76
WASHINGTON SCREEN CLUB BANQUET 74
"WEAKLING, THE" (Kalem) 38
WILLIAMS ON AUSTRALIA 53
"WILL O' THE WISP" (Balboa) 77

TO ADVERTISERS

CARBON IMPORTERS.
KIEWERT, CHARLES, L..... 132
REISINGER, HUGO 136
ELECTRICAL & MECHANICAL EQUIPMENT.
AMUSEMENT SUPPLY CO. 133
BELL & HOWELL..... 95
CALEHUFF SUPPLY CO. 134
DETROIT ENGINE WORKS..... 135
FOOS GAS ENGINE CO. 133
FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC CO. 137
FULTON, E. E., CO. 109
GENERAL ELECTRIC CO. 109
HALLBERG, J. H. 104
HOKE, GEORGE M., SUPPLY CO. 118
KIMBLE ELECTRIC CO. 133
MOORE-HUBBLE CO. ..... 133.
NATIONAL CASH REGISTER CO. 113
PICTURE THEATER EQUIPMENT CO. 123
SMITH, AL. C., & CO. 86
STRELINGER, CHARLES A., & CO. 109
TYPHOON FAN CO. 126
WESTINGHOUSE ELECTRIC CO. 118
MISCELLANEOUS FEATURE FILMS.
ALBUQUERQUE FILM CO. 133
ALL STAR FEATURE CORPORATION..... 99
APEX FILM CO. 101
BOSWORTH, INC. 115
CALIFORNIA MOVING PICTURE CORPORATION 12
CANADIAN BIOSCOPE CO. 117
CHICAGO FEATURE FILM CO. 109
CELEBRATED PLAYERS FILM CO. 121
CHILD PLAYERS OF AMERICA..... 114
COMMERCIAL M. P. CO. 134
ECLECTIC FILM CO. .....Insert
ECLIPSE-URBAN 25
EXCELSIOR FEATURE FILM CO. 124
FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM CO. 10-11
FEATURE PHOTOPLAY CO. 108
G. & G. FEATURE FILM CO. 107
GENERAL FEATURE FILM CO. 135
HEPWORTH-AMERICAN CO. 25
LASKY, JESSE L., FEATURE PLAY CO. 19
LIBERTY MOVING PICTURE CO. 121
LIFE PHOTO FILM CO. 119
LYNCH, E. W. 22
MEXICAN WAR FEATURE FILM CO. 20
NAST MOVING PICTURE CO. 103
NEILSON, F. O. 97
OZ MANUFACTURING CO. 111
PASQUALI AMERICAN FILM CO. 24
POPULAR PLAYS & PLAYERS, INC. 13
SAWYER, A. H., INC. 16-17
STERLING CAMERA & FILM CO. 105
WARNER'S FEATURES, INC. 18
WORLD FILM CORPORATION.....26-27
FILM BROKERS.
WESTERN FILM BROKERS..... 118
FILM EXCHANGES.
APEX FEATURE SERVICE..... 122
BRADENBURGH, GEORGE W. 134
ECONOMY FILM CO. 118
FULTON, E. E. 108
GREAT NEW YORK FILM RENTAL CO. 130
LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE..... 135
NORTHERN FEATURE FILM EXCHANGE.. 118
STANDARD FILM CO. 114
WENIZ, ISADORE 114
FIREPROOF APPARATUS.
JOHNS-MANVILLE, H. W. 135
INDEPENDENT FILM MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN FILM MANUFACTURING CO. .. 129
GAUMONT CO. 29
MAJESTIC MOTION PICTURE CO. 138
NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CORPORATION 14-15
THANHUSER FILM CORPORATION..... 2
UNIVERSAL FILM MANUFACTURING CO. 4-5-6-7
LENS MANUFACTURERS.
BAUSCH & LOMB OPTICAL CO. 131
LICENSED FILM MANUFACTURERS.
BIOGRAPH COMPANY 91
EDISON, THOMAS A. 28
ESSANAY FILM MANUFACTURING CO. ..3-8-9
KALEM CO. 31-34
KLEINE, GEORGE 21
LUBIN FILM MANUFACTURING CO. 32
MELIES, GASTON, FILM CO. 23
PATHE FRERES 30
SELIG POLYSCOPE CO. 139
VITAGRAPH CO. OF AMERICA..... 33
MISCELLANEOUS.
AUDITORIUM THEATER 114
AUTOMATIC TICKET SELLING & CASH REGISTER CO. 117
BOTANICAL DECORATING CO. 134
CASAVANT BROTHERS 131
COMMERCIAL FILMERS 137
CENTAUR FILM CO. 136
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS 125
CORCORAN, A. J. 118
DADMUN CO. 133
EASTMAN KODAK CO. 136
FEALY, MAUDE 109
GUNBY BROTHERS 109
INDUSTRIAL MOVING PICTURE CO. 133
KRAUS MFG. CO. 131
NATIONAL MOVING PICTURE CO. 137
NATIONAL TICKET CO. 128
NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO. 133
RAW FILM SUPPLY CO. 123
ROOM 200 135
GILBERT, ELIOTT & CO. 127
SMALLWOOD FILM CORPORATION..... 133
THEATER BROKERAGE EXCHANGE..... 137
TRADE CIRCULAR ADDRESSING CO. 135
TURNER, HALSEY CO. 135
WYANOAK PUBLISHING CO. 127
MOTION PICTURE CAMERA MANUFACTURERS.
SCHNEIDER, EBERHARD 137
MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.
AMERICAN PHOTOPLAYER CO. 118
DEAGAN, J. C. 137
SEEBURG, J. P., PIANO CO. 136
SINN, CLARENCE 137
OPERA CHAIR MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN SEATING CO. 137
ANDREWS, A. H., CO. 137
HARDESTY MANUFACTURING CO. 137
STEEL FURNITURE CO. 137
WISCONSIN SEATING CO. 137
POSTERS AND FRAMES.
AMERICAN SLIDE & POSTER CO. 90
NEWMAN MANUFACTURING CO. 114
PROJECTION MACHINE MANUFACTURERS.
ENTERPRISE OPTICAL CO. 127
PHANTOSCOPE MANUFACTURING CO. 132
POWERS, NICHOLAS 140
PRECISION MACHINE CO. 93
PROJECTION SCREEN MANUFACTURERS
GENTER, J. H., C. 106
DAY & NIGHT SCREEN CO. 127
SONG AND ADVERTISING SLIDES.
ERKER BROTHERS 134
NIAGARA SLIDE CO. 86
UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO. 133
VITASLIDE CO. 120
THEATRICAL ARCHITECTS.
DECORATORS' SUPPLY CO. 135

COOLING VENTILATION HEATING

"TYPHOON BLOW-IN SYSTEM" has revolutionized the ventilating problem. You get in front of a desk fan to keep cool, not in back. Apply this common sense and blow the air in.

Don't waste money experimenting with exhaust fans.

The TYPHOON MULTIBLADE BLOWER will force air right through ordinary exhaust fans. Reversed, the air can be exhausted as well.

Our Catalogue W tells how to keep cool in summer and warm in winter.

TYPHOON FAN CO. NEW YORK CITY 1544 BROADWAY

"THE PEERLESS" – "THE SAME OLD STORY!" – "THE PIONEER"

READ HOW THE THIRD SCREEN INSTALLED IN ONE CIRCUIT—SATISFIES

FICHTENBERG AMUSEMENT ENTERPRISES—ALAMO THEATRE

H. FICHTENBERG, Proprietor VICKSBURG, MISS. L. J. PICO, ResidentMgr. W. H. GUERINGER, Gen. Mgr.

DAY & NIGHT SCREENS, INC., NEW YORK. June 19, 1914.

Gentlemen—We have just completed the installation of the "Day & Night Screen" at the Alamo Theatre here, and I certainly wish to congratulate you on the results we are able to get from this wonderful screen.

Our patrons have remarked about the brilliancy of our pictures since installing it, and we have shown the pictures with all the house-lights on —thereby proving that the "Day & Night Screen" is the least affected by outside light of any screen now on the market. * * *

Sincerely, (Signed) L. J. PICO, Mgr.

YOU CAN BUY THIS WONDERFUL SCREEN OF QUALITY—SCREEN DE LUXE

WRITE FOR CATALOGUE —SCREEN WITHOUT A SEAM ON YOUR OWN TERMS! ARRANGE FOR TEST

DAY AND NIGHT SCREENS, INC., 291 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

BRANCH OFFICES AND DISTRIBUTING CENTERS AT

PHILADELPHIA, NEW ORLEANS, ATLANTA, EL PASO, MEMPHIS, KANSAS CITY, DES MOINES, SAN FRANCISCO, LOS ANGELES, SEATTLE, PARIS, BERLIN, LONDON

MOTION PICTURE BROKERS

We Buy and Sell

BIOGRAPH GENERAL FILM

MUTUAL FILM

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE

RELIANCE FILM

THANHOUSER FILM

WORLD FILM

We finance Motion Picture Companies

INQUIRIES INVITED

GILBERT ELIOTT & CO.,

Specialists

27 PINE STREET, NEW YORK

LOBBY PHOTOS

Of

Alice Joyce Series

Also

Kalem Monday Releases

Authorized by the Kalem Company

Six 11 x 14 Photo Reproductions for $1.00

(JUST FILL ONE SHEET FRAME)

You have seen much of our product, so

KNOW THE QUALITY

The Wyanoak Publishing Co.

146 WEST 52nd STREET

NEW YORK CITY

Send Us Single or Standing Order

Your Credit Is Good

MR. EXHIBITOR—

Can you afford to purchase a Motion Picture Projector that will keep you busy buying repair parts? NO.

There is only one Machine (MOTIOGRAPH) that will give you satisfaction in UP-KEEP and ROCK STEADY PROJECTIONS.

Investigate the parts of the MOTIOGRAPH and you will easily understand why a MOTIOGRAPH is a Money Saver.

WRITE FOR CATALOG

THE ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. CO., 564 West Randolph St., Chicago

Eastern Office: 21 E. 14th St., New York City Western Office: 833 Market St., San Francisco

INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES

AMERICAN.

June 10—Sparrow of the Circus (Drama).....
June 15—Jim (2 parts—Drama).....
June 17—The Unmasking (Drama) .....
June 22—The Painted Lady's Child (Two parts—Drama) .....
June 24—Blue Knot, King of Polo (Drama)..
June 29—The Little House in the Valley (Two parts—Drama) .....
July 1—Nature's Touch (Drama).....
July 3—Mein Lieber Katrina Catches a Convict (Comedy) .....
July 6—Cameo of the Yellowstone (Two parts—Drama) .....
July 8—Feast and Famine (Drama).....
July 13—The Lure of the Sawdust (2 parts—Drama) .....
July 15—Youth and Art (Drama).....

BEAUTY.

June 16—The Dream Ship (Drama).....
June 23—The Tale of the Tailor (Drama)....
June 30—Via the Fire Escape (Drama).....
July 7—The Other Train (Drama).....

"101" BISON.

July 11—Prowlers of the Wild (Two parts—Drama) .....

"101" BISON.

June 20—The Forbidden Room (Three parts—Drama) .....
June 27—The Old Cobbler (Two parts—Western Drama) .....
July 4—The Hopes of Blind Alley (Three parts—Drama) .....

BRONCHO.

June 17—The Hour of Reckoning (Two parts—Drama) .....
June 24—Desert Thieves (Two parts—Drama)..
July 1—Shorty Gets Into Trouble (Two parts—Drama) .....
July 8—The Final Reckoning (Two parts—Drama) .....

CRYSTAL.

June 28—In Wrong (Comedy).....
June 30—The Girl in Pants (Comedy).....
—Her New Hat (Comedy).....
July 7—Nearly a Stepmother (Comedy).....

UNIVERSAL IKE.

July 7—Me, Him and I (Comedy).....

DOMINO.

June 11—A Relic of Old Japan (Two parts—Dr.)
June 18—In the Southern Hills (Two parts—Drama) .....
June 25—A Frontier Mother (Two parts—Dr.)..
July 2—His Hour of Manhood (Two parts—Drama) .....
July 9—The Curse of Humanity (Two parts—Drama) .....

ECLAIR.

June 21—The Blunderer's Mark (Western—Dr.)
June 24—Dead Men's Tales (Three parts—Western—Drama) .....
June 28—Prince Willy (Comedy).....
—Nutty and His Father (Comedy).....
July 1—Snow Drift (Two parts—Drama)....
July 5—The Greatest of These (Drama).....
July 8—Duty (Two parts—Drama).....
July 12—The Fight in Lonely Gulch (Drama)..

FRONTIER.

June 21—The Gun Men of Plumas (Dr.).....
June 28—On the Verge (Drama).....
July 5—The Broken Barriers (Drama).....
July 12—Willy Walrus and the Parisians (Com.)
—Lily as a Little Mother (Comedy)....

GOLD SEAL.

June 16—Lucille Love, the Girl of Mystery (Series No. 10—Two parts—Drama)
June 23—Lucille Love, the Girl of Mystery (Series No. 11—Two parts—Drama)
June 30—Lucille Love, the Girl of Mystery (Series No. 12—Two parts—Drama)
July 7—Lucille Love, the Girl of Mystery, Series No. 13 (Two parts—Drama)..

IMP.

June 15—The Baited Trap (Two parts—Dr.)..
June 18—The Fatal Step (Drama).....
June 22—Papa's Darling (Comedy).....
June 25—The Skull (Two parts—Drama).....
June 29—Adventures of a Girl Reporter (Two parts—Drama) .....
July 2—The One Best Bet (Comedy).....
July 6—The Lady of the Island (Two parts—Drama) .....
July 9—The Old Rag Doll (Drama).....

JOKER.

June 20—A Quiet Day at Murphy's (Comedy)..
June 24—Willy Walrus, Detective.....
June 27—Love and Electricity (Comedy).....
July 1—Bess the Detectress; or Tick, Tick, Tick (Comedy) .....
July 3—Captain Kid's Priceless Treasure (Comedy) .....
July 8—Bess, the Detectress, or the Dog Watch (Comedy) .....
July 11—Love Roses and Trousers (Comedy)...

KAY-BEE.

June 19—The Voice at the Phone (Part 1—Two parts—Drama) .....
June 26—The Voice at the Telephone (Part 2—Two parts) .....
July 3—The Heart of a Crook (Two parts—Drama) .....
July 10—The Feud of Beaver Creek (Two parts—Drama) .....

KOMIC.

June 21—The Deceiver (Comedy).....
June 28—The Wild Girl (Comedy).....
July 5—"Bill" No. 1 (Comedy).....
July 12—Wrong All Around (Comedy).....

KEYSTONE.

June 15—A Gambling Rube (Comedy).....
June 18—A Missing Bride (Comedy).....
June 20—Mabel's Married Life (Comedy).....
June 22—The Eavesdropper (Comedy).....
June 25—Fatty and the Heiress (Comedy).....
June 27—(No release this day.)
June 29—Caught in Tights (Comedy).....
July 2—(No release this day.)

LUX.

May 1—Only an Iceman (Comedy).....
May 8—Jim's Mother-in-law (Comedy).....
—In Good Company (Comedy).....
May 15—The Girl in the Auto (Comedy).....
May 22—Just Neighbors (Comedy).....
May 29—Sweethearts (Comedy).....
—Venice (Scenic).....
June 5—In Love with a Suffragette (Comedy).
June 12—A Family Feud (Comedy).....
—View of the Alps (Scenic).....
June 19—The Newlyweds (Comedy).....
June 26—A Day's Outing (Comedy).....
—The Telephone Operator (Comedy)....

MAJESTIC.

June 21—The Severed Thong (Two parts—Dr.)
June 23—The Burden (Drama).....
June 26—The Idiot (Drama).....
June 28—The Tavern of Tragedy (Two parts—Drama) .....
June 30—(Title not yet announced).....
July 5—The Angel of Contention (Two parts—Drama) .....
July 7—The Only Clue (Drama).....
July 12—A City Beautiful (Two parts—Drama)

NESTOR.

June 17—'Cross the Mexican Line (West.—Dr.)
June 19—Sophie of the Films (Series No. 3—Comedy) .....
June 24—The Den of Thieves (Drama).....
June 26—Sophie of the Films (Series No. 4—Comedy) .....
July 1—The Lost Arrow (Drama).....
July 3—Those College Days (Comedy).....
July 8—A Ranch Romance (Western—Drama)
July 10—The Great Universal Mystery (Com.)..

POWERS.

June 19—The Plot That Failed (Drama).....
June 26—The Love Victorious (Two parts—Dr.)
July 3—Pearl of the Sea (Drama).....

PRINCESS.

June 19—The Little Senorita (Drama).....
June 26—Professor Smith (Comedy).....
July 3—The Decoy (Drama).....
July 10—Passing the Love of Women (Drama)
July 10—The Girl of the Seasons (Comedy)....

RELIANCE.

June 20—The Stolen Code (Two parts—Drama).
June 22—Our Mutual Girl, No. 23 (News)....
June 24—Izzy's Night Out (Drama).....
June 27—The Broken Barrier (Two parts—Dr.)
June 29—Our Mutual Girl, No. 24.....
July 1—Izzy the Detective (Drama).....
July 4—The Weaker Strain (Two parts—Dr.)
July 6—Our Mutual Girl, No. 25 (Drama).....
July 8—How Izzy Was Saved (Comedy).....
July 10—A Wife from the Country (Drama)....
July 11—Blue Pete's Escape (Two parts—Dr.)

REX.

June 21—The Boob Detective (Comedy).....
June 25—The Woman in Black (Drama).....
June 28—Lost By a Hair (Comedy).....
July 2—The House Discordant (Two parts—Drama) .....
July 5—On the Rio Grande (Western Drama)
July 9—When Fate Disposes (Two parts—Dr.)
July 12—Plain Mary (Drama).....

ROYAL.

June 20—Such a Business (Comedy).....
—The Busy Man (Comedy).....
June 27—A Hasty Exit (Comedy).....
July 4—Did She Run? (Comedy).....
July 11—Mistakes Will Happen (Comedy).....

STERLING.

June 22—The Flirt (Comedy).....
June 25—A Jealous Husband (Comedy).....
June 29—It's a Boy (Juvenile—Comedy).....
July 2—The Crash (Comedy).....
July 6—Billy's Vacation (Juvenile Comedy)...
July 9—Snookee's Flirtation (Comedy).....

THANHOUSER.

June 21—The Outlaw's Nemesis (Com.-Dr.).....
June 23—For Her Child (Two parts—Drama)..
June 28—The Widow's Mite (Comedy).....
June 30—The Harlow Handicap (Two parts—Drama) .....
July 5—The Cooked Goose (Comedy).....
July 7—Bevorah (Two parts—Drama).....
July 12—The Leaven of Good (Drama).....

UNIVERSAL IKE.

June 16—Universal Ike, Jr., Bearly Won Her (Comedy) .....
June 23—Universal Ike, Jr., in a Case On the Doctor (Comedy) .....
June 30—Universal Ike, Jr., and the Vampire (Comedy) .....

VICTOR.

June 22—The Silent Witness (Two parts—Dr.)
June 26—The Slavey's Romance (Drama).....
June 29—A Twentieth Century Pirate (Comedy-Drama) .....
July 6—At Mexico's Mercy (Drama).....
July 10—A Beggar Prince of India (Three parts—Drama) .....

HEPWORTH.

June 15—A Throw of the Dice (Two parts)....
June 22—Creatures of Habit—(Comedy) .....
—Fair Game (Comedy).....
Flotilla the Flirt (Comedy).....
June 29—The Cry of the Captive (Two parts—Drama) .....

ECLIPSE-URBAN FILM CO.

June 15—Sammy and the Slit Skirt (Comedy).
June 22—The Bird of Prey (Two parts—Drama)
June 29—Sammy's Umbrella (Comedy).....
—Dupin Gets the Bird (Comedy).....
July 6—The Mystery of Green Park (Two parts—Drama) .....

WHITMAN FEATURES.
GARRISON FILM CO. DISTRIBUTORS.

May 30—His Flesh and Blood (Three parts—Drama) .....
June 13—The Toll of Love (Four parts—Dr.)
June 27—Jane Eyre (Five parts—Drama)....
July 11—Lena Rivers (Five parts—Drama)....

ROLL TICKETS

PRICES

Five Thousand - - $1.25
Ten Thousand - - $2.50
Twenty Thousand - - $4.50
Twenty-five Thousand - $5.50
Fifty Thousand - - $6.50
One Hundred Thousand - $8.00

Your own special Ticket, any printing, any colors, accurately numbered; every roll guaranteed. Coupon Tickets for Prize Drawings, 5,000, $2.50. Stock Tickets, 6c per 1,000. Prompt shipments. Cash with the order. Get the samples. Send diagram for Reserved Seat Coupon Tickets, serial or dated.

NATIONAL TICKET CO.
SHAMOKIN, PA.

SEE AMERICANS FIRST

FLYING "A" and AMERICAN BEAUTY FEATURE FILMS

CAMEO of YELLOWSTONE

A TWO PART WESTERN THRILLER

Release Monday, July 6th, 1914

FEATURING

WM. GARWOOD

AND

VIVIAN RICH

AND AN ALL STAR WESTERN CAST

Under Direction of SYDNEY AYRES

AMERICAN BEAUTY

"THE OTHER TRAIN"

A Masterpiece of the Art of Pantomime — Replete with Human Interest and Emotions

Featuring MARGARITA FISCHER and HARRY POLLARD

RELEASE TUESDAY, JULY 7th, 1914

"FEAST AND FAMINE"

A SOCIETY DRAMA OF UNUSUAL MERIT, HEART-THROBS AND THRILLS

Featuring WM. GARWOOD and VIVIAN RICH

Under Direction of SYDNEY AYRES

RELEASE WEDNESDAY, JULY 8th, 1914

American Film Mfg. Co.

CHICAGO

LICENSED RELEASE DATES

RELEASE DAYS.

Monday—Biograph, Edison, Kalem, Pathe, Selig, Vitagraph.

Tuesday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Geo. Kleine, Pathe, Lubin, Melies, Selig, Vitagraph.

Wednesday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Melies, Selig, Pathe, Vitagraph.

Thursday—Biograph, Essanay, Lubin, Melies, Selig, Vitagraph.

Friday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Selig, Lubin, Vitagraph.

Saturday—Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Melies, Selig, Vitagraph.

BIOGRAPH.

June 20—By the Old Dead Tree (Drama).....
June 22—The Song of Sunny Italy (Drama)..
June 25—The Ragamuffin (Drama).....
July 27—A Spanish Omelet (Comedy).....
—Ribbons and Boxing Gloves (Comedy)
June 29—The Honor of the Law (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
June 2—The Goat (Comedy).....
—The Firemen's Social (Comedy).....
July 4—The Cracksman's Gratitude (Drama)..

EDISON.

June 20—In the Days of Slavery (Drama).....
June 22—The Basket Habit (Comedy).....
June 23—A Foolish Agreement (Drama).....
June 24—The Mysterious Package (Comedy)..
—On the Ice (a demonstration of fancy skating at Wengen, Switzerland—Sports) .....
June 26—The Man in the Street (Special—Three parts—Drama) .....
June 27—Dolly Plays Detective (Tenth of the Dolly of the Dailies—Drama).....
June 29—The Revengeful Servant Girl (Seventh of the Wood B. Wedd series—Com.)
June 30—The Mystery of the Fadeless Tints (Eighth of the Chronicles of Cleek series—Drama) .....
July 1—Back to the Simple Life (Comedy)...
July 3—The Shattered Tree (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
July 4—Molly, the Drummer Boy (Drama)..
July 6—Her Spanish Cousins (Comedy).....
July 7—Face to Face (Seventh of "The Man Who Disappeared" Series) (Drama)..
July 8—Andy Has a Toothache (Eighth of the "Andy" Series) (Comedy) .....
July 10—In the Shadow of Disgrace (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
July 11—Dolly at the Helm (Eleventh of the Active Life of "Dolly of the Dailies"—Drama) .....

ESSANAY.

June 20—Broncho Billy—Outlaw (Drama).....
June 23—The Countess (Drama).....
June 24—The Epidemic (Comedy).....
June 25—Sophie Finds a Hero (Comedy).....
June 26—The Chasm (Special—Two parts—Dr.)
June 27—Broncho Billy's Jealousy (Drama)..
June 30—The Daring Young Person (Com.-Dr.)
July 1—The Fable of "The Good Fairy" (Comedy) .....
July 2—Sophie Gets Stung (Comedy).....
July 3—Trinkets of Tragedy (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
July 4—Broncho Billy's Punishment (Drama)
July 7—A Night with a Million (Com. Drama)
July 8—A Boarding House Scramble (Comedy)
July 9—Slippery Jim—Diplomat (Comedy).....
July 10—Night Hawks (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
July 11—Broncho Billy and the Sheriff (Drama)

KALEM.

June 20—Brought to Justice (Drama).....
June 22—The Show Girl's Glove (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
June 23—The Conductor's Courtship (Comedy-Drama) .....
June 24—Through the Flames (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
June 26—An Elopement in Rome (Comedy)....
—Labor Demonstration in Hyde Park, London (Topical) .....
June 27—The Gypsy Gambler (Drama).....
June 29—The Flaw In the Alibi (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
June 30—The Wire Chief's Reward (Drama)..
July 1—The Fatal Portrait (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
July 3—Fleeing from the Fleas (Comedy)....
—Trooping the Colors (Topical).....
July 4—The Political Boss (Drama).....
July 6—The Weakling—Third of the Alice Joyce Series—Special—Two Parts (Drama) .....
July 7—Kaintucky Bill (Drama).....
July 8—A String of Pearls (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
July 10—Rube the Interloper (Comedy).....
—In Old England Scenic).....(....
July 11—Lame Dog's Treachery (Drama).....

GEORGE KLEINE.

May 19—Mystery of the Fast Mail (Special—Eclipse—2 parts—Drama) .....
May 26—The Cigarette Maker of Seville (Cines Spec.—Two parts—Drama) .....
June 2—Trapped By Wireless (Eclipse—Two parts—Special—Drama) .....
June 9—The Trap-Door Clue (Celio—Special—2 parts—Drama).....
June 16—One Woman's Way (Cines—Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
June 23—A Midnight Guest (Cines—Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
June 30—The Bondage of Evil (Celio—Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....

LUBIN.

June 20—Getting Solid With Pa (Comedy).....
—Long May It Wave (Comedy).....
June 23—Mice Nursery (Comedy).....
—Brown's Big Butler (Comedy).....
June 24—The Greater Treasure (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
June 25—The Candidate for Mayor (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
June 26—A Practical Demonstration (Drama)..
June 27—Who's Boss (Comedy).....
—His Sudden Recovery (Comedy).....
June 30—The Walko Sisters (Comedy).....
July 1—The Living Fear (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
July 2—The Shadow of Tragedy (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
July 3—The Doom of Duty (Drama).....
July 4—It's a Shame (Comedy).....
—The Kidnapped Bride (Comedy).....
July 7—Fooling Fanny's Father (Comedy).....
—While Auntie Bounced (Comedy).....
July 8—The Incompetent (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
July 9—The Debt (Special—Two parts—Dr.)..
July 10—The Tribunal of Conscience (Drama)..
July 11—How He Lost His Trousers (Comedy)
—Mandy's Chicken Dinner (Comedy)....

MELIES.

June 20—Pills and Pills (Special—Two parts—Comedy) .....
June 23—A Good Time Spoiled (Comedy).....
June 24—Mother (Drama) .....
June 25—A Peculiar Inheritance (Comedy)....
June 27—A Shadow On the Wall (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
June 30—One Suit of Clothes (Comedy).....
July 1—The Monk's Sacrifice (Drama).....
July 2—Womanly Curiosity (Comedy) .....
—The Prescription (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
July 4—Hidden Death (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....

PATHE.

June 16—Simple Experiments in Electricity (Educational) .....
—Through the Bosphorus, Turkey (Travel)
June 17—Pathe's Weekly, No. 41—1914 (News)
June 22—Max the Magician (Comedy).....
Historic St. Cloud (Educational)....
June 23—Glacier National Park in Winter (Sc.)
June 23—The Mormot (Educational).....
June 24—Pathe's Weekly, No. 42—1914 (News)
June 29—Visit to Paris (Travel).....
—Rapids and Water Falls of New Zealand (Scenic) .....
June 30—A French Village in Senegal, West Africa (Scenic) .....
—Venomous Serpents (Educational).....
July 1—Pathe's Weekly, No. 43—1914 (News)
July 6—The Heart and the Circulation of the Blood (Biology) .....
—Modes of Travel in Japan (Manners and Customs) .....
July 7—A Tiger Hunt (Indo-China) (Scenic)..
—The Ice and Snow.....
July 8—Pathe's Weekly No. 44, 1914 (News)..
July 13—A Russian Boar Hunt (Scenic).....
—The Wine Industry, Marsala, Sicily (Industrial) .....
July 14—Through Bosnia and Dalmatia (Scenic)
—The Tombs of the Ancient Japanese Emperors (Architecture) .....
July 15—Pathe's Weekly No. (News).....

SELIG.

June 15—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 31 (News) .....
June 16—How Lone Wolf Died (Drama).....
June 17—Castles in the Air (Drama).....
June 18—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 32 (News) .....
June 19—Peter's Relations (Comedy).....
—Chicken (Comedy) .....
June 20—The Girl at His Side (Drama).....
June 22—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 33 (News) .....
June 22—Me An' Bill (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
June 23—The Servant Question Out West (Com.)
—Doc Yak and the Limited Train (Com.)
June 24—Somebody's Sister (Drama).....
June 25—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 34 (News) .....
June 26—The Captain's Chair (Drama).....
June 27—The Right to Happiness (Drama)....
June 29—The Leopard's Foundling (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
June 29—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 35 (News) .....
June 30—Hearts of Men (Drama).....
July 1—The Empty Sleeve (Drama).....
July 2—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 36 (News) .....
July 3—Making Good With Her Family (Com.)
—Doc Yak Wishes (Novelty).....
July 4—The Little Hobo (Drama).....
July 6—Reporter Jimmie Intervenes (Special—Two Parts) Drama).....
July 6—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 37 (News) .....
July 7—Algie's Sister (Comedy).....
July 8—Caryl of the Mountains (Drama).....
July 9—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 38 (News) .....
July 10—Did She Cure Him (Comedy).....
July 11—His Fight (Drama).....

VITAGRAPH.

June 4—A False Move (Comedy).....
June 5—The Maid from Sweden (Comedy)....
June 6—Too Many Husbands (Special—2 parts Comedy) .....
June 8—Eve's Daughter (Drama).....
June 9—The Right of Way (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
June 10—The Widow of Red Rock (Comedy)....
June 11—The Power to Forgive (Drama).....
June 12—The Accomplished Mrs. Thompson (Comedy) .....
June 13—Our Fairy Play (Spec.—2 parts—Com.)
June 15—The Crime of Cain (Drama).....
June 16—A Wayward Daughter (Special—Two parts—Comedy-Drama) .....
June 17—The Ladies' War (Comedy).....
June 18—Only a Sister (Drama).....
June 19—The Persistent Mr. Prince (Comedy).
June 20—Father's Flirtation (Special—Two parts—Comedy) .....
June 22—Maria's Sacrifice (Drama).....
June 23—The Passing of Diana (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
June 24—The "Bear" Facts (Comedy).....
June 25—Happy-Go-Lucky (Comedy-Drama)....
June 26—The Old Maid's Baby (Comedy).....
June 27—His Wife and His Work (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
June 29—The Gang (Drama).....
June 30—The Poor Folks' Boy (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
July 1—The Circus and the Boy (Comedy)....
July 2—Two Stepchildren (Drama).....
July 3—A Train of Incidents (Comedy).....
July 4—The Toll (Special—Two parts—Dr.).
July 6—The False and the True (Drama)....
July 7—The Moonstone of Fez (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
July 8—Doctor Smith's Baby (Drama).....
July 9—Prosecution (Drama) .....
July 10—The Vases of Hymen (Drama).....
July 11—Lillian's Dilemma (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....

Greater New York Film Rental Company
All Specials Supplied. Main Office: 126-132 West 46th Street, Depot: 116-118 East 14th Street, New York
Licensed Film Supplied to Licensed Exhibitors t-f t-f t-f Write or Call for Particulars

Casavant Bros.

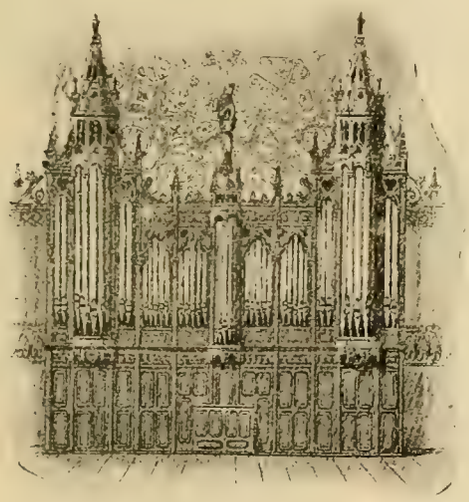
Organ Builders

South Haven, Michigan

Canadian Factory: St. Hyacinthe, Quebec

Builders of many of the largest and most important organs in America.

Artistic orchestral instruments for theatres. Only the better class of work taken and we promise you the last word in organ construction.



Owners desiring good organs artistically voiced and tone regulated, and which will work at all times and not give mechanical troubles, should write us. These organs are designed and voiced as theatre or concert instruments and not for church purposes. They are brilliant in tone character like an orchestra with more volume and much more tonal variety.

A sweeping guarantee with all instruments.

Reference to any leading organist of the United States and Canada

Casavant Bros.

South Haven, Mich.

LOOK US UP AT DAYTON

If you will not be there, do the next best thing, and send for our NEW CATALOGUE. This book is a little exposition all by itself, and will show you how to WARD OFF DULL SEASONS.

Our Big Lobby Pictures of the Stars Draw Crowds of Admiring Fans

Semi-Photo Post Cards, $3.00 per thousand; formerly sold for $4.00. Over 400 different players.

Hand Colored Post Cards

For the better class of Souvenirs, 60 of the most popular players, all factions, $10.00 per thousand

Photo Post Cards

For hand coloring. NOTE: The Public buy cards from stationers and color them. It's a new fad—60 Popular Players $5.00 per thousand.

PHOTOGRAPHS, SIZE 8 x 10, of all the prominent players, Association and Independent, 400 different names, 20 cents each.
LARGE PICTURE, semi-photo, glazed finish, size 11 x 14, $1 per doz.; 43 prominent players.
LARGE PICTURES, HAND COLORED, size 11 x 14, Prominent Association players, $2.00 for set of 12.
Photographs for lobby display of the two and three reel features of all of the Mutual multiple reels—set of 6, $1.00. Always ready 10 days ahead of release.

Special 22 x 28 Association and Mutual Hand Colored Pictures of 24 Favorites
75 Cents Each. Framed $2.50 Each

KRAUS MFG. CO. 14 East 17th St., New York

Send for Catalogue of over 400 players and samples free. Write us, giving details of your dull nights, and we will send you a remedy.

Permanent Patronage

can be built up only by the best pictures, and the best pictures can be assured only by the best lens equipment.

Bausch and Lomb Projection Lenses

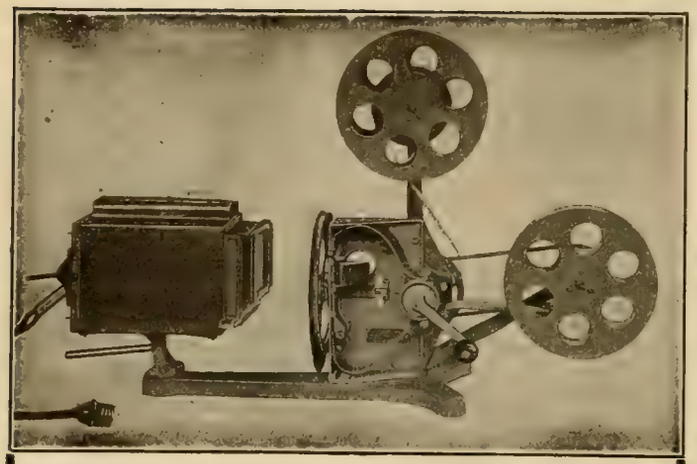
Brilliantly clear, sharply defined images that bring out every detail of a film story true to life and nature are told upon the screen by Bausch & Lomb objectives and condensers. Equip your machine with them and build up a permanent patronage that means steady profits.

The Edison and Nicholas Power machines are regularly equipped with our lenses. They can be procured also through any film exchange.

Our interesting free booklet is well worth writing for.

Bausch & Lomb Optical Co.

566 ST. PAUL STREET ROCHESTER, N. Y.



THE PHANTOSCOPE

"What counts isn't what you pay—but what you get for what you pay."

Watch our ad next week for an Extraordinary Announcement of far-reaching importance.

Phantoscope Mfg. Co.
Bond Building, Washington, D. C.

THE BRIGHT WHITE LIGHT

(CALCIUM EFFECT)
so Desirable for Moving Picture Projections is ONLY produced with

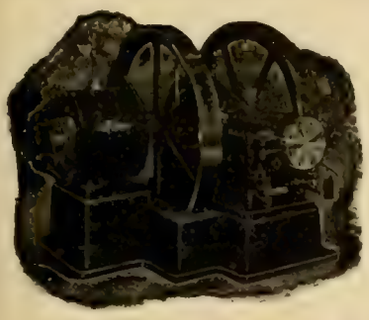
BIO CARBONS

They Are
"The Carbons You Want"

Charles L. Kiewert Co.

NEW YORK 165 Greenwich St. | MILWAUKEE 114 Huron St. | SAN FRANCISCO 143 Second St.



PUT in your own lighting plant and pay for it with your Central Station bills. A Foos generating set will produce current for less than 3 cents per kilowatt, and is more reliable than service from a Central Station.

Ask for Bulletin 98.

FOOS GAS ENGINE CO.
Springfield, Ohio.

KIMBLE FANS

The only alternating-current fan that is variable speed and reversible. You can run it at any speed. You can use it one moment to force out foul air and the next moment to draw in fresh air. Kimble Ventilation is the most efficient—also the most economical. Write for the Red Catalog and get the facts.

Kimble Electric Co.
633 North Western Avenue,
Chicago, Illinois.

DEVELOPING and PRINTING

carefully done for professionals and amateurs.
The largest factory in the world devoted exclusively to Manufacturing Commercial Moving Pictures
Prices and factory description sent at your request

INDUSTRIAL MOVING PICTURE CO.
Watterson R. Rothacker, Gen. Mgr.
223-233 West Erie Street, Chicago

CAMERA MEN OF PROVEN ABILITY

furnished for all occasions. We send our men to any quarter of the globe.

Special lighting equipment suitable for making interior scenes under any and all conditions rented with competent electricians by the day, week or month.

We make educational, dramatic or industrial pictures to order.

SMALLWOOD FILM CORPORATION
"Specialists in Industrial Motion Pictures"
949 Broadway, New York City

NO SATURATOR · NO ETHER · NO OXONE
NO EXPENSIVE CHEMICALS
EXHIBITORS BEST FRIEND.
NEVER FAILS.

OZO-CARBI BRIGHTEST MOVING PICTURE LIGHT

⅓ Brighter than Calcium at Half the Cost

GREATEST LIGHT OF THE AGE. A SCIENTIFIC FACT.

OLD LIGHTS IN EXCHANGE.

MOORE-HUBBELL & CO. 714 MASONIC TEMPLE-CHICAGO.

SECOND WARNING TO BUYERS

Dadmun of Boston (maker of New England in Motion) will offer this month a three-reel feature, "Where Life's Cross-Roads Meet," beautiful in scenic effects, masterful in action, touching in pathos, absorbing in interest, natural in situation and intense in climax. The photography is perfect, the staging is artistic, the acting is compelling.

DADMUN CO.
1 Washington Street Boston, Mass.

ALBUQUERQUE FILM MFG. CO.

FEATURING MISS DOT FARLEY

(DIRECTION G. P. HAMILTON)

Releasing Through Warner's Features, Inc.

WE EQUIP YOUR THEATRE COMPLETE

Edison, Powers, Simplex, Motiograph and Edengraph Machines and Genuine Parts.

Photo and Poster Frames, Indirect Lighting Fixtures, Curtains and Screens, Rebuilt Machines, etc. Cash or Time. Send for catalog today.

AMUSEMENT SUPPLY COMPANY
160A No. Fifth Ave. - - - Chicago

MAKE 'EM YOURSELF SLIDES

Make them yourself. Written with pen and ink or typewriter. Three minutes to make a slide. Used for advertising slides, to announce future or feature programmes, for chorus slides when chorus slide is missing. We send four colors of gelatin. The slides look well and anyone can make them. They are handy also for announcing vaudeville acts. In fact, they may be readily used for anything you may wish to say to your audience.

For the sum of $3.50 we will send, by parcel post, prepaid and insured, the following:

24 cover glass, 1 package binder strips, 1 dozen mats, 1 instruction sheet, 1 form sheet and 50 strips assorted colors gelatin—enough for from 300 to 400 slides. Order now. Address:

UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.
1733 West 9th St. Brooklyn, N. Y.

EYE COMFORT Lighting System

So necessary to the success of every Motion Picture Theatre that we engineer 60 Theatres a month. This is a free service to Motion Picture Theatre Managers.

Distance Screen to Rear of Auditorium.....
Ceiling Height.....
Width of House.....
Height Under Balcony.....
Distance Rear Auditorium to Front of Balcony.....
Name .....

NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO.
CHICAGO—229 W. Jackson Blvd. NEW YORK—6 E. 39th St.

Announcement

WE beg to announce to the trade that owing to an order of the Fire Department we were compelled to vacate premises, 102 West 101st Street, and have removed our laboratory and studio to Grantwood, N. J., having there purchased a tract of land and buildings wherein there is installed a modern and fully equipped laboratory, where we will be pleased to continue developing and printing for the trade.

NEGATIVES DEVELOPED 1c per foot

POSITIVE PRINTS ON EASTMAN STOCK 4c per foot (including tinting and toning)

The capacity of our new laboratory has been increased over the old by 100%.

We guarantee every inch turned out of our laboratory.

Laboratory, Grantwood, N. J.

Executive Offices, 220 W. 42nd St.
Telephone 7852 Bryant

COMMERCIAL MOTION PICTURES CO., Inc.

The EXHIBITOR SAYS

Complete Equipment
for The MOTION PICTURE THEATRE
Send for Complete Catalogue
608 OLIVE ST ERKER'S ST. LOUIS, MO

BEAUTIFY YOUR THEATER WITH FLORAL DECORATIONS

It gives artistic Atmosphere. It produces Charm. It gives an appearance of Culture—enhances Beauty—delights your Patrons—produces Tone and Class. It is a profitable-patronage building Investment. We have every imaginable floral effect and botanical production of America and Europe.

Beautiful Colored Catalogue Mailed Free to You

We Specialize on Floral Parades and Summer Specialties

BOTANICAL DECORATING CO.
504 South Fifth Avenue CHICAGO
READ THIS: We quote absolutely the lowest prices ever offered on reliable goods.

Features for Sale

G. W. BRADENBURGH, 802 Vine St., Philadelphia
Phone Walnut 534. Cable "Bradfilm"

TITLE	Length	Maker	Adv.	Price
WHAT HAPPENED TO MARY No. 1 to 12	1200	Edison	1-3	$360
THE WRECK	2880	Vitagraph	1-3-6	175
LEAP OF DESPAIR	3670	Itala	1-3-6	150
BRIGAND'S DAUGHTER	3950	Pasquali	1-3-6	150
FOUR DARE DEVILS (as new)	2840	Cosmo	1-3-6	125
MYSTERY OF THE DEATH HEAD	2800	Monarch	1-3-6	100
IN THE MIDST OF THE JUNGLE (First adventure Kathryn)	3000	Selig	1-3-6	150
BULL FIGHT: SPAIN VS. MEXICO (new)	2000	Huerta & Ross	1-3-6	120
WANTED BY THE POLICE	3000	Mittenthal	1-3-6	100
TOM BUTLER	2650	Eclair	1-3-6	125
SPANISH BLOOD (Asta Neilsen)	4200	Union	1-3-6	200
THE GYPSY (Exclusive Copy, new)	3200	Gamsa	1-4	275
UNMASKED (Exclusive Copy, new)	2800	Gamsa	1-4	225
THE IRON MAN	2000	Urban	1-3-6	100
FIGHT FOR THE GREAT BLACK DIAMOND	3000	Nester	1-3-6	200
A DARE DEVIL RESCUE (Rodman Law)	3000	Roma	1-3-6	125
A BROKER'S SACRIFICE	3000	Itala	1-3-6	100
THE DREAD OF DOOM	3000	Itala	1-3-6	125

Terms cash with order. 100 additional features. Send for list and prices.

The cheapest house in the trade for second hand films. Ordinary films, comic and dramas for sale from $5.00 per reel up, with posters. Over three million feet to select from. Every film with title and sound condition. No Junk Everything for the exchange man. Titles to order 5 ft. at 40 cents each, any color, leader stock $5.00 per 1000 feet Cement, Pathe Formula $1.00 per quart

CALEHUFF SUPPLY COMPANY
(INCORPORATED)

Jobbers for Powers, Edison, Motiograph and Simplex

LARGEST LEADING SUPPLY HOUSE IN AMERICA

Mercury Arc Rectifier	Wagner Converters
Flame Arc Lamps	Brass and Wood Frames
Automatic Ticket Registers	Ticket Choppers
Exit Signs	Abestos State Booths
Slide Ink	Ft. Wayne Compensarcs
Carrying Cases	Fire Extinguishers
Tickets	Fire Boxes
Condensers	Carbons
Pianos	Cement
Chairs	Trap Drum Effects

MIRROR SCREENS
PROMPT SHIPMENTS BACKED BY A SOLID GUARANTEE
A Few Slightly Used Machines
N. W. corner 13th and Race Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

POSTER MOUNTING CLOTH

HEADQUARTERS

Our 42-inch poster cloth is recognized as the standard fabric for poster mounting. It is used by the LEADERS.

TURNER-HALSEY COMPANY 62 LEONARD STREET, NEW YORK

DO THIS NOW!

If you do not receive a copy of "The Universal Weekly" every week, send me the name and address of your theatre and I'll see that you get it, NO MATTER WHAT PROGRAM YOU ARE USING. You can't know what's going on in the film business unless you read "The Universal Weekly." Here's a corking good chance to boost your business. Do it now!

CARL LAEMMLE, President

The Laemmle Film Service

205 West Washington Street, Chicago, Ill.
252-A Hennepin Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.
1122 Farnam Street, Omaha, Neb.
Hubbell Building, Des Moines, Iowa.

Agents for All Makes of Machines and Accessories

"The Biggest and Best Film Renter in the World"

Ornamental Theatres

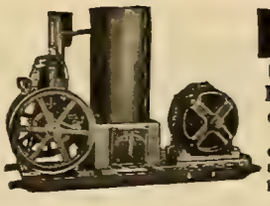
PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS

Theatres Designed Everywhere

Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs.

THE DECORATORS SUPPLY CO.

Archer Ave. and Lee St. CHICAGO, ILL.



MOVING PICTURE ELECTRIC LIGHT PLANT

Used and highly endorsed by the United States Army. Biggest Sensation in the Moving Picture World. Can be operated by a boy 10 years old. One customer writes:

"Plant running like a top and delivering the 'juice' right along every day for our moving picture house. Costs us about one-tenth as much as public service. Also pumps water to all our buildings, 2,000 gallons per day."

Write today for Bulletin 101. It is a mighty interesting booklet.

(163) DETROIT ENGINE WORKS, Dept. 102, DETROIT, MICH., U. S. A.

Booking now forw

Illinois and Wisconsin

"The Folks From Way Down East"

in 5 Reels

General Feature Film Co.

5 So. Wabash Ave. Chicago, Ill.

FOR SALE

SEVERAL SIMPLEX AND POWER'S 6A MACHINES

All late models—good as new. Also Machine Trunks, Booths, Economizers, Stage Cable, Etc.

Apply Room 200, 226 West 42nd Street, New York City

SEEBURG "MOTION PICTURE PLAYER"

It has solved one of the Big Problems of the Moving Picture Business.

"The wonder of them all"

Played either manually or automatically, it produces real music for the pictures.

Get Complete Information on it by Addressing

J. P. SEEBURG PIANO CO., Manufacturers, Republic Building 209 S. STATE STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Film Quality

Quality in the film—quality from a technical photographic standpoint is as important to the Exhibitor as is interest in the story that the film tells.

There's one film that's recognized the world over as the standard of quality—that is always used by those whose effort it is to give the Exhibitors the very best goods and the very best service—Eastman film.

And it is identifiable. Look for "Eastman" on the perforated margin.

EASTMAN KODAK COMPANY,
ROCHESTER, N. Y.

THE CENTAUR FILM COMPANY

The Oldest Independent Film Manufacturer

Has the largest commercial plant in America, the most up-to-date equipment, and an organization second to none.

Printing and developing in any quantity. Quality guaranteed. Prices interesting.

CENTAUR FILM CO.
Bayonne, N. J.

THE CARBON FOR PERFECT PROJECTION

ELECTRA

HUGO REISINGER, 11 Broadway NEW YORK

COMPENSARC

That's the device that saves Moving Picture men two-thirds on their electric light bills, and yet gives better light. Did you see our ad last week? Well, don't look it up. Just write for our

Booklet 15018

FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC WORKS
OF GENERAL ELECTRIC COMPANY
1402 Broadway
FORT WAYNE INDIANA
733

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE
1,000 STYLES
ESTABLISHED 1865
WRITE FOR CAT. NO. 31

The A. H. Andrews Co.
115-117 So. Wabash Ave.
Chicago, Ill.
Branches in all Leading Cities
New York Office
1472 Broadway, Long Acre Bldg.
Seattle Office
508-10-12 First Ave., So.
San Francisco Office, 782 Mission St

Developing and Printing
6c Per Foot
INCLUDING STOCK.
TITLES 7c Per Foot
SATISFACTION GUARANTEED
CAMERA WORK
Advertising Motion Pictures
PRICES ON REQUEST.
Commercial Filmers
1101 W. Randolph St., Chicago, Ill.

Largest Stock and Quick Deliveries on Motion Picture Seating

Pleasing Designs. Reasonable Prices
Write for Illustrated Books
V-2 Veneer Seating. V-3, Upholstered Seating.
Send floor sketch for Free Seating Plan

American Seating Company
"Public Seating Exclusively"
14 E. Jackson Blvd., Chicago 18 E. 32nd St., New York
BOSTON PHILADELPHIA PITTSBURGH

ORCHESTRA MUSIC
FOR MOVING PICTURES
The Orpheum Collection of dramatic and descriptive music for Piano and seven orchestra parts. Piano can be used alone. In two series:
No. 1 and No. 2
Piano, 58 cts. each. Both series, $1.15. Violin, 40 cts. each; both 75 cts. Cello-&-Bass same price as violin. Flute 35 cts. each. Both series, 65 cts. Clarinet, Cornet and Trombone same price as Flute. Drums, 30 cts. each. Both series, 55 cts.
Send for free sample page and further discounts, 3d series ready for piano only; 58 cts.
CLARENCE E. SINN
1501 SEDGWICK ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

The "Standardized" Theatre Chairs

Do you want a life-saving chair?
Do you want a space-saving chair?
Do you want a sanitary chair?
Do you want a scientifically built, double standard chair?
We operate the largest exclusive theatre chair factory in the world, AND SELL DIRECT TO YOU. WRITE US

THE HARDESTY MFG. CO., Canal Dover, Ohio

GO INTO THE MOVING PICTURE BUSINESS

MAKE MONEY FAST!
BE YOUR OWN BOSS!
$30 TO $50 PER NIGHT CLEAR
No Experience Needed
We furnish you with machine, film, curtain and complete outfit ready to go to work with ON OUR EASY PAYMENT PLAN.
Write Now for Our Large FREE Catalogue.
NATIONAL MOVING PICTURE CO.
Dept. M. P., Ellsworth Building, Chicago

Steel Standards will not break

STEEL OR IRON STANDARDS
AGENCIES:
H. S. Analey, 1476 B'way, Long Acre Bldg. New York City.
Telephone 5619 Bryant.
California Seating Co. 720 South Hill Street, Los Angeles, Cal.
H. A. Johnson Seating Co., 1314½ 3d Ave., Seattle, Wash.
The Wisconsin Seating Company
New London, Wisconsin, U.S.A.

WE BUY, SELL and RENT
moving picture machines, films and chairs.
THEATRE BROKERAGE EXCHANGE
440 S. Dearborn Chicago, Ill

Mr. Exhibitor:
DEAGAN MUSICAL ELECTRIC BELLS
Double receipts, kill competiton. Are played from piano keyboard.
Write for Catalog
J. C. DEAGAN
DEAGAN BUILDI N
1776 Berteau Ave.
CHICAGO, ILL.

FILM MAKING OUTFITS
for Professional Film Work, for the Manufacturer, Traveler, Explorer, Scientist and Private. The well-known fool-proof Junior Camera, 200 feet capacity; Tripods, Tilts, Printers, Developing Outfits, Projectors, Lenses, Polishers, Measurers, Menders, Winders. Special Film Work. Quick, reliable repair.
Establ. 20 years. Largest Inst. in U. S.
EBERHARD SCHNEIDER
219 Second Ave. New York

Non-Breakable and Sanitary STEEL
HIGH Quality
LOW Price and CAST IRON
Opera Chairs

Immediate shipment on many styles; Second Hand Chairs: out-of-door seating. Send measurements for FREE SEATING PLAN. Mention this paper.
STEEL FURNITURE CO.
Grand Rapids, Mich.; New York, 150 Fifth Ave.; Pittsburgh, 318 Bissell Blk.; Boston, 69 Pearl St.

The Majestic Motion Picture Co.

Releases Sunday, July 5,

LILLIAN GISH

"The ANGEL of CONTENTION"

From Will Levington Comfort's short story,

"The Sheriff of Contention"

Featuring the beautiful LILLIAN GISH in a beautiful story beautifully played.

LILLIAN GISH

Appears exclusively in Majestic Releases and Griffith Specials

KOMIC COMEDIES

Now include "BILL, THE OFFICE BOY" series adapted from the humorous stories by PAUL WEST.

" BILL'S JOB," No. 1 released Sunday, July 5
No. 2 released Sunday, July 19

The Majestic Guide for Exhibitors

Have you exhibitors been reading and depending on this guide? We are endeavoring to the best of our ability to tell you our honest opinion of each Majestic release.

THE ANGEL OF CONTENTION, two reels, release date Sunday, July 5. A picture that we believe surely will pull business to your house.

THE ONLY CLUE, one reel, release date July 7. A very different kind of picture with a thrill and suspense that will hold your spectators.

THE CITY BEAUTIFUL, two reels, release date Sunday, July 12. A story of a young country boy seeking his fortune in a large city. Novel and interesting.

D. W. GRIFFITH supervises the production of all Majestic releases

The Majestic Motion Picture Co.

STUDIO:
4500 Sunset Blvd., Los Angeles, Cal.

BUSINESS OFFICES:
29 Union Sq. West, New York City.

Selig

"Reporter Jimmie Intervenes"

"REPORTER JIMMIE INTERVENES"

A big, telling, trenchant, up-to-date newspaper story of an attempted municipal franchise steal. How the reporter gave the "once over" to the man higher up, scored the big "Beat," and won a wife, is a swift, moving and absorbing entertainment.

IN TWO REELS—RELEASED, JULY 6th

July 7th—"ALGIE'S SISTER"

A city boy is marooned on a ranch, and the cowboys have great game with him. He outwits his tormentors by introducing a female impersonator as his sister. A cow-puncher comedy with a big lilt.

July 8th—"CARYL OF THE MOUNTAINS"

A moonshiner, anxious to win a mountain-maiden, tries to catch her through fear by starting the story that her father is a "revenuer." The real villain is caught, and the girl is won by the man of her heart. Featuring KATHLYN WILLIAMS and THOMAS SANTSCHI.

July 10th—"DID SHE CURE HIM?"

The husband loves cards, clubs and conviviality, but his husky wife gives him "the fruit cure" until he is almost foundered. A roar from start to finish.

July 11th—"HIS FIGHT"

A faithless but fascinating wife is divorced by her husband and comes to grief through another marriage. She tries to win the former back, but fails. A surprising story with big hearthold.

THE HEARST-SELIG NEWS PICTORIAL

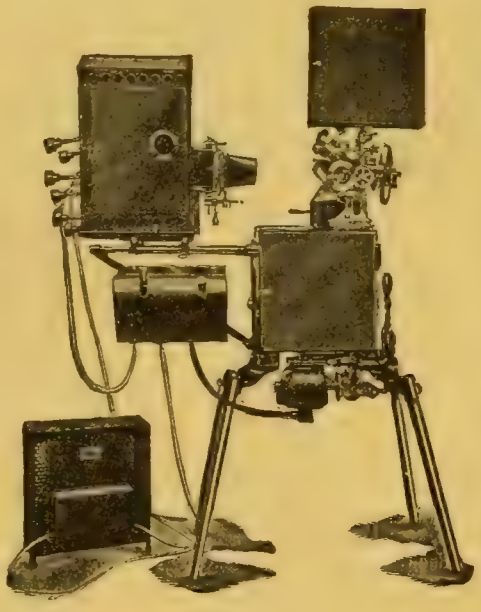
grows stronger and more interesting with every issue. A world-winner in capturing big events. GET THE SERVICE! Released MONDAYS and THURSDAYS.

N. B.—SELIG'S posters have a certain dash in drawing and a charm in color that catches and holds the attention. One-sheets on all releases; threes and sixes on multiple reels.

THE SELIG POLYSCOPE COMPANY

CHICAGO

NPCo



NO group of words that has ever been written by the brightest of scientific minds with intent to describe motion picture projecting machines can tell as much as the one word

POWER'S

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY

Ninety Gold Street New York City

Vol. 21, No. 2 July 11, 1914 Price 10 Cents

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE FILM INDEX

EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

Scene from "The Perils of Pauline" (Eclectic).

Post Office Box 226
Madison Square Station

NEW YORK

17 Madison Avenue
Telephone Madison Square 3510

SPECIAL NUMBER.

The Black Hundred in Secret Session

Flo La Badie as Florence Gray, the Heroine

Attendance Records Broken!

The record for hot weather crowds is shattered!—smashed! Never before have crowds rushed to the theatres in the hot weather as they have to see Thanhouser's Million Dollar Motion picture version of Harold MacGrath's great story, "The Million Dollar Mystery." Theatres everywhere report record crowds. And that means to theatres record profits!

THE MILLION DOLLAR MYSTERY

By Harold MacGrath

Thanhouser's Million Dollar Motion Picture Production

This stupendous production is being shown in weekly episodes; a 2-reel episode will be released each week for 22 weeks. $10,000.00 will be paid for the best 100-word solution of the mystery.

Exhibitors and the public join in saying:

"Wonderful photography." "Beautiful settings." "Exceptional acting." "A splendid cast." "An example of the very best motion picture work."

Bookings are still being arranged. The Million Dollar Mystery is an independent release and may be obtained regardless of the regular program being used.

SYNDICATE FILM CORPORATION

71 W. 23rd St., NEW YORK 166 W. Washington St., CHICAGO

or Syndicate Film Corporation representative at any Mutual Exchange in the United States and Canada.

The Thanhouser Three-a-Week

Tuesday, July 7th, "Deborah" (2 reels). A romance of the 18th century, displaying the talents of Maude Fealy, Robert Robson, Josephine Hoole, Morris Foster, Edward Hoyt, Mitch Lewis, Louis Evert, Helen Badgley, the Thanhouser Kidlet.

Sunday, July 12th, "The Leaven of Good." The happy uniting of a brother and sister in an astoundingly dramatic romance, enacted by Mayre Hall, Irving Cummings, Tom Crugar, Tools Brady, H. Marx.

Ten Million People

Are Waiting to See the Photoplay Masterpiece

"ONE WONDERFUL NIGHT"

Written by LOUIS TRACY

THOUSANDS of Dollars Have Been Expended by the Manufacturers Whose Players Were Nominated for the Role of John Delancy Curtis. The Fact That is Featured in This Attraction Assures You of the Greatest Advertising Drawing Card You Can Secure.

FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN

HUNDREDS

of Dollars Will Be Realized by Those Exhibitors Who Will Book This Four Part Photoplay Adapted from the Story and Produced by

ESSANAY

ESSANAY

"The Fulfillment"

If you have failed to book this three-act feature, do it now. It is one of the most captivating human interest stories that has ever been projected on the screen.

"Mongrel and Master"

For a forceful political drama of graft, you could secure nothing better than this delightfully pleasing three-act attraction. It has the necessary qualifications that spell success. Francis X. Bushman featured.

"Blood Will Tell"

If you are particularly fond of a well-staged, beautifully costumed production that carries a story of romance, you will be greatly pleased with this three-act attraction, both from the standpoint of amusement and box office receipts.

G. M. ANDERSON in "The Good-for-Nothing"

If your patrons delight in seeing a story that is fairly filled with heart interest, it will be wise for you to book this exceptional four-act photodrama in which Mr. G. M. Anderson is seen both in the character of an Easterner and Westerner.

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT!!!

The progressiveness of the Essanay Photo-plays, the original subjects, the superb photography and the popularity of the players, have necessitated our making one extra subject a week.

EVERY MONDAY

Beginning July 13, 1914

We will release a "slapstick" comedy of real merit that will appeal to the funny vein of every Motion Picture Fan.

A NEW PICTURE CHARACTER

funny beyond explanation will be introduced into these comedies.

Three Big Laughs—Three Big Thrills—Every Week

SIX-A-WEEK

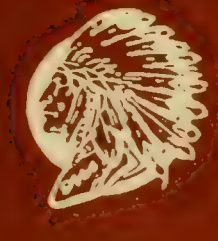
ESSANAY

ARE YOU INSURED AGAINST LOSS?

-:- THE -:-

Snakeville Comedies

Are the Greatest of All Dollar-Producing Comics on the market. They are world-famed for their abundance of unusual novelties that are excruciatingly funny. The leading characters, "SOPHIE CLUTTS," "SLIPPERY SLIM" and "MUSTANG PETE," are the most popular players appearing in comedy productions. This, and the fact that the stories are decidedly original, WILL INSURE YOU AGAINST A LOSS.



ESSANAY

ESSANAY

Superlative and Aristocratic Features

Released Monday, July 20th

"MONEY TALKS"

A side-splitting "slapstick" comedy of unusual merit.

Released Tuesday, July 21st.

"MRS. BILLINGTON'S FIRST CASE."

An interesting comedy-drama concerning the aspirations of a female attorney. Story adapted from The Munsey Magazines.

Released Wednesday, July 22nd.

The Fable of "Higher Education that Was Too High for the Old Man."

A GEORGE ADE comedy with a laugh in every foot and a shriek in every scene.

Released Thursday, July 23rd.

"SLIPPERY SLIM'S INHERITANCE"

A Western comedy sensation featuring Margaret Joslin, Victor Potel and Harry Todd.

Released Friday, July 24th.

"A LETTER FROM HOME"

(In Two Acts)

A photographic and dramatic masterpiece. A story of heart interest and true to life incidents that is well worth your booking.

Released Saturday, July 25th.

"BRONCHO BILLY AND THE GAMBLER."

A Western drama with a punch, featuring G. M. ANDERSON.

RELEASED THROUGH THE GENERAL FILM COMPANY'S FEATURE DEPARTMENT.

SATURDAY, JULY 18th!

"ONE WONDERFUL NIGHT."

(In Four Acts)

The story written by Louis Tracy that has stirred the entire universe. The novel your audiences took delight in reading, because they were given the privilege to vote—to elect a photoplayer to enact the leading role, that of John Delancey Curtis, in the photoplay production—and they elected

FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN

Your patrons want to see this production. Book it for them!

Essanay Film Manufacturing Company

521 First National Bank Bldg., Chicago.

Factory and studio: 1333 Argyle St., Chicago, Ill. Branch offices in London, Paris, Berlin, Barcelona

DON'T BE

TRY TO BE ORIGINAL

There are hundreds of exhibitors in the moving picture business today who remind me of the ostrich. They hide their heads in the sand of hope, thinking this will prevent their enemy, The Future, from finding them.

There was a time when you could sit in a revolving chair, cock your feet up on your desk and let the dollars or nickels roll into your picture house. All you had to do was to show FILM—any old trash, as long as it MOVED.

Don't Forget that the first MARY PICKFORD one reel Imp "IN THE SULTAN'S GARDEN" will be released Monday, July 20. You are bound to pack them in with this added attraction. Special Lithographs.

Don't forget that MARY FULLER has joined the ranks of the incomparable staff of leading Universal photoplayers. You can bless your lucky stars that you've got the Universal Program because this is only the forerunner of the big "scoops" we are going to pull.

AND ABOVE ALL DON'T FORGET to book "The Universal Universal Stars in one reel. It's the greatest novelty you ever had

CAN YOU BEAT THIS FOR

MONDAY, July 13.

VICTOR—Out of The Valley (Western and Indian Dr) (Warren Kerrigan).
IMP—When The World Was Silent (Two Reel Melodrama), Leah Bairdand William Shay.
STERLING—Almost Married (Com).

TUESDAY, July 14.

GOLD SEAL—Lucille Love, The Girl of Mystery (Series No. 14) (Two Reel Drama), Grace Cunard and Francis Ford.
CRYSTAL—Vivian's Four Beaus—and—What Pearl's Pearls Did (Split Reel Com).
UNIVERSAL IKE—The New Cook (Com).

WEDNESDAY, July 15.

NESTOR—Her Grave Mistake (Western Drama).
JOKER—Willy Walrus and the Awful Confession (Com).
ECLAIR—Renunciation (Two Reel Western Drama), Edna Payne and Robert Frazer.
ANIMATED WEEKLY—

UNIVERSAL FILM MANUFACTURING CO.

CARL LAEMMLE

AN OSTRICH!

THAT DAY HAS PASSED INTO OBLIVION. See that you don't pass with it. You've got a future coming to you—EITHER A GOOD ONE OR A BAD ONE. It's up to you to make it good or bad, but you've got to quit loafing on your job if you hope to make good.

You've got to quit using trash justbecause it is accompanied by FLASHY posters. You've got to hook up with a solid, substantial program—THE UNIVERSAL—that will meet all the changing requirements of the market, no matter how fast the picture business changes.

CARL LAEMMLE.

Don't Forget that the Universal Boy with little Matty as the leading character will be released Thursday, July 16th. This new novelty will drive the mothers and kids to your door like bees to a hive.

Don't Forget that the "TREY O' HEARTS," written by Louis Joseph Vance, will be released week of July 28th and that it will be the best serial story ever written and the most excellent series of pictures you ever saw.

Mystery," a one reel comedy, released Friday, July 10th. All of the offered to you. A SURE-FIRE HOUSE PACKER.

A WEEK OF WONDERS?

THURSDAY, July 16.

IMP—Universal Boy (Series No. 1) (Comedy Travelogue), Little Matty.
REX—The Sob Sister (Two Reel Dr), Anna Little-Herbert Rawlinson.
STERLING—A Beach Romance (Com).

FRIDAY, July 17.

NESTOR—When Eddie Went to the Front (Com).
POWERS—The Severed Hand (Three Reel Society Drama), Cleo Madison and George Larkin).
VICTOR—The Panama Pacific Exposition Up to Date (Topical and Educational).

SATURDAY, July 18.

JOKER—His Wife's Family (Com).
101 BISON—A Mexican Spy in America (Two Reel Military Dr), Marie Walcamp and Wm. Clifford.

SUNDAY, July 19.

REX—Out of the Darkness (Dr).
FRONTIER—The Ranger's Reward (Western Drama).
ECLAIR—Tango Versus Poker (Com), Barbara Tennant and Stanley Wolpole.

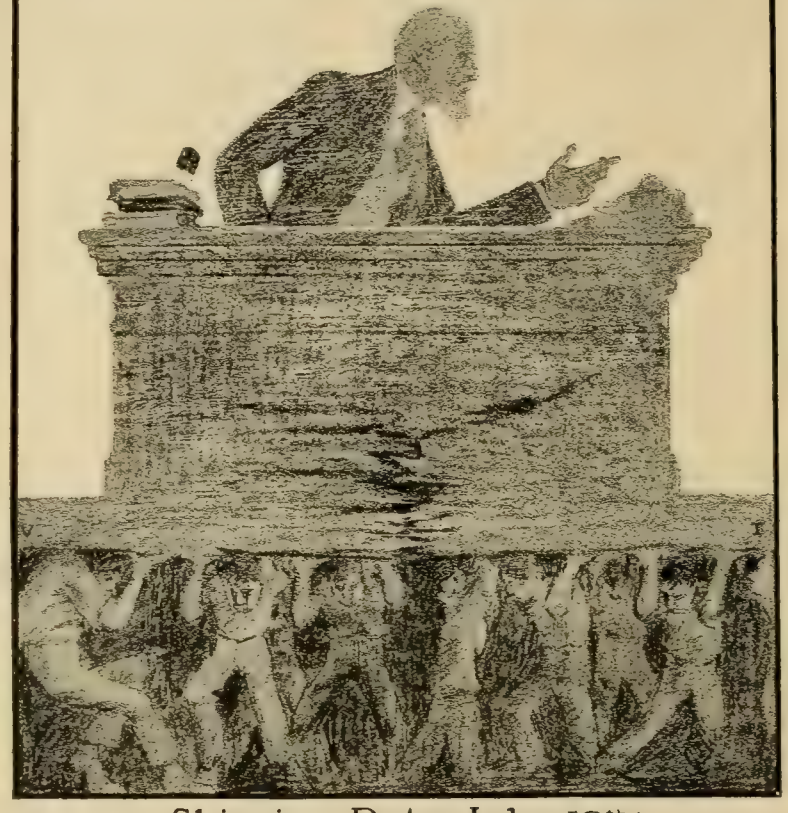
1600 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY

PRESIDENT

TRY O' HEARTS

FANTOMAS No 5

"THE FALSE MAGISTRATE"



Shipping Date July 10th

GAUMONT COMPANY

110 West 40th St. NEW YORK.

Photo-Play Showmen in Convention

Despite the fact that matters of the hour must be carefully considered and those of the morrow planned—still the receipts of the box-office "way back home" is the all important thought which remains foremost.

Here is a list of master productions of the photo-play art which stand signally as "house reputation builders"—every one a play your patrons know—every one a star they have admired or will admire:

ARIZONA	in 6 acts starring	Cyril Scott
CHECKERS	in 5 acts starring	Thos. W. Ross
SOLDIERS OF FORTUNE	in 6 acts starring	Dustin Farnum
PAID IN FULL	in 5 acts starring	Tully Marshall
IN MIZZOURA	in 5 acts starring	Burr McIntosh
PIERRE OF THE PLAINS	in 5 acts starring	Edgar Selwyn
THE JUNGLE	in 5 acts starring	George Nash

—NEXT RELEASE—

LEW DOCKSTADER

In a Play of Civil War Days

"DAN"

By HAL REID

IN PREPARATION

ETHEL BARRYMORE

IN

"THE NIGHTINGALE"

By AUGUSTUS THOMAS

ROBERT W. CHAMBERS'

"The Fighting Chance" and "The Firing Line"

ALL-STAR-FEATURE-CORPORATION

HARRY R. RAVER
PRESIDENT

EXECUTIVE OFFICES
220 W. 42nd ST., NEW YORK

AUGUSTUS THOMAS
DIRECTOR GENERAL OF PRODUCTIONS

EXCLUSIVE AGENTS IN PRINCIPAL CITIES OF THE WORLD

JESSE L. LASKY

PRESENTS

THE ROLLICKING MILITARY ROMANCE

"THE MAN ON THE BOX"

By Harold McGrath Released July 13

Now available throughout THE WORLD

THE SQUAW MAN with DUSTIN FARNUM
BREWSTER'S MILLIONS with EDWARD ABELES
THE MASTER MIND with EDMUND BREESE
THE ONLY SON with THOS. W. ROSS

Distributors thro

JESSE L. LASKY FEAT

LONG ACRE THEATRE

JESSE L. LASKY
PRESIDENT

CECIL B
DIRECTOR

COMING

THE CLASSICAL SUCCESSES OF

DAVID BELASCO

THE TRIUMPHS OF

THE LIEBLER CO.

The Hits of COHAN & HARRIS

The fiction works of Geo. Barr McCutcheon, Stuart Edward White, Harold McGrath, etc., etc.

The Master Works of the World's Supreme Dramatists, Authors and Producers ughout the world

JRE PLAY COMPANY

N.Y.C. W. 48TH STREET

SAMUEL GOLDFISH
TREAS. & GEN'L MANAGER

E MILLE
NERAL

"30 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

DANIEL FROHMAN
Presents

Coming:
Jane Grey
in
"The Little
Gray Lady.

The Distinguished
Film Star

MARY PICKFORD

In A Thrilling, Romantic Drama of Life in The West Virginia Mountains

"THE EAGLE'S MATE"

In Five Reels

From The Celebrated Novel By Anna Alice Chapin

Released July 1st

"30 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

FAMOUS PLAYERS

EXECUTIVE OFFICES
213-229 W. 26th STREET
NEW YORK

Coming: "The Scales of Justice," a drama of love vs. the law.

"30 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

"WON'T YOU LET ME GO BACK TO THE VALLEY?"

Anemone Longs For the Heights.

ANEMONE SAVES LANCER'S LIFE.

IN THE SNARE.

FILM COMPANY

ADOLPH ZUKOR, President

DANIEL FROHMAN, Managing Director EDWIN S. PORTER, Technical Director

"30 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

WORLD'S LARGEST
SAWYER INC.
FILM MART
1600 BROADWAY-NEW YORK

NO!

"It wasn't a Gamble, it was a Dead Sure Thing"

JUST READ the papers
ASK anybody

THE MILLION DOLLAR FEATURE

SMASHED ALL RECORDS AT

THE MILLION DOLLAR THEATRE

WHICH MEANS THAT THE

ALL LAMBS' STAR GAMBOL

Packed 'em, Jammed 'em, Choked 'em with laughter and sent 'em away—yes, sent 'em away feeling like millionaires

Territory going fast.
Applications for time allotted as received.
State Right Buyers can buy it.
Exhibitors can book it direct.

JUST WRITE SAWYER

WORLD'S LARGEST
SAWYER INC.
FILM MART
1600 BROADWAY-NEW YORK

WILLIAM ELLIOTT

PRESENTS

The Smashing SIX REEL COMEDY FEATURE

Dustin Farnum

In Walter Hale's Picturization of William's

Widely Read Novel

"The Lightning Conductor"

The First Big Feature to Carry a Laugh Through

SIX REELS

NOW BOOKING DIRECT

EXHIBITORS

If your State is not sold, WIRE or WRITE
SAWYER and he will book you direct.

DUSTIN FARNUM in THE LIGHTNING CONDUCTOR
6 Parts

THE BATTLE OF VERA CRUZ
2 Parts

SIR HENRY IRVING'S "THE BELLS"
4 Parts

SAVED BY THE BOYS IN BLUE
3 Parts

THE QUEEN OF THE SMUGGLERS
4 Parts

A. BALDWIN SLOAN AND GRACE FIELD
In the Latest Modern Dances
One-Reel Novelty

EXHIBITORS!

BOOK DIRECT

Write or wire at once. Hook up with books now, and if your State is not Features direct, or give you First Run State Right Buyer's Profits from Pro

YOU SAVE THE

That's the SAWYER SYSTEM. Saw Time" Houses. Sawyer's "Small Houses. No House too Big for SAW House too Small for SAWYER TO

When You
Are In Doubt
See SAWYER

OFFICES BEING OPENED EVERYWHERE. ONE IN THE MEANTIME,

JOSEPH AND HIS COAT OF MANY COLORS
6 Parts

NELL GWYNNE
5 Parts

LAMBS' ALL STAR GAMBOL
3 Parts

EXHIBITORS!

WITH SAWYER

SAWYER. Get on SAWYER'S sold, SAWYER will book you his in Your Town and Save You the ducer to Consumer and

MIDDLEMAN'S PROFIT

yer's "Big Time" Features for "Big Time" Features for "Small Time"
YER'S FEATURES TO PACK. No
CONSIDER.

WILL SOON BE IN YOUR NEIGHBORHOOD
WRITE OR WIRE DIRECT

WHITE DOVE'S SACRIFICE
3 Parts

THE CONVICT HERO
3 Parts

THE BUSHRANGER'S BRIDE
3 Parts

SAWYER Buys
SAWYER Markets
SAWYER Produces
SAWYER SELLS

40,000 People

Tried to Get into EBBETS FIELD to See

THOS. H. INCE'S Six-Part Photo-Play

The Wrath of the Gods

OR

The Destruction of Sakura-Jima

NOTE—Monday evening, June 22nd, MARCUS LOEW opened up the Brooklyn National League's Baseball Grounds (Ebbets Field) with a motion picture show, "The Wrath of the Gods," New York Motion Picture Corp.'s 6-Part Production, Produced by Thos. H. Ince. Ebbet's Field can comfortably seat about 20,000 people, but Monday night over 40,000 tried to get in. Consequence was, a riot ensued, quite a few people hurt and the Police Reserves from three different precincts had to be called. Over 15,000 turned away. New York newspapers devoted columns to the story.

ENLARGEMENTS FROM THE FILM.

New York Motion Picture Corp., LONGACRE BLDG., 42nd St. and B'way, New York

KAY-BEE

KAY-BEE FEATURES

The Feud at Beaver Creek, 2 parts, Friday, July 10th
The City - - - - - - 2 parts, Friday, July 17th
THOS. H. INCE, Director-General

KAY-BEE

DOMINO

DOMINO WINNERS

The Curse of Humanity, 2 parts, Thursday, July 9th
The Star of the North, 2 parts, Thursday, July 16th
THOS. H. INCE, Director-General

DOMINO

BRONCHO

BRONCHO HEADLINERS

The Final Reckoning, 2 parts, Wednesday, July 8th
Shorty Turns Judge, 2 parts, Wednesday, July 15th
THOS. H. INCE, Director-General

BRONCHO

KEYSTONE

KEYSTONE COMEDIES

Three comedies a week

Monday, Wednesday and Saturday release days

MACK SENNETT, Director-General

KEYSTONE COMEDIES

KEYSTONE

Photos 8 by 10 Photos of players mentioned below can be had by sending to the Publicity Dept. 15 cents for one; 50 cents for sets of four; $1.00 for sets of eight.

MACK SENNETT	THOS. H. INCE
MABEL NORMAND	GRETCHEN LEDERER	MILDRED HARRIS
CHARLES CHAPLIN	MARGARET THOMPSON	"SHORTY" HAMILTON
ROSCOE ARBUCKLE	TSURU AOKI	CHARLES RAY
HARRY G. KEENAN	ROY LAIDLAW	WALTER BELASCO
"BARNEY" SHERRY	CLARA WILLIAMS	FRANK BORZAGE
RICHARD STANTON	JAY HUNT	THOS. CHATTERTON
	JOHN KELLER	LEONA HUTTON
		RHEA MITCHELL

A set of 8 by 10 Photos of Keystone Mabel, in four different poses, 50 cents

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CORP.

LONG ACRE BLDG., 42nd STREET and BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

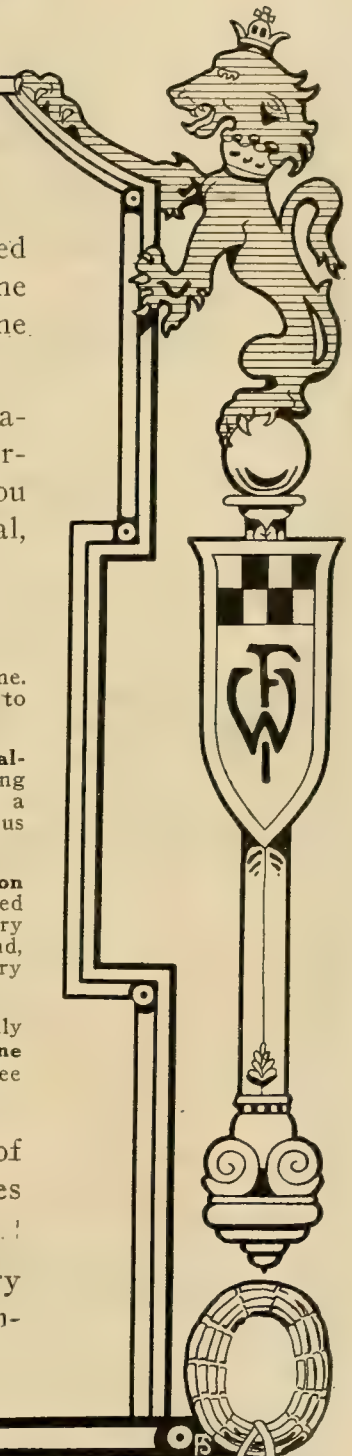
WARNER'S

GENE GAUNTIER
Gene Gauntier Feature Players. Released by Warner's Features, Inc
SID OLCOTT
Sidfilms
Released by Warner's Features, Inc.
MARION LEONARD
Marion Leonard Features. Released by Warner's Features, Inc
J. ARTHUR NELSON
United States Film Corporation Released by Warner's Features, Inc.
NATALIE de LONTAN
United States Film Corporation Released by Warner's Features, Inc.
CECELIA LOFTUS
George W. Lederer Released by Warner's Features, Inc.
JACK CLARK
Gene Gauntier Feature Players Released by Warner's Features, Inc.
HELEN HESPERIA
Milano Films
Released by Warner's Features, Inc.
VALENTINE GRANT
Sidfilms
Released by Warner's Features, Inc
JOSEPHINE WEST
The Colorado Motion Picture Co. Released by Warner's Features, Inc.
DOT FARLEY
Albuquerque Film Mfg. Co.
Released by Warner's Features, Inc

WARNER'S FEATURES, INC.

FEATURES

INC.



The New Idea in Feature Films

Three big features every week in the year—every feature produced by star players—every film a perfect example of photography—that is the policy which makes Warner's Features stand head and shoulders above the crowd.

As a matter of good business, you should investigate Warner's Features. Most of you who attend the Dayton Exposition will have an opportunity to see a few of them on the screen. View them as critically as you please, you'll admit they have all the elements of big success—the appeal, the "punch," the quality.

Take note of these recent Warner's releases:—

MOTHER LOVE—into which Marion Leonard has put all her cleverness and talent and sympathy. A picturesque heart drama in two chapters of three parts each.

A BORN WARRIOR and its sequel EXILED—the most fascinating war romance you ever saw, portraying the life story of Napoleon. Magnificently staged in two chapters of three parts each.

THE CITY OF PROMISE—with Cecilia Loftus as the star. The adventures of a stage-struck girl in New York. Never before have Miss Loftus' splendid powers of mimicry been shown so strikingly. A great three-part production.

TWILIGHT—one of Gene Gauntier's most delightful and absorbing dramas. A virile story of the great North Woods, with a beautiful half-breed girl named Twilight as the heroine. A fine three-part film-play that you ought to see.

TRICKING THE GOVERNMENT—with Valentine Grant in the leading role. A thrilling tale of the moonshiners through which runs a captivating love story. One of the famous "Sidfilms" in three parts.

THE LIGHT UNSEEN—another of Marion Leonard's great six-part productions, released in two chapters of three parts each. The story of an artist and a girl. The artist goes blind, but the love of the girl surmounts every obstacle.

BRINGING IN THE LAW—a wonderfully realistic story of the plaints, featuring Josephine West. A truly remarkable picture in three thrilling parts.

The above partial list of our recent releases will give you an idea of the tremendous things Warner's is doing. There are more big features coming.

When you visit the Dayton Exposition be sure to look up Mr. Harry Charnas, manager of Warner's Cleveland Exchange, and get complete information about Warner's Features.

310 WEST 46th STREET, NEW YORK

"BLINKIE"

WILL SOON MAKE AN IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT RELATIVE TO SEVERAL NEW

FEATURE PRODUCTIONS

OF THE FOLLOWING MANUFACTURERS

HEPWORTH'S, LONDON

PRODUCERS OF THE FOLLOWING NOTABLE FEATURE PHOTOPLAYS

"David Copperfield" "The Old Curiosity Shop" "Oliver Twist"
"The Cloister and the Hearth" "The Heart of Midlothain"
"The Vicar of Wakefield"

ALL PRODUCTIONS ENACTED BY A THOROUGHLY CAPABLE CAST AND PORTRAYED WITH THE FAMOUS HEPWORTH PHOTOGRAPHY

THE TURNER FILMS, LTD.

CREATORS OF THE BIG SUCCESSES

"The Harper Mystery" "The Murdoch Trial"

AND NUMEROUS COMEDIES AND DRAMAS FEATURING THE POPULAR ACTRESS

MISS FLORENCE TURNER

ALL PRODUCTIONS PRODUCED UNDER THE DIRECTION OF

MR. LARRY TRIMBLE

IVY CLOSE FILMS

FEATURING

MISS IVY CLOSE

THE MOST BEAUTIFUL WOMAN IN ENGLAND IN COMEDY PRODUCTIONS OF MERIT

HEPWORTH AMERICAN FILM CORPORATION

A. BLINKHORN, Pres.

110-112 West 40th St. New York City

Ramo Features

Can now be booked at the following

Ramo Feature Offices

THE WORKER, . .	3 Reels	IN THE STRETCH, .	4 Reels
CARDS, ...	3 "	The Governor's Ghost, .	4 "
THE CURRENT, .	3 "	THE CRIMINAL PATH,	4 "
MAN AND WOMAN, .	2 "	THE CLAWS OF GREED,	3 "
WIVES, ...	3 "	Through Dante's Flames, .	4 "
FANGS OF HATE, .	3 "	THOU SHALT NOT, .	4 "
THE DEVIL WITHIN,	3 "	AND A COMEDY THIS IS TH' LIFE,	3 "

Atlanta, Georgia
Suite 311-312 Rhodes Building
North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi and Tennessee
WM. R. MACK, Manager

Des Moines, Iowa
Suite 519-520 Utica Building
Iowa and Nebraska
P. J. HALL, District Manager

Montreal, Canada
41 St. Catherine Street, East
Toronto, Canada
11 Richmond Street West
Dominion of Canada, East of Fort William
FRANK W. FOSTER, Manager

Minneapolis, Minn.
Temple Court Building
Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota
P. J. HALL, District Manager

Denver, Colorado
Nassau Building
Colorado, Utah, Wyoming, Montana and New Mexico
J. C. BUTTS, Manager

Kansas City, Missouri
Gloyd Building, 921 Walnut Street
Missouri, Kansas and Northern Oklahoma
P. J. HALL, District Manager

COMING! COMING! COMING!

The Conquerors. The Victoria Cross.
The Destruction of St. Pierre.
The Mad Mullah or The Lovers of the Nile.

Especially arranged from the original plays for RAMO staging, by the author himself,
Mr. PAUL M. POTTER

RAMO FEATURES, INC.

C. LANG COBB, Jr., Manager Sales and Publicity
Columbia Theatre Building, NEW YORK

FEATURES IDEAL

IDEAL INCORPORATED

Present

WHOM the GODS DESTROY

A Savoia Multiple Photo Play

A Thrilling Photo Play Depicting the Circumstances Surrounding the Envied Inheritance of a Helpless Girl and the Scheming Plots to Deprive Her of Her Fortune

Gripping Action In Every Scene

One, Three and Nine Sheet Lithographs.

"The Actresses Redemption"

A Savoia Multiple Photo Play

A Strong Human Interest Film Play of Parental Love and Sacrifice for The Weakness of a Son Traversing The "Crooked Path."

"The Actresses Redemption" is a Picture Full of Pathos and Heart Throbs

Love Triumphs Over Sin

One Three and Nine Sheet Lithographs.

FOR STATE RIGHTS ADDRESS 126 W 46TH. ST., NEW YORK.

LEADING PLAYERS FILM CORPORATION

—PRESENTS—

"GERMANIA"

PICTURIZED BY SAVOIA
IN 5 ACTS
FROM THE FAMOUS LIBRETTO BY

LUIGI ILLICA

A Photoplay De Luxe—Portraying the History of the German Revolution —Love for the Fatherland—The gigantic "Battle of Leipsic," which history has termed "The Battle of Nations"—The Queen herself—Napoleon—The Little Drummer Boy—and Freedom.

A GORGEOUS AND STUPENDOUS SPECTACLE
NOW BEING SHOWN AT THE

STRAND THEATRE

47th Street and Broadway, New York

Your bids are invited!!!

LEADING PLAYERS FILM CORPORATION

126 West 46th Street, New York

"SALOMY JANE"
WITH
BEATRIZ MICHELENA
THE BEAUTIFUL AND CELEBRATED PRIMA DONNA
SUPPORTED BY A NOTABLE CAST INCLUDING
HOUSE PETERS
PAUL ARMSTRONG'S PLAY
SALOMY JANE AS ORIGINALLY PRODUCED BY
LIEBLER & COMPANY
SALOMY JANE
BY BRET HARTE
CALIFORNIA'S NOTED
AUTHOR OF THE DAYS
OF '49
CALIFORNIA MOTION PICTURE CORPORATION
CAPITAL $1,000,000.00
DIRECTORS
HERBERT PAYNE HENRY T. SCOTT
R.P.SCHWERIN CHRISTIAN de GUIGNE
WILLIAM C. PAYNE EDWIN M. EDDY
JAMES TYSON CHARLES T. CROCKER
GENERAL MANAGER
EXECUTIVE OFFICES
SAN FRANCISCO
STUDIO AND LABORATORIES
SAN RAFAEL
CABLE ADDRESS CAMPICO

KALEM MASTERPIECE FILMS

SHANNON OF THE SIXTH

A Spectacular Five-Part Production of Edward E. Kidder's Famous Drama.

The famous Sepoy massacre at Meerut, India, in 1857, is shown with all the fidelity of the original event. The blowing up of the arsenal in which the English women and children are concealed, and the furious battles between the Sepoys and the English soldiers, the last word in realism. The two 1-sheets, two 3-sheets, two 8-sheets and the 24-sheet show the principal incidents.

The Boer War

A Five-Part Military Drama

"This is real war," declared critics who viewed this production recently. Your patrons will say the same when they see the Battles of Elandslaagte, Wagon Hill, Botha's Pass and Almond's Nek. Two 1-Sheet, two 3-Sheet, two 8-Sheet and one 24-Sheet Posters.

Wolfe, or the Conquest of Quebec

A Five-Part Historical Production

Every scene in this superb drama produced in authentic locations in Canada. See the bombardment of Quebec, the attempt to destroy the English fleet and the battles at Montmorenci Falls and on the Plains of Abraham. Two 1-Sheets, two 3-Sheets, two 8-Sheets and a 24-Sheet for this feature.

FRANCIS MARION

"The Swamp Fox"

An absorbing three-part story of the famous "Swamp Fox's" campaigns against the British in 1776. Strong 1, 3 and 6-Sheet Posters.

A CELEBRATED CASE

A Four-Part production of the famous drama which for years was one of the most popular plays on the stage. Alice Joyce, Marguerite Courtot, Guy Coombs and Alice Hollister in strong roles. Attractive 1, 3 and 6-Sheet Posters.

THE OTHER HALF OF THE NOTE

A Three-Part story of a Secret Service man's efforts to run down a band of smugglers. Superb 1, 3 and 6-Sheet Posters.

THE DEATH SIGN AT HIGH NOON

A Three-Part drama which is without doubt one of the strongest Indian stories ever filmed. Jane Wolfe and Marin Sais in absorbing roles. Attention-attracting 1, 3 and 6-Sheets.

Released through General Film Masterpiece Service

WORLD FILM
THE WORLD
THE FLESH AND THE DEVIL
FIVE ACTS
NOW READY
WORLD FILM CORPORATION
W
130 W. 46 ST. N.Y.C.
WORLD FEATURES
COMING
"THE LIGHTS O' LONDON"
FIVE ACTS
"THE GREAT STROKE"
FIVE ACTS
"PROTEA II"
FOUR ACTS

CORPORATION
WATCH FOR DEVELOPMENTS
SEND BOX-OFFICE RECEIPTS SKYWARD
SHUBERT FEATURES
BRADY FEATURES
BLANEY FEATURES
NEW YORK
CHICAGO
PHILADELPHIA
BOSTON
PITTSBURG
CLEVELAND
DETROIT
CINCINNATI
INDIANAPOLIS
ATLANTA
LOS ANGELES
SAN FRANCISCO
ST. LOUIS
WASHINGTON
SEATTLE
DALLAS
TORONTO
MINNEAPOLIS
KANSAS CITY
DENVER
NEW ORLEANS
BUFFALO

NEWS WHILE IT IS NEWS DAILY ON YOUR SCREEN!

Already the Exhibitors who have booked these Livest of Motion Picture News Films

PATHÉ DAILY NEWS

Have become convinced that for getting the money it is the one best bet. To show a DAILY NEWS poster outside your theatre is insurance against a dull day—to show the film on your screen means a satisfied audience. Invariably the PATHÉ DAILY NEWS Exhibitor is a Successful Exhibitor.

BOOK IT THROUGH THE FOLLOWING PATHÉ DAILY NEWS EXCHANGES

BOSTON, MASS., 3 Tremont Row
PHILADELPHIA, PA., 1235 Vine St.
ATLANTA, GA., Rhodes Building.
PITTSBURGH, PA., 715 Liberty Ave.
CINCINNATI, OHIO, 217 E. 5th St.
NEW ORLEANS, LA., 910 Gravier St.
MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., Kazota Bldg.
DENVER, COLO., Nassau Building.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., 67 Turk St.
KANSAS CITY, MO., 928 Main St.
OMAHA, NEB., 1312 Farnam St.
NEW YORK, N. Y., 115 East 23d St.
WASHINGTON, D. C., 7th & E Sts., N.W.
SYRACUSE, N. Y., 214 Fayette St.
CLEVELAND, OHIO, 622 Prospect Ave.
CHICAGO, ILL., 5 S. Wabash Ave.
ST. LOUIS, MO., 3210 Locust St.
DALLAS, TEXAS, Andrews Building
PORTLAND, ORE., 392 Burnside St.
LOS ANGELES, CAL., 114 E. 7th St.
SEATTLE, WASH., 810 Third Ave.

Delays Are Dangerous. Write At Once For Full Information Addressing As Below

PATHÉ DAILY NEWS, 1 CONGRESS STREET JERSEY CITY, N. J.

EDISON

MEG O' THE MOUNTAINS

A Drama by Richard R. Ridgely

In two parts, 2000 feet.

This is a thrilling story of love, hatred and accusation in the Blue Ridge Mountains of Carolina. And, owing to the tragic intensity of its situations, is a picture story of unusual force. The parts are well acted and the human probabilities of the story lend a flavor of realism to the film. RELEASED FRIDAY, JULY 17TH

COMING EDISON RELEASES

*Across the Burning Trestle

Drama—An adaptation of "In Christmas Canyon" by Francis Lynde. 1000 feet. Saturday, July 18th.

Adventure of the Absent Minded Professor

Seventh "Octavius" story. Comedy. 1000 feet. Monday, July 20th.

A Matter of Minutes

Eighth "Man Who Disappeared" story. Drama. 1000 feet. Tuesday, July 21st.

A Deal in Statuary

Comedy. 550 feet.

His Wife's Burglar

Comedy. 500 feet. Wednesday, July 22nd.

Laddie

A new version of the celebrated Edison drama. In two parts. 2000 feet. Friday, July 24th.

One sheets. One and three sheets. One, three and six sheet posters by the Morgan Lithograph Co.

TRADE MARK Thomas A Edison

Thomas A. Edison, Inc.

239 Lakeside Ave., Orange, N. J.

Makers of the Edison Kinetoscope, Model "D."

LUBIN

"The Incompetent," Wednesday, July 8th.

A Comedy Every Tuesday and Saturday

A Drama Every Friday

A TWO-REEL FEATURE Every Wednesday and Thursday

"The Debt," Thursday, July 9th.

"FOOLING FANNY'S FATHER"

Comedy. Tuesday, July 7th.

Father is working on a contrivance to advance or reverse a person's age, but Fanny and her sweetheart show him that it won't work.

"WHILE AUNTIE BOUNCED"

Comedy. Tuesday, July 7th.

Auntie tries to stop the courting between Alice and a Circus Acrobat, but they throw her in the bounding net until she consents.

"THE INCOMPETENT"

Two Reel Drama. Wednesday, July 8th.

A very intense drama. A story of a worthless man, a devoted wife and excellent friend, the fatal triangle, which causes a tragedy, followed by a new era of happiness.

"THE DEBT"

Two Reel Drama. Thursday, July 9th.

Some sad experiences in the life of a poor but worthy chorus girl who becomes the victim of a rich old roue, but eventually is saved by a heroic and worthy lover.

"THE TRIBUNAL OF CONSCIENCE"

Drama. Friday, July 10th.

Unfortunate career of a spendthrift son who, being discarded by his excellent father, robs the safe and goes headlong to ruin and poverty. Eventually he reforms and a faithful old servant secures a reconciliation and prosperity.

"HOW HE LOST HIS TROUSERS"

Comedy. Saturday, July 11th.

Excellent comedy picture in which a young swell friend calling on his chum's family is mistaken for an escaped lunatic. He is deprived of his pants and has to escape dressed in a lamp shade.

"MANDY'S CHICKEN DINNER"

Comedy. Saturday, July 11th.

Mandy invites the preacher to dinner and gives her trifling husband money to buy a chicken, but through his clumsiness the rooster gets away. The husband then robs a poultry farm, which causes a sad mix-up.

FIVE EACH WEEK

"HE WAS BAD"
Comedy.....Tuesday, July 14th

"TOUGH LUCK"
Comedy.....Tuesday, July 14th

"CODES OF HONOR"
Two Reel Drama.....Wednesday, July 15th

"THE CROSS OF CRIME"
Two Reel Drama.....Thursday, July 16th

"THE LIE"
Drama.....Friday, July 17th

"SHE WANTED TO KNOW"
Comedy.....Saturday, July 18th

"ALL FOR LOVE"
Comedy.....Saturday, July 18th

"TEMPER AND TEMPERATURE"
Comedy.....Tuesday, July 21st

"WORMS WILL TURN"
Comedy.....Tuesday, July 21st

"WHO SEEKS REVENGE?"
Two Reel Drama.....Wednesday, July 22d

"THE FALSE SHADOW"
Two Reel Drama.....Thursday, July 23d

"A TRAITOR TO HIS COUNTRY"
Drama.....Friday, July 24th

"A MATTER OF RECORD"
Comedy.....Saturday, July 25th

LUBIN POSTERS

By Our Own Staff of Artists—One and Three Sheets with Single and Split Reels. One, Three and Six Sheets with all Multiple Reels.

Lubin Manufacturing Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

Chicago Office - - - 154 West Lake Street

LUBIN

LUBIN MASTERPIECES

Lubin Masterpieces are eagerly sought and well advertised by Exhibitors, because of their tremendous drawing power. This drawing power has been thoroughly established from the painstaking efforts always noticed in Lubin pictures, together with the lavish expenditure necessary to produce and maintain the standard which we have set.

The first requisite is a good play, then the carefully selected cast, and bearing those two important points in mind, the list below will conclusively prove that we are now in a position to offer

"Broadway's Best Successes with Broadway's Best Stars"

NOW READY AND ABOUT TO BE RELEASED

"THE WOLF" By Eugene Walter. Five Reels—with the Famous Lubin All Star Cast. As Beautiful a picture as was ever made.

"MICHAEL STROGOFF" Five Reels—with JACOB P. ADLER, the Eminent Romantic Actor, in the leading role.

"THE HOUSE NEXT DOOR" Five Reels—with the Famous Lubin All Star Cast.

FAMOUS AND POPULAR PLAYS NOW IN PREPARATION

"THE EAGLE'S NEST"

(Now being produced in Colorado) Written by EDWIN ARDEN, who made a great success in this play for years and who now plays the important role in the photo play.

"THE FORTUNE HUNTER"

By WINCHELL SMITH—with WM. ELLIOTT, late Star of "Madame X" production, in the leading role.

"THE RAGGED EARL"

By JOSEPH HUMPHRIES and ERNEST LACEY—with ANDREW MACK in the leading role.

RAYMOND HITCHCOCK

The funniest man on the stage in a specially written Comedy which promises to be the funniest Motion Picture yet produced.

FUTURE PRODUCTIONS WITH WELL KNOWN BROADWAY STARS

"THE SPORTING DUCHESS"
By CECIL RALEIGH

With the remarkable racing scene taken on a large and expensive scale.

"THE GREAT DIVIDE"
By WM. VAUGHN MOODY

HENRY MILLER'S and MARGARET ANGLIN'S great success.

THE BIG DRURY LANE AND BROADWAY SUCCESSES BY CECIL RALEIGH

"SPORTING LIFE"—"THE GREAT RUBY"—"THE GREAT MILLIONAIRE"

"THE COLLEGE WIDOW"—By GEORGE ADE, the humor dispenser.

"THE DESERTERS"—By ROBERT PAYTON CARTER

"LOVERS' LANE" and "THE CLIMBERS"—By CLYDE FITCH.

"THE CIPHER CODE" and "DR. BELKNAP" } By CHARLES KLEIN, author of "Third Degree," "Lion and the Mouse," "The Gamblers" and "Daughters of Men," already produced by Lubin, with wonderful success.

"MRS. DANE'S DEFENCE"—By HENRY ARTHUR JONES and more to follow.

Lubin Manufacturing Company

Philadelphia, Pa.

A VITAGRAPH CONVENTION OF VITAGRAPH BOX OFFICE INTERESTS

THE NOW WORLD FAMOUS

BROADWAY STAR FEATURES

RELEASED

5 Part Classic	A MILLION BID	Thrilling Romance
3 Part Comedy	GOODNESS GRACIOUS	Mirth Provoker
6 Part Drama	MR. BARNES of N. Y.	Vitagraph Masterpiece
3 Part Comedy	LOVE LUCK and GASOLENE	Speed Marvel

CAPTAIN ALVAREZ

6 PART DRAMA OF THRILLS WAR, LOVE, ROMANCE, INTRIGUE

As Produced at the VITAGRAPH THEATRE New York City

For Terms and Further Particulars Apply

GENERAL FILM CO'.S Special Service

By Arrangement with Broadway Star Features Company

STATE RIGHTS GOOD TERRITORY STILL AVAILABLE FOR

The Stupendous Scenic Production

THE CHRISTIAN

3000 PEOPLE IN 500 SCENES

For Terms Apply VITAGRAPH-LIEBLER FEATURE FILM CO. 116 Nassau St., N. Y.

VITAGRAPH

LILLIAN'S DILEMMA

FOGG'S MILLIONS

"The False and the True"

Drama. Monday, July 6th

Restored to sight, Betty discovers she has married her fiance's brother. He proves to be a good husband and she escapes a worse fate than blindness. The cast are DOROTHY KELLY, JAMES MORRISON, GEORGE COOPER and GEORGE STEVENS.

"The Moonstone of Fez"

Two Part Drama. Tuesday, July 7th

In Algiers a woman strangely disappears from the face of the earth. The solution of the mystery is astounding. It is all forgotten in the happiness of the ending. MAURICE COSTELLO in the leads.

"Doctor Smith's Baby"

Comedy. Wednesday, July 8th

It belongs to Dr. Smith, but the wrong Dr. Smith has to care for it until the right Dr. Smith is discovered. It's a funny mix-up and a natural mistake. Maurice Costello and Mary Charleston are the leads.

"Prosecution"

Drama. Thursday, July 9th

Marcia's lover is the attorney against her brother. He offers to withdraw, but she urges him to do his duty. She loves her brother, also her lover. She would rather her brother suffer for his misdeed than her lover a coward. MARGARET GIBSON, ALFRED VOSBURGH, GEORGE HOLT and GEORGE KUNKEL are the cast.

"The Vases of Hymen"

Comedy. Friday, July 10th

They are both alike. BUNNY wants them both, so does FLORA FINCH. They both marry and they both get the vases. They greet them as Hymen's Messengers.

"Lillian's Dilemma"

Two Part Comedy. Saturday, July 11th

She can't give her brother his clothes. She wears them herself. One of the boys wears hers. Two professors are accused of harboring a woman. Subsequent developments get Lillian and the professors out of the dilemma. One of them marries her. LILLIAN WALKER, WALLIE VAN and an all star cast.

SIX A WEEK

	"THE SOUL OF LUIGI"
Drama		MONDAY, JULY 13
	"FOGG'S MILLIONS"
Two Part Drama		TUESDAY, JULY 14
	"THE ARRIVAL OF JOSIE"
Comedy		WEDNESDAY, JULY 15
	"THE LITTLE CAPTAIN"
Comedy-Drama		THURSDAY, JULY 16
	"PIGS IS PIGS"
Comedy		FRIDAY, JULY 17
	"THE SONG OF THE GHETTO"
Two Part Drama		SATURDAY, JULY 18

Vitagraph One, Three and Six Sheet Posters

THE VITAGRAPH CO. OF AMERICA

E. 15th St. and Locust Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Five Releases Each Week

IN WOLF'S CLOTHING

A TWO-PART DRAMA—THE FOURTH OF THE ALICE JOYCE SERIES.

Just as Daisy (Alice Joyce) is about to marry Carter Gordon, occurs an astounding denouement which reveals Gordon as a scoundrel and reunites the heiress to the man she really loves.
Released Monday, July 20th, 1, 3 and 6-Sheets that show the most exciting events.

THE BEAST

THE ALICE JOYCE PICTURE PRODUCED AT THE GRAND CENTRAL PALACE.

This is the production staged before thousands of exhibitors and photoplay patrons at the recent motion picture exposition. The mystery of Melford's death and the trial of Edith, his wife, for murder, will hold observers wide-eyed. An all-star cast.
Released Tuesday, July 21st. Striking 1 and 3-Sheets.

The BINGVILLE Fire Department

There are a hundred laughs in the efforts of the three rivals to win the hand of the mayor's daughter. What happens to the bold, bad chief of police, makes this a scream. Released Friday, July 24th.

THE RIVAL RAILROAD'S PLOT

FEATURING HELEN HOLMES IN A TWO-PART RAILROAD DRAMA.

Death rides in the cab of the Midland locomotive where the engineer and the rival railroad's spy are engaged in mortal struggle. How the spy is hurled to his fate will wring a gasp from photoplay patrons. Released Wednesday, July 22nd. Business-Bringing 1, 3 and 6-Sheets.

DEFYING THE CHIEF

FEATURING PRINCESS MONA DARKFEATHER

The manner in which Running Elk's executioner is chosen by his tribesmen; the knife-duel between the rivals, and the ruse by which Ohonka saves her lover's life, crams this with action.
Released Saturday, July 25th. Superb 1 and 3-Sheets.

KALEM

KALEM COMPANY, 235-9 West 23d St., NEW YORK

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

SPECIAL NUMBER

Discussion of Trade Questions and Conditions by Leading Manufacturers and Producers

KINEMATOGRAPHY IN THE UNITED STATES

A Latter Day Narrative of the Growth of the Motion Picture Industry, the Twentieth Century Aladdin's Lamp.

FOURTH among the great commercial interests of the United States, Kinematography, or the art of making motion pictures, and the several co-related branches of industry each contributing its portion to the harmonious whole, has shown a development that hitherto has not been equaled in the annals of business and that may well be termed the marvel of the Century.

Efforts to trace the earliest beginnings of motion photography have taken some of the historians of the trade back half a century to experimental efforts which have had but little to do with the motion picture as we know it today. It is possible that some of those early attempts have a bearing upon subsequent discoveries, but the connection is too slender and the relation too remote to be considered in the story of the present day development of this wonderful business as we shall tell it here. And we might say, too, that this is not to be a history of Kinematography, with a maze of dates to be struggled with and argued about. When one commences juggling dates in this business one must needs be an expert prestidigitator to cause them to fall in the right places at all times. This is no more than a slender "yarn", just strong enough to hold together; dates would do little more than tie knots in it and otherwise tangle it up. If the reader wants dates he may put them in—if he can.

It is generally agreed that it was somewhere 'round about the year 1896 that motion pictures began to show commercial possibilities in this country. Pictures of things in motion were being taken by motion picture cameras—such as they then were—and were being projected by projection machines—such as they were—in a manner that reproduced the motion, but it was a great trial to look at them. From that time the fight to make the pictures better, both in the taking and the reproducing, has been unremitting and, we must say, most satisfactory in results. It was not until the year 1905, however, that the motion picture business hit its present slant toward prosperity, and from that date no sudden discovery of hidden treasure has yielded such bounteous wealth to those who have delved. It was as if an Aladdin had rubbed a magic lamp, only there were many Aladdins and as many lamps. Some have amassed millions and all the way down the scale are thousands of others who have gathered competences in varying amounts until we must pronounce the motion picture the most munificent of all Dame Fortune's vagaries, since through its channel she has most widely dispensed her bounty.

But we started to say something about 1905. Before that time there was nothing like the motion picture show as we now know it. Aside from being used as "chasers" in vaudeville houses, pictures were shown occasionally in "halls", sometimes in regular theatres or under tents, but always by traveling showmen who had picked up a few reels somewhere and managed by reason of inherent ingenuity to show something like a picture. This method was in vogue for several years prior to 1905 and the reels were supplied by Edison, Kleine, Lubin, Vitagraph and Biograph, though the latter company gave its attention principally to "mutoscope" views and was then known as the American Mutoscope and Biograph Company.

Beginning of the "Store Show."

It was during the year 1905 that the novelty known as "Hale's Tours" came out. "Hale's Tours" consisted of a motion picture taken from the front of a trolley car or automobile and then projected in a mechanical device built in about the dimensions of a railway coach and constructed so that the swing and rattle of a coach in motion was simulated to a startling degree. "Passengers" for these tours paid ten cents for each "trip" and saw views of some railroad company's right of way or the streets of a city as the trolley car pursued its devious way about town. The idea was immensely popular as long as the promoters were able to supply "tour" pictures and thousands of these devices were erected all over the country wherever a storeroom twenty feet wide could be secured at reasonable rental.

One of the first of these devices put in operation was installed on State Street, Chicago, by Aaron Jones and was operated by him at a handsome profit, thereby forming the nucleus for the present firm of motion picture theater owners known as Jones, Linick and Schaeffer and the greatest in Chicago.

But the "tour" pictures petered out and the owners of the "tour" cars were compelled to get other views and in doing so made the discovery that they could attract the crowds as easily without the aid of the "Hale's Tour" device for which they had to pay a royalty; so out came that "tour car" and the famous moving picture "Store Show" was born! The bonanza had been discovered and the rush for riches was on. Most everyone in the picture business today has witnessed the development of the exhibition business from the "store show," which is rapidly passing, to the large and comfortable houses where the finest pictures are now shown.

It was the multiplication of the "store show" that gave the motion picture business its impetus. In the beginning stores could be rented at a low figure and the cost of two or three hundred cheap folding chairs, a few yards of muslin and a projecting machine did not exceed five hundred dollars. During the year 1906 thousands of store shows were opened and the demand for pictures was theretofore unheard of. Edison, Lubin, Vitagraph and Biograph were the only companies making pictures in America. George Kleine, in Chicago, was importing and Pathe Freres and George Melies during that year established agencies in New York, but the supply was utterly inadequate.

The output of the American manufacturers was not great. Edison made but two pictures a month at the most, Biograph did but little better and, by reason of a series of suits brought by the Edison Company against the other American companies for infringement of the Edison camera patents, pictures were made under great difficulties. It was not until after the Edison Company established its patents in 1907 and issued licenses to other manufacturers that the American product began to increase and improve.

The year 1907 saw the formation of the Kalem and the Essanay Companies. The Selig Polyscope Company, which had made an occasional picture prior to that year, also came into line as an Edison licensee and before the year was up the American manufacturers were making about eight single reel releases every week. Added to this were the releases of Kleine, Pathe and Melies, importers, amounting from six to eight more. During the following year the demand grew to such an extent that Pathe Freres increased its importations to six single reel releases weekly of which as many as two hundred prints of some subjects were disposed of. The product of the American makers did not show a corresponding increase during that year, due to poor quality more than any other reason; but they were learning rapidly and there was a steady improvement in their methods and product.

Exchanges Control Business.

At that time the business was controlled mainly by the exchanges. This branch of the business found expression first in New York, when Herbert Miles opened an exchange in the attic of the Biograph Company's studio on Fourteenth Street, to be followed shortly afterward by Eugene Cline, who opened an exchange in Chicago. The exchange bought pictures from the manufacturer and leased them to the theatre owner at a stipulated weekly rental. The idea was so successful that by the end of 1908 there were about 150 rental exchanges in the United States. Ruinous competition resulted and rental rates were cut to such an extent that thousands of dollars were owing to the manufacturers by the exchange men who were unable to pay their bills.

This condition arose as early as 1907, when an attempt was made by the exchange men to save their businesses by forming a trade organization known as the Film Service Association. The first meeting was held in Pittsburgh, where William H. Swanson of Chicago was elected president and Herbert Miles of New York secretary. Subsequent meetings were held at Buffalo, N. Y., Chicago, Ill., and New York City, but little was accomplished to abate the evils which threatened the business. Notwithstanding all efforts made to stop the practice of subleting, duping and price cutting, the war went merrily on until the formation of the Motion Picture Patents Company and its comprehensive plan was announced in January, 1909, at a meeting of exchange men held at the Imperial Hotel, New York City.

Patents Company Formed.

The Patents Company united all the then existing American manufacturers and the importing firms of George Kleine, Pathe Freres and George Melies, the latter through his representative in this country, Gaston Melies. By the pooling of all existing patents on cameras and projecting machines issued by the United States patent office, it claimed a royalty from the manufacturers of films doing business in the United States and from the theatres using licensed projecting machines. It was hailed as the motion picture "trust" and roundly berated by all who were excluded from its privileges. It materially reduced the number of film exchanges at once by refusing to supply those whose business standing was not of the best or who would not subscribe to its terms. Naturally an independent movement in the trade was immediately formed to fight the "trust," but the effect of the organization of this strong group of manufacturers and importers was to bring order out of chaos and to restore the business to a sound basis.

Independents Get Together.

Within a few months after the formation of the Motion Picture Patents Company a number of independent film manufacturing companies were organized. The first company in the field was the Centaur, of which David Horsley was the owner. This company had been organized for some time prior to the formation of the Patents Company, but had not been very successful, owing to the vigilance of the Edison Company's investigators in their search for infringers. There was also the Carson Company, but its product was negligible, and the Phoenix Film Company of Chicago, but the real independent movement did not start until the formation of the Independent Moving Picture Company by Carl Laemmle which, together with Mark Dintinfass' Champion Company, Pat Powers' Powers Picture Plays, the Thanhouser Company by Edwin Thanhouser, and the New York Motion Picture Company by Baumann & Kessel, formed the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company in April, 1910. Just prior to this event attempts had been made by J. J. Murdock of Chicago, with the International Producing and Projecting Company, and I. Ulmann of New York, with the Film Import Company, to consolidate the independent manufacturers, but without success.

Associated with the independent American manufacturers were the importing companies of Great Northern, Eclair, Lux, Ambrosio and Itala, the two latter being represented by the New York Motion Picture Company.

These allies greatly strengthened the independent program.

During the life of the "Sales Company" an attempt was made to form an organization similar to the Patents Company with the Bianchi camera patents as a basis, but the effort fell through for the reason that the Bianchi camera was found to be impractical and did not offer the protection promised by the owners of the patent, the Columbia Phonograph Company. After this the Sales Company continued its way uninterrupted, gaining the Gaumont imports and the Solax, Reliance and Rex home productions and improving its program in many ways.

First Studio of the Vitagraph Company.

Matters for the independents moved along smoothly till May, 1912, when the announcement of the organization of the Film Supply Company of America was made and the Thanhouser, American, Majestic, Reliance, Solax, Comet, Gaumont, Great Northern, Eclair and Lux companies left the Sales Company for the new combination, headed by Harry Aitken as the promoter. At the same time the formation of the Mutual Film Corporation was announced, the purpose of which was to operate the exchanges chosen to handle the product of the manufacturers associated in the Film Supply Company, with John R. Freuler as general manager.

The defection from the Sales Company left that combination with the New York Motion Picture Company, the Imp Films Company, the Powers Picture Plays, the Rex Company, the Champion Company, the Republic and the Nestor Companies. There was great excitement at Sales Company headquarters, but the remaining members quickly came down to earth and formed the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, with Charles Baumann as president, Pat Powers, vice-president and Carl Laemmle, treasurer.

We must refer our readers to the files of the Moving Picture World for the full story of the riotous proceedings that soon followed. Hardly had the Universal been organized than trouble commenced. The first break came when Baumann & Kessel, of the New York Motion Picture Company, withdrew. As Mr. Baumann was president of the Universal, his withdrawal left the management of the company in the hands of Pat Powers, who proceeded to take forcible possession of the studios of the New York Company as the property of the Universal Company. Several almost riots were precipitated when the Universal crowd descended upon the New York offices and factory in West 19th Street, but the New York people held the fort and the differences were afterward settled amicably, with the New York Company on the outside of the Universal. Later this company made arrangements to release its product through the Mutual Film Corporation, with which concern it has remained up to date.

Kalem House, Jacksonville, Florida.

A Present-Day View of the Vitagraph Company's Great Plant, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The Universal continued along in its stormy course, piling up lawsuits over the matter of control, some of which have still to be decided. Carl Laemmle was finally elected to the office of president and has made a good record in his efforts to pull the company out of its difficulties and put it upon a paying basis. New brands were established and now a sufficient program is offered to its patrons.

While the affairs of the Universal were in the melting pot things were happening at the headquarters of the Film Supply Company on West 44th Street, New York. The Mutual Film Corporation was growing in importance and the firms most closely allied with that company became dissatisfied with the conduct of the Film Supply. The explosion occurred in December, 1912, with the withdrawal from that concern of the Thanhouser, Reliance, Majestic, American and Punch Companies. The New York Motion Picture Company, which up to this time had been going it alone, joined with the Mutual and a strong combination was quickly launched.

Out of the wreck of the Film Supply came the Exclusive Film Corporation, which now handles Great Northern, Blache, Solax and miscellaneous features, with offices in the Candler Building.

The Mutual Film Corporation and its allied manufacturers have been quite successful. The acquisition of the New York Motion Picture Company's product—Kay Bee, Broncho and Keystone brands—greatly strengthened the program. The American took on some new players and improved its pictures noticeably. Thanhouser, now the property of a new company of which Charles J. Hite is president, increased its output and finally, within the past year, the services of David W. Griffith as director brought the Reliance and Majestic pictures up to the highest standard.

While all these things were happening to the independents the progress of the manufacturers allied with the Motion Picture Patents Company was most noteworthy. The number of films released weekly by that group was greatly increased and improved. The Biograph Company discovered a director among its players named D. W. Griffith who proved to be a wonder. He gave a new twist to picture making and soon the Biograph standard became the model for picture makers all over the world. Old "slap stick" and "horse play" pictures were gradually eliminated and the productions began to show real dramatic merit.

General Film Company Organized.

The most important happening in 1910 was the organization of the General Film Company, licensed by the Motion Picture Patents Company to conduct film exchanges. This company gradually purchased the then existing licensed exchanges and assumed the functions of serving motion picture theatres. J. J. Kennedy was elected president of the company and P. L. Waters appointed general manager and, according to the standards of that time, an efficient service was established. Mr. Kennedy's administration continued until 1913, when he resigned and Frank L. Dyer was chosen to succeed him.

Shortly after Mr. Kennedy's resignation he, with Mr. Waters, formed the Kinetograph Company and received a license from the Motion Picture Patents Company to conduct exchanges. Several branch offices were established, but the odds against the project were too great and after a brief period during which several hundred thousand dollars were spent in the effort to establish the concern, the promoters confessed their inability to compete in the field already well covered by the General Film and the company was taken off their hands by the General Film.

Mr. Dyer continued as president of the General Film Company until February, 1914, when Mr. Kennedy was again elected to the presidency and Mr. Waters restored to the position of general manager.

Since the organization of the Motion Picture Patents Company the ranks of the licensed manufacturers have remained almost unbroken. During that period many new motion picture manufacturing companies have been formed. Some have been successful; others have fallen by the wayside, but out of the ruck three groups of manufacturers making regular releases have come through, the Patents Company Licensees, the Universal and the Mutual, all of which are well established.

Feature Companies Appear.

Within the past year there has come into existence several companies the policy of which is to produce large feature picture plays. The best examples of the feature

Big West Coast Studies of the Universal Film Company at Hollywood, companies are the Famous Players, All Star, Lasky Feature Company, Gauntier Players, Olcott's International Players, Balboa, Ramo, Bosworth, Ltd., Blache Features and Life Photo Film Corporation. Several other companies are working along similar lines and have brought into the ranks of the photoplayers many of the prominent actors and actresses of the dramatic stage.

Foreign Companies Build American Plants.

Another interesting development of the American market has been the establishment of American plants by Continental manufacturers. Pathe Freres lead the procession by erecting an elaborate studio and factory in New Jersey—the factory at Bound Brook and the studio at Jersey City. Eclair built a fine studio and laboratory at Fort Lee, N. J.; Gaumont is well established at Flushing, N. Y.

On the other hand, the Vitagraph Company has erected a big plant in Paris and George Kleine is deeply interested in a studio in Italy.

The American manufacturers have signalized their success by the erection of immense studios and manufacturing plants, many of them of a most stable character and elaborately equipped. The beginnings were small, but the wonderful growth of the business seems to have justified the permanent equipment that has been quite generally installed. The end of the development of the business in this direction seems not yet to have been reached.

The imports and exports of motion pictures to and from the United States have grown enormously. Figures are not available, but they reach many millions of feet both ways. Foreign makers, attracted by the American market, at first were satisfied to sell to some American importer, but the business grew so rapidly that they found it advisable to establish offices in New York with their own representative in charge. Now almost every foreign company of importance is so represented.

The demand for good American pictures in Europe led the American makers to establish foreign selling agencies in London, which city has become the motion picture market of the world. Every American firm of any consequence is represented there, either directly or indirectly, and until very recently the foreign sales have almost equalled the home consumption, but for reasons explained by some of the World's contributors in this issue, that demand has materially fallen off.

Big Feature Combinations.

Among the more recent developments are noted the formation of combinations of feature film makers. The details are too recent to require reiteration here. Four of these organizations are now in the field, Box Office, Paramount, World Film and Warner's Features each controlling important productions. Their success will depend largely upon the continuing popularity of the feature production of four and more reels. That they will serve to promote stability and better prices is unquestioned and it is quite possible that they may prove the salvation of the feature picture.

A Business Free From Stock Jobbers.

In this age of "big business" and a tendency to inflation of industrial projects the motion picture industry has been singularly free from the "stock jobbing" methods that has characterized other industrial enterprises. There is almost no purchasable stock of any legitimate motion picture company to be found in the open market. Few companies are capitalized on a speculative basis and nearly all are close corporations. It has become an axiom of the trade that any project offering stock for sale to the general public is of a wild-cat order. Thus far none that has pursued that policy has become a real factor in the business.

So far the conduct of the business generally has been highly creditable to the men identified with it. That methods might be improved and resources conserved is admitted, but the growth of the business has been so phenomenal and the demand upon all branches so immediate that details of management have necessarily been overlooked. Time will adjust these matters.

What the future holds in store for the motion picture and the army of men and women dependent upon it for a livelihood is a matter of conjecture. That it is reasonably stable is conceded; that there will be an appreciable contraction is generally believed, but it is not anticipated that the effect will be serious or that the permanent investments will be affected materially.

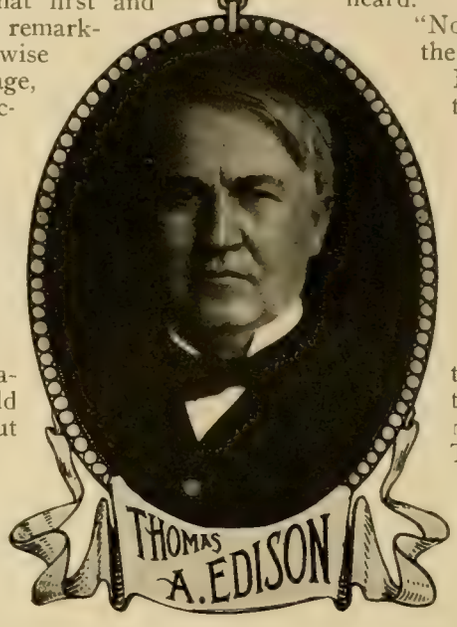
The Moving Picture World presents in the following pages of this issue the expressions of a number of the leading men in the trade on various phases thereof; their opinions will be read with interest and are commended to careful consideration.

Cal. Unique in Having Sixteen Stages That May Be Operated at Once.

A Chat With Thomas A. Edison

BY W. STEPHEN BUSH

THOMAS A. EDISON is a plain, happy, old-fashioned American. He is that first and foremost and then by a most remarkable and surprising addition he is likewise one of the greatest inventors of his age, ranking near the top among the benefactors of his kind. In appearance, manner and language he reminds you of the best type of the great Middle West, of a prosperous, philosophical farmer, or the shrewd and kindly president of a rural bank. He is hearty, hospitable and wholesome. If his great fame, as told in the encyclopaedias and in the daily lives of our civilization, have awed you into hesitation and diffidence be sure that the old gentleman's neighborly greeting will put you at ease like a touch of magic.



I had gone out to Orange to interview the great man in his world-famous laboratory. Edison roams about the vast plant just as he pleases, he is here, there and everywhere.

"I will try and find him for you," said his secretary, and immediately went in search of him. This gave me a chance to look about and examine the office or rather the chief den of the inventor. It was an ideal inventor's retreat. It differed from an editor's sanctum in the evidence of care and order. There was an abundance of light and air and the ceiling seemed more than twenty feet high. Models and books and tokens of appreciation stood neatly arranged and distributed on shelves and on tables. There was a touch of elegance in the furnishings—solid comfort and a dash of art.

In less than ten minutes the secretary came back with Mr. Edison. A few moments later the great inventor was sitting in a rocking chair between his office desk and a long flat table, ready to talk. There is a boyish exuberance about Edison, his laugh is boisterous. A rare kindliness of soul irradiates his features. He suggests strength, character and the love and power to think. He is a big, deep-chested man with the head of an intellectual Titan. Withal he is as simple as a child and just as direct and ingenuous.

The conversation somehow started with the topic of food. It is a favorite topic with Edison.

"I eat less than a handful every day and I thrive on it. We eat too much, which makes so many of us fatter than we ought to be."

Edison then responded quickly to the question of his interest in motion pictures.

"Well," he said with a quizzical smile, "that is getting to be quite a business now. I tell you, whatever you do for the proletariat pays. I am not done working for the proletariat. I am now engaged on an invention which will give cheap opera to all the people. I am going to make the man that works in the ditch for $2.00 a day enjoy things which Louis XV. could not have bought; yes, finer things than the French king ever saw or heard.

"Now, you want me to say something about the early history of the motion picture as I saw it. You know I have often wanted to find out who the first man was that put the pictures on the screen as a commercial proposition, but I have never been able to do it. I think though it was somebody in New York, somebody that ran an arcade and fitted up a special room for the showing of the pictures, charging an extra price for admission. We certainly had a lot of trouble before we came near hitting the right thing. First we had to have the proper kind of a cylinder. Then we made a tape perforated on the edges. The first lengths were about fifty or a hundred feet. It was hard to get sensitized emulsion and a film that would not break. Then came the fight with the pirates; that always as a matter of course. We had to fight them in the courts and our expenses were enormous. Well, I was not so anxious to make money; I only wanted to break even."

Smiles played about the corners of his mobile mouth as he grew more and more reminiscent.

"Yes, I have to smile when I think of our first studio," he continued. "Our first studio and office was movable, it was carried on pivots and we moved it around in the open, changing with the position of the sun, because you know the sun would insist on changing. The studio looked for all the world like a 'Black Maria.' It was about 25x20 feet in size. There was a glass top to it. Now, in those days there was no flicker. I took forty pictures to the second, but when it came down to commercial work the speed was cut down, as you know. They made it sixteen pictures to the second, as much as the public will stand I suppose. There ought to be no trouble about getting absolutely steady pictures if they are willing to pay for them; it's purely a commercial question. Well, when this new business got under way a lot of our enterprising Hebrew citizens jumped on board. They were quick to see its coming possibilities. It has taken from seven to eight years to make room for the pictures. It takes that long to make room for the best thing ever invented. If you were to invent something tomorrow, something that everybody needs, it would still take about seven years to introduce it and make room for it. I know from experience. It took me even longer to make room for the incandescent light. I guess I was about thirteen years in properly introducing the phonograph.

"You want me to say something more about the early days. Well, at first we used to turn out films of an average length of about two hundred feet and the subjects were all scenic. The idea to utilize the invention for the

(Continued on page 198)

Present Day Trend in Film Lengths

BY WILLIAM N. SELIG

THAT the single reel photo-drama is the keystone of the motion picture industry becomes more apparent daily. Patrons of the film drama want their programs as diversified as possible. A program offering four or more productions is more apt to please an entire audience than is a program offering one photo-play of four or five reels. Of course, there are exceptions to this rule.

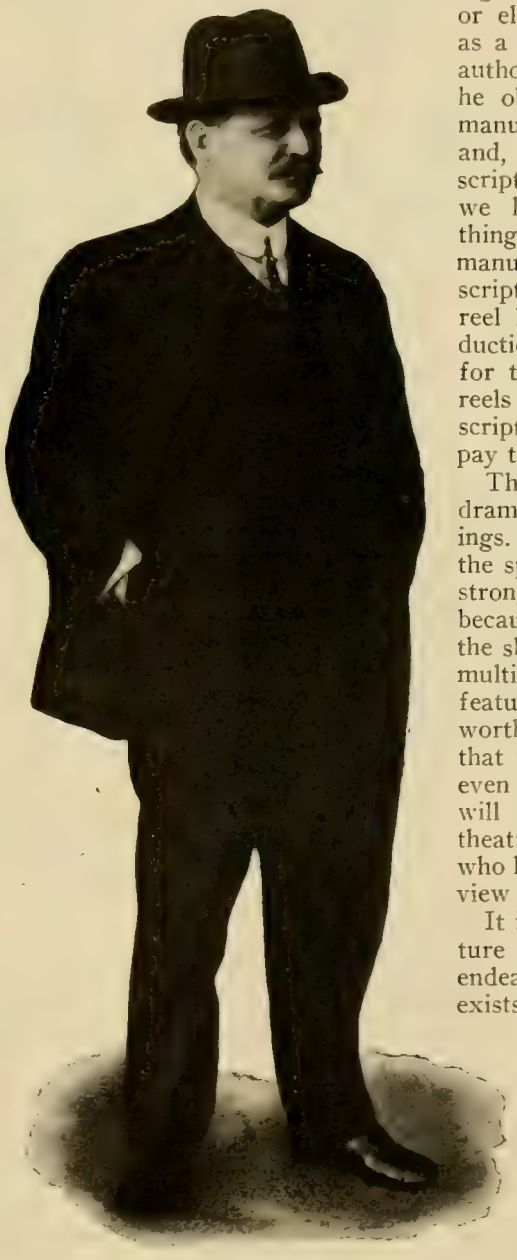
In order that a photo-play the length of which exceeds two reels may draw a large audience it must have a general appeal. The story must be an exceptional one and the cast unusually strong. The ordinary, so-called feature play will not satisfy, and has a tendency to injure the motion picture business.

If a story cannot be fully visualized in a thousand feet, then an additional thousand feet is permissible; and, further, if the story is such that it cannot be told in even two thousand feet, then we may safely exceed that limit and not bore the audience. However, stories that cannot be told in three or four reels are very scarce, indeed. It is only the big spectacular productions that justify five, six or even nine reels. Because the story has been written by a well-known writer, or because of the fact that a great actor or actress is starred in the production, does not, in public estimation, justify a film of great length. The photo-play audience will not pay admission prices to see the names of great authors on a screen, or the faces of well-known people. The audiences want a picture to interest and entertain them. When celebrities and a strong story are combined in the making of a picture, then only will the audiences proclaim it as worth their time and money.

In Europe, films of great length are in disfavor. It is Europe that overdid the "feature" production, and it was the first to pay the penalty of the infliction. Today the average European exhibitor does not want over three-reel lengths, and many prefer one and two reel productions. This same condition is becoming apparent in America.

The popularity of the photo-play was first due to the short subjects and varied programs. The length of the productions gradually grew as the cost of the material increased, and many manufacturers felt that, since the cost of dramatic material had increased, they were obliged to obtain more money for their films, and this end was arrived at by lengthening the productions. Three, four and five reel productions became as numerous as single reels. In fact, some manufacturers adopted the policy not to make anything in one reel that could be padded into two or three. There were some exceptions among manufacturers who took the opposite view, and their rule was and is not to make anything in two reels that can be made in one.

To illustrate my point, I will merely state that a prominent author once sent to my office the script of a comedy. The scenario department did not believe that the script contained enough action for one reel, and returned it to the author, requesting that additional incidents be added or else that the production be made as a split reel. At the time that the author received his manuscript back, he obtained a letter from another manufacturer requesting material, and, not having time to write a new script, he forwarded the scenario that we had rejected. The remarkable thing then happened. Instead of the manufacturer complaining that the script had not action enough for one reel he made it into a two-reel production. Probably the only excuse for the making of the script in two reels was that it was an expensive script and the public were obliged to pay the expense.



Col. William N. Selig.

The logical solution of the photo-drama is a classification of the offerings. The one and two reel, and even the split reel, will always be the main strongholds of the photo-play theatre, because a well varied program and the short presentations will attract the multitudes. Another class will be the feature photo-drama—that is the worth-while feature photo-drama—that will run an hour and a half, or even two hours and a half. These will be offered in another class of theatres and will appeal only to those who have the leisure and inclination to view photo-plays of great length.

It is not my purpose to belittle feature subjects, but the idea that I am endeavoring to convey is that there exists an erroneous belief in the minds of some manufacturers and producers that old plays which the public have long since ceased to be interested in, and novels by great authors which make interesting reading, but do not visualize, are important enough to be made into feature photo-play offerings. Big stories by great writers and great dramas by well-known dramatists when well acted—whether with a cast of well-known actors or not—are meritorious; and only such should lay claim to public patronage. I do not approve of the mediocre, even in a single reel, and it is the policy of my firm to make my single reel dramas as strong in plot, as perfect in detail, and as photographically excellent as it is possible for the human mind and mechanical apparatus to achieve; and it is only when a story comes into my hands, so big that it cannot be handled in one or two reels, that I feel justified in going beyond that length.

I am glad that there are many manufacturers who feel as I do in this matter. They are realizing this condition, and because of this feeling there is bound to be a continual appeal to the masses by the silent drama, and the photo-play theatres will continue to enjoy prosperity. As in the legitimate drama, it was the mediocre productions that dissatisfied the public and drove patronage from the legitimate theatres until the theatrical managers who were responsible for the conditions were driven out of the business, so will history repeat itself in the photo-play field. It will be a survival of the fittest.

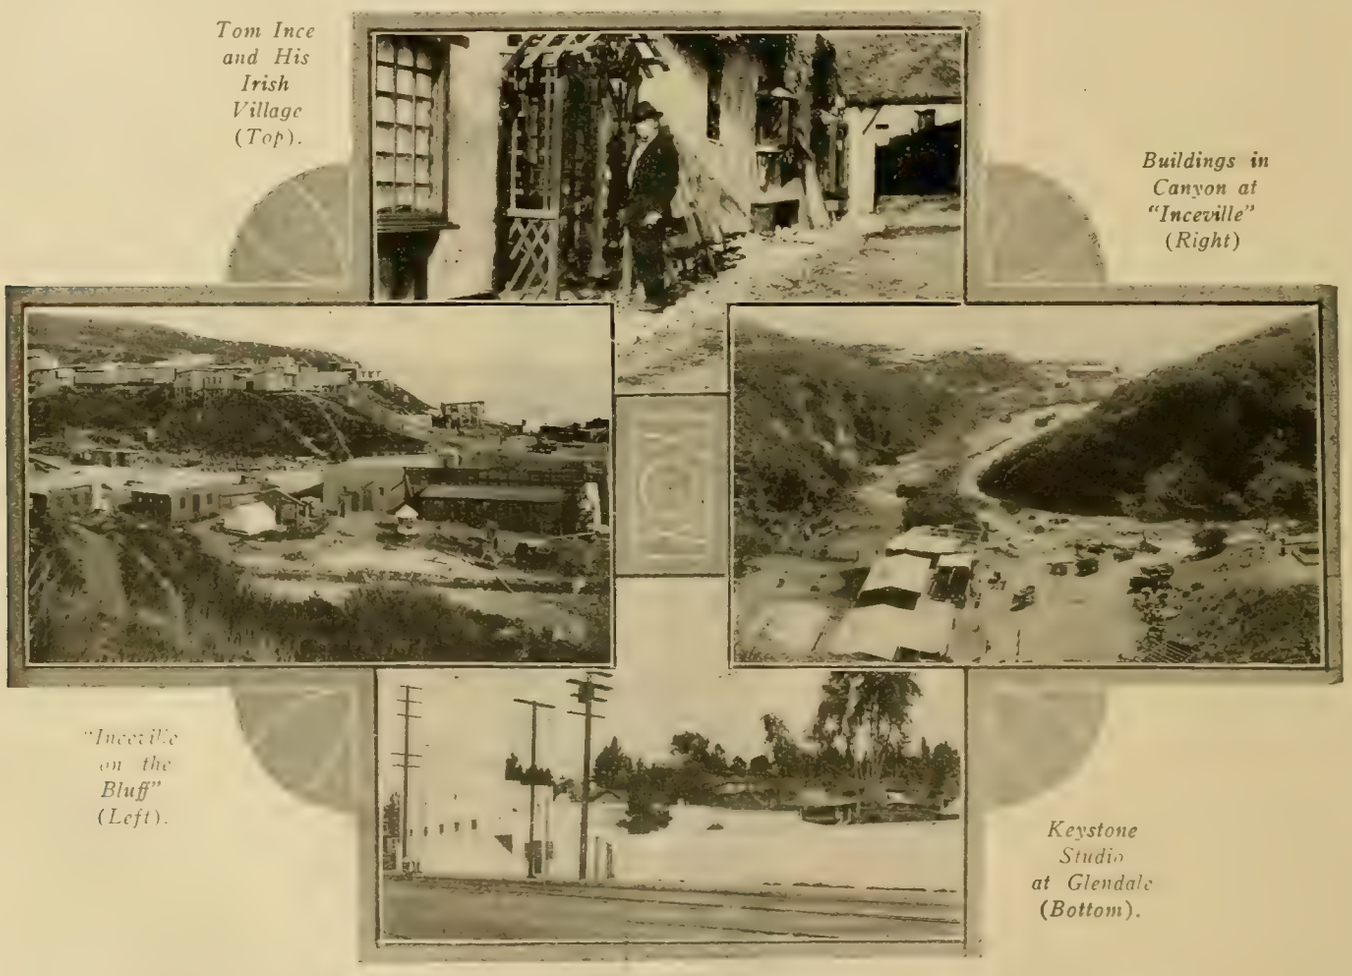
Wm. N. Selig

Tom Ince and "Inceville"

OUT on the West Coast, a few miles beyond Los Angeles, Cal., where the long rolls of the Pacific Ocean beat up against the bluffs, a picturesque group of shacks are snuggled close along the edge of a canyon and look out upon the seemingly endless expanse of water. This is "Inceville," the home of the "Kaybee" and the "Broncho" pictures of the New York Motion Picture Corporation. It was founded by the famous "Kaybee" director, Tom Ince, and by courtesy has been named after him.

Coming into the making of "western" pictures at a time when that class of subjects had become very tiresome for their sameness, Director Ince started in making three-reel "westerns" that were so different that the trade sat up and took notice. The New York Motion Picture Corporation was quite on the "outside looking in" at the time, but Ince's big features had the "punch" that made them popular from the start, so that "Kaybees" became prime favorites everywhere.

With but a modest beginning Mr. Ince has added to and enlarged his equipment until he has become master of a considerable village devoted to the making of pictures. He has also prospered through the liberality of the founders of the New York Motion Picture Corporation, Messrs. Baumann & Kessel, who have recompensed him according to his merits. A handsome and substantial home in Hollywood and a charming family are the pride of thrifty Tom Ince.



Tom Ince and His Irish Village (Top).

Buildings in Canyon at "Inceville" (Right)

"Inceville on the Bluff" (Left).

Keystone Studio at Glendale (Bottom).

Idealistic Motography

BY S. S. HUTCHINSON

MUCH has been said and written about the progress made in the development of the moving picture industry, and it is safe to say that the future development will be in the direction of other industries and educational institutions taking advantage of this twentieth century art to advance their own interests. That the educational advantages of pictures have not commenced to be realized is evident to any who have given the subject the slightest consideration.

Idealism in pictures has heretofore been as a phantom, and although rapid strides have been made in perfecting the present standard of quality, a comparison of the pictures of a few years ago with those of today will disclose as vast an improvement as was shown in the first decade of practical motography. Great as has been the improvement in pictures, they are still far from having realized the ideal or maximum possibility. What we see now and commend in unqualified terms will be judged, within a comparatively short time, as being almost as crude as were the first pictures placed on the market. One can therefore only treat the subject using the present standards of perfection.

It is taken for granted that practical equipment and modern methods are to be utilized, although the latest inventions are not necessarily the most successful nor exactly indispensable to the best results.

The primary factor in bringing about a realization of commercial idealism in motion pictures is a perfectly harmonious working organization, the constituent parts of which are production, laboratories and distribution, each of which, in turn, is properly subdivided into natural tributaries. It would require a voluminous treatise to enter into the minute details of these various individual topics; but it will probably not be amiss, in a general way, to touch upon the most potent factors in an ideal production—the producer, actor, scenario, and photographic technic.

The producer, of course, is the most important factor. He is the supervising architect who must be able to pass on the acceptability of the plans, or scenario, which requires the most careful consideration, but which too frequently receives very little or only superficial attention. Most efficient results are attained by having the working scenario arranged so that the incidents of the story can be put on in sequence and the scenes subsequently cut and properly assembled; and by no means should a scenario be permitted to be altered as the production progresses. Upon the producer devolves the proper interpretation of the script. He must fathom the spirit the author intended to depict. He must know the capabilities of the various members of his company and draw out of them the action necessary to portray the proper sentiment and inject into the picture that which will hold the interested attention of the audience. The determination of the proper costumes, settings and general environments are details requiring his careful consideration.

Artistic architecture, beautiful pergolas, broad vistas, winding gravel walks edged with luxuriant foliage, vari-colored flower beds, palms and other semi-tropical touches of nature, the ocean, mountains, forests and plains, in the great southwest, are taken advantage of by the American Film Manufacturing Company and not only add to their productions a distinctive charm and beauty, but furnish to their employes an environment that enhances their efficiency and generates an inspiration that could not otherwise be achieved. These little touches of nature's charms in the pictures are also highly appreciated by the public. The American Film Manufacturing Company finds that the efficiency of its employes is increased to a very perceptible degree by making ample provision for physical comforts, such as rest rooms, reading rooms, green rooms, cozy and well appointed dressing rooms, and by maintaining delightful exterior decorations requiring the constant services of a staff of landscape gardeners, etc.

The novel effects in pictures, such as the unique dissolves and multiple exposures, have an immeasurable bearing on their popularity. Titles run in over the scene, as in "Footprints of Mozart," recently released, and "The Cricket on the Hearth," in which the style of type used was in conformity with the spirit and locale of the story, are of greater importance than would appear to the casual observer, and they really supply the little touches that make up the "finished" product.

The actor must make a careful study of the character he is to represent and must throw his whole heart and soul into his work if it is to be convincing and real; he must live the part, cherish the hopes and sense the fears, and must do it naturally.

The camera-man must realize that unless he performs his duties to the best of his ability (taking for granted that he has ability) all the work of the producer and actors is for naught. The picture must possess stereoscopic quality, depth of focus, microscopic detail, lights and shadows, with proper compensation for tinting and toning in the exposure of the negative and its subsequent development. The alert camera-man will not fail to improve every opportunity to work in special effects that might aid the picture in expressing the sentiment of the author.

The proper tinting and development of the positive, the crystallizing of all previous effort, requires the constant attention of a trained expert. This process, although last in chronological order, but by no means least important, gives opportunity for bringing out the best that there is in the picture. Just as soon as this fact is fully appreciated by all manufacturers there will be a decided improvement in all productions, and public interest in pictures will be vastly increased. It is with regret that the writer is compelled to pass on from this very important feature to keep within the confines of the space that can be devoted to this article.

It is impossible to lay too much stress on the importance of the editing of film, placing of correct, legible and artistic titles. Laxity in this particular spells failure for numerous productions.

The lithograph is a factor that has a very material bearing on the commercial status of a picture and requires careful study as to pictorial and typographical composition. Through this medium the manufacturer invites the passer-by to witness the exhibition of a picture on which he has lavished time and money. How frequently does he succeed and how often does the poster absolutely repel?

Artificial stimuli, as a well-known author or a popular star, are often resorted to, but cannot properly be component parts of an ideal production.

Striking a golden mean between the commercial and purely idealistic phase of the motion picture, the ideal production would be one that was produced from a good script to which no author's name was applied by a capable but unmentioned director, enacted by a cast chosen solely because of histrionic ability, depicting a subject that had the power to hold the attention of the cultured and the plebian, the rich and the poor, one that possessed artistic, dramatic and technical qualities of the highest degree, and commended itself solely on its individual merits and induced a maximum sale throughout the civilized world without the application of a trade-mark.

The subject of distribution is one that must be solved by each manufacturer, according to market conditions, under the peculiar situation prevailing in this and other countries.

J. J. Hutchinson

David W. Griffith, Motion Picture Director

THERE are critics in plenty who are unwilling to accord to real genius all the laurels that belong thereto, and they will attempt to prove their contentions by hook or crook. The fact remains that the art of producing motion pictures was materially revolutionized by David W. Griffith, whose likeness is shown on this page, and whether the critics are willing to acknowledge that fact or not, the directors who have gained success in their work during the last few years have followed his methods very closely.

David W. Griffith.

It is recalled that many of the players who are prominent to-day gained their first motion picture schooling at the hands of Mr. Griffith. In this respect he was an instructor par excellence, and those who have remembered his teachings are still to be found in the list of screen favorites.

When a man succeeds in working changes so radical as did Griffith and impressing his ideas so indelibly upon those who worked with him, is he not entitled to all the glory and emoluments that he can gather unto himself?

Not all of us will agree with Griffith in his choice of subjects, but, once he has made his choice and the picture is presented to us, we are compelled to admit that he has discovered in his subject some things we did not suspect were there, and that he has presented those things in a way that is startling, if not always pleasing, and that he compels us to admire his artistry. If that does not spell ability of parts wherein does the greatness of a director lie? It was something of a personal triumph to Mr. Griffith when he held David Belasco for six hours in unrestrained admiration of his work.

Griffith Directing a Scene in "The Escape."

It matters little with which trade mark the pictures made by Griffith are branded so long as they are American pictures, and they continue to influence the work of others and lead the art to a higher development.

Doom of Long Features Predicted

BY CARL LAEMMLE

IN MY opinion the one big vital point that will be discussed at the various conventions this year will be the length of subjects. Personally, I believe that long features are doomed. I have always found that Europe is from six to twelve months ahead of this country. I don't wish this understood to mean that the European film manufacturer is giving the American manufacturer any lessons, but circumstances prove that the likes and dislikes of the European public assert themselves very strongly in this country within six months after they have started in Europe.

At the present time there is tremendous demand from the European public for short subjects and I predict that the general clamor for a diversified program will soon sweep this country.

Although I felt confident that I was right, I wanted to get the opinion of some of my friends, who were exhibitors, and I invited some suggestions. I hadn't the slightest idea that there were so many exhibitors in America who believed as I do, i. e., that long features are doomed.

Every exhibitor whom I heard from expressed his individual opinion that he would be only too glad when the manufacturers would come back to the single and double reels and once in a while a three-reel feature, and a good four or five-reel feature once a month.

There is not an exhibitor who has been in the business for the last four years who doesn't remember that when he got a two-reel feature about once in two or three months, no matter how poor the feature was, he did big business with it and made money. As the situation stands today every day is a feature day and every picture is boosted so highly that the public has become satiated with features and is not as interested in them as it used to be.

If I was running a theatre, personally, I would rather show single reels any time than some of the poor features that are on the market. The sooner the single reels come back again the sooner I believe the exhibitors will be making more money and the public will be more satisfied.

Every week in my mail I get several letters similar to one that I recently received from an exhibitor in Paducah, Ky. I take the liberty of copying part of it:

"I have patrons who are regular in their attendance, but when they notice that my program is a five or six-reel feature they remark, 'Well, I would like to see the picture but it is too long,' and pass on to one of the other theatres which has two-reel subjects and a couple of singles. One hour and ten minutes is about as long as many of the patrons wish to spend in the theatres and I think this time is best spent by giving them a diversified program. I trust that the American producer will soon realize this and get back to the one and two-reel subjects as they now seem to have lost their heads on long subjects."

I am heartily in accord with the statement made by the exhibitor in Paducah, not because of any theoretical ideas that I have, but because I have actually been convinced by talking to people who patronize moving picture theatres that they don't want long subjects.

Let me cite an instance which will bear out my contention:

When I was in Chicago recently, I happened to meet a man who is a very busy merchant and who is quite a moving picture fan. During the course of our conversation this gentleman remarked to me that he was no longer interested in moving pictures, simply because of the fact that he could not get as much pleasure out of them as he previously had.

He went on to tell me that a year or two ago he could drop into a moving picture theatre any place in the City of Chicago and find enjoyment for an hour and leave the theatre satisfied—feeling that he had had his money's worth.

As matters stand today when the opportunity presents itself he drops into a moving picture house, but is usually unfortunate enough to arrive at the end of the second or third reel of a five-reel feature and has to wait until the third, fourth and fifth are run off and then watch the part that he has missed.

Under the old arrangement the worst that would happen would be that he would have had to wait five or six minutes until the reel on the screen was completed and then he could start in to enjoy himself. Today he feels that his entertainment is entirely spoiled because he has to sit through the climax of the picture before he can get an idea of what it is all about.

In further corroboration of my statement that long features are doomed, I want to bring to your attention a statement made by an exhibitor in Johnstown, Pa., that he had distributed among his patrons a voting coupon asking them to decide for themselves the type of program they desired run in his theatre. The result was that over 70 per cent. of the people attending the theatre and who handed in coupons were in favor of the single and double reel diversified program.

If I was an exhibitor and owned a theatre and depended on it for a certain income, and being advised of market conditions as they are herein predicted, I would get into personal contact with my patrons and feel them out as to whether or not the one and two-reel program, with an occasional three or four-reeler, is not the ideal form of amusement, that they want.

Take the public into your confidence and I am sure you will find that I am correct in my statement that the long feature is doomed and its death knell will be sounded shortly.

Famous Players in Famous Plays

BY ADOLPH ZUKOR

WHEN I sit in my office, close my eyes and see rising before my mind the flashing lights of thousand upon thousands of theatres in which are being shown Famous Players in Famous Plays the realization that it has all come true just as I dreamed it years ago, seems to me unreal and fantastic, a figment of the imagination as any Arabian Nights tale.

And the romance of the moving picture is more marvelous in the wonders it has wrought, and the kaleidoscopic changes it has accomplished in the lives of a thousand million people than man's imagination could have conceived.

When I entered upon the business of manufacturing moving pictures a few years ago, it was an industry which was in danger of dying from success.

The explanation of this apparently incomprehensible statement is that the film manufacturers had fallen in a rut, and surfeited by the sudden demand which was sweeping them on to fortune had neither the desire nor imagination to see that there must be progress and improvement or the goose which laid the golden egg would soon be dead.

In other words it seemed to me that the moving picture man must try to do as artistic, as high class, and as notable things in his line of entertainment as such men as Henry W. Savage and Charles and Daniel Frohman were doing in the high-class Broadway theatres. If they did rest the public would quickly tire of the mediocre players and plays and desert the moving pictures.

With this predominant idea firmly intrenched in my mind, I sought a means to put its value to a practical test.

What I wanted was a new idea which would be so startling in its departure from the old routine and so tremendous in its magnitude that the whole world would be as startled and surprised as a man would be who was suddenly confronted with a great transformation, and as I thought of the problem its answer came flashing into my mind.

It was to engage the highest salaried, the most highly respected, the most artistic actors in the world to pose in their greatest dramatic successes before the camera, and to follow that film with those of other stars in their theatrical triumphs. To accomplish this was not a mere matter of money. It required the prestige of a noted theatrical manager to sponsor such an undertaking.

Accordingly I began a tour of the big managers' offices, but they all laughed me to scorn and scoffed the idea.

Mr. Daniel Frohman, then and now one of the most respected managers in the business, was the only one to give me any encouragement at all, and so I determined to concentrate all my efforts upon endeavoring to induce him to form an association with me to carry out my plan.

At last I obtained his interest. His artistic imagination was stirred by the possibilities of the unlimited stage upon which to set moving pictures and he became imbued with the spirit of the discoverer as the possibilities of this new line of endeavor opened upon him.

Once this was done the next thing was to find the player to start the innovation. Various names were suggested to us, but the one I wanted was Sarah Bernhardt. That she was and is the most wonderful actress in the world, the most artistic, famous and high salaried, everyone who ever heard of a theatre was well aware.

More than that, her extraordinary ability as a pantomimist made her an ideal subject for the camera.

It was a long hard struggle to make her accept our proposition. A dozen times during our negotiations, I was convinced that she would never accept our offer, but I was determined that I would never stop trying as long as there was even one chance in a million of winning her consent. When finally she did sign our contract and her picture was given to the world, the new era of the film had begun.

To the Famous Players Film Company may be given the credit for first establishing the distribution of feature films in a systematic and regulated manner. I determined to make 30 "Famous Features" a year and I quickly saw that there must be a regular program of releases. It was also quite as necessary to know what amount could be spent in producing a picture without gambling too much on its financial structure.

Accordingly we devised the plan of selling a year's output to an exchange for a certain territory at a fixed price, per annum, instead of obtaining a varying scale for each picture. The fact that I was able to do this after our first two releases had been made is one of the most striking and complimentary evidences of the confidence of exchanges in a particular product that has ever been recorded in the history of the moving picture business.

We are now inaugurating another step for improving the selling methods of our product.

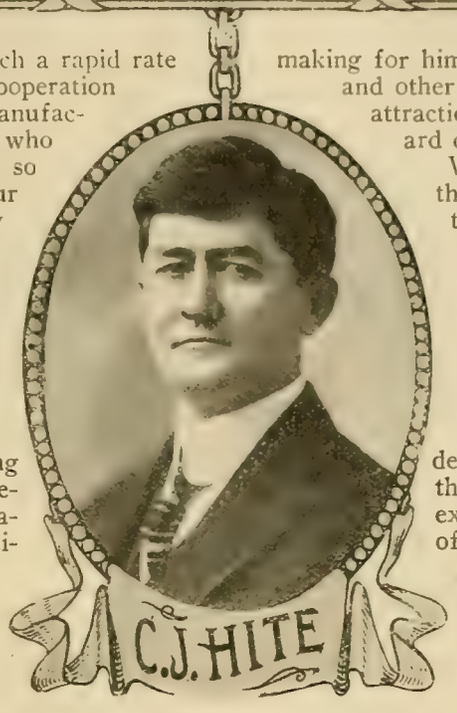
Beginning on September 1 the Famous Players will release 36 "Famous Features" a year, part of them in conjunction with Henry W. Savage and Charles Frohman.

These will be released through a new and most comprehensive exchange established to handle Famous Features exclusively, and which will cover the United States.

Its benefits are manifold. It will for the first time completely systematize the distribution of feature films, it will create a vast saving in selling cost, and will, greatest of all, help the exhibitor to make money for himself, and thus enable him to pay prices sufficient to defray the cost of the most lavish and ambitious offerings.

Advertising for the Exhibitor

BY CHARLES J. HITE



OUR industry is progressing at such a rapid rate that the necessity for a closer cooperation between the exhibitor and the manufacturer is more than ever apparent. We who are doing things now have advanced so greatly over our predecessors that our precedent will be hard to follow by those who come along behind us. And they cannot be satisfied with keeping up the standard we have set. They must beat it as much if not more than we have beaten those who went before. The only way they can do it is by close cooperation between manufacturer and exhibitor.

The successful making of moving pictures is a complex thing and a tremendous amount of capital and organization is necessary for regularity and uniform excellence of service. Only the big organized manufacturer can accomplish and maintain it. Few exhibitors realize what a hazardous game the manufacturer is playing, the great outlay of money in production and in the absolutely necessary publicity or they would encourage him in the promulgation and exploitation of the things that cost, which are also the things that pay.

That time-honored axiom, "You must spend money to get money," is as true of the film business as of any other. This has been brought home to me in the operation of the Thanhouser company more than in any of the various other businesses in which I have been interested and all of which have proved to be merely good stepping stones to the present enterprise. This has rapidly developed until now with "The Million Dollar Mystery," I am trying an experiment of really colossal size.

Immense capitalization and organization make it possible to release such a huge and expensive serial simultaneously all over the country and to make this pay, it has been necessary to embark on an advertising and publicity campaign, hitherto unequalled in any amusement venture.

We are advertising for the exhibitor, a thing which the manufacturer has not been willing to do before. The bulk value of this advertising is nearly a quarter of a million dollars. Now, it remains to be seen whether the exhibitor will appreciate what we are doing sufficiently to stand behind us in our efforts to help him as well as ourselves and support the highly meritorious offering we are making for him. If he does so, it will encourage us and other manufacturers to produce other great attractions like it and steadily raise the standard of his business and ours.

We are trying out in two hundred of the greatest newspapers in the country the theory that it pays to advertise to the general public direct. In this way we are reaching and appealing directly to the patrons of the exhibitor's box-office. Our advertising in trade papers is not alone beneficial to ourselves. Of course, its primary importance is to us, as it presents in forceful English the merits of our product, which we desire to market to the exhibitor, but, on the other hand, it is of benefit to the exhibitor also, as it keeps him informed of what is on the market. But the great daily paper campaign can only be of use to us if the exhibitor is enterprising enough to support us in our bold step in endeavoring to help him sell the seats in his theatre, without any expense to him for this widespread publicity.

Aside from the advertising, if we had not been equipped as we are and had found it necessary to organize and equip especially for a serial of the magnitude of "The Million Dollar Mystery" it could not have been adequately produced at a cost of less than a quarter of a million dollars. Thus you see in production and in advertising we are able to give to the exhibitor of the country that which cost half a million dollars had we not been so organized and equipped as to do it for vastly less.

Do not imagine that the actual expense has been light even though we were so organized beforehand. I do not believe such great stage sets and such expensive properties and accessories ever have been employed in the production of a modern photoplay. What with the purchase of the Francis Wilson mansion at New Rochelle, the balloon ascensions, tally-ho parties, automobiles cheerfully thrown over cliffs and shattered to bits, in the interest of thrills, the blowing up of ships and the destruction of costly clothing and furnishings, and the engagement of celebrated writers and players, our disbursements have mounted into the hundreds of thousands.

This sort of investment can go on with great profit to everyone, if the exhibitor and the manufacturer can get into closer sympathy and not continue to fight each other.

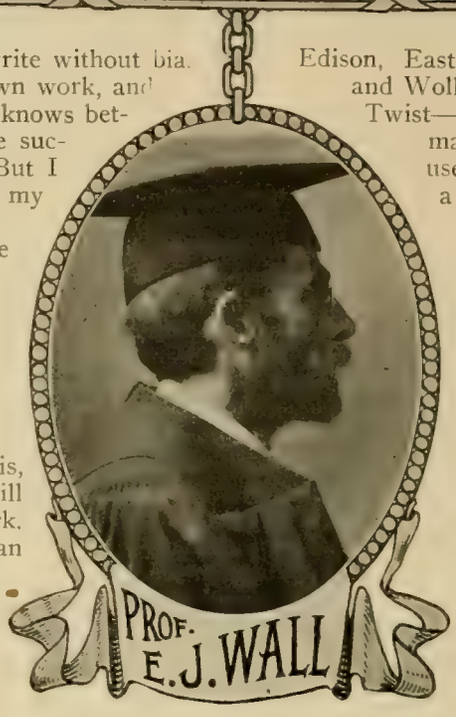
IN keeping with the general advancement which has been made in the motion picture industry within the past year or so are the changes which have resulted in the exhibitors' methods of "selling his show."

Scores of exhibitors who have entered the field from the so-called legitimate branch of the amusement profession are spending as much money in the daily newspapers in their towns to advertise Mary Pickford in "Tess of the Storm Country" as they were wont to spend to advertise Maud Adams in "Peter Pan"—and are doing it with profit.

In the same proportion that the motion picture industry has increased the number of "house managers" throughout the country until they now number hundreds as opposed to the tens of other days, so also has the same industry and its progressive, up-to-date spirit multiplied the methods of constructive advertising.

University Interest in Motion Pictures

BY E. J. WALL, F.R.P.S.



IT IS a little difficult for me to write without bias on what must naturally be my own work, and yet there is probably no one who knows better the actual facts, the progress, the successes and failures we have made. But I am asked to write the story from my viewpoint and here it is.

Throughout I have kept in view one main idea and that is that it is absolutely essential for a successful operator to be thoroughly grounded in the theory of his work, no matter what that may be. I have more than once been asked by a student: "What's the use of my knowing that; how can it apply in photography?" My answer is, "Wait, and as you learn more you will see the bearing on some of your work. I want you to be more than the man standing behind a half closed door and looking through the crack." I do not believe in teaching students to become mere parrots or machines. I want them to know the whys and wherefores, so that when they strike any trouble they may be able to reason out the causes and find the remedies.

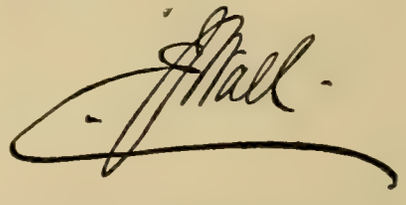
As regards motion picture work proper, with which the editor is naturally more interested, I can only say that I cannot see that this requires any special treatment, any more than any other branch of photography, for it is, after all, merely one branch of the art. I would only lay emphasis on the fact that the photographic department of Syracuse University is not and never will be a school wherein a man can learn motion picture work in a few weeks, as long as I am connected with it.

Too many think that they have only to turn a crank for a week or two to become duly qualified experts. I first turned the handle in 1896, and I have been in the game off and on ever since, and I do not know it all and I never shall. Our students have to learn how to use a camera, to develop and print and then project; but they are not allowed to do this till they have had a thorough grounding in chemistry and optics. They have to project not only in the school but under commercial conditions in a theatre, and I believe that every operator ought to go through the same training.

It is simply deplorable to receive letters, as I do, from men who can neither write well nor spell decently, all wanting to learn the motion picture business in a few weeks. Apparently this work is looked upon as a richer gold field than those of Yukon or Australia, and I do my best to discourage such get-rich-quick ideas.

So far, I am thoroughly satisfied with the result of our work. We have now, thanks to the farsightedness and generosity of Mr. F. J. Marion of the Kalem Company, a building of our own and we hope next year to put in an all-glass studio, 65 by 35 feet. We have a good equipment, thanks to the generosity of the Kalem, Edison, Eastman Kodak, Ansco, American Goerz and Wollensak Companies. But I am like Oliver Twist—I am asking for more. There must be many firms that have "junk" that is of no use to them. I want it. I want to form a museum. I want a library. The smallest contributions will be gratefully received.

As to the future, our outlook grows brighter and I mean to do better—better work with the motion picture. I am to film quite soon some of the operations of our Department of Agriculture—some special machine movements. But the results are to be used for educational purposes only. They are not to be commercialized. We are not a commercial, but a teaching establishment. We hope to give assistance to all inquirers, proprietors, managers or operators, but far too often I find the days not long enough for my own work. We hope to institute an experimental branch, where any point that crops up may be actually tested out under conditions that will admit of no cavil on any one's part. We are now only hampered by want of money and time, particularly the latter. Our course of two years is all too short to teach what I want to, for the school was not founded to teach motion picture work, but photography in its widest sense, which must after all be the basis of all successful work. We have other schemes in view, but they will not touch the "movie," except indirectly, it is therefore unnecessary for me to deal with them.

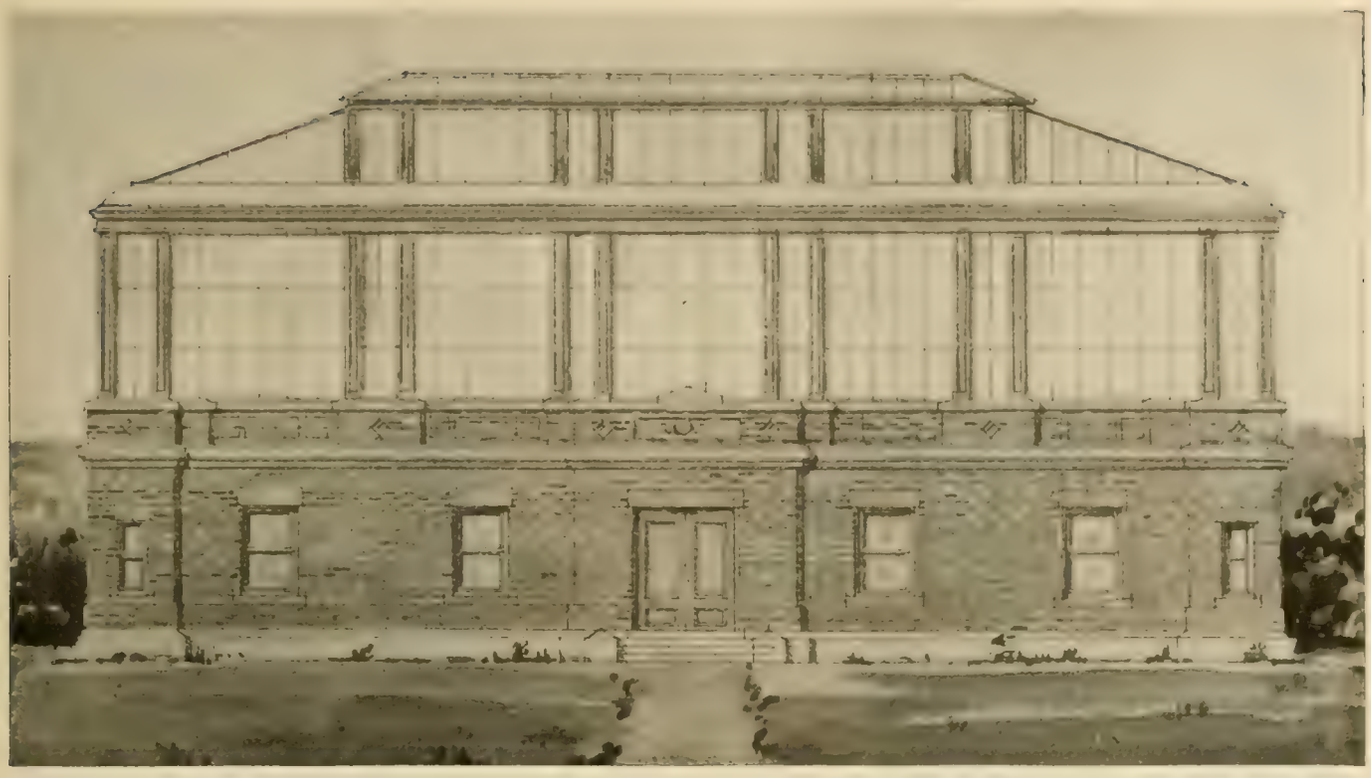


PURPOSE OF THE SYRACUSE SCHOOL

By Frank J. Marion

THE Photographic Department of Syracuse University was not founded to turn out experts in three or six months. The initial idea, and one that still forms the dominant note, was to provide such instruction, both in theory and practice, as would form a solid foundation for every branch of photography, including motion picture work. It is impossible for anyone to learn photography, much less the whole of motion picture work, in a few months, and I am glad to learn that over 70 applicants for such short instruction have been turned down.

Given a good picture story, then a perfect result, means first, good composition; secondly, good camera work, and thirdly, perfect photography in the dark rooms. An admitted trouble, which every film maker has had to contend with, is that too often an artistic producer may be entirely ignorant of photography, or a good photographer ignorant of art. Therefore, in the course at Syracuse University, the principles of art have been given a prominent place, especially the elements of composition. In fact nearly as much time is devoted to art as to photography, and the high reputation which the College of Fine Arts of the University has is sufficient guarantee as to the quality of the training in this respect.



Photographic Building, Syracuse University

Good camera work must be based on a thorough understanding of the optical principles, the action of light, of color values, etc., and a very thorough grounding is given in these subjects. Perfect photography in the dark room necessitates a comprehension of the chemistry and physics of the subject, and besides the practical experience gained in all classes of photographic work, a student must put in about five hours a week in studying chemistry and physics.

Till the founding of this school there was no establishment in connection with any university where systematized training could be obtained and it is the first photographic department of a university outside those of Germany and Austria.

The school is young yet—barely two years old—but in a short time it must have an appreciable effect on the quality of the men available for motion picture work in all its branches. It will raise the standard of the men and through them the standard of the work. In too many cases at the present time the operator, no matter what department he may be in, is self taught, is a practical rule-of-thumb man and no more. He knows nothing of theory and in many cases is hopelessly at sea when anything goes wrong.

In the Syracuse school the students have to manipulate the moving picture camera, develop and print from school, but under commercial conditions in a theatre. And those wishing to specialize in either department can do so after graduation. The school is well equipped for motion picture work and has an extremely fine technical outfit.

One of the special points that should not be overlooked is that Professor Wall, who is in charge of the department, is no mere theorist, but is thoroughly practical and has been connected with the film business in all its branches for over fifteen years. His latest work has been directed toward the use of the motion picture for special scientific subjects, about which we shall probably hear more at some future date.

The progress made in the school is very gratifying and is a good promise for yet further developments. It can and will become a potent force in our art and it deserves the support of the moving picture business. Its graduates will shortly be looking for positions and I am confident there will be many opportunities for them.

SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY—DEPARTMENT OF PHOTOGRAPHY.

COURSE OF STUDY.—First Year.

General Optics.—Reflection, refraction, dispersion and diffraction of light. Elementary Photometry. Light standards.

Photographic Optics.—Optical Glass; the general principles of lens construction; lens aberrations; choice and use of lenses for special work.

The Camera.—Various types with instructions in the use of the same for general, portrait, landscape and architectural work. Instantaneous shutters and testing the same.

Exposure.—The illumination of the subject. The factors controlling exposure.

Sensitive Materials.—Plates and films, ordinary and color-sensitive. Color filters.

Development.—The chemistry of developers and development. Time, thermo and tank development.

Printing.—Silver printing; development processes. Platinum.

Scene in a Modern Motion Picture Studio of Pathe Freres, Jersey City, N. J.

From left to right the picture shows the Cameraman, Lefty Miller, ex-professional baseball player, and Pathe assistant director, Miss Coffin, John McGraw, Miss Tunison, Sam J. Ryan, and Francis McGlyn, now known the country over as "the bug" in the pictures of the Giants-White Sox world tour and directing a three-part drama in which Mr. McGraw takes the leading part.

Transparency Making.—Lantern slides and projection.

Art.—Cast drawing. Sketching. Elementary composition. Still life.

Chemistry.—A course of lectures and recitations on the elementary principles of chemistry. One exercise a week is devoted by the student to laboratory work.

Second Year.

Studio Work.—General principles of lighting by day and artificial light; groups, copying of black and white and colored objects. Retouching the negative.

Printing.—Printing in iron salts; carbon, gum bichromate oil and bromoil.

Color Photography.—The spectroscope; the science of color and photographic reproduction of the same by the additive and subtractive processes.

Photomicrography.—The microscope, principles of construction and use; high and low power photomicrography.

Stereoscopic Photography.—Binocular vision; the practice of stereoscopic photography.

Elementary Emulsion Making.—Negative and positive processes; printing-out emulsions.

Plate Testing.—Sensitometry of ordinary and color-sensitive plates; spectographic testing.

Enlarging and Reducing.—Principles and practice of the two methods.

Motion Picture Work.—The elementary principles of negative and postive making, with practical exercises. The projection of pictures, and the construction of projectors.

Art.—Portrait sketching. Advanced composition. Still life.

Physics.—A general survey of Physics. Two class hours and one laboratory period.

With the second semester of 1913-1914 the department will move into a new building expressly built for it, and which is equipped with the latest apparatus, studios, darkrooms, etc., but the students will be expected to provide such sensitive material as may be considered necessary for carrying out ordinary practical work.

Research Work.—Students who are sufficiently advanced will be assigned a problem for investigation, occupying one or more semesters. Students who have satisfactorily passed the ordinary course may elect special subjects for further study.

The tuition for the course in Photography is $45.00 a semester (one-half year). There is an incidental fee (Library Gymnasium, etc.) of $7.50 per semester, and a matriculation fee of $5.00, payable on entrance only. A laboratory fee of $7.50 each semester in connection with the darkroom, and a Chemistry laboratory fee of $7.00 each year. Textbooks about $5.00 per year.

Special students desiring to enter regular gymnasium classes may do so upon payment of $7.50 per semester.

Further information may be obtained from Professor E. J. Wall, F. R. P. S., head of the department of Photography.

Remarkable Growth of Motion Picture Industry

BY GEORGE K. SPOOR

ONE September afternoon, 1896, two men with moving picture cameras, set up at widely separated points of vantage, were busily engaged in photographing a parade and equestrian exhibit of the Germania Riding Club, held in Lincoln Park, Chicago. Each thought he had secured a "scoop" until they happened to pass each other, and their discomfiture was genuine.

These men are now the heads of two large moving picture manufacturing companies located in Chicago, one on the northwest side and the other on the north side.

The remarkable growth of the motion picture industry in the city of Chicago is typical of its development throughout the entire civilized world. From 1896 to 1907 the exhibition of moving pictures was limited to the closing of vaudeville bills in standard houses; consequently the demand upon the film manufacturer was also very limited and his quarters small. The panic of 1907 was, in a large way, responsible for the enormous growth of the motion picture industry of today, and it was during that year that the five-cent theatres developed throughout the country. The scarcity of currency caused the pleasure-loving public almost to desert the playhouses where high prices for seats prevailed and, for the first time, the picture theatres came into their own.

For the first time the public realized what a wealth of entertainment was to be had for just one-twentieth part of a dollar—in photo-plays. The rushing trains, billowy cataracts of tumbling water, gorgeous bits of scenic beauty along famous rivers, glimpses of topmost pinnacles scaled only after untold hardships, and a few views of Oriental and European life were, at that time, a source of the greatest astonishment to every man, woman and child—and all for five cents.

With the newly awakened public interest the demands upon the picture manufacturers increased by leaps and bounds. Photo-play theatres sprang up over night, and soon the demand for good films became an incessant hue and cry from not only the great cities, but from the smaller towns and hamlets throughout this country. From that moment the photo-play industry entered upon a solid foundation.

Time passed, and the manufacturers entered upon an era of growth and development that proved burdensome to their limited facilities. Their plants were enlarged to meet the heavy requirements, and this wonderful upbuilding has gone steadily forward. The photo-play, in its new form, began to make inroads into Europe, and while some of the largest concerns in the world are located abroad, the American product is most popular and in heavy demand all over the Eastern hemisphere.

And now the moving picture industry is recognized as one of the gigantic powers of the earth. Looking back through 1913 we find that absolute miracles have been wrought through the medium of the photo-play. America is the center of this vast manufacturing industry. The wonderful plants of the American makers are dotted throughout the country, and their branches have ramifications almost throughout the entire continent of Europe. Vast sums of money have been, and will be, spent in bringing the modern photo-play to the utmost perfection.

A comparison of today's moving picture with that of some four or five years ago is almost ludicrous and reveals the upward trend in a score of startling ways. Vast productions, in one, two and three-reels, covering famous historical subjects of the utmost importance to the growing child in school, as well as the grownups, have been staged before the camera successfully. The photo-play fan, starting out in the morning with a goodly supply of nickels and dimes, can be transported around the entire world, and through history—in films. The splendor and scenic gorgeousness of the Far East, the semi-civilized portions of Europe, the vastnesses of the pulsating seas, and the wonders of our native land are on every hand—just within the portals of the photo-play's house.

Lured by the click of the picture camera, almost every celebrated stage star of the present day has enacted his or her famous successes in the studios of photo-play manufacturers during the past year.

Geo. K. Spoor

THERE has been given, perhaps, no more striking example of the far reaching appeal which the photo-play, and those who populate its world, has attained in the United States than the recent operations of Francis X. Bushman and his Essanay associates in Mr. Spoor's company in New York City, in connection with the filming of the Louis Tracy prize novel, "One Wonderful Night".

In order that the settings might be true to life, the Essanay players came to New York City not long ago to make a number of exterior scenes set forth in the story. They "acted" on fashionable Fifth Avenue and invaded the sacred environment of the Hotel Plaza—and everywhere they went it was quite noticeable that, while the cameraman kept turning the crank, debutantes and dandies, like their humbler brethren from less select localities, promptly forgot everything else in response to the compelling call of "the movies".

The Motion Picture Trade in Europe

BY E. H. MONTAGU

THE trade in Europe is by no means in a healthy condition. The reason for this can be easily given, viz.: over-production by the manufacturer, cutthroat competition by the renter, and the building of too many cinematograph theatres. This reaction is of no recent development. It has been under way gradually for weeks past, but it is now more pronounced and general, and with the summer season coming on, it will be felt in a deeper degree by all.

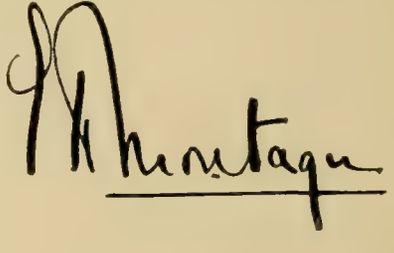
Probably one of the most important factors in the film trade today is the long film, and it should be noted that the long film—or films exceeding 3,000 feet—is not wanted in Europe. Occasionally some special film exceeding this length, and of exceptional subject and quality, will find a good market; but the great majority of the long films coming to Europe today are more or less unsaleable.

Business in England may be called very good on the whole, although, owing to the tremendous output, there is keen competition, and it is only those who have the goods to deliver that can succeed. During the present year many a manufacturer and agent, not having films of merit, will conduct his English office at a loss. The market, however, is open and unrestricted, so that anyone having a film that will suit the English public, and that does not exceed 3,000 feet in length, can sell anything up to 80 or 90 copies on the English market alone. The last animal picture of Selig's, released over here—"Amid Raging Beasts"—had a sale in the British market of 92 copies. It must not be forgotten, however, by Americans, that the English taste is entirely different from the American, and that films containing American politics and American humor will not sell in the English market at all.

It should also be remembered that theatres here select the programs, not the renter; and, consequently, it is absolutely imperative that the taste of the public be catered to, as they practically select the films. It should also be remembered that, in England, the theatres change their programs only twice every week at most, and, therefore, that fewer new films are required than in the United States.

With regard to the Continental business, this is hardly worth considering, except for the occasional film of extra special merit. This is due to the fact that the majority of the agents and manufacturers on the continent are engaged in the rental business, with the result that instead of purchasing films they use only the samples they get from their own factories and rent these out at a cheap price. Then, also, it must be remembered that financial conditions on the Continent, in the film trade, are not very strong, and that most manufacturers suffer losses in the course of a year, from bad debts, that wipe off all the profits they make. This is obvious, seeing that films have to be sold on the Continent at a rate that is not much over six cents per foot.

There is no question that the next year or two will witness a great weeding out in the film trade that will eventually tend to its benefit. The business must gradually settle down to a regular, commercial basis. The day when any sort of film can be sold is gradually disappearing, and those manufacturers who are studying conditions will benefit.



THE AMERICAN PRODUCT IN BRITAIN

AS most American producers know, one of the toughest markets for the selling of their wares is in the British Isles. What is more, the increase in quality and quantity of the British and Continental productions makes competition keener than ever. The first signs of this was when sales began to go down, as for a quite long period the American producers seemed to have made little advance over their previous standard.

When your producers began to invade the London market, their stuff was far away superior to that being turned out by producers of other countries, but the one mistake of your manufacturers was that they had been too content to rest on their past laurels. While they were doing this, the production side of Europe began to wake up, and it developed to such an extent as to threaten to oust American films from first place. However, your producing firms brought their characteristic resource to the rescue, with the result that they soon adapted themselves to the changing conditions. The advance made was terrific, which served to prove that, after all, the American product is best.

Of course it was only natural that most of your manufacturers should turn the "standing order" system at home to profitable account, but there was the European market to think of—a big consideration when it oftentimes means the sale of two hundred prints.

Your producers are proceeding on the right lines, for the British picturegoing public simply revels in plays with quick action. Besides the moral tone is just right and so is the character of the pictures. Cinemagoers are getting tired of the sickly sentiment and too spun-out productions that frequently emanate from Continental studios. If a vote was taken of the average audiences here, I am confident that American pictures would head the list.

The outstanding fault of British films is the plots. Frequently hackneyed and weak stories are put on, for the average producer here will not pay the scenario writer anything like adequate remuneration.

I will now touch upon the shortcomings of the American product, as seen through British eyes.

First, there is the question of standard lengths. In the States you adhere rigidly to these, sometimes spinning out a 1,500-foot subject to two reels. Over here it is different. There appears to be several manufacturers who do not allow their London agents a free hand in cutting the negative down to the right length. It's a policy that results in fewer sales.

Then there are American words and phrases which are like Greek to the average spectator. For instance, the American Company recently put "The Drummer's Honeymoon" on the market. The picture—a good one—was adversely criticised by the trade press because of the title. Now had it been changed to the English equivalent, "The Commercial's Honeymoon," all would have been in order. Such English words as through being spelt thru is another defect. American producing concerns would be wise to have an English translator on their staff so as to be right in line.

Next comes the question of historical pictures. You have no history to speak of, consequently you have been obliged to do the Civil War to death and turn to the history of other countries. Audiences here have had enough of the former, whilst in the latter you do not always succeed. You cannot always procure the correct atmosphere and the necessary care and attention to detail is not always paid. In fact, the Continental firms can do them better.

But with regard to modern plays, the American producer will always lead if he progresses as he is doing now.

I have a good motive for offering this constructive criticism, for although I am an Englishman, I am a great believer in American photoplays.

Ernest A Dench

FRENCH CONDITIONS UNFAVORABLE

By Frank J. Marion.

IT APPEARS to me that the motion picture industry is approaching a crisis. As we all know, the art gained its first impetus in France and arrived at a high point of perfection in that artistic country sooner than any other. We doubtless are all willing to acknowledge that the French productions of from three to five years ago led the world. It has been my privilege to tour France by automobile for the past two seasons. During the month of May of this year I covered perhaps thirty of the principal cities and noted the status of the moving picture business very carefully. I am obliged to report that it is distinctly on the decline. It is my impression that the number of houses is steadily decreasing and the character of the houses in operation is decidedly low. In talking with business men I frequently met the prediction that in a very few years the business would be practically dead in France.

The reason given me for this state of affairs was one which I could have anticipated, that is, the character of the pictures shown. It is almost impossible to find a high-grade American or English film in a French moving picture house. They run entirely to ultra-sensational and lewd shows. On the streets of Paris the solicitors for indecent cinematograph shows are so plentiful as to be a nuisance. A tourist whose personality indicates that he is an American or Englishman or German can hardly walk a block without being approached by a young man of the well-known "cadet" type touting for a moving picture show of an improper character. I took the trouble this year, as last, to ask many employes of moving picture shows whether there was not a demand for clean American films and the invariable reply was there was decidedly such a demand but that it was impossible to get them.

When confronted by this state of affairs, it seems perfectly clear that the men of America who are interested in the exhibition end of the moving picture business will do well to see to it that such conditions are not repeated in America. I realize that it is a very strong temptation to yield to the advertising demand for sensational subjects. Perhaps the Kalem Company has been as guilty as any other in listening to this demand, but I am quite confident that we all know the difference between right and wrong and that the men who are in the business today, as well as those who are to come into it in the future, will not allow the industry to degenerate in this country as it has in France.

It seems to me that one of the greatest needs of the business today is such a photographic school as has been established at Syracuse University—a school in which young men can secure an education in the art, chemistry and practice of photography.

J. PARKER REID

ENTERPRISE and energy are prime necessities in the make-up of the man who embarks in the motion picture feature business. It is enterprise that enables him to get the right sort of feature and energy that finds a market for it. J. Parker Reid, the subject of this brief sketch has demonstrated that he possesses both these requisites, for his past performances fairly bristle with enterprise and required a large expenditure in real energy to put it over.

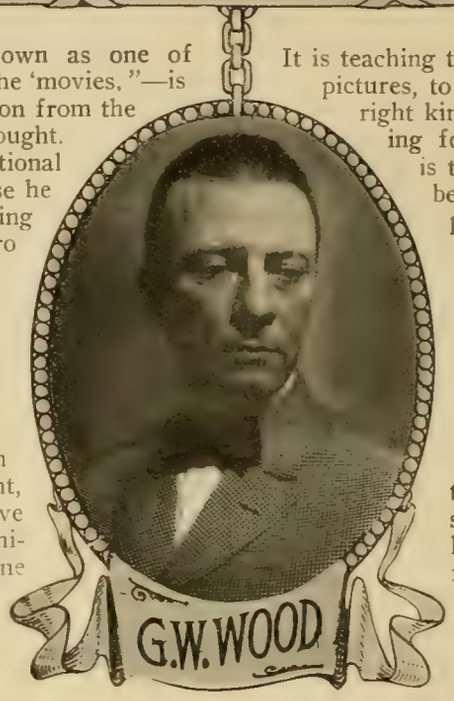
J. Parker Reid.

Mr. Reid gained real prominence in the feature business by an exploit that was novel and interesting. At the time when that beautiful dramatic spectacle, "The Garden of Allah," was playing at the Century Theatre, New York, he conceived the idea of showing the real Garden of Allah on the screen. It was some undertaking to cross the desert to the African oasis, but Mr. Reid succeded and brought back a picture that was as beautiful as it was interesting. He has done many good things since then, but we shall always remember that daring exploit. Mr. Reid is still a young man and has a long road before him.

Magazines and Motion Pictures

BY GARDNER W. WOOD

CARLYLE BLACKWELL, known as one of the seven handsomest men in the 'movies,"—is a recent and significant quotation from the Los Angeles Herald. It is food for thought. How did Mr. Blackwell get that national reputation? I'll tell you. It's because he was one of the seven prominent moving picture actors entered in the Hero Contest recently conducted by The Ladies' World. He didn't win, but the five million picture fans who read that magazine each month have fixed him in that imperishable company of "seven handsomest men in the 'movies'."



The work of these seven screen artists, the companies they represent, and their associates on the screens have been swung into a more brilliant prominence than ever before. One magazine has done more in a few months' time to draw the attention of the ultimate consumer—the picture "fan"—to the product of seven big producing companies than could have been accomplished in a year of hard work by other means or by any other method.

Now this is just where the magazine fits in the field of photo-play. It is the one greatest national publicity medium. It is the last link in the sales system that connects the producer with the theatre-goer. Its work is to create popular demand, and no one will be rash enough to deny the supreme importance of such a factor in any line of business whether it be soap, silk, shoes or pictures. Mrs. Jones of Buffalo buys Ivory Soap, Queen Quality Shoes and Corticelli Silk because she has seen them mentioned for years in her favorite magazines. Just so with pictures. Mrs. Jones learned something new about moving pictures when she began reading "What Happened to Mary" two years ago in The Ladies' World, and she has been going to see the pictures ever since. It is the nickels, dimes and quarters of Mrs. Jones that keeps the factories of the producers working overtime.

Don't overlook Mrs. Jones! She is the one best bet. It is to the great public that the manufacturer ultimately looks for the success of his product. He sells prints because the public likes his pictures and for no other reason. You can't make a horse drink if the horse doesn't want to. Here is what the magazine is doing. It is teaching the public to like pictures, to like better pictures, to appreciate more fully the value of the right kind of pictures. It is unmistakably working for improvement in picture quality. It is turning the enthusiastic attention of the best class of Americans to the moving picture theatre. It is helping willingly and ably in the eager fight that far sighted producers are waging for quality and standardization. The magazine is boosting, not knocking.

I am peculiarly qualified to say this because of The Ladies' World's unique position in the motion picture field. It was the first magazine to effect a connection with motion pictures when in August, 1912, the "Mary" series was begun. Since that time there has not been an issue without some feature of big photo-play interest. We have converted thousands upon thousands of our readers into picture enthusiasts. This is proved by the enormous total of five and a half million votes cast in the above mentioned contest.

We have watched our readers' interest in pictures grow from month to month, and I am sure that in our army of over five million readers we have more moving picture devotees than you can find in any other similar group of people in the country today.

The intelligent citizen reads magazines for relaxation —she or he goes to see the pictures for the same reason —the connection is inevitable. The average magazine reader will not tolerate cheap, or vicious pictures. She will gasp for air and leave the house if she has to sit through many reels of that variety; but films like "Judith of Bethulia" make her a permanent convert and booster for the business. In educating her taste for quality pictures the magazine is of far more value than the newspaper ever can be.

The Ladies' World originated and established, with the co-operation of The Edison Company, the value of the "series" idea which has caught the public interest like wildfire and has been established as one of the most profitable forms of release. We were the first to inaugurate a favorite actor contest outside the specialized magazines. And we are free to acknowledge the value of moving pictures to us.

Gardner W. Wood

THE ability to make and keep friends has long been regarded as an important asset in the make-up of the actor. Particularly true is this in the case of the stock actor and, to a degree that is as surprising as it is inexplicable, is it true in the realm of the photoplay.

It has been proven times without number that bigger by far than the most pretentious photoplay production, as an attraction provided by an exhibitor, is the personal appearance of one of the recognized screen favorites. Balls and dances the country over, given under the auspices of motion picture people and attended by well-known photoplayers, have wonderful pulling power. The "personal appearance" of well-known screen stars made the recent exposition at Grand Central Palace, New York City.

Woman's Place in Photoplay Production

BY MADAME ALICE BLACHE

IT has long been a source of wonder to me that many women have not seized upon the wonderful opportunities offered to them by the motion picture art to make their way to fame and fortune as producers of photodramas. Of all the arts there is probably none in which they can make such splendid use of talents so much more natural to a woman than to a man and so necessary to its perfection.

There is no doubt in my mind that a woman's success in many lines of endeavor is still made very difficult by a strong prejudice against one of her sex doing work that has been done only by men for hundreds of years. Of course this prejudice is fast disappearing and there are many vocations in which it has not been present for a long time. In the arts of acting, music, painting and literature, woman has long held her place among the most successful workers, and when it is considered how vitally all of these arts enter into the production of motion pictures one wonders why the names of scores of women are not found among the successful creators of photodrama offerings.

Not only is a woman as well fitted to stage a photodrama as a man, but in many ways she has a distinct advantage over him because of her very nature and because much of the knowledge called for in the telling of the story and the creation of the stage setting is absolutely within her province as a member of the gentler sex. She is an authority on the emotions. For centuries she has given them full play while man has carefully trained himself to control them. She has developed her finer feelings for generations, while being protected from the world by her male companions, and she is naturally religious. In matters of the heart her superiority is acknowledged, and her deep insight and sensitiveness in the affairs of cupid give her a wonderful advantage in developing the thread of love which plays such an all important part in almost every story that is prepared for the screen. All of the distinctive qualities which she possesses come into direct play during the guiding of the actors in making their character drawings and interpreting the different emotions called for by the story. For to think and to feel the situation demanded by the play is the secret of successful acting, and sensitiveness to those thoughts and feelings is absolutely essential to the success of a stage director.

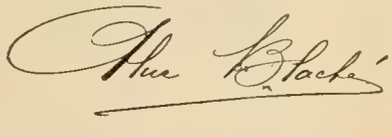
The qualities of patience and gentleness possessed to such a high degree by womankind are also of inestimable value in the staging of a photodrama. Artistic temperament is a thing to be reckoned with while directing an actor, in spite of the treatment of the subject in the comic papers, and a gentle, soft-voiced director is much more conducive to good work on the part of the performer than the over-stern, noisy tyrant of the studio.

Not a small part of the motion picture director's work, in addition to the preparation of the story for picture-telling and the casting and directing of the actors, is the choice of suitable locations for the staging of the exterior scenes and the supervising of the studio settings, props, costumes, etc. In these matters it seems to me that a woman is especially well qualified to obtain the very best results, for she is dealing with subjects that are almost a second nature to her. She takes the measure of every person, every costume, every house and every piece of furniture that her eye comes into contact with, and the beauty of a stretch of landscape or a single flower impresses her immediately. All of these things are of the greatest value to the creator of a photodrama and the knowledge of them must be extensive and exact. A woman's magic touch is immediately recognized in a real home. Is it not just as recognizable in the home of the characters of a photoplay?

That women make the theatre possible from the box-office standpoint is an acknowledged fact. Theatre managers know that their appeal must be to the woman if they would succeed, and all of their efforts are naturally in that direction. This being the case, what a rare opportunity is offered to women to use that inborn knowledge of just what does appeal to them to produce photodramas that will contain that inexplicable something which is necessary to the success of every stage or screen production.

There is nothing connected with the staging of a motion picture that a woman cannot do as easily as a man, and there is no reason why she cannot completely master every technicality of the art. The technique of the drama has been mastered by so many women that it is considered as much her field as a man's and its adaptation to picture work in no way removes it from her sphere. The technique of motion picture photography like the technique of the drama is fitted to a woman's activities.

It is hard for me to imagine how I could have obtained my knowledge of photography, for instance, without the months of study spent in the laboratory of the Gaumont Company, in Paris, at a time when motion picture photography was in the experimental stage, and carefully continued since my own laboratory in the Solax Studios in this country. It is also necessary to study stage direction by actual participation in the work in addition to burning the midnight oil in your library, but both are as suitable, as fascinating and as remunerative to a woman as to a man.



The Life of a Photodrama

BY HERBERT BLACHÉ

TO do a great deed or create great masterpieces that will live through the centuries has spurred man to Herculean efforts since time immemorial. Any art that does not present the possibilities of endless fame suffers accordingly by failing to attract men whose ambitions rise to heights of real greatness and by substituting for them men content merely with piling up worldly goods and gaining the plaudits of the passing throng.

Like statues, paintings, books and dramas that have kept green and fresh the names of their creators and stimulated countless millions to mighty achievements for centuries, photodramas now bid fair to offer a possible monument worthy of the life work of a master mind. And viewed from this standpoint how small and commonplace our greatest efforts appear compared with the work upon which we are now entering.

Of course the rapid development of the motion picture from every standpoint, has placed the achievements of each year so far ahead of those of the year preceding that the preservation of photodrama negatives of the past would only be valuable for a record of the history of the art. Aside from the improvement in the stage technique of the picture, the perfecting of the camera, the printing machine, the projecting machine, the manufacture and developing of the film itself and numerous important discoveries that cover every branch of the art, have caused the picture of yesteryear to be forgotten with an amused smile while we pressed on to take advantage of the latest discovery.

But in spite of the rapid changes which have made such marked improvement possible from month to month, many cases are already upon record where old negatives have been taken out of the safe and reproduced simply because the art of the author, the director or the actor recorded upon them has made them exceptionally valuable. In this fact we see the "handwriting upon the wall" which tells us in words of thunder that the little strip of negative is even now as valuable to the monument builder as the marble, the canvas and the parchment.

To produce the photodrama masterpiece it is necessary to have the scenario. But while the minds of great writers are being prepared for that achievement, there is a most important work waiting at the very door of the ambitious producer. The literary giants of past centuries have piled up a wealth of dramas and books that are ready and waiting to be recorded upon the film by the director-genius who can reproduce them with the art that will make them immortal in picture form.

Verily the time is at hand for the serious minded producer of photodramas to choose his subject and stage it with the idea constantly in mind that he is creating something that will not only win the plaudits of the multitudes for a day or a year, but will bear reproduction in the form of renewed prints for many years to come. Far from being ruinous from a commercial standpoint, this policy offers possibilities of money profits that are beyond the rosiest dreams of the producers of ordinary motion pictures.

Although the time and money required to stage what we might term a "picture classic" is far in excess of that demanded by a less carefully staged production, once created it's value is really enormous. Unlike a theatrical production, there are no salaries to pay and it can be "laid off" indefinitely without costing a single dollar; while, like a painting, who can say that it may not some day be a pearl without price.

There is absolutely no doubt in my mind that photodramas will be produced in the very near future—if indeed some are not already in the course of production—which will be placed upon the market year after year or in "editions" just as our great books are printed. Using the phraseology of the theatre, "Tom Shows" and "East Lynnes" are as possible to the screen as to the stage, with the wonderful advantage that, once sure of seeing them in their original form instead of witnessing their sad mutilation by a "seven people and five trunk" company.

With the "long life" photodrama in mind our studios recently completed a six reel production of "The Chimes" by Charles Dickens. No time or expense limit was placed upon this work and not a stone was left unturned to make it as nearly a perfect picture recital of the famous author's story as was within our power. The cast was selected with as much care as if it were to actually give a stage version of the wonderful play on Broadway. Almost every actor engaged had played the character for which he was chosen many times and was a student of Dickens' works. A collection of "props" was used that would compare favorably with any collection of the quaint old articles of the period and the costumes were so carefully prepared that we had a painting made of each of the characters of the play so that the result of our efforts might be preserved even to the coloring. The picture was allowed to run its natural length—about seven reels, and the result is a picture version which we hope is worthy of the famous author.

With the knowledge that, according to its worth will the life of a photodrama be prolonged, it seems to me that we are entering upon an era of artistic motion picture production which will give us the masterpieces of which we have dreamed since the birth of the art.

Herbert Blaché

The Development of the Motion Picture

BY HORACE G. PLIMPTON

WE have all had the experience of not seeing an old friend for several years and then, upon meeting him, of being greatly surprised at the change in his appearance. Yet we ourselves have changed just as much and had we met our friend from day to day, or week to week, we should have been unconscious of his alteration. In such cases it is only by coming across an old photograph that we realize the changes that the years have made.

So it is with motion pictures. Those of us who are in daily touch with production do not always realize the vast changes that the last few years have brought about in every branch of the art. It is only when from time to time, as we may have occasion to look at a picture made several years ago, that we realize the situation. Often one is told of an old subject as being of great merit and worth a reissue. But look at it and then judge! Is it possible that this was put out seriously? Those minute figures furiously waving their arms, that lack of facial expression, that rapid rushing from side to side, that scenery shaking from time to time and frequently employing in the set painted objects as "properties" instead of real, that "back drop" with shadows on the sky as people pass by—could all these have possibly escaped serious criticism?

They did because at the time we knew of nothing different. We judge by accepted standards.

My connection with the motion picture art dates from the Spring of 1909. At that time the Edison studio had no stock company, although there were a few people regularly employed and paid a small weekly guarantee. Generally speaking, the actors employed in motion picture work were far below today's standard. It was not uncommon to have property men pose in addition to their regular duties. As the camera was usually placed some distance away, but little attention was paid to facial expression and the plot was conveyed by physical action, usually more or less violent. To the Biograph Company must be given credit for the introduction of slow movement, for placing the camera close enough to see the expressions of the face and for having the face convey thoughts. I remember distinctly the impression made upon me by seeing their picture, "The Cricket on the Hearth," and realizing then how points could be made—and more effectively—by quiet but intense acting. The other manufacturers were not slow to follow suit, and the result was a rather sudden change to work of this character. But this necessitated better actors. A good actor can hold a situation without any great amount of movement, but the attempts made along these lines with actors of inferior ability were sometimes rather pathetic.

The Edison Company can justly claim to have begun the adaptation of copyrighted works, by well known authors, to motion picture form. The plots in 1909 were pretty crude. Scenario writers were paid as low as $10, and $25 was considered a rather high price. In the summer of 1909 the Edison Company bought from Mark Twain the right to produce "The Prince and the Pauper," and it was brought out, as a feature picture for those days, in one reel. This was followed quickly by the works of such authors as Rex Beach, Richard Harding Davis, E. W. Townsend, Carolyn Wells and Roy Norton. Quite an imposing galaxy then, but now not sufficient to attract a moment's attention. It seems strange that it took such a relatively long time for the producers generally to realize the value of utilizing prominent current fiction for motion pictures, but it is a fact that, for two or three years after the time noted above, the Edison Company had this field almost to itself. Of late, however, the demands have come with a rush, and today there is hardly an author or dramatist of prominence whose works have not been bought for the screen and some at very high prices.

Not the least remarkable point in the development of motion pictures in the last five years has been the changed attitude toward them of the press and public. Although they jumped into almost instantaneous favor with the masses, for a long time the more cultured class refrained from seeing them, or, if they did visit a motion picture theatre, felt that it needed explanation and almost apology. So too the press, when it deigned to notice them at all, did so in a distinctly derisive manner. But, with the improvement in theatres and the vast change in the character of subjects, the tendency now is quite the reverse and there is even a disposition to swing too far to the other extreme. The picture will never, in my judgment, replace the spoken drama. It occupies a field distinct and different. There is plenty of room for both. But it is having a great effect on play construction. As asides were cut out years ago, so today dramatists are learning from pictures how to land situations clearly and quickly, without superfluous words.

There remain, within the scope of this article, two points, the censorship and the long or "feature" picture.

The Edison Company has never dreaded reasonable censorship. It has been its own censor in the purchase and production of a scenario. With the broad and reasonable rulings of the National Board of Censorship it has never had a moment's question. But now the situation is one, frankly, that may well cause uneasiness. With a federal censorship threatened, with state boards in Ohio and Pennsylvania, with local censorship in Chicago and many other cities and towns—how is it to be possible for the manufacturer to market his product without great annoyance and expense? We should cheerfully govern ourselves according to the accepted standards of any one body, but how can we possibly meet the divergent views of perhaps fifty? In England the official censor gives his verdict and the matter is settled. But here it is conceivable that the federal board may approve a film which will be criticized by the State of Pennsylvania and rejected in Chicago. It is not fair to the producer and no such ruling has ever been made in respect to the drama or fiction. It is opposed to the American spirit. That the picture producers can, as interested parties, accomplish much is doubtful, but if public opposition could be stimulated a great deal could be done.

And now as to the "feature" picture, a term generally understood to mean a production of three reels or over. Personally I rather dissent from this definition. A subject of two reels or even one may be more of a feature than one of five or six. However, we are concerned with the part that films averaging say 5,000 feet long are to play in the future of motion pictures. About a year ago the ball was started rolling with that remarkably fine production, "Quo Vadis," a feature in every sense. Then the country went rapidly feature crazy. The established manufacturers bought up standard plays and new concerns sprang up over night, until the advertising pages of the Moving Picture World showed name after name unknown until that time, each one claiming a remarkable production of some sort. Theatres, previously devoted to the drama, closed their doors to open for feature films. Naturally the reaction was bound to come, and it has set in swiftly and surely.

Obviously the long picture is not popular with the average exhibitor. He depends upon a varied show of four to six reels and wants to empty and fill his house several times a day. From this exhibitor has come a decided remonstrance against feature films, until now one might well believe that the latter are doomed. But this is going too far the other way. It has happened in this country time and time again that a new thing has appeared to sweep the land from ocean to ocean, then to almost disappear and finally to settle down in its legitimate place.

In my judgment the very essence of the motion picture is the relatively short subject. The eye receives an impression immediately and therefore a plot which, to tell with words would take an hour, could probably be shown on the screen in fifteen or twenty minutes. Thus a picture, to justify a showing of one to three hours, must be truly extraordinary, either from the plot itself or its spectacular nature.

The future? It is so much easier to be wise after an event has happened. That the motion picture has made a permanent and important place for itself in the amusement field—and is beginning to be considered seriously for educational purposes—is certain. The precise line to be followed in the next few years can better be judged, by those of us who are at the helm, from day to day, with an eye sharp to windward, than by attempting to lay too long a course now. That we shall encounter squalls is certain but let us hope that, with good judgment, they will do us no serious injury until our permanent port is reached.

Harvey G. Plimpton

A Chat With Thomas A. Edison

(Continued from page 180)

purposes of the drama came much later. No, we never had any trouble about getting actors. The Rialto was not far away. We were always careful about the subjects and avoided the things that are popular in the Latin countries. That's why in the beginning we did very little business with the Latin countries. We sold the films in those days and got about fifteen cents a foot. To tell you the truth, I lost money on the transaction because our lawyers' bills were so heavy. Renters of films in the early days were always after us for more material; we could not turn the stuff out fast enough. Well, I never paid so much attention to the business end of it anyway; the technical end kept me busy, but there was not much business system then; that I do remember very well. When the other interests came in, business grew a good deal, some of the fellows that kept a sort of "Peeping Tom' show came in too, and they all have made a lot of money. Well, I am glad of it."

Mr. Edison was manifestly pleased with the effect of the motion picture on the saloons.

"I hope," he said, "that some day the out-door places will seat two and three thousand people and that the price will be cut to three cents. I want to give the very poorest people a chance to learn and to be amused. I hope there will be forty or fifty such places right around New York and that will cut off about a hundred thousand visitors to the gin places. Yes, that would knock the whiskey trade pretty hard. If private enterprise won't do it the municipalities ought to take hold of it. Let me put down the price a little lower, say to two cents, and I will put crepe on the door of all the saloons."

The great inventor expressed his disapproval of the so-called "white slave" and "drug-terror" films and went with great enthusiasm into the work he said was now engrossing his attention—the perfection of a disc for the reproduction of music. He took the interviewer up to the trial room and had some popular as well as classic music run off with the new invention. There was a complete absence of the harsh and grating sound we associate with all artificial reproduction of music. Each instrument and each voice retained its original richness and purity. It was a rare treat, which the inventor enjoyed with all the zest of the true lover of music.

"I just love music," said Edison, his face lit up with child-like pleasure.

We returned to the great American's office and chatted a little longer. Edison inquired how The Moving Picture World was getting along and as he shook hands with me he said, in parting:

"Well, I will say The World is fair."

DEMOCRACY A CHARACTERISTIC.

AS one of the "biggest" men which the world has ever produced, Thomas A. Edison, his accomplishments, and personal characteristics, provides an interesting subject of discussion everywhere. Not long ago a prominent magazine writer who has had occasion to interview the "Wizard of the Oranges" on numerous occasions said: "One of the marked characteristics of Mr. Edison is his absolute democracy. He is one of the most human men I have ever met and the most approachable big man with whom I have ever come in contact. He is always willing to chat—and when I say chat I mean to talk with men whose conversation will not burden him with the technical details of his work in which one might reasonably expect him to be engrossed. A good story is the open sesame to his heart and he himself is one of the most entertaining story tellers to whom I have ever listened. It is notably true that his winning system of living has always called for the leavening of his busy life with periods of wholesome play time."

The Literary Side of Pictures

BY EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

SUPPOSE, before we get too deep into the subject, that you take a look at the forgotten side of what this title implies. Now and then one of our cherished goats wanders from its own fireside at the call of someone who says that pictures are not literature, but we call it back, because we're careful of our goats and don't let them associate with such persons.

Stop a minute and think. Literature is old; centuries old. It started 'way back; possibly before the flood. It ought to be good by this time if, like wine and cheese, it gets savor from age. Photoplay writing is no bearded veteran. Photoplay writing was born some time or another in 1909. Can you ask the six-year-old to have the erudition of the ages?

Now to beat out the possible (and probable) objector, we'll revise that statement, but with mental reservations. The photoplay writing game started somewhere between 1894 and 1896. Don't ask just precisely when. If we could tell we would not be writing this stuff. We would be over in the Treasury Department or some place in Washington, making out next year's corn crop reports. We never said we were that good.

But it was about 1898 that the first editor was employed. Then there were three companies over here that lasted overnight. One of them was the Biograph. They had been doing the Jefferson family until we were sick of them. The Jeffersons were big in the Biograph in those days and if you saw a fisherman who hooked himself in the seat of his panties it was C. B. Jefferson, or Joe, Jr., or someone of the Jefferson family who were more numerous in those days than Eddie Foy's family is at present. Every time we asked Austin Fynes who a new Biograph player was he found out and added a new Jefferson to the already numerous family.

About this time Roy McCardell was off the New York World. In those days McCardell spent about two-thirds of his time with the paper of that title and about one-third holding out for more money, because he was making good. This was one of his off moments and he was "writing pictures" for the then Standard. They were not moving pictures in the sense now employed, though they were indeed moving. McCardell used to write about ten captions telling a more or less complete story. Then he and the boss would hire a lot of models—mostly girls—and go out and make pictures for the captions. Somebody on the Biograph must have read the Standard, for presently McCardell was hired to go down to Thirteenth street and Broadway and write pictures for the Biograph. To be exact it was for the Mutascope, then a nickel in the slot machine. They didn't think much of the projection machine in those days. It was all mutascope.

Anyhow, Roy wrote the stuff and he was the first man on either side of the water to be hired for no other purpose than to write pictures. He did the work very successfully until he got the idea for Mr. and Mrs. Nagg, first cousins to the present Jarr family, and he went the rest of the way down to the place with the gilded dome, but he has kept on writing pictures to this day and he is still one of the most successful farcical writers. In passing, the New York World later gave two other writers to the business. With the formation of the Thanhouser Company, Lloyd Lonergan, a brother-in-law of the founder of the company, was induced to leave the paper and write stories for the films. Until the growth of the Thanhouser concern made it necessary for him to concentrate on the big stuff like "The Million Dollar Mystery," he did most of the stories for Thanhouser and later for the Princess, as well. Considering the number of stories produced in proportion to the percentage of hits, we incline to the belief that Mr. Lonergan has a better batting average than any man in the game today.

The third member of the New

Perry N. Vekroff. G. W. Terwilliger. Roy L. McCardell. R. V. Spencer. B. P. Schulberg.

Ben Barondess.

Beta Breuil.

Gene Gauntier.

Lois Weber.

Richard Willis.

York World trio is Russell E. Smith, who recently quit that paper to become connected with the Mutual.

But this brings us too close to the moment. Let's back up to the old days. At the start the people about the studio suggested the stories done, and some of them should have been electrocuted. Now and then some bold spirit would send an idea to the company—any company—and sometimes the company "took pleasure" in paying $5 or $10 for the idea. Even those prices were liberal for the goods delivered. The pictures crept up from the old fifty-foot lengths in a single scene to several hundred feet, but it was the Edison Company that stayed the ebbing tide and brought it back to flood with "The Great Train Robbery."

Presently most of the "then" companies had photoplay editors. Rollin S. Sturgeon was the Vitagraph editor, replacing J. Stuart Blackton and Albert E. Smith, who had previously done the work. If Archer McMackin was not the first Essanay editor, his predecessor did not make noise enough to be heard in New York. It was Essanay, we think, who first advertised in the Editor, a paper devoted to the authors, for scripts, and for many years the "We pay from $10 to $100," and "no literary experience required" were the standard arguments. The latter was more truthful than the first. The $10 was closer to the mark than the hundred, but literary skill was not required. Any right-minded editor would have taken any half-way idea and have fixed it up. We think it was Sturgeon who first offered a sheet of suggestions. The idea was generally accepted. Essanay had almost a small booklet and Lubin had a mimeograph sheet, later replaced by a printed sheet which we wrote. We were the third editor, taking over the Lubin scripts in August, 1909.

Those were the happy days. If you get enough idea from a script to suggest a play, you wrote it out and coaxed some director to take it. Most always he did, if the idea was good and he liked that sort of idea. There were no trained writers in those days—and few good ones. We remember the morning we almost fell down three flights of stairs to show the boss Emmett Campbell Hall's "Indian Blood," the first of the now numerous "reversion to type" stories. There was a long argument as to whether or not he would be glad to get $25 or whether $35 would not stir him to better efforts. The $35 won, but later on Hall got $5 for a script from Selig and a few scenes on a burning bridge cost about sixty times what the script brought. Later Selig was one of Hall's best markets and only his fear of the big cities kept him from being the Selig editor. Before that Biograph had offered him a chance as staff writer, but Hall had a home in Glen Echo, near Washington, and he would not be coaxed. Lawrence McCloskey did coax him on to the Lubin staff last fall, but the last we heard Hall had gone back to the beautiful country. But this again gets ahead of the story. But before we back up, Hall's "His Trust" and "His Trust Fulfilled," done by Biograph, was the first two-part story not derived from some book. There had been multiples, released in series, before then, but the closest approach to an original was Vitagraph's presentation of the Rev. Madison Peters' very free adaptation of the story of Moses, in five parts, which was released one part weekly.

Another Washingtonian, Capt. Charles Kiener, of the Copyright office, had begun to attract attention. Like Hall he wrote a full, but practical working script. He did a lot of business with Lubin for a time, but went to Kalem, as a contract writer, and has but very recently reappeared as a free lance. His best work has been some historicals on the early California days, but he has also done some excellent melodramas.

It is not very generally known that Bannister

H. P. Lehrman.

R. E. Smith.

E. C. Hall.

Lloyd Lonergan.

W. Lord Wright.

J. W. Kellette.

Acton Davies.

C. B. "Pop" Hoadley.

Hopp Hadley.

Mark Swan.

Merwin was one of the early birds, but he submitted one story in 1909. It was a capital story, but he wanted $100 for it and he was making that and more, with his fiction. After a couple of attempts he dropped out until Ashley Miller, of Edison, got him back in the game. For a couple of years he was the Edison star, but last November he changed over to the London Film Company.

Pop Hoadley was another of the early birds. As C. B. Hoadley, he had pushed his newspaper success to the point where he had to quit, and he bought a fruit farm. In the interval of packing apples he wrote stuff and early turned his attention to plays. In time he was brought East to become successor in the Imp to Giles R. Warren, who went to Lubin along with Miss Florence Lawrence and Arthur Johnson. Since then he has been editor for Champion, Great Northern, Powers and Imp. Until recently he was the editor for the Biograph-Klaw and Erlanger combination. Like so many others, he sold his first story to Lubin. He is now a free lance.

William H. Kitchell, then known as "the literary carpenter," was one of the early contributors and still has to see his first story on the screen, "The Stamp of Labor." It was a good story but it meant a big production at a time when big productions were not in favor. Edmund S. Hirsch, of Brooklyn, is another whose first story is still in the Lubin films, a story of Betsy Ross that was bought because it could be made in the actual locations, but never was made because it needed better actors than Lubin had in those days. Since then Benjamin Barondess and Edward J. Montagne have risen to contest the Brooklyn championship, but Hirsch was the first, outside of the Vitagraph string.

Frank E. "Spec" Woods was then the motion picture editor of the Dramatic Mirror, and on the side he gave Biograph comedies, including the "Jones" series, which first brought to the front the late John Cumpson and Miss Mary Pickford, though Miss Pickford's most marked success was "All on Account of the Milk," which was written by Mrs. Laurie Mackin, who still appears in pictures. Mr. Woods is notable as being the one commentator on photoplay who never wrote a book on how to do it.

On the other hand William Lord Wright was first in the field with a book (even if it said nothing about leaders), and his second book has just come from the press. He is a newspaper editor in Bellefontaine, Ohio, and writes in his spare time, though no one knows what a country editor's spare time is. There must be some spare time, though, for he contributes a page or more a week to the Dramatic Mirror and is known as the "sure fire" writer of advertising plays, about the meanest job a man can make good with.

Another book author is Arthur Leeds, who used to be a star Selig and Essanay writer. He was once an actor and lecturer, turning to pictures. He is now editor of The Photoplay Author and head of the photoplay section of the Home Correspondence Schools. He is doing very little original work at present.

Another is A. W. Thomas, of the Photoplay Magazine and the Scenario Writer. He has done a few plays, but nothing to attract marked attention. He holds pretty closely to the editorial end.

A lot of the old timers have dropped from view. Charles Simms is never heard of and Charles Jenkins is editing a sheet in the Canadian Rockies. Mrs. Elizabeth de Binde Yorke, who used to be a Biograph star, seems to have quit. Some of the others seem to have dropped so far from sight that they are not even remembered.

On the other hand take H. Tipton Steck. He used to be glad to take $15 for half reel stuff. Now he is manager of production for Essanay. Sturgeon is another of the "firsts" who is still well to the fore and our own Louis Reeves Harrison came early and stayed on. He was one of the early Biographers and Vitagraphers. He was here ahead of his day, for he is a man Shannon Fife.

L. S. McCloskey.

Jas. Oliver Curwood.

Phil Lang.

James Dayton.

with a literary past as honorable as his present or his future; indeed, in the early days, he had to wait for the business to grow up to his standard. It is one of the signs of the times that it did.

Another whom Biograph started was George Hennessy. He was foxy in his early days. They would not believe that he could write dramas. They were in the market for comedies. He wrote comedies until they liked his dramas and for a long time he was the star writer. He is free lancing now, out in Los Angeles. He had written some of the best stories the Biograph ever produced, but you would not think it to look at him quickly. Look twice and you see the brains beneath the apparently listless exterior.

Edwin S. Porter, now of the Famous Players, is another of the "forty-niners" of the game, and Miss Gene Gauntier has written as many one-reel dramas as any writer living. She will go down in history as the author, adapter or what you will of "From the Manger to the Cross," but she is far more important than any one story.

But while there were others of those early days, it is not practicable to list them all in separate paragraphs. Mention of Miss Gauntier, very first of the women writers, brings us to others who have made good. Mrs. Beta Breuil, or Mrs. Hartmann Breuil, was a Vitagraph editor and still a prominent free lance. Mrs. Catherine Carr, now of the North American, is another Vita graduate, as is Miss Peggy O'Neill, of the same company. Mrs. Louella Parsons, of Essanay, has written little, but many promising writers owe much to her helpful advice.

Miss Hetty Gray Baker gave up a job as law librarian to become editor for Jack London (Bosworth, Inc.), which is not altogether photoplay's gain, for, in spite of the excellence of her adaptations of this most difficult author, she did better original work, having the imagination of a real creator. Miss Cora Drew has lately come to the fore as a woman writer. Mrs. Lillian Sweetser, of Maine, is another and Mrs. Bettie Fitzgerald, of Gasden, Ala., has the distinction of having won the top price for a regular script from Griffith, of the Reliance, solely for the excellence of her work. Mrs. Marguerite Bertsch, the present editor of the Vitagraph, is a woman writer whose stories show keen insight into affairs, and Miss Maibelle Heikes Justice, a novelist and short story writer, is one of the Selig stars. Her work is exceptional in many ways. Lois Weber (Mrs. Phillips Smalley) is another prolific writer of strength and versatility.

Miss Mary Fuller has written some of the smartest stories in which she has appeared, but if we started to list the Edison players who are also writers, we would have to give the complete roster.

George Terwilliger, like "Spec," came to us from the Mirror. He had done some capital work with the Reliance. He is now with Lubin as director and writer. He does mostly two-reel stories. Romaine Fielding is also a Lubin author-director. Shannon Fife, of the same company, took to photoplay because the studio was in the same town with the University of Pennsylvania, in which he was a student. Harry Chandlee, lately added to the list, was a Washington correspondent for a string of small papers. Clay M. Greene is a well-known dramatic author and former Shepherd of the Lambs. McCloskey himself, the head of the brainiest lot of staff writers in the photoplay business, was a Philadelphia newspaper man. Following this writer and Giles Warren, he was the first to put the staff on a business basis, and his organization is probably the strongest to be found.

The Universal staff is headed by Captain Leslie T. Peacocke, in the East. Captain Peacocke is also a dramatist and novelist. Walter MacNamara was once a member of the staff, as was Pop Hoadley, to say nothing of Hal Reid, who bought more stories for $10 cash each than any man alive or dead. Monte Katterjohn was its most recent head, but he lately went away and is free lancing again, as well as writing most of the moving picture stuff for the Red, Green and Blue Books, otherwise known as the Chromatic Circuit.

Two ministers have found success in photoplay, the Rev. E. B. Stockton and the Rev. Sydney S. Booth. Dr. Stockton ranges from farce to tragedy, but Mr. Booth is at his best in comedy, if he is an Englishman. Perhaps the best paid writer of today is James Oliver Curwood, who does most of his stuff for the Selig company. He gets the top price and is one of the very, very few novelists who can write a practical photoplay script. Gilson Willetts, who used to be a wholesale dealer in magazine stories, is another Selig star. Harold McGrath is not a photoplay writer, nor are most of the others whose names appear on the screen as authors, though Jack London is said to be studying the work. James Oppenheim is a real photoplay writer, but the late Thomas W. Hanshew and Richard Harding Davis, Rex Beach and others do their work by proxy.

Others of the new school are Marc Edmund Jones, who came out of a railroad office; John William Kellette, who knows all about linotypes; Harry O. Hoyt, a civil engineer, now managing a theatre in Minneapolis; E. W. Matlack, train dispatcher on the Pennsylvania at Pittsburgh; Guy T. Evans and Frank Clarke, of the same place; Frank K. Shaw, for years on the bench in Maine; Edwin Ray Coffin, a ranchman; Miss Marian Lee Patterson, a magazine writer; Julian Louis Lamothe, of New Orleans; Frank Griffin, formerly of Universal and now with Lubin, and scores of others to whom we offer our apologies in advance.

Among the writing editors are Bennie Schulberg, of the Famous Players; James Dayton, the star of Western Universal; Richard V. Spencer, of K. B.; Richard Willis, Willis Robards, Charles M. Seay, Herbert Brenon, of Imp, and others to whom we also apologize.

Credit for the Series stories would seem to go to Edison, whose manager of negative production, Horace G. Plimpton, was the first to popularize the idea (not forgetting, of course, the Jones series already mentioned), and to Mr. Plimpton's ability to get his directors to give the spirit of the author's work, is largely due the popularity of the book story, though Col. Selig is perhaps the largest buyer of book rights at present.

It has been a big jump from the $10 to $20 of 1909 to the $50 to $100 of today, but the changes to come will be still more marked and it is reasonable to suppose that the story of a few years hence will make these prices seem absurd. Already $1,000 and even more has been paid for book rights without the advantage of simultaneous publication in the newspapers, and it is only reasonable to suppose that in the time to come, when the best of the book rights shall have been exhausted, the author who writes photoplays for photoplay production will command a better price than the man who writes books that may be adapted. John Singer Sargent is the foremost portrait painter of today, but some of his water colors are jokes. The man who works in his proper medium is the man who eventually will command the best prices and we are still not quite up to the real literature of the photoplay.

P. S.—And to make the record complete, E. W. Sargent, a former musical and dramatic critic, editor and writer of photoplays, has done several hundred stories for Lubin, two for Imp, two for Vitagraph and seven for Edison. Also about half a mile of photoplay advice and several miles of short stories and novelettes.

Musical Accessories to Motion Pictures

BY CLARENCE E. SINN

IF MUSIC be not the chief accessory to motion pictures, it is at least the most noticeable to patrons of the photo-play. While the lights, attendance, ventilation and the many other details necessary to the entertainment and comfort of the public have their value and effect, it is the music which is more often commented upon after the pictures. The pictures constitute the show, of course—or they should—but the music is the audible part of the entertainment, and for this reason is apparently second in importance to the patrons of the theatre. Exhibitors, recognizing this fact, are striving in many ways to make the musical part of their entertainment attractive to the public—each one according to his own judgment, inclination or environment. Manufacturers of musical instruments have in many instances turned their attention to the making of wares especially designed for use in motion picture theatres. Some of these take the form of a "one-man orchestra," being a combination of piano and organ with a line of drummers' "traps" and sound effects. While it is not supposed, even by the manufacturers, that these instruments are going to displace all the orchestras in the country, the fact remains that many exhibitors find it inexpedient to employ more than one or two musicians at the most, and frequently find it a difficult matter to get satisfactory service at that.

The piano-and-drum combination seems to be losing favor in a number of localities; managers who want their pictures "played up to" in detail, find that orchestra leaders as a rule do not give this subject the care and attention it deserves, hence the growing popularity of the "one-man orchestra." I wish to remark, in passing, that orchestra musicians who find fault with this state of affairs have themselves to blame in a large degree, for when, contrary to their employer's wishes, they refuse or neglect to accompany the pictures appropriately, it is not surprising that the aforesaid employer should replace the orchestra with a one-man instrument whereon the performer can and does follow the photo-story correctly. Particularly when this same instrument can be paid for in a few years or less out of the difference in his salary list. Now you orchestra folks, it is up to you to get busy; the "gob-e-lins will get you if you don't watch out."

To the best of my knowledge and belief The Rudolph Wurlitzer Company was the first one in the field with an instrument designed to take the place of an orchestra. At any rate let us go on that premise and look over a few that are on the market, taking them in the order of their public appearance.

"The Wurlitzer Motion Picture Orchestra."

is manufactured in Cincinnati, Ohio. This instrument is made in a number of styles, though the catalog before me gives but seven, viz.: Styles F, G, R, H, K, J and L. The basic idea of all these is a combination of piano with different sets of organ pipes voiced to imitate various instruments of the orchestra, including violins, viola, cello, bass, flute, oboe, clarinet, piccolo, cornet, small drum, bass drum, glockenspiel, triangle, piano and organ.

The pipe organ department is given as containing: 1, tuba bass, 16-foot; 2, tuba bass, 8-foot; 3, tuba bass, 8-foot; 4, clarinet, 16-foot; 5, oboe horn, 8-foot; 6, violin, 8-foot; 7, violin bass, 8-foot; 8, flute bass, 8-foot; 9, piccolo treble, 4-foot; 10, violin treble, 8-foot; 11, flute treble, 8-foot; 12, cathedral chimes; 13, vox humana.

In addition to this combination there are a line of drummers' traps, including xylophone, tambourine, castinets, cymbals, crash, autohorn, horse trot, steamboat whistle, electric bell, etc., all worked with the instruments given above, by one person, and at the will of the operator. I have copied this instrumentation from styles "H" and "K," which, standing midway, may be said to give a fair approximate idea of capabilities of this instrument. The piano has also a mandolin attachment. All but the first two styles are equipped with two manuals or key boards, one for the piano, the other for the organ, which last includes the orchestral instruments. Although the Wurlitzer people strenuously object to the name of "organ" as applied to the Motion Picture Orchestra, and in fact it is much more than an organ merely, it is played in the same manner. All of these instruments can be played automatically by means of perforated rolls similar to those of a player-piano. They are capable of the highest musical expression in the hands of a good performer, and any pianist of ordinary ability can play them with very little practice. Of course the more practice he has the better his performance, but the ordinary piano player can, with a little earnest effort and short experience, obtain wonderful results. The Wurlitzer Hope-Jones Unit Orchestra has been installed in some of the largest and best picture theatres in the country, as well as other theatres not devoted to motion pictures. It is also being placed in many of the smaller houses, as the different styles with their different prices are made to suit the different pocket books.

In the Moving Picture World, March 22, page 1671, appeared a letter from Mr. Jack Walsh, Fitzhugh Hall, Rochester, N. Y., eulogizing the Hope-Jones Unit Orchestra, with a few hints as to how he employed it in different pictures. Many others are praising it as sincerely as Mr. W., though not always in print.

"The Fotoplayer."

At the National Convention of Exhibitors held in Chicago in 1912, there was shown an instrument called by its makers the "Fotoplayer," also "The Photo Player." I believe that occasion was its first appearance east of the Pacific coast—the place of its manufacture. The "Fotoplayer," like other one-man affairs, is a combination of piano, organ and drummer's traps and various sound effects. Like the others also either the piano or organ can be played separately or together as the performer wishes. It is supplied with an equipment by which it can be played by means of perforated rolls (that is, rolls cut out as are those used in the player-piano), and it is in connection with this part of the instrument that its chief novelty lies.

Unlike the ordinary player-piano or other mechanical instruments, the "Fotoplayer" is arranged in such a manner that two music rolls may be used and one can be changed while the other is in use. It has two separate tracker boards which enables the operator to make quick changes without stopping the music. The music may be started at any part of the roll desired, and stopped at any point; this permits the playing of parts of overtures or selections when the whole number is not wanted. The operator can also change instantly from one roll to the other without a perceptible break in the music.

At the time I saw it demonstrated, the operator in charge had probably a dozen rolls of music lying conveniently to his reach—among them the "William Tell" overture and "Hearts and Flowers." He played a waltz while he inserted the overture; it took about thirty seconds to insert the reel and turn it to the well known "storm scene." While this was being played he put in the "Hearts and Flowers," switched instantly to that, and replaced the overture, on the other tracker, to a gallop. This was supposed to be descriptive of a fire and was accompanied by fire gongs, bells, whistles, horse trot effects and other traps. The point he concentrated upon was the fact that it was possible to accompany a picture in detail with an automatic musical instrument. The inventor, he said, had seen a letter by Clyde Martin in which the writer asserted that "it was impossible to properly accompany a picture with an automatic instrument." Mr. Martin was right. It was impossible, at the time his letter was written, to do more than grind out a succession of tunes on any automatic instrument, and the tunes usually have little or nothing in character with the picture. But a fellow out in California—a fellow by the name of Van Valkenberg—thought it possible to make an instrument by which rapid changes could be made in the music, and thus do away with the main difficulty found in accompanying pictures by means of music rolls. The double tracker board with two rolls instead of one was the result of his experiments, and it is in this that the "Fotoplayer" differs from all other automatic instruments. Facilities are provided for quick adjustment of the music roll, rapid winding and re-winding.

Descriptive and dramatic music is difficult to obtain in music rolls, especially the latter, though many numbers of this character are to be found in operatic selections, fantasies, and descriptive music generally. Sometimes one single number in a standard composition is desirable, but not the whole composition; for example, the "storm scene" in "William Tell" overture as before mentioned. In such cases the operator inserts his roll, containing the overture while its preceding number is playing, rapidly turns it until the proper place is found (it will be wise to try out and mark the places on different rolls, showing the beginning and ending of the various movements), and as soon as the scene is ready, start its accompanying music.

Miss Carrie Hetherington, "The Photo Player Expert," had an article in the Music for the Picture Department of the Moving Picture World issue of April 4, 1914, extolling the merits of the instrument and including a musical program of "Judith of Bethulia" by way of illustrating her method of playing to pictures with its help.

And right here I want to say that the exhibitor who buys any automatic instrument with the idea of doing away with musicians entirely, and who expects at the same time to get good and appropriate music, is making a mistake. Put a good performer in charge of it and you will get good results. If you intend to let the third assistant usher run it you would better save your money in the first place, or you will probably lose it in the last place.

"Bartola Keyboard Attachment."

Something over a year ago an article appeared on the market bearing the above title. Those attending the Exhibitors' Convention of July, 1913, in New York City may remember it as it was demonstrated in one of the picture theatres in the Grand Central Palace, and it was also in evidence at the recent show at the same place. The "Bartola Keyboard Attachment" was just what its name signified, though I am wrong in speaking of it in the past tense. It is a small keyboard attached to one side of the piano though separate from it; it controls about three octaves, if my memory serves me right, of organ pipes, there being two sets of these which are voiced to violin and flute respectively. The whole thing is separate from the piano, yet is convenient to the pianist, being much on the order of a second manual as found on other combination instruments. Its chief claim for attention seems to rest in the fact that the buyer can attach it to his own piano, thus doing away with the expense of buying a whole new outfit when he already possesses one important part of the "pipe-organ" combination. Drums, traps and various sound effects are attached to the instrument.

"The Seeburg Motion Picture Player."

Though J. C. Seeburg of the J. C. Seeburg Piano Co. of Chicago, who is putting out the above instrument, calls it simply "Style M. Motion Picture Player," I have attached his name to it in the title as a means of distinguishing it from other photoplayers.

In the February issue of the Moving Picture World (page 1072) a short description of Mr. Seeburg's instrument was given. Since then several improvements have been added, not to the musical part of the instrument, as he had the very best quality of organ pipes and the best piano obtainable from the beginning, but additions and improvements which have suggested themselves since the first instrument was put on the market. For example, the organ has a "Kinetic Blower" which can be placed in any part of the house most convenient. It is not necessary that it be near the organ. The organ has 104 pipes, has automatic attachment and can throw on the bass as well as the treble octaves. A new one in preparation will have vox humana as well as cathedral chimes. There are two manuals; one the regular 88-note piano, and the other a 61-note organ.

Either the piano or the organ may be played separately, or both may be played together. It is equipped with facilities for the use of music rolls, thus making the instrument automatic if such is desired. These rolls are of extra length and contain ten distinct and different selections per roll. That's quite a number of selections to put on one roll, if you stop to think it over. These rolls are made especially for the Seeburg Motion Picture Players.

There is also in addition a good line of drummers' instruments and traps. For example the xylophone, which can be played separately as a solo instrument or in combination with the others. There are bass drum, snare drum, tympanni, cymbal, triangle and castinets. Also tom-tom, cow bell, crash-cymbal, fire-gong, steamboat whistle, locomotive whistle, thunder effect, wind siren, bird call, baby cry, telephone and door bell, horse trot and automobile horn. These instruments and effects are operated by buttons placed right and left of organ manuals and by pedals worked by the feet. All the effects and "traps" are cut into the rolls so you get them all when used as an automatic player.

What I said before will apply here as well. It is possible to get a shoemaker's apprentice to run these players, but you will be very apt to get cobbler's music. If you want to get the best results and give the instruments a chance to show their possibilities, get a good musician to play them for you. Mr. Seeburg's piano is a good one; his organ is also a good one, though not, of course, as big and comprehensive as a church organ. But the organ pipes are of the best quality, there are enough to be effective and the cost of the whole instrument is very much less than that of a church organ, and enables you to give more variations for the pictures.

"Deagan's Bells."

This article would be incomplete without a few words about J. C. Deagan and his Bells (Bells with a capital B). J. C. Deagan's name has become so well known as to be a guarantee of quality. He has always made a specialty of musical bells and xylophones, though he has invented and manufactured so many other instruments along these lines that I couldn't name them off hand. Years ago he put on the market a set of bells played by an electric current and manipulated from a keyboard similar to that of a piano. To the best of my belief he was the originator of this method of playing musical bells. At any rate, his name is so firmly bound up with the "Electric Bells" as to be a part and parcel of them. Experimenting along the lines suggested by bells and xylophones, Mr. Deagan has evolved a number of remarkable instruments, among them the "Vitaphone," the "Electrical Marimbaphone," "The Nabimba," the "Electric Unaphone," besides his "Tubular Cathedral Chimes," organ chimes, Swiss bells and a host of other instruments in this class. These electric instruments are all played from a keyboard—they can be installed in any part of the house while the keyboard remains in the orchestra. An attractive feature is frequently made by installing a number of "Tubular Chimes" in the lobby to be played at intervals from the inside—not as a part of the show, but as a means of attracting the attention of the passer-by.

By his "no contact" method Mr. Deagan has reduced to a minimum the chances of his bells getting out of order. In his own words he has "eliminated all that." Any adjustment can be made without leaving the keyboard; if anything goes wrong—and every man-made thing is liable to—the player doesn't have to climb up to the bells and fix whatever needs fixing. He does that without leaving his seat in the orchestra. And that is the practical manner in which "J. C." has eliminated all chances of his bells being out of order.

J. C. ought to hold an exhibitors' convention out in his factory sometime. He could show many interesting things.

Eugene E. Sinn.

Maurice Costello, Popular Player and Director of the Vitagraph Co.

WHEN "stars" began to appear in the firmament of motion pictures it is almost certain that the first bright light that rose above the horizon was Maurice Costello, then leading man with the Vitagraph Company. Since that time his popularity has never waned, as was proved in a recent magazine contest in which he finished strong without the least effort to influence voting for himself. It is generally conceded that Mr. Costello's characters are more like human beings than are the portrayals of many other players. His ability as a player has gained for him the promotion to director of Vitagraph subjects, and he has a long list of successful photoplays to his credit. The photographs here reproduced are from the "Lord Browning" set and are believed to be the best Mr. Costello has had taken.

Evolution of the Motion Picture

BY EDWIN S. PORTER

LOOKING back upon the past eighteen years in the motion picture business—back to the day when no one knew what a motion picture was—and realizing the wonderful strides the industry has taken since then, I am more than impressed. I am thrilled. Artistically and mechanically the motion picture has forged its way forward until today it is recognized as the greatest amusement factor in the world and the greatest educational force in the history of civilization.

Today the motion picture does even more than entertain and instruct; it has already gone beyond the present needs and desires of men, and will exert a tremendous influence upon posterity. It will record the histrionic achievements of the dramatic geniuses of the contemporary stage; it will chronicle and reproduce history as no other medium ever could or possibly will. As an illustration, the present Mexican conflict, through the motion picture, can be exhibited to future generations with such realism and exactitude as the spoken or written word could never convey.

In its artistic development alone, the motion picture has progressed within ten years to a stage reached by the oral drama only after thousands of years of development and evolution. In passing, however, we must record the assertion that the development of the stage greatly assisted the advancement of the film, because even at an early date in the history of the industry it was commonly recognized that the introduction of general dramatic principles in the production of motion pictures was desirable and necessary. The problem, however, remained as to the best means of utilizing the science of the drama so as to conform with the mechanical limitations of the film, and later, with the vast possibilities that these same mechanical factors presented.

What does the development of the motion picture first suggest?

Natural evolution, an evolution assisted and enhanced by the demands of the millions who sought, and long sought in vain, clean entertainment at a minimum cost. Step by step, obstacles were overcome, difficulties surmounted, growth and development realized, not because there was money to be made through such development, but rather because the public demanded and made necessary the advancement that has been attained in the motion picture art. To the public, more even than to those who labored and struggled to give artistic presentations of the popular drama on the screen, is due the credit for the measure of improvement that has already rewarded the efforts of film producers.

My contention is this: if the public were content to receive and support the mediocre films that marked the inauguration of the business, this standard would still be acceptable. The public owes thanks only to itself for its ability today to see the beautiful, refined and artistic presentations of the screen. As for the producers, they should be content to know that public encouragement proved the inspiration that it did, and should be thankful that they were given the strength and the light to accomplish the great things which that public encouragement suggested.

I see as in a vision on the screen itself the days of 1899, the embryonic age of the motion picture. Today we hear that the picture is still in its infancy; if this general statement is true, at that time it was only a germ. There was no guide toward the right methods nor the pitfalls to avoid. The making of a picture depended most upon guess work. Incidentally, the pictures at that time proved it.

At just about this time, when forty or fifty-foot lengths was the vogue, I often wondered why it was not possible to produce a dramatic story in motion pictures. At this period I was chief producer of the Edison Company and it seemed peculiarly proper to me for the Edison Company to inaugurate this innovation. Accordingly, I conceived and prepared a story called "The Life of An American Fireman," a complete 800-foot story based on a fairly good dramatic element and introducing the fireman's life in the engine house and in his home. The subject became instantly popular, and continued to run for a longer time consecutively than any film production previously. Encouraged by the success of this experiment, we devoted all our resources to the production of stories, instead of disconnected and unrelated scenes.

My mind jumps from this time to the early part of 1912, when the Famous Players Film Company was organized to present famous plays and celebrated stars in motion pictures. Between 1899 and this latter date the work of development and systematic formulation had been proceeding steadily, until at last it was possible not only to present short dramatic stories in motion pictures, but the great dramatic successes of the stage. These two dates must always represent decisive epochs in the history of the film. I am more proud than perhaps I should be to have been responsible for the first connected story in film and later to be associated with the first concern to undertake the presentation of celebrated dramas for the photoplay public.

What the future holds in store none can say. But its possibilities are as unlimited and incalculable as the difficulties and dilemmas that beset the producer in the early days of the art. That the men who have been largely responsible for this present excellence of motion pictures will reach out for better things seems certain.

Concerning Eclair Enterprises

BY CH. JOURJON

THE increasing popularity of Eclair film productions in America and on the other side of the water have led to the expansion and general branching out within the last two years. Plans have been formulated which when carried out will materially increase the efficiency of all ends of the business. We have in course of erection at Fort Lee, N. J., what will be, when finished, one of the best equipped and most modern motion picture factories in existence.

Among other features this mechanical film plant will contain the Eclair "automatic laboratory," a wonderful machine which takes the raw stock and after printing, developing, tinting, toning and then drying, delivers it in readiness for packing and shipping. In addition to this device there will also be installed automatic machines for coloring of motion pictures. At the present time, there are but three companies using the mechanical process of coloring and these are in the laboratories of French manufacturers.

A few months ago, it was decided to send a small company of Eclair players to Tucson, Arizona, for the purpose of turning out Western productions and a complete and modern studio and laboratory is now being erected there.

In addition to motion picture enterprises we are about to place our own camera upon the market. It is now known throughout the world under the name of our expert engineer, M. Gillon. We have another model under consideration which will be equipped with a special device for the continued focusing of objects in motion. Then there is the Kineclair Home Projector, calculated to give great impetus to the educational picture, with which is available our film library of scientific pictures consisting of more than six hundred subjects already. We are also making a portable laboratory for traveling cameramen which will contain every appliance for the development of film and is enclosed in a box two feet square and easily carried from place to place.

We are turning some big features out on the other side of the water, and within a short time will release the second series of "Protea," the sensational detective story picture, well known to American exhibitors. This will be followed in a short time by other stories. We are also about to revive the famous series of Nick Carter. We have just finished for the society "Le Theatre" a ten-reel subject adapted from the masterpiece of Edmond Rostand, "L'Aiglon."

As you have said it yourselves, is it not ever the destiny of our race to disseminate throughout the world those new ideas and realizations which are the seeds of all future progress? Eclair has not lagged in this duty; it was one of the first to contribute to the mechanical improvement of this industry which has brought it to its present high state of perfection. It has no competitor in so far as the perfection of its mechanical coloring system is concerned. It has created, at the same time as Messrs. Gaumont, the mechanical developing system, and contemporaneously with Dr. Commandon, it has made possible the combining of the cinematograph and the microscope, the result of which can be seen daily in the "Scientia" films.

Our Paris factory is a marvel of modern equipment and in it is manufactured everything which is required in our business. Our employes number more than eight hundred, outside of our theatrical staff.

On a parallel with this technical effort, we have brought to a successful issue a huge financial undertaking. In every capital we have branches installed which issue locally their own Eclair Weekly as well as dramas or comedies of that particular country.

It is self-evident that we have striven to attain the legitimate reward of our technical efforts. It goes without saying that Eclair is grateful for the kindly welcome which the American press has given to it since its installation in New York in the editorial line. We have been particularly sensitive to the hearty collaboration extended to us in March, last, when a disastrous fire threatened to seriously cripple our efforts. We are ever mindful of your marks of sympathy and our appreciation is only surpassed by our desire to reciprocate in favor of any of our confrères who might need our assistance. May solidarity always be the watchword of the film business, and to all of you on the other side, editors, exchanges, exhibitors, I extend my cordial good wishes.

Visitors at the offices of the Eclair Company in the Leavitt Building, 126 West Forty-sixth street, New York, will remark at once the excellence of appointment and the atmosphere of earnestness which prevades. Each department is conveniently arranged and provided with such business accessories as are calculated to facilitate its work. Safety vaults have been provided for the storage of film and a staff of experienced employees are engaged in examining pictures and preparing them for shipment.

Two projection rooms with the latest models of projectors are in constant readiness to exhibit pictures for prospective buyers. Great care is taken in the projection of pictures at the Eclair offices, for it is realized that a proper impression depends largely on the manner in which the picture is shown.

Courtesy is the keynote there and it characterizes every transaction, explaining much of the success the Eclair Company has achieved in the few short years it has been doing business in the United States. The many friends of this progressive company will learn with some satisfaction of the material progress being made as indicated in the foregoing message from President Jourjon.—[Ed.

Mind in Drama

BY LOUIS REEVES HARRISON

IF we could only be honest with ourselves! What is it we want! It is said that we want plays that make us realize the joy of life. Well, supposing such to be the case, is the statement comprehensive—is it the whole truth? Are all our pleasures in life comprised in what may be funny, even if it is foolish? Do we not feel an intense interest in the outcome of a bitter struggle between two human forces? Do we not delight in discovering, even in tragedy, some clue to our own problems? Have we not a passionate desire to learn?

Assuming our own intelligence and some capacity for sitting in judgment upon what is revealed to us on the screen, are we not inclined to limit our impulsive yielding to emotional susceptibility for the sake of steadying it by the power of what is shown with logical vigor. Is it not true that we are beginning to be repelled by false interpretations of life, even those that may have been measurably true in the past, but which are of no importance to us now? Is it not true that whatever is false to present ideals operates to weary the intelligent portion of an audience and to poison the minds of the ignorant and credulous? Let us be honest with ourselves. We naturally desire to achieve fortune, to love happily, to judge fairly and be fairly judged and to enjoy sound health, both physical and mental.

Summing up what we want in actual existence, some idea may be reached of what we want to have revealed to us on the screen. We certainly do not care to have repeated over and over again what has been shown to us once on the screen or in some other form. Therefore, original plays that stimulate our emotions or quicken our minds must take precedence over plays that merely serve as vehicles to exploit this or that actor, after the theatrical fashion, regardless of intrinsic value and significance. Stars are all right—they are shining examples of those who know how to interpret thought and feeling—but what they are to interpret is the question of the day. Who shall decide that question?

The playwright may attempt to decide it, and he may be capable of reaching a correct solution through dramatic instinct and training, but he is up against the stubborn convictions of men who believe nothing can succeed with the general public but sensational drama. It takes a lot of time and persistent effort to weaken old faiths and the idea that people like raw meat in stage or screen performances has prevailed for many years. Ask a theatrical man what he likes and he will not find a comprehensive reply, but he will answer readily when asked what the average mixed audience likes. He has seen new ideas fail where old ones succeeded and yields slowly to any common-sense arguments on what people prefer to watch on the stage or on the screen. Melodrama has its merits, and it may always be accorded a place on a varied program, but after watching a number of burning houses and sinking ships, or other similar incidents, in which some one or other is "saved," one cannot help feeling that such releases are apt to run along monotonous lines. Nearly all the thrill is on the red poster outside the theater. There is another form of visualized story, which may be called "intense drama," which can be made to hold universal attention and arouse strong interest, especially when it dissects and lays bare some mysterious working of the human mind. Sense deception, faulty observation, distraction, exaggeration, illusion, split personality, lost mental faculties, mental restoration, disassociated individuality and the awakening of entirely new characters are not abstract fancies of the psychologist, but stern realities whose existence needs the entertaining determination of truth, and they may all furnish material for intense drama.

We are far from being what we think we are and there are many exciting adventures yet to be made into the dark realms of mental change, adventures which can be used to awaken high suspense and, at the same time, fascinate us by startling revelations concerning our personal relations to the forces directing our careers. The very mention of psychology in the same breath with drama may cause old-timers to shudder, but this only illustrates a form of mental prepossession on the part of old-timers, for the goal to be attained, that of attracting and holding the attention of any audience, is easier to reach by way of novelty than by commonplace of tradition.

What is the action and reaction of mind on mind, what is the recognition of mind in drama, but a form of psychology? When I first offered a psychological photoplay to a young producing concern many years ago, it was produced with doubt verging on distrust. Critics applauded it, and audiences gave it something very rare—a veritable ovation. It was a money-maker for all but the author, and was preserved as a model, thousands of copies being printed and circulated among scenario writers; but few grasped the secret of its success, and the same old round of sensational incident continued, "explosions" and burned bridges. The play dealt with one of many problems involved in abnormal psychology, but, if I had told that at the time, I might not have sold my scenario—"abnormal psychology" sounded like "integral calculus" to the movie man in those days.

These are happier days. The producers of "Northern Lights" boldly declare it to be a psychological drama, and other producers understand that psychology carries a significant message for the regulation of our lives. It is

(Continued on page 210)

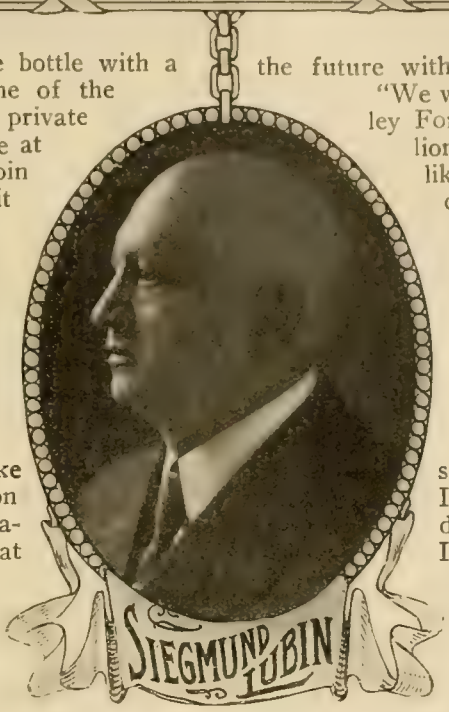
A Day With Siegmund Lubin

BY W. STEPHEN BUSH



A CURIOUS, paper-covered little bottle with a long, narrow tag stood on one of the great desks in Mr. Lubin's new private office. It was just after the recent fire at his Indiana Avenue plant. Mr. Lubin picked up the bottle and looked at it whimsically.

"You see," said the veteran film-builder, as he seized the bottle and toyed with it smilingly, "some people are sending me medicine. I suppose they think I need something for my nerves because of the fire. Why, no. We still have our brains; now what if we did lose some good pictures, it just means that we have got to make better ones. The fire will be a lesson and we will know where to store negatives the next time. I don't believe that the fire started by itself. Some rays, may be, got through a prism and started the film burning. You know I am sorry for the loss of some of our historic records. We had pictures of Cleveland and of McKinley and of ex-Vice-President Stevenson, who has just died. We had pictures, too, of Schley and Dewey. I happened to be in Buffalo at the time when McKinley was shot and I myself took some interesting scenes. Well, nobody got hurt.

"I was out in Betzwood, when Mr. Riddle, the mayor of Atlantic City, who was with me at the time, called up the plant here and something strange happened then. He heard a great noise and the wire stopped. Then we called up a baker nearby and they told us that everything was exploding and going up to the sky. When we got to the plant we found that it was not as bad as all that; if the fire had started in the opposite direction it would have meant the wiping out of everything. Such fine telegrams I got from all over the world; everybody offered me money, but, of course I did not need it. When my people here looked as if they were so sorry for me and many of them said they wanted no more wages until I felt I wanted to pay them again it made me feel that they loved me as much as I love them. They are loyal, everybody, the men with the big salaries, the actors and the girls that work in the different rooms. You see money is not everything. It is not to me, anyway. I built this great place at Betzwood and I am striving to make the best pictures in the world because that is my ambition, yes, that is the ambition of my life."

The lively old gentleman could hardly harness and marshall his thoughts as they crowded in upon him. I had come to ask him for his recollection of the early days of the industry as he is one of the great Somebodies in American Kinematography. Mr. Lubin's mood was not reminiscent or retrospective. At times, no doubt, he likes to unfold the ever interesting tales of the past, but the fire and its problems had evidently put him on his mettle. His thoughts dwelt eagerly upon the present and the future with the many urgent problems thereof.

"We will make a picture of the "Days of Valley Forge" that will cost a quarter of a million dollars," he went on. "You would like me to say something about the old days. You know I am going to write a history about that. I know a good deal about that. I was one of the first, or I could say, I was the first. I had worked on the problem of motion pictures more than twenty years ago.

"It was about nineteen years ago that I saw the work of Jenkins in Atlanta, Ga. He had been in litigation with Edison and he was pretty sick and tired of the whole business. I connected myself with Jenkins, but I do not want to talk about these things; I will tell that whole story when I get ready, but then I must have time to sit down and write it out myself. Please say that Edison deserves a lot of credit for his camera and the Vitagraph Company for their new ideas. The films that I made in the beginning were about from twenty-five to fifty feet long and were quite expensive, costing about ten cents a foot. Until Eastman came along there was great trouble with the emulsion, it would peel off sometimes in a day and sometimes in a week or four weeks. I wish I had the time to show you some of my very first pictures. As I remember it now I think the first picture was that of a horse eating hay. Well, it was the hardest thing to calculate the shrinkage and sometimes the picture was run so fast it would make you sick at the stomach. I tried to make my first machine as solid as possible and take away the vibration. I guess it weighed something like 4,500 pounds. Then I made a larger picture—let me see what is the story again of that colored fellow that was sold on the ice—yes, "Uncle Tom's Cabin." Another early exhibition that I remember and one that paid well was "The Battle of Manila." It was given in some open place and big crowds came to see it. I remember that quite well."

Just as Mr. Lubin was at the point of recalling another leaf from the chronicles of long ago a delegation was announced. Mr. Lubin, full of tact and patience, suspended the interview and received the delegation, which consisted of three Philadelphians, who assured Mr. Lubin that they had the latest and positively the greatest thing in talking pictures. In vain did the old inventor try to assure them that he had tested out the possibilities of talking pictures to the minutest fraction of an ounce.

"There is no commercial value in talking pictures," the old man repeated, slightly raising his voice to make himself heard above the hopeful and persistent vociferations of the committee. They wanted him to listen to their machine, but he gave them scant encouragement and bowed them out.

Good-humoredly he turned to me and began to laud the pictures as a means of instruction.

"You know," he said, very earnestly, "one of the pictures that we lost was very close to my heart. It was a film showing the making of rubber, beginning with the gathering of the raw material and ending with rubber shoes and rubber tires. I think that picture just showed how useful the motion picture could be in the schools. Well, we have other such pictures left. When I write my story about the olden days I will have something to say about actors, you may be sure. I ask you whom could we get in those days? Well, we got some men who had never been actors before, some butchers and some barbers. The barbers never lost their funny motions and they would always make you think of how they used to swing the razor and the clippers. A real good actor would not listen to us at all. Now we have the best artists in the world, but those people in Europe don't realize it."

Here came another interruption. An "unknown" had sent in his card to see Mr. Lubin "on a very important matter." With his habitual and charming courtesy, Mr. Lubin asked the interviewer to be excused and received the visitor with the "important message." A very solemn individual entered and blandly told Mr. Lubin that he had hit upon a great subject for a motion picture scenario. He told Mr. Lubin that he had come to get some advice as to the proper way of writing a scenario. He said he had always believed that a scenario for moving pictures could not be written in the same style as a novel. Mr. Lubin agreed with him enthusiastically and urged him to send in his scenario at the same time rising and politely bidding him good-bye.

"Yes, you may think that I am too polite with all these callers," he said, "but you know I have made it a principle of my life never to take away a man's courage and ambition. Some day a person with a real good idea might come. Let me show you."

With this Mr. Lubin arose and walked over to his own private desk. He drew out a roll of film more than twice the width of the present standard film. The roll was a negative showing some scenic pictures. It was clear that such a picture would take in much more than the present strip in the camera, but at this day such a large strip is commercially impossible.

"It may have a great future," said Mr. Lubin.

Messengers announcing new visitors with "important missions" now began to enter almost every five minutes. The telephone set up its insistent call and added to the handicaps of the interview. Never for a moment did the gentle old man betray any impatience or irritation. He once more harked back to the educational picture and then with a genial, contagious smile talked of his recent visit to Europe.

"You know," he said, "those European nations certainly like our pictures. There are no pictures like the American-made pictures. No matter where you are in the world you will find the American picture. When I was in Russia they said to me: 'Well, Mr. Lubin, why don't you make pictures and put people with long whiskers in them, and in Germany they tell me 'Mr. Lubin, we don't believe in your Indians, we think they're a lot of Polish Jews.' In France, in Italy, everywhere, our pictures are on top. That is because the Americans lead the world in everything. This is the greatest of all countries and it is only right that we should lead in everything, motion pictures included."

The old man rose and, slowly walking over to the windows beneath which many of his loyal flock were then resting or working, he looked down and said:

"I am the friend of all of these people. I have myself risen from the depths of poverty. I can feel just as thy feel and I know the bond of loyalty between us will last while I live."

Mind in Drama—By LOUIS REEVES HARRISON

(Continued from page 208)

attracting wide-spread interest, is progressive in tendency, and its finest point of view enlightens us as to what is false and misleading in our conceptions. It is true that psychological plays must be handled with intelligence to avoid being logically defective and misleading, but all that is up to the author. He must take care to begin with sound premises and proceed with scientific accuracy if he would not imperil appreciation of his labor. He must know where he is at.

"Be sure you are right," sounds trite, but it is quite necessary before beginning a psychological play. It is necessary to distinguish between the misguided efforts of enthusiasts, or the perverse fallacies of fanatics, and what is authentically scientific and therefore of true value. "Then go ahead" sincerely and according to the best ideals of entertaining a mixed audience. The author must not shift responsibility—it belongs to him—unless the producer inserts what changes the main purpose of his drama. He must, however, consider that the foremost purpose of his story is to interest those who watch its unfolding on the screen. If he becomes too much possessed by the scientific aspect of his subject, he will go over and above the comprehension of many spectators, whereas his play is written for all. He must also realize that many intelligent people already know what he is promulgating, and this is a further argument in favor of submerging facts beneath a smooth and delightful flow of fiction.

"If a dramatist," says John Galsworthy, "succeeds in presenting real life itself, in such a manner as to carry with it a certain moral inspiration, the force of the message need never be lost, for a new interpretation to fit the spirit of the time can renew its vigor and power. But he must so present the characters in his picture of life that the inherent moral is brought to light through lecturing on his part."

PLAYING "THE ESCAPE" BEFORE THE ELITE.

AMONG psychological photoplays, none has attracted more attention and precipitated more discussion than "The Escape," the D. W. Griffith masterpiece based upon the Paul Armstrong play by the same name which was recently shown at the Cort Theater. Motion picture men will watch with interest just what is done with this expensive production with a psychological punch which is admittedly most unpleasant.

Just now "The Escape" is being booked as a feature attraction in theaters which depend upon the elite of the country for their patronage. It is being offered at some of the most expensive watering places in the country, playing engagements of from three days to a week at a record rental figure. Arrangements are also being made to show the photoplay at one of the foremost legitimate theaters in Chicago.

Out of Quantity—Quality

BY HARRY E. AITKEN

MOTION pictures in this country have developed along two distinct lines, that of quantity and that of quality. This cannot continue. It must be a survival of the fittest and in this case, the fittest is the latest to develop. The natural increase in popularity brought quantity and out of quantity came quality, but poor quality, because it was a physical impossibility to give good quality in large quantity. When this condition has run its entire course and the quality of the quantity pictures has become as poor as possible, thus producing a strong contrast with the few pictures of high quality made by those manufacturers who are not straining for quantity at the expense of everything else, then real quality will come into its own and prevail throughout the motion picture field.

Those manufacturers who were never fitted for the industry will lose what money they have invested in it and will fall back naturally into the various businesses from which they came. The result will be fewer manufacturers and each making fewer pictures but better ones. Of course, this will mean fewer releases and therefore fewer changes of bill. It will mean fewer theatres and better ones, fewer patrons at better prices and a general uplifting of the standards.

The almost universal daily change of bill prevailing today is the root of the evil of quantity at the sacrifice of quality. In the coming order of things, the honest exhibitor will have something worth advertising, extensively and in advance, as the run of the feature will be long enough to enable him to get back the money he has spent in publicizing it. There will be more half-week and week runs and the big features will have runs of several weeks or even months like the successful theatrical productions have today.

This will be of great benefit to the discriminating and appreciative playgoing public, who can then get higher class amusement than they now get at the average moving picture playhouse and at much less cost than they can now find it in the so-called legitimate theatre. This will do the spoken play even more harm than the photoplay has done up to the present time.

D. W. Griffith, that master of the moving picture, has had more to do with its artistic advancement than any other one man. His ideas have revolutionized the entire industry and their effect is being felt more and more. His motto is "Have it right or not at all." That spells "quality" and not "quantity." His intelligent, nay, brilliant work has adduced new ideas of acting, of photography, of scenic and lighting effects, of costume investiture, of direction, of scenario writing and editing, of scenic arrangement or "cutting" as we call it and, most of all, of realism. Proper editing of the film should be a matter of weeks, not of minutes. To accomplish this and other reforms the business must shake itself down. It fast is getting into the condition of Mr. Kipling's creature, "The Ship That Found Herself." We are finding ourselves. We see that to make the necessary reforms there must be fewer producers and that these reforms themselves will depopulate the present mushroom growth of production.

Many who now are in the producing end of the business are in a losing venture and they will have to go to other lines of endeavor.

I think it is utterly impossible for a theatre to give a daily change of program and keep each program good. Such plays as "The Escape," "Judith of Bethulia," and "Home, Sweet Home" cannot be produced over-night.

I think the Mutual method of editing is by long odds the best, both for the public and for the producer. We now try to put our productions, particularly plural reel subjects, into big theatres in Los Angeles, because that is the large city nearest to our studios and show them before a real public. Then our directors study the effect of these pictures upon the audiences, to see which scenes arouse the greatest interest and to see which cause fatigue. On that foundation we make the final cutting. This is the practice followed by big play producers and I see no reason why the moving picture public should not receive the same attention.

The photoplay is an important factor in American domestic economy. The American people are at heart extravagant. James J. Hill once said, "The problem of today is not so much the high cost of living as the cost of high living." The moving picture show is in the direction of economy. Formerly people went to a theatre, paid $2 a seat, dressed, expended from $4 to $10 in cabfare and from $10 to $20 for supper afterward. Now, they see a good picture for 10 cents or a quarter, walk to the show around the corner in ordinary day dress and do not think of the expensive and usually detrimental supper.

The day is coming and coming soon when the open programme will prevail as it does abroad, and then the exhibitor will insist on seeing the pictures he offers to his patrons before he books them. Then, and not until then, will the death knell of the inferior picture be sounded—and there will be no resurrection. The intelligent and honest manufacturer will not look upon this reform as a hardship and the intelligent and honest exhibitor will welcome it as a godsend.

To sum up, I should say that the needs of the business are better pictures, consequently fewer pictures, and, as a logical result of this, better patronized pictures; less frequent changes of program—in a phrase, the exhibition of more artistic pictures, in a more business-like basis, in finer theatres.

Motion Pictures Under the Open Market

BY PAUL H. CROMELIN

THOSE who have watched and followed the development of the art of producing and marketing motion pictures in the United States must sometimes wonder what the evolution of the industry might have been had it progressed along normal natural lines unrestricted by patents which have prevented many from venturing into the field, or the great combinations which control the machinery for distributing the pictures as issued. Until quite recently these combinations have made the exhibitor a mere automaton who took what was sent him, showed it to his patrons, sent it back and received a new supply of good, bad or indifferent films to exhibit the next day.

Without in any way minimizing the great part which the so-called "trust" has played in bringing order out of chaos and in giving to the exhibitor a certain confidence and assurance that he would receive a fixed number of subjects to make the frequent, usually daily, change in program effective, and without belittling in the slightest the work of those other combinations which have come into existence, and which, while vigorously attacking the parent trust have nevertheless imitated its policies quite successfully, it would be the matter of curious conjecture as to what might have happened had clean-cut competition rather than preventive combinations been the rule.

Of course it is impossible to do more than conjecture, but it is interesting to observe that as the exhibitor is gradually emerging from his quiescent and passive attitude and as the owner, proprietor or manager of a theatre where motion pictures are exhibited he is coming more and more to recognize that he has a duty to his patrons and to himself to see that his program is the kind required, new manufacturers are looming up who by reason of the excellence of their productions, despite the obstructive methods sometimes employed by the great combinations, are having the satisfaction of seeing their photo-plays screened in a sufficiently large number of theatres to make it worth while to go on making new and increasingly interesting subjects which are being welcomed by up-to-date exhibitors and well received by the public.

In the quantity of motion pictures produced the United States has always been well in the lead, and as the manufacturers by reason of their control of the distributors have been able to require the exhibitors to take what was given them, the pictures have not always been of the quality which would have prevailed had the market been open.

It remained for Europe to point the way; and to Italy, to whom the world owes a debt it can never repay because of the contributions its sons have made to every form of artistic expression, belongs the laurels for having made the greatest progress in giving expression by means of the motion picture to the work of an author or the conceptions of a really artistic producer. And gladly should we pay this tribute, for the great Italian masterpieces stand out in such bold relief as to entitle them to be considered in a class to themselves, as yet unapproached by anything produced elsewhere. The example which leading Italian companies have given has been a great incentive to bigger, better and nobler effort on the part of their competitors throughout the world; and we are beginning to see in the dawn of a new era in the motion picture art, this effort crystallizing in wonderfully interesting productions, of which announcement follows announcement so rapidly that it is hard to keep track of them all. New theatres are being built, with every known convenience and comfort in order to give a proper setting to this new form of art and we observe all around us evidences that the old theatrical interests who fought so long and so hard are capitulating and eagerly seeking entrance into the motion picture fold, while theatre after theatre which heretofore housed the ordinary dramatic performance or variety show is making place for the motion picture.

England, while not taking a leading position in former years as a producer of motion pictures, has always afforded a good opportunity to study the commercial and sales side of the business conducted under natural trade conditions; and London has been and is today the great market and distributing point to the rest of the world aside, of course, from American productions used in the United States.

The American companies were quick to see the importance of the British market and all of them have either their own establishments there or are represented by competent sales agents. For many years, the American pictures, which as distinguished from certain Continental productions, were peculiarly suited to British audiences, had a great vogue and to this day they hold a leading position. There is so much in common between these two great nations that it is but natural this should be so. The thing that impressed me most during the past three years which I was privileged to spend in England was the high sense of honor of the average Englishman one meets in a business way. Most Englishmen are eminently fair-minded and their whole schooling is calculated to impress upon them the importance of "playing cricket" or as we call it, "playing the game." A large portion of the present generation have come to look upon the American Revolution as a huge political blunder on the part of the then reigning powers, and they are intensely interested in the progress the United States is making and it follows that they like pictures of American life; and so also good English productions are bound to make a strong appeal in the American market when properly introduced.

When the writer left for London in the summer of 1911 there was no way by which a motion picture play, no matter how excellent, could get a showing in the United States except by license from the "trust" (which was not obtainable), or through the then existing other combination known as the "Sales Company." True, a print might be sold here and there but for all practical purposes ordinary competitive conditions were non-existent.

It was therefore intensely interesting to get into competition in a country where the product was admitted free of duty and was sold on merit alone without any of the artificial conditions which hampered the industry here. The business was following natural lines. If your picture was good your sales were correspondingly good. If the subject was fair or poor your sales suffered accordingly. Supply and demand always figured largely and sometimes disastrously affected your result for want of some of the very regulation and control which was in force in the United States. The product was sold on the open market for release on a given date. Some weeks the competing companies would have an excess of good dramas or comedies as the case might be and as the market could absorb only a given number of prints of each subject each week, the sales would be split up in such a way that every concern suffered. It sometimes happened that in the succeeding week there would be but a scant supply of the kind of subjects which had been so plentiful the week before. While this occasionally resulted in unsatisfactory sales for individual pictures, in the long run the average sale would be the combined result of individual effort plus quality.

In addition to showing their open market releases in London most of the important companies in England have travelers who visit the principal cities in the United Kingdom where exchanges are established. These exchanges are equipped with suitable projecting rooms and week after week at an arranged hour on given days, it is known that the representatives of the X, Y or Z Company will show the weeks' offerings of his company. The buyers make notes, mark the subject according to grade and if they intend to purchase, book it with the salesman or eventually order it from the company. Leading exhibitors are welcome at these exchanges and, in fact, make it a practice to personally or through their representatives see the subjects and if they are impressed indicate to their exchange a desire to book a particular subject and this, of course, influences the exchange as to the number of prints to be ordered. This number naturally depends on how many theatres are being served. London and Provincial exhibitors or their representatives are in the same manner constantly visiting the display rooms of the various companies in London, viewing the week's offerings and arranging to secure for their theatre through their exchange, the subjects that interest them. Under these conditions there is more chance for real selling ability to make itself felt. This manifests itself in the usual ways, by a direct personal appeal, or through salesmen, by clever advertising, effective circularizing, catchy heralds and attractive posters.

It always seemed to me that one of the greatest evils in the business in the United States was the daily change of program. A good subject would be shown at a theatre. It made a strong appeal on me. If I wanted to have my wife and children see it, when they went next day, it would be gone, and they had no way of ascertaining where or when it could be seen again. The pictures were not beginning to yield the maximum of their earning capacity. It would be folly for an exhibitor to advertise under such circumstances, and he lost to a great extent if not entirely the advantage where the element of the personal advertising of satisfied patrons would bring him.

In England I was pleased to observe that the custom was to run a picture, if it was a fine subject, for one week, and that the usual practice was to change the program bi-weekly. Under such conditions it was not surprising to find that the theatres considered as a whole were finer than those which were at that time devoted to picture shows in the United States; and the prices obtained were higher than was customary here. There was more of a tone about the motion picture theatrical business and the projection was usually excellent. Not so much of that "grind them out and let the next crowd in" as was frequently found here to the great disadvantage of the pictures themselves. The comparison was altogether favorable to the English theatre and in a very large measure this was the direct result of open market conditions and competition which required an exhibitor to use his brains and develop into a real showman instead of being a convenient dumping ground for whatever was sent him.

It must not be understood that exhibiting conditions were altogether good or ideal. The same problem of several theatres in a neighborhood showing the same picture disturbed the British exhibitor as well as the American and in the progressive development of the business the long subject and the exclusive feature became an element of great importance. To a large extent these have eliminated some of the evils because of the control and regulation which the owner of an exclusive feature has over the bookings, and in course of time, following ordinary competitive conditions, the business will be so specialized in the hands of those best able to direct it that suitable means for preventing what can only be described as destructive competition will doubtless be devised. This will not be done by trusts or combinations, however, but by sane and sound trade agreements between competitors carefully worked out through the instrumentality of the various cinematographic trade associations and so prepared as to safeguard the interests of those most affected.

Group of Edison Players.

C. Jay Williams, Edison director, and a number of leading players of that company under his direction, spent a season making pictures at Bermuda. After a successful excursion they returned a few weeks ago, the engraving being made from a photograph taken on board the SS. Arcadian.

Accomplishments of the Feature

BY JESSE L. LASKY

WHEN one essays to talk on a subject—one is supposed to have, at least, a remote knowledge of his subject. In consequence, if I am to talk on motion pictures, I must choose as my subject that branch of the industry with which I have had experience.

When contemplating entry into the field of Motography, I began a systematic study of the trade, from every angle. I decided that I would enter that branch which held the most glowing prospects for the future—the feature field.

Features, to my mind, proffer a concrete, lasting future in that, within their short year of existence they have acomplished what the "one-reel" subjects failed to attain in fifteen years, viz., to interest the classes.

One must first view with the eye of a non-partisan, the sight in front of the theatre showing the feature and the house conducting strictly a one and two-reel programme.

Let us take, as an example, the beautiful Strand, the masterly Vitagraph Theatre, the Audubon or Hamilton Theatre and compare them with the New Comedy Theatre on Sixty-sixth street.

The programme at the New Comedy, one day last week, was composed of "The Wharf Rats" and four other subjects of similar title.

The programme at the Strand Theatre containued as a feature "The Only Son." Within one hour we counted fifteen automobiles and nine carriages draw up in front, and at least thirty men dressed in evening clothes entering the Strand. At the New Comedy, where the small subjects are shown, the title of the pictures and condition of the lobby and interior speak for the audiences.

Riverside Drive turns out en masse for the picture programme at the Riverside and Rivera Theatres, where features predominate. The Nemo at Broadway and 110th street appeals to the fashionable residents of the Cathedral section. Features are nightly oñerings. And the Bunny Theatre on upper Broadway is nightly the rendezvous of the finest class of patrons.

Remember, I am not decrying the one and two-reel subjects. I know too little of their value, but I do know the appeal of the high-class feature, have thousands of reports on the potent drawing power of the feature in all parts of the country, know from actual experience just how much the feature has and will continue to elevate the industry, and from conversations with distributors and exhibitors I have learned much that I believed, but now know to be true.

One highly important exhibitor, whose theatres throughout the middle west, are considered among the best, confided to me that the coming of the feature caused even the smaller exhibitor to place his theatre in a condition, equal in point of elaborateness, to the programme he was oñering.

"The feature," said this man, "urged the small exhibitor to adopt theatrical methods in his appeal to the lovers of amusement. Fronts were changed, interiors re-arranged, music improved, prices elevated, and advertising in the press resorted to."

Features compelled recognition from the daily press. Regular reviewers on daily papers began reviewing feature photoplays from the same angle that legitimate dramas are criticized.

The feature is its own propulsion. It automatically goes forward, in proportion to its importance, splendor and grandeur. The production of features have attracted a number of men to the ranks of motion picture purveyors who could do naught else than dignify the industry.

The one-reel subject, true, was the beginning, as were the first incandescent lights. They dissipated the gloom, but it remained for progress and time to advance the art.

The feature, owing to the elaborateness of production, unlimited subjects, and its appeal to the class of people who make a first-class scale of prices possible, will, I believe, outlive all other branches of the motion picture art. Features, it must be admitted, provoked the word art in connection with the moving picture.

The entry of such men as Daniel Frohman, Augustus Thomas, Cecil B. De Mille, David Belasco, Klaw & Erlanger and others cannot be termed anything but a benefit to the industry. They bring a wealth of experience gained during years in other branches of the amusement business and the same energy which they have used in achieving the success which one thinks of the minute their names are mentioned will be of inestimable value in the promotion of the photoplay.

David Belasco confided to me that such pictures (one and two-reel subjects), as he had witnessed, caused him to refuse to allow his plays to be screened.

After seeing a number of features, Mr. Belasco condescended to allow his plays to be picturized, and I am satisfied that the "tone" which has been added to the industry through the development of the feature end of the business is the only thing that has made it possible for the countless thousands of "moving picture fans" throughout the country to have at their disposal the unparalleled genius of this modern production wizard.

Arguing pro and con, reciting personal experiences, calling attention to the shortcomings of any particular type of picture, praising the virtues of any particular style, leads nowhere.

As between features and small subjects, it simmers down to one point. The feature is necessary to the trade. The one and two-reel subjects are necessary to the trade and each are essential to the other—and finally, a survival of the fittest. May they all prosper.

Commercial Use of Motion Pictures

BY WATTERSON R. ROTHACKER

THIS is an era of moving pictures; moving pictures for entertaining purposes and moving pictures for advertising are topics of the hour. There is a reason for the popularity of the dramatic and comedy moving pictures, which reason is so obvious that it needs no explanation. There is a reason, too, and a big one, for the advertising use of moving pictures, for to anyone who understands the value of illustrations in advertising, the superlative value of moving illustrations is at a glance apparent.

Moving picture advertising is no longer a mere theory. It has been practically tried out, and in every instance where the campaign has been judiciously handled, lasting and effective impressions have been created to the decided advantage of the advertiser.

To give you an idea as to the high-class of thinking advertisers who, after careful consideration and thorough investigation, have selected moving pictures as as a means to advertise, I will here give you a few concrete examples of moving picture advertising achievement.

The Du Pont Powder Company, about four years ago, conceived the idea of demonstrating, by means of moving pictures, the value of dynamite in farming. A perfect demonstration was staged before a battery of moving picture cameras. Stump blasting, deep plowing, tree planting, ditching, etc., were all successfully accomplished by means of high explosives and every detail of the demonstration was made a matter of enduring record on film. Then, by means of mechanical multiplication, hundreds of copies of this film were struck off and were put in circulation throughout rural districts, at land shows, at farmers' institutes, state and county fairs, and at various other places where were assembled the agricultural public. The result was that thousands and thousands of people who otherwise would not have had the inclination or the time to see just how farming is done with dynamite, were made familiar with the value of this most modern method. Not only were the film demonstrations used effectively in the evenings and during seasons when the farming class is at leisure, but when the ground and weather conditions were such that an actual demonstration could not be staged. The demonstrations on film made a big saving in the cost of dynamite that would have had to have been used otherwise, and the Du Pont Powder Company had the satisfaction of knowing that each one of these demonstrations was, on the screen, always the same as when it first passed their critical inspection.

To give publicity and advertising to Winchester arms and ammunition, the Winchester Repeating Arms Company of New Haven, Connecticut, had made a series of moving pictures demonstrating fancy shooting with rifle, pistol and shotgun. These pictures had extraordinary interest. Mr. and Mrs. Topperwein, the world's famous shots, posed for the subject, and their wonderful shooting, through the wide circulation that has been given the pictures, has caused thousands of people to become keenly interested in a manner that identified the big red "W." Not only were these Winchester pictures shown all over the United States, but their popularity in this country was so great that the campaign was extended to cover South America, Australia, Java and the Philippine Islands.

The late C. W. Post, of Battle Creek had for years been inviting the public of the United States to visit his wonderful plants there. Naturally, a great number of people who would like to make the trip were unable to do so because of the time and money involved, but since Mr. Post put on film, every detail of his factory operations, the public of the world have an opportunity to conveniently, in their own home town, sit in a moving picture theatre and take an eye trip through the wonderful Post plants and see moving, as in real life, every operation essential to the making of Postum Cereal, Grape-Nuts and Post Toasties.

The Phoenix Horse Shoe Company, in order to show buyers in foreign countries just how their product is made and in order to furnish educational entertainment at various farriers' conventions, have had made moving pictures which comprehensively illustrate every detail of the construction of a Phoenix horse shoe.

Mayer Brothers, of Chicago, put on film a story entitled, "The Clothing Industry from Sheep to Wearer," and by arranging with their local dealers throughout the country for special exhibitions, they directly connected their merchandising with their advertising, and by means of moving pictures, not only secured splendid far-reaching and novel advertising and publicity, but they actually made bigger sales for their regular customers and in many instances secured new customers directly through the films.

Mr. F. S. Peabody, president of the Peabody Coal Company, conceived the idea of showing by means of moving pictures just how coal is mined on his various properties. Also, Mr. Peabody in having this work done, made splendid representation of the safety precautionary methods employed in his mine, the care with which the coal is handled before it is delivered to the consumer; in fact, the moving pictures made at Mr. Peabody's instigation completely illustrate "Coal Mining in Southern Illinois," and do so in a way vastly entertaining, decidedly educational, and all this combined in a manner that effectively advertises the Peabody products. Mr. Peabody not long ago presented these moving pictures in conjunction with a lecture at Yale University. The success he made with them has been duplicated at various other large educational institutes throughout the United States, as well as before gatherings especially assembled.

The United States Gypsum Company, by means of moving pictures, show how gypsum is mined and how, at their big factories, it is made into Pyrobar and Sackett Plaster Board. This film terminates with a scene showing the fireproof qualities of Sackett Plaster Board. In order to put the necessary advertising punch into this scene, and to conclusively prove their proposition, the United States Gypsum Company erected in Chicago a building, part of which was built of their product and part of non-fireproof product. Then, before an assemblage of official underwriters and firemen, the building was ignited. The pictures show the conflagration, show how the United States Gypsum Company products withstand the fire, and finally show the building after the fire, with the part in which was used Sackett Plaster Board standing practically untouched. These pictures are being used in a special class campaign covering people directly interested in their products.

Millions of people in the United States have, by means of moving pictures, been impressed with the wonders and beauties of Yellowstone National Park, and with the splendid industrial opportunities existing in the Northwest. The Northern Pacific Railway Company made good use of these pictures in their campaign to attract tourists to Yellowstone National Park and homeseekers, residents and investors to the territories tributary to their line.

A similar moving picture advertising scheme has been employed in the South by the Southern Railway Co.

Mr. W. H. Cochrane, general manager of the Chicago. South Haven Steamship Company, is on record with the statement that the moving pictures he used to show a trip from Chicago to South Haven and return on his line was instrumental during the last two years in actuating thousands of people to see for themselves and enjoy themselves, the splendid recreation there offered.

The Holt Caterpillar Company and the M. Rumely Company are effectively using moving pictures to demonstrate their heavy argicultural machinery.

The American Cynamid Company, by means of a series of moving pictures illustrating the "Fixation of Atmospheric Nitrogen" or the "Transformation of Water Power Into Food Crops," are giving wide publicity to Cynamid, their product. These pictures were exhibited at Washington before a special committee and so impressed the committee that at their special request they were made a matter of Government record.

Among others whose names stand high in current advertising history, and who are backing up their opinion of moving picture advertising by actual use of film copy, are the Universal Portland Cement Company, the International Harvester Company, the National Lead Company, the Lehigh Portland Cement Company, Bates Bag Vale Company, H. J. Heinz Company, Standard Oil Company, Peabody Houghteling & Co., German Kali Works, American Clay Machinery Company, United States Brewers' Association, etc., etc.

Either as a direct or supplementary means, moving pictures have wonderful power, and their place, either in direct advertising, publicity or connective advertising, is established now to the entire satisfaction of the advertising world. Moving picture advertising is here to stay.

Here and there, in the record of moving picture advertising achievement, as is true in the record of any advertising medium, you will find a user not 100 per cent satisfied, but investigate the cause and you will find that either a too anxious seller of moving pictures has, prompted by ulterior motives, "found" moving picture advertising possibilities in a subject that for some reason does not lend itself to moving depiction, or you will find that the pictures have been taken haphazardly by one who does not understand advertising and whose motive was "How much film can I grind off and sell?" rather than "How strong can I make this advertising story?" or you will find that the user has been promised millions and millions of circulation by someone ignorant of moving picture advertising circulation possibilities, or someone who knew circulation limitations, but knew not how to enter and utilize the proper avenue; or you will find bad photography, failure to keep service promises, or some other reason for the advertiser's complaint, for wherever a subject is analyzed properly, filmed with an advertising viewpoint well in hand, and handled advisedly along definite lines, you will find an addition to the record of moving picture advertising achievement which will be 100 per cent in every instance where the contract is secured on an honest efficiency basis.

Growing Importance of the "Ad-Film."

THE constantly growing importance of motion pictures as a medium for advertising, in the commercial world, is being emphasized from day to day. At the recent annual convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of America at Toronto, Canada, motion pictures as an advertising medium were formally discussed for the first time in the history of this powerful and wide awake organization which has so much to do with shaping the advertising and selling policies of big businesses throughout the country and at the recent exposition of the motion picture art in Grand Central Palace, New York, no less than half a dozen different types of home or office projecting machines were exhibited.

Arthur Smallwood.

The motion picture matter was introduced at the Toronto convention by Arthur N. Smallwood, of the Smallwood Film Corporation, who delivered an address on "The Use of Motion Pictures in Advertising and Selling." The subject matter was illustrated in a most interesting manner by the representatives of the Sherwin-Williams Company, paint manufacturers, and the International Harvester Company, who showed "ad-films" which their respective companies have been using in advertising and selling campaigns for a long time.

The little projecting machines shown this year at the Grand Central exposition were, almost without exception, designed for use in the commercial field. At least one of them was so constructed that it could be carried as easily as a salesman's sample case and operated in any ordinary business office with a white window shade as the projection screen.

Publicity for the Pictures

BY PHILIP MINDIL

PUBLICITY is the backbone of every industry the product of which depends on the patronage of the million and not of the few. Such is the condition with the film industry.

Advertising is useless if the advertiser has nothing to sell, but without advertising the most marketable stock may moulder on the shelves.

Having something to sell which the American people want, the Mutual believes in letting them know about it. To do this effectively, organized, systematized and intelligently directed publicity is necessary.

It entails the employment of a staff of writers and office assistants to prepare the great volume of correspondence with newspaper and magazine editors, exhibitors, exchange managers and fans, to find out what they want and to give it to them.

At present our department is publishing a forty-four page house organ, as attractive as many weekly magazines, profusely illustrated and interestingly written, "Reel Life," with a constantly increasing circulation (30,000 now); another sixteen-page weekly, "Our Mutual Girl Weekly," which started on its first week with 100,000 and which looks as though it would reach a million in the near future; a weekly news sheet for 6,000 editors of daily and weekly newspapers to clip from, and a cut and matrix service to go with it. This is called "Mutual Movie Fillers."

In addition to these regular features, we supply exclusive news and Sunday special stories to the big city dailies and many special stories and photographs to the trade papers and to the magazines of more general interest.

One man is kept busy reading the sixteen hundred newspapers on our exchange list for clippings and several news clipping bureaus supplement his work. We are clipping about 6,000 newspaper cuttings a week. These represent about 10 per cent, I believe from long experience, of the total number printed.

There are many reasons for the publicity department. It helps the newspaper or magazine to keep its advertisers who are too busy to write their own news; it helps the exhibitor to get news space from the editor, who is quite willing to print these stories and, most important of all, it has convinced the editors everywhere of the importance of moving picture news, until today they are not only willing to print it, but anxious to get it.

Six months ago the big dailies would no more print moving picture news than they would dry goods news. Today they are giving it as much, and some of them more, space than the dramatic news. I have many prominent dailies throughout the country on my exchange list, that run the title "Moving Picture and Dramatic Page." The movies have come into their own in the newspapers and this is all to the credit of the moving picture publicity men and the men higher up, who have been broad enough to stand behind them and make it possible for them to help the industry and particularly the companies they represent.

I once heard one of the foremost men in the picture business say:

"What's the use of it all? It doesn't sell any more prints."

But it does and it will. Of course, no "fan" is going to write in and say, "I saw your story in our local paper and that made me go to your show." But it did nevertheless.

Three years ago I was asked by one of the trade papers to define a press agent. Here's the best I could do:

"A press agent is an experienced newspaper man, who studies the news possibilities of his client and presents them in such a way as to gain favorable consideration—being unable to guarantee anything except energy, organization, intimate knowledge of news and its avenues of escape, ability to write it and acquaintance with the men who pass upon it and with their various angles of appreciation."

Moving picture publicity does not differ materially from any other kind. The editor wants what the reader wants—the really interesting news about the picture, its making and the people who participate in it. The manufacturer may want more than that, but he is making a great mistake if he endeavors to coerce his press agent, much against his will, to put it out as news matter.

Such material as "'The Splash in the Water' is the greatest film ever produced," or "Miss Olive Branch is the most beautiful and talented actress on the screen," is not good publicity, even if it could get over, and it cannot except as paid advertising, and then its effect is bad. It is more forceful to say "Our Mutual Girl, the successful serial," than "Our Mutual Girl, the phenomenally successful serial."

One thing which the embryonic publicity man should remember is that the story which is just what one publication wants is just what another does not want. He must serve corned beef and cabbage to one guest and paté de foi gras to another. The man who toys with the paté will not gobble down a large chunk of hot mince pie to "top it off," but the "beef and" fellow will.

There is just as much artistry in serving up publicity as in delivering a dinner. And a chef, in either line, is a different thing from a cook.

The subject of publicity for the pictures is such a vast one that it can not be discussed in detail in this limited space. Its possibilities are legion and its effect on the industry is bound to be beneficial from every standpoint.

It means better pictures and that means even greater success than this gigantic infant, the motion picture business, has had, and I am told it is now the fourth industry in the United States.

The Advancement in Projection

BY F. H. RICHARDSON

THE exact time and place when the moving picture was first projected to the screen so that the characters appeared approximately life size seem to be lost in the shadows of the past. Undoubtedly projection as applied to the moving picture first came into being in 1896; also undoubtedly the first projection machine was a mechanism known as the "Idoloscope," but unfortunately there is no very authentic description, and no photograph or drawing of that machine in existence today so far as we can discover.

In the beginning films were very much wider than at present and the film picture was, as nearly as I remember, 1¼ by 2½ inches in size. The mechanism, as compared with the present day projector, was a mere toy. The lamp house was a sheet iron affair about 12 inches long by 6 inches wide by 12 or 14 inches in height. It contained a frail little arc lamp which had only three adjustments, viz.: feeding the carbons, moving the lamp up and down and moving it sidewise. The binding post and everything about the lamp was weak and inefficient. The resistance so far as rheostats are concerned was provided by coils of steel or nickel wire, capable of delivering not to exceed twenty or twenty-five amperes.

In those days the operating room frequently consisted of a screen of muslin. The "take-up" was a gunny sack or, lacking that, the film ran out on the floor and piled up in a writhing, squirmy heap. In the beginning the resistance was more often than not a "water rheostat." The picture on the screen did all kind of acrobatic stunts up, down and sidewise. But notwithstanding that fact it was a very wonderful thing to the people, who willingly paid twenty-five cents to a dollar to view a hundred feet of film run through four or five times.

So far as projection machinery is concerned there are certain men who, more than any other individuals, have to do with the history of its invention and improvement. At the head of the list will, of course, be placed the name of Thomas A. Edison, since it was he who first invented a practical projector, but the one man who, since that time, is entitled to greatest credit for the improvement in projection machinery is Mr. Nicholas Power. Mr. Edison, after perfecting the projector and bringing it up to a certain standard of excellence, for some reason or other seems to have very largely lost interest in the matter, though improvements are still from time to time being made in the Edison machine.

Mr. A. C. Roebuck, of Chicago, is another whose name is closely connected with improvement in projection machinery, since it was he who planned and built the Motiograph. Mr. Roebuck was originally a watchmaker and he brought to projection machinery the extreme accuracy of mechanical construction which had become to him a second habit through his training as a watch-maker. Mr. Roebuck did a very wonderful thing, in that he drew the first plans of the motiograph complete—that is to say, made his working drawings — constructed the machine, placed it on the market and it was more than a year before he made a single change in the mechanism.

The fourth whose name will go down in history as closely allied to the improvement of projection machinery is that of Mr. Frank Cannock. Mr. Cannock came into prominence through planning, building and perfecting the "Edengraph."

After the Edengraph suspended and Mr. Cannock invented the Simplex machine, made by the Precision Machine Company, with which he is now connected.

There are, of course, other names connected with improvements in projection machinery, but, I think, none can rank above the four named. Therefore we remove our headgear and bow to the names of Thomas A. Edison, Nicholas Power, Frank Cannock and A. C. Roebuck as the four men who have improved the intermittent type of projector until it is now a really wonderful piece of mechanism, particularly when one considers the fact that it is sold for so comparatively low a sum.

The next step in advance will be, in the judgment of the writer, the $500 projector, and it is to be hoped that its arrival will not be long delayed, because the moving picture industry has reached the stage where a projection machine as nearly mechanically and optically perfect as it is possible to make it is an imperative necessity. We now have high-class moving picture theatres where the investment is very large; in many cases actually equalling the high-class legitimate houses in magnitude of investment, and upon the results shown on the screens of these theatres depend the income on all this outlay. Therefore, I repeat, neither money or pains should be spared to get the best projector which can possibly be constructed.

Perhaps one of the most important improvements, from all points of view, lies in the shutter of the mechanism. In the beginning it was a two-bladed affair which produced a pretty heavy flicker. The next to arrive was the three-bladed shutter which, while it was an improvement, was not, by any manner of means perfect, by reason of the fact that it was badly proportioned. The problem of the shutter was an exceedingly difficult one. It is still a difficult one. The ideal shutter is a three-winger, having blades of equal width, and light openings of equal width with each other and with the blades, but this is an exceedingly hard condition to attain, for reasons that are not necessary to go into in detail here. But it is being attained. I think I violate no confidence by saying that there will, before many months, be a $500 projection machine on the market which will have the ideal shutter, and many other important improvements besides. More than this I cannot say at this time.

Other things which have brought about great improvement in projection results is the improvement in projection arc lamps, the use of improved screens and higher amperage. Modern arc lamps have adjustments which enable the operator to absolutely control his arc in any way he may desire. He can force the crater to form just where he wants it to form. Modern projection lamps are built heavy, and have terminals which largely obviate the annoyance and trouble the operator of earlier days experienced with his lamp leads; also the modern lamp house is commodious and well ventilated. The only thing about the projection machine which has remained practically at a standstill through all these years is the optical system, but, through the medium of the Projection Department of this paper, we are now trying to stir things up, and secure improvement in this part of the machine also.

There are, of course, limits to the possibilities for improvement in the intermittent type of projector. Numerous attempts have been made to evolve or invent a commercially practical projector in which the film shall run continuously, but up to the present time these attempts have not succeeded. I have faith to believe, however, that a way to do this will be found, and when it is found I think we will then be able to say that the moving picture as such has at last permanently "arrived," because we shall or should have an absolutely steady picture without any flicker whatever. There is a tremendously large field though for the inventor in this direction, but it is perhaps as hard a single proposition as any inventor could tackle. There are few things in this world, however, which are impossible, and I for one do not believe that the continuous running film projector comes under that head.

While it may sound like blowing our own horn, the writer does not feel that it would be just, fair or right to close an article of this kind without making mention of the work accomplished by the Moving Picture World in improving projection.

Prior to 1910 projection had received but very, very scant attention; in fact, practically none at all. The operator was something of a joke to the rest of the profession. Anyone who could patch a film and turn a crank was an "operator," in the estimation of himself and the theatre manager. Early in 1910, however, the Projection Department, then called the "Operators' Column," was started by The Moving Picture World, and since that time it has, beyond any question of doubt, done an immense work in the educating of the operator in the technical side of his profession, as well as educating the theatre manager to appreciate the possibilities for improvement, and the value of superior projection. The Moving Picture World also, during this time, published a book of instruction called the Moving Picture Handbook, of which the writer has the honor to be author and which is now in the second edition.

This book has enjoyed a very wide circulation, and I think it can fairly be said that its influence for good has been felt, literally, in thousands of theatres; so that taking it as a whole, very much of the enormous improvement in projection during the past four years may be credited directly to this paper, although, of course, there would have been improvement even had there been no Projection Department and no "handbook." But certainly the gain would not have been anywhere near as rapid, nor would projection have reached the comparatively high plane it now occupies.

As to what the future may bring forth no man can, of course, predict with certainty. But I think it might be fairly said that two years hence we may expect that, so far as the optical and mechanical end of things is concerned, the limit will be very nearly reached until some genius shall evolve a commercially successful projection machine having no intermittent movement. But it will still be several years before the operator himself will reach the height of his ability. The human element enters into projection very largely, as it does into about everything in this old world of ours and, unfortunately, operators' salaries have in the past been too low to attract to the business the best talent, except in isolated cases. This is particularly true in the large cities.

Of course, there are many really high-class men operating moving picture machines, but there are, on the other hand, a great mass of operators of the type of men that you get when you pay $15.00 to $20.00 a week. You cannot, as I have often pointed out, expect very much for that small sum, especially in the larger cities. Gradually, however, theatre managers are beginning to understand that proposition, and salaries are slowly rising. We have hopes that the time is not far distant when the manager will be willing to pay sufficient salary to obtain the best possible talent in his operating room, and that the operators themselves will, more and more, realize the necessity for improving their knowledge, so that they may be worth the higher wage, remembering always that high salaries are paid, not for the work of the hands, but for the work of the brain.

F. H. Richardson

C. LANG COBB, JR.

PERSISTENCE and tenacity of purpose usually get folks somewhere. There is an old saying, put into circulation by a very successful advertising agent to the effect that "keeping everlastingly at it brings success." It is possible that C. Lang Cobb, Jr., may have heard of that phrase and immediately pasted it on the inside of his hat, for he is a person of persistence.

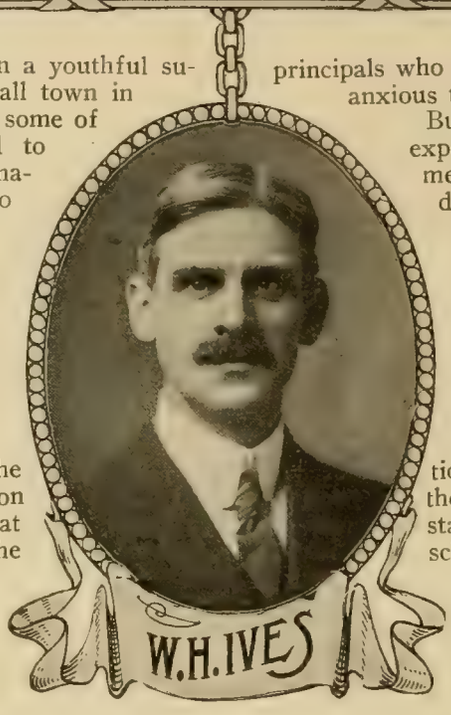
C. Lang Cobb, Jr., at His Work Bench.

Friend Cobb has been associated with various motion picture interests since "away back," claiming connection with the early efforts of the Edison Company and proving it. To-day he is known as the very successful advertising and sales manager of the Ramo Company, the product of which he has proclaimed with great persistence over the length and breadth of this fair land.

Motion Pictures as Educational Force

BY WILLIAM HOSMER IVES, of The School Journal

IT WAS not many years ago when a youthful superintendent of schools in a small town in the Middle West discovered that some of the pupils in his high school seemed to possess an unusual amount of information about foreign countries; they also seemed to have a remarkably clear idea of some of the great classics of English literature, and appeared to be unusually well posted on a number of great events of world-wide importance and significance. He realized that this knowledge could not have been acquired from the text books in use, nor in all probability from the teachers in charge of the classes nor from parents at home. Upon inquiry and investigation he learned that the small motion picture theatre on the main street, not far from the high school, was responsible for a considerable amount of unsystematic, but nevertheless very effective instruction.



Being a young man, and not too much hampered by educational traditions, he decided to investigate further. He went frequently to the little local theatre and was amazed at what he saw and learned. Out of the mass of cheap melodramas and alleged comedies, every now and then there emerged a film which was really instructive, and the young superintendent who had given practically no thought to the possibilities of visual instruction began to see a new and broad field of educational activity opening before him. Within a few months he purchased a motion picture projector, had it installed in the high school assembly room, and gave a large amount of time and thought to the selection and procuring of the films which in his judgment met in the best way the requirements which he had in mind.

The experiment was successful beyond his expectations. The occasional "motion picture hours," with brief lectures accompanying the films, were more than popular with the students and many a parent found time to attend. The work developed along various lines of popularity and utility. It speedily became one of the marked features of the school system. The social centre idea was stimulated and helped. Incidentally it may be mentioned that the patronage of the local theatre, instead of showing a loss, increased appreciably. The residents of the little town had gained a new respect for the motion picture. It was no longer a mere form of cheap amusement. It had acquired educational standing.

The young superintendent did not remain long in the small town where his original experiments in the educational use of motion pictures were made. He was soon called to be the administrative head of the school system of one of our important cities, and he is today one of the leading advocates of motion picture work in connection with the public schools. The work done under his direction serves as a model for many superintendents and principals who appreciate its value and who are anxious to share its advantages.

But the particular superintendent whose experiments we have mentioned was by no means the only one whose attention was directed to the motion picture as an educational force even in the earlier days, when films were not what they are today and when the motion picture industry was in its infancy. Many educators who had for years been using the steropticon to advantage, and who had collected numerous slides having a special bearing on their work, began to look to the motion picture as the next step. Here and there a motion picture projector was installed in a university lecture room or a school assembly room, and the quest for the desired films started. Film producers began to receive suggestions as to the character of the films needed; suggestions which were as a rule promptly ignored, since the manufacturer was busy with his melodramas and comedies out of which he was securing quick returns in cash. He had little time or enthusiasm for a market which was largely theoretical.

In spite of everything, however, the new movement gained ground. It seemed to possess inherent vitality, and neither the scornful indifference of the film producer nor the well nigh hopeless flounderings of the educator were able to check it. Schools continued to install projectors and to use such films as they could obtain which were suitable for their purposes. The educational possibilities of the motion picture became a frequent theme at educational meetings. The motion picture press began to exploit the school field as a possible market for projectors and films; the new idea began to assume more definite shape and to be taken a trifle more seriously.

Is it not fair to inquire why the educational use of the motion picture has not progressed faster, and why more of the generally admitted possibilities have not as yet been realized? With school authorities really clamoring for suitable films—and willing to pay for them, and with film producers anxious to extend their market, what are the difficulties which stand in the way, and which prevent a mutually profitable and satisfactory relation? The first difficulty seems to be the failure on the part of the producer to realize the value and extent of the educational market or to reckon with it in any serious way. The film companies are in substantially the same position as the old-fashioned book publisher, who, in the days of our fathers, was accustomed to bring out his regular line of publications to be sold to the trade, and who incidentally turned out as a by-product an occasional text book, usually a crude affair with very little excuse for existence, but intended by the publisher to be a test of educational possibilities, and a tie that might bind his concern to a market which he did not in the least understand, and which he was unwilling to study or develop seriously. It was not until publishers established educational departments conducted by specialists, and until a number of strong organizations devoted themselves exclusively to the publication of text-books that the text-book business in the United States reached important proportions and displayed the stability and vigor which have characterized it during recent years.

In view of the fact that approximately one-fifth of our population is in school and that the school budget of nearly every city and town constitutes one of the largest items of expenditure, would it not be worth while for film producers to study this field, to estimate its possibilities, and to furnish from month to month a certain amount of material suited to the requirements of this almost unlimited market?

This query brings us to the second and greatest difficulty in the present situation, namely, the lack of films suitable for educational use. It is, of course, easy enough for the manufacturer to go through his catalogue and to select his best scenic films and label them "Geography." He can also pick out a few industrials and a number of history stories, worked out with more or less historical accuracy—usually less. Add to these the usual line of botanical "stunts," and flavor with a quantity of zoological pictures and possibly a few microscopic films and we have the customary "Educational List." In one sense everything may be called educational. All information has its value, but the fact remains that nearly all the films now classified as educational were made for regular release and without reference to pedagogy or courses of study.

Probably the first step toward the removal of this greatest difficulty will be the admission on the part of the film makers that we have developed in this country a system of education. This system may be wrong or right. It may be admirable or unfortunate, but it exists just the same, and commercial success must depend upon recognizing it and dealing with its requirements. No educator in any prominent position is a free lance. No large school system can live unto itself alone. Uniform college entrance requirements impose certain subjects and standards on the high schools. The high schools in turn make and enforce their demands on the grades. State courses of study and city courses add to the number of things which must be taught. The average superintendent and the average principal are so hedged about by courses and requirements that they are fortunate if they are able to get the absolutely necessary things done. Naturally they are in no haste to undertake plans and work outside of the regular courses unless their belief in the new idea is very strong and their enthusiasm is great.

Many of the educators who have already adopted the motion picture and who are making constant use of it, are doing this with full cognizance of the fact that the films which they are able to secure have little direct bearing on the regular work, but that they make an excellent basis for social centre work and furnish informational amusement of a desirable sort. This use, however, of the motion picture is not what we have in mind and is only "near educational." The motion picture will not take its proper place as a force in education until it is a part of the regular daily routine of school and college work. If something which is ordinarily taught with difficulty and which is frequently obscure in the mind of the average student can be made perfectly clear by the use of the projector, or if some subject which now requires three weeks in the usual course of study can be covered in half the time, and with better results, by the aid of the motion picture, no superintendent can long justify himself before his board for not utilizing to the fullest extent so efficient and wonderful a medium of instruction.

In other words, our present system of education from the primary grades to the university is based upon courses of study which are, for the most part, worked out in the form of books. The average educator is therefore a book-minded man. If a radically new medium is to be used, and if the problems of education are to be restated in the terms of this new medium, the work must be taken up carefully and with full recognition of the present courses and methods. We must build on the foundation which we already have.

Another important obstacle to the wider and more general use of the motion picture in school work is the present method of film distribution. Assuming the existence of a large number of films which the schools can and will use, it must be remembered that the requirements of such use as they apply to the schools differ very widely from the requirements of the motion-picture theatre. A system of distribution devised and maintained for amusement purposes in the theatres has little to commend it to schools, and it is unreasonable to expect the school authorities to approve it, or to adapt themselves to it in any general way. Manufacturers of all sorts of articles used in connection with school equipment discovered years ago that, if they wished to enjoy the profits and advantages of any considerable portion of the school market, they must formulate special distribution plans, specially adapted to school conditions. As a general principle it is seldom possible to serve two widely differing classes of trade by exactly the same rules and methods. If schools are to use large numbers of films as a part of their regular work, they must be able to contract for them at certain definite times during the year. They must also be able to obtain them with convenience, and to depend absolutely on the service. The theatre programme is fairly flexible, but the school courses are not. A geography film showing scenes and industries in Japan would have small value for a class studying Germany, even if the film was the equal in length and quality of the one ordered.

The statement is frequently made that if the schools expect film makers to go ahead and bring out large quantities of educational material they should in turn make prompt and generous use of the films now available, using them in connection with the social centre and school entertainment work, if they cannot be made to aid and supplement the regular courses. In all probability the present system of distribution is one of the principal reasons why this suggestion has not been acted upon more generally.

Looking at the entire situation as it stands to-day and recalling the prophecies and prospects of two or three years ago the conclusion is inevitable that the motion picture as an educational force has not made the progress which everybody had a right to expect it would. Evidently something is wrong somewhere or we should have to-day a much wider acceptance of the new idea than we are able to recognize. To be sure progress has been made, but if the educational film market is ever to approximate in size and extent the amusement market, which it certainly ought to do, it must advance much more rapidly in order to help the present generation of film producers very much.

That it will grow with astonishing swiftness some day no one familiar with the facts can doubt. In the opinion of the writer that day will be near at hand when the most important difficulties to which attention has been called are remedied. Let a few film makers begin to produce some films of the right sort, which really fit into the courses, and a difference will be noted immediately. Naturally no one concern will attempt to cover too much ground in any one year. Every producer understands thoroughly the character of work which his organization is best fitted to bring out. He should release only the class of films in the making of which his staff has achieved undisputed success. A little specializing and a little co-operation among the various studios would gradually and by perfectly natural methods assign certain branches of the curriculum to certain concerns, those most competent to deal with them capably and enthusiastically. The yearly investment on the part of any one firm would not be heavy enough to cause anxiety, while a fair degree of definiteness would soon take the place of the present confusion and duplication. Educators would be quick to recognize the changed conditions and would feel that the new method of instruction had passed the preliminary stages and had reached the point where it could be introduced without fear of unfortunate complications or failure.

With the increasing supply of genuinely educational films, made with due reference to modern pedagogical principles, the problem of distribution would unquestionably receive the necessary attention, and some satisfactory solution would be reached so that films could be purchased or rented with public funds without too much variation from the routine and system already in operation for the purchase by States, municipalities and counties of school supplies and equipment.

It would be a pleasure to refer by way of suggestion to some of the plans undertaken recently by State departments and by city boards, but these are matters which should be taken up in full detail, and it would be impossible to do them justice by mere reference.

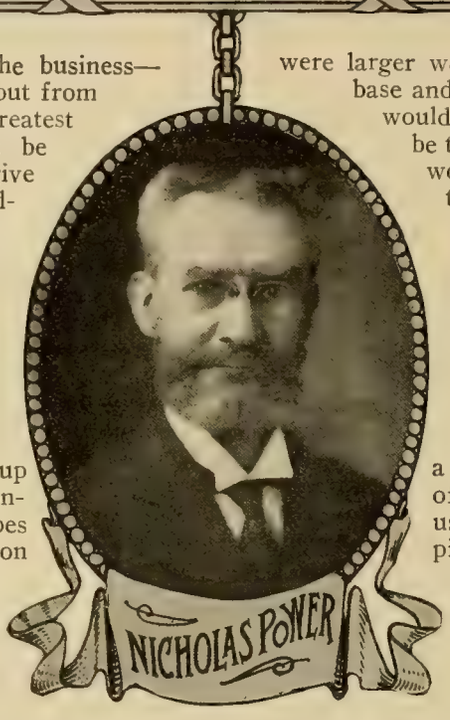
Methods in education change rather slowly, but none the less surely. Looking back over the changes of the last decade or so, it is easy to see that visual instruction has entered the educational field to stay. As the most important component part of what may be included in the general term "visual instruction," and the motion picture is destined to be an increasing force educationally. The question is not whether its use in schools will be permanent, but is rather as to the rapidity of its growth and development. The market exists already, but it is entirely dependent upon the producers who can supply the necessary material. The sooner this material can be supplied, the more prompt and satisfactory will be the returns.

Nicholas Power Urges Standardization

BY GEORGE BLAISDELL

LET the slogan be the uplift of the business—not alone from the artistic side, but from the mechanical side also. The greatest heights of screen artistry will not be reached until the film manufacturers give heed to the many possibilities of standardizing their mechanical equipment.

So said Nicholas Power, the president of the Nicholas Power Company, in his office the other day. Mr. Power had been talking of the early days of the motion picture and of days even earlier than that. He had traced his own interest in the whole subject, which began in 1881-82, when he invented an automatic magic lantern, up to the present time. Mr. Power's concern in the motion picture industry does not end with the making of a projection machine and selling it. He has been a part of it for too long a while—too many years of his life have been given over to it—not to be interested in the artistic side as well as the commercial. For, as Mr. Power says, the efforts of writer, producer, player, scene painter, cameraman, and lastly, the operator—the ultimate authority who cannot make but who has unbounded possibilities for marring—are as effective, and only as effective, as the weakest link in the mechanical chain that binds together the work of all.



Today there are three factors militating against the artistic presentation of the motion picture, three grave faults which, Mr. Power points out, are curable by a simple remedy—standardization. These faults are, first, the perforation of film; second, the differences in the various makes of cameras, and, third, the absence of a uniform point in the camera at which the picture is started. Mr. Power's views on this question were unexpectedly brought out in the course of the conversation. He had been speaking about the great advances that were sure to come in the future, and he was not afraid to say that the surface has been very little scratched.

"In the beginning, you know, pictures were shown much outside of theaters," Mr. Power said. "We are getting back to that point. Today the United States Government is equipping its warships and army posts with projection machines. So, too, installations are being made in churches, schools, colleges and clubs, and also in insane asylums and prisons. They are being placed everywhere. Every one concedes that the manufacturers of films are entitled to great commendation for the improvement they have made in their pictures. Why don't they go a step further and standardize their cameras and their perforation. At present there is no basis. In the perforators, for instance, one will make a large hole and another a small one. The maker of a projection machine must design a sprocket that will take all sizes, which means that he must build a delicate sprocket for the smaller perforations. Any one may see that if the holes were larger we could make a sprocket with a wider base and of far greater strength. Its durability would be only a minor quality; so, too, would be the longevity of the film; the main thing would be the smoothness of projection, the nearer approach to the perfect picture."

Mr. Power was asked what led him to take up his investigations in projecting machines. "You'll have to go back to 1881 or thereabout," he said. "About that time I invented an automatic magic lantern which was composed of a revolving disk and was operated intermittently by means of a clock movement. The striking portion of the mechanism of this movement was used to move the disk from picture to picture. There were twelve pictures mounted on this disk. This, of course, was a mere toy; no condensers were employed. We did not have electric lamps in those days as at present, and kerosene lamps were used to give light. This was really my start in the projection business. Between 1882 and 1883 I invented what I termed an automatic reflectorscope. This was an elaboration of the advertising machine I have just described.

"In 1883 I invented an automatic advertising machine which had a cylinder full of cards. By revolving this cylinder one card could be read on the top and one on its reverse side at the bottom. This machine, which was placed in show windows, was employed to advertise the wares in the store. On the top of the mechanism were miniature mechanical figures, plainly visible to passers-by. Of course, these were operated by the contrivance, but actually seemed to be turning it. For example, in the window of a shoe store would be the figure of a man sewing; there would be another figure of a man pegging away with a hammer. In the center of the machine would be a column which represented boots and shoes. These would revolve on the rack.

"It was about the same time that I built several large advertising machines equipped with a display of curtains built according to the quantity of money the purchaser agreed to spend. One of these machines ordinarily carried 100 curtains, which were 3 feet wide by 6 or 8 feet in length.

"Naturally great crowds would collect in front of windows containing this display, to the annoyance of the police. I remember one day in Park Row such a crowd collected that the old horse cars could not get through. Then the building department shut me down.

"I have noted a great many humorous and peculiar incidents in my time, particularly with reference to the development and exploitation of my projecting machines, but there is one in particular which is worthy of mention. A number of years ago a certain concern tried out several makes of machines. They could not get the results they desired, so they devised a special shutter of their own on one of my projectors. This was of 180 degrees, which revolved twice over the aperture for each movement of the film, and naturally a great deal of light was lost. After having seen their device I explained to them that I had one which I considered far superior to theirs, and which required less current to operate. They were from Missouri and wanted to be shown—and I want to say that it is a funny thing how a man's sight will deceive him. I produced my mechanism and placed it on a stand for a comparative test with their machine. This stand contained the two machines in a given place, but while they were not looking I reversed the positions of the machines, leaving them under the impression their machine actually occupied the place in which they originally put it. I then requested that they stand at some distance and watch the demonstration. I ran the film through my machine first and then through theirs. They then requested me to run it again through my machine, which, of course, they thought their own, and decided this was the best. I then called them up close and convinced them of the superiority of my machine, much to their surprise. This was about 1904.

"What was the name of my first machine? The Peerlessscope. Then came in regular order the Cameragraph No. 1 up to No. 6, and then the 6A, which has now been in use about two and a half years. Of course, we are working on improvements all the time. In the early days I only made machines to order and remodeled others. It was in 1902, I think, we put machines regularly on the market. The Peerlessscope, which was invented about 1898, was a made-to-order machine. We used to get columns from the daily papers about our shows. I notice we are now getting back to that point on big subjects. In the earlier days it cost considerable money to show pictures. You may remember how the exposed machines were placed in the balconies of theaters and how the operators, always the center of all eyes, often wore dress suits. The operator then was one of the audience, and, of course, he had to dress well. Audiences often referred to the operator as 'the professor.' He could not work in his undershirt or even without any, as operators in some booths have been known to do in more recent times."

We asked Mr. Power about the beginnings of supervision over picture projection by local authorities.

"In regard to booths, for instance," answered Mr. Power, "regulations were continually changing. One man would have an idea to-day, and if it looked good it would be approved. The next day it might be condemned. There was the same uncertainty in regard to laws governing theaters. There were men who through anxiety to make money too fast used in the operating room inexperienced men, and even sometimes men not overburdened with intelligence. Fires would be caused through negligence and stage fright. Sometimes calamities would result. The Bureau of Electricity naturally assumed charge of the projection of pictures, as electric lights were used. Other departments did not want to burden themselves with any more responsibility than they already were carrying.

"Formerly the projectors had no fireshutter. The machine had only two spindles, one fly wheel with a cam attached and the other was the geneva movement. There was no other mechanical device aside from the mechanism to drive these. Then the film as it passed from in front of the light rolled about the floor. Sometimes it would stray over the balcony among the audience. Then I adopted the plan of suspending a bag under the projector to catch the dropping film. When necessary we would shake the bag to settle the film and make more room. Realizing the danger of running films this way I constructed a take-up device, which I placed underneath the table. About that time I conceived the idea it would be more safe to conceal the films. Accordingly I built a metal case, into which the film was wound, and which is now known as the film magazine. To accomplish this I invented the inlet and outlet valves, and there was no more bother with the bag. Likewise it eliminated the greatest percentage of fire hazards.

"How many projectors have I seen come and also go? Well, in my business career I have known of twenty-three machines that were placed on the American market which were subsequently withdrawn as failures and unsuccessful. Yes, my friends used to try to discourage me from continuing in this business. You may call it foresight, but I always believed in the future of the picture business. When I was employing twenty-two men in Nassau street I was told I was making a sad mistake to start a factory. To-day we occupy five floors in this building, with a total of about 35,000 feet; there are two floors in the Jacob street plant, using about 8,000 feet, and then there is the japanning and tin plant. In these places hundreds of men are employed."

"How about placing the projection booth in theaters? Do you think builders give sufficient attention to this subject?" we asked.

"Indeed, many do not. A man will spend a fortune to put up an elaborate show house—he will spare no expense. The last thing he will consider, and it is the most important of all, is the projection booth. That has been overlooked. Sometimes it is placed too far on one side or the other, and yet good results are expected. It must be placed in the center, squarely in front of the screen, and also as nearly leved with it as possible. I can frankly say that is one of the biggest mistakes that a large percentage of men make. If you wish to look into a mirror you do not place the glass at an angle.

"The picture machine should be given the greatest attention in all directions. The picture is what the people pay their money to see. Sometimes men inexperienced in the business will be under the impression that because they have a nice house they will have no difficulty in building up a clientele. When they find they cannot get their picture in focus they will complain to the machine manufacturer. When the trouble is explained very likely they will ask why they were not told in the beginning. Of course, we had no chance to tell them. Manufacturers will give intending builders every help they can in planning their projection rooms. We all have men for that purpose.

"But, summing up, let the slogan be the uplift of the business, not alone from the artistic side, but from the mechanical side also. The greatest heights of screen artistry will not be reached until the film manufacturers give heed to the many possibilities of standardizing their mechanical equipment."

Samuel Goldfish

SAMUEL GOLDFISH, executive head of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, now touring Europe after arranging for the distribution of the products of The Paramounts Picture Corporation, is, perhaps, the least known of the big men in the motion picture industry—simply because of his peculiar desire to remain in the background and "boost" others.

Samuel Goldfish.

Youthful in appearance, slight in build, charming in manner and conservative in his selection of speech, Mr. Goldfish is the possessor of a curiously complex personality. He impresses one as being a keen and capable business man, an artist, a thinker and, above all, he possesses that rare combination, strong determination and vivid imagination.

Before entering the field of motography, Mr. Goldfish occupied a lucrative position in the commercial world. Imbued with the idea that motion pictures was the amusement field of the future, he made a careful study of the industry for eighteen months, then, at the head of the Lasky concern, entered the field. His success as the "man behind the action" is too well known to require details here.

Dignity and uprightness are two of Goldfish's qualities, and the efforts of the Lasky concern in the past and their future announcements are all in keeping with their very first public declaration.

Considered one of the severest of business men, a stickler for cleanliness in commercial dealings, Mr. Goldfish has earned the respect of everyone who comes in contact with him in the course of business communication. He is what they call "a clean, hard, honest man, without trickery or technicality." He asks none the best of it and takes none the worst of it—an ideal man to deal with.

BUY BIG NAPOLEON FEATURE.

The Box Office Attractions Company have purchased from Al H. Woods the big historical and spectacular feature photoplay, "The Last One Hundred Years of Napoleon," for which Mr. Woods is said to have paid $18,000. The feature is in six reels.

Conditions and Features

BY LEE E. DOUGHERTY

IN complying with your request for an expression of opinion as to the condition of the motion picture business in general and some features of it in particular, I want it clearly understood that I am not inviting any personal discussion. I am far too busy a man to enter the stormy field of argument. I have been in the motion picture business practically from its birth in America and I certainly have opinions regarding its past, present and future. But they are my own opinions for which no one else will in any way be held responsible.

That the photoplay art is now undergoing a sort of transition, is a fact that is well understood by those who are giving it their professional attention. There are many new elements that are entering the field which are giving rise to an unusual amount of discussion. The remarkably rapid growth of the feature film is one of the chief causes of this agitation. But of this I will speak later.

The wonderful development of the motion picture art is one of the marvels of the age. It was born but a few years ago and I am very proud to say that I have been identified with it from its very inception in this country.

My attention was first called to the motion film in the summer of 1896. I was engaged at that time in staging plays at the old Boston Museum. If you visited Boston during that summer you will remember that Tremont Street was torn up about as badly as Broadway was here during the construction of the first subway. In any event it presented a hideous and almost impassable barrier in front of our theater, and as a consequence our audiences preferred to remain inside during the intermissions.

Then we began casting about for a means of entertaining our people between the acts. Our attention was called to the Eidoloscope, the first projection machine of American manufacture. It had passed successfully through its experimental stage and was then being shown in a store at the corner of Twenty-sixth Street and Broadway, where the St. James Building now stands.

Well, the upshot of it was that we got hold of it and installed it at the Museum. I might state here that the Boston Museum was the first place to offer regular booking to the Eidoloscope. As the stage director it became my duty to announce to the audience the new feature that had been provided for the entertainment of our guests. I said a lot of things I wouldn't say now, but the speech went over big and you might say that the Eidoloscope was installed, or launched, amid a flourish of oratory.

That was, perhaps, as it should be, since it couldn't talk for itself.

Of course, the results were crude. But they were such a vast improvement over the old-fashioned stereopticon or "magic lantern" as we used to call it, that I became very much enthused over its possibilities. And, needless to say, the audience sat in open-mouthed wonder and marveled as to how it was done. I shall never forget the amazement on the faces of that first audience. And the various speculations as to how the thing was accomplished afforded me many a hearty laugh. You can perhaps imagine the fruit for laughter that came from those prying Yankee minds. One speculative genius solved the problem by discovering that it was done by "shakin' the durn magic lantern and makin' it 'pear as if the picture wuz movin', by heck."

As I said before, I became very much interested.

I don't claim to be a prophet and I am quite sure I am not the son of one, but I did foresee a great future for this new art.

When I returned to New York another machine was being demonstrated which was far superior in every way to the Eidoloscope. That settled me. My desire to learn more of this new art and to identify myself with it, if possible, became irrepressible. You can therefore imagine my feelings when I was offered the position of stage director for the concern that owned this new machine, the Biograph.

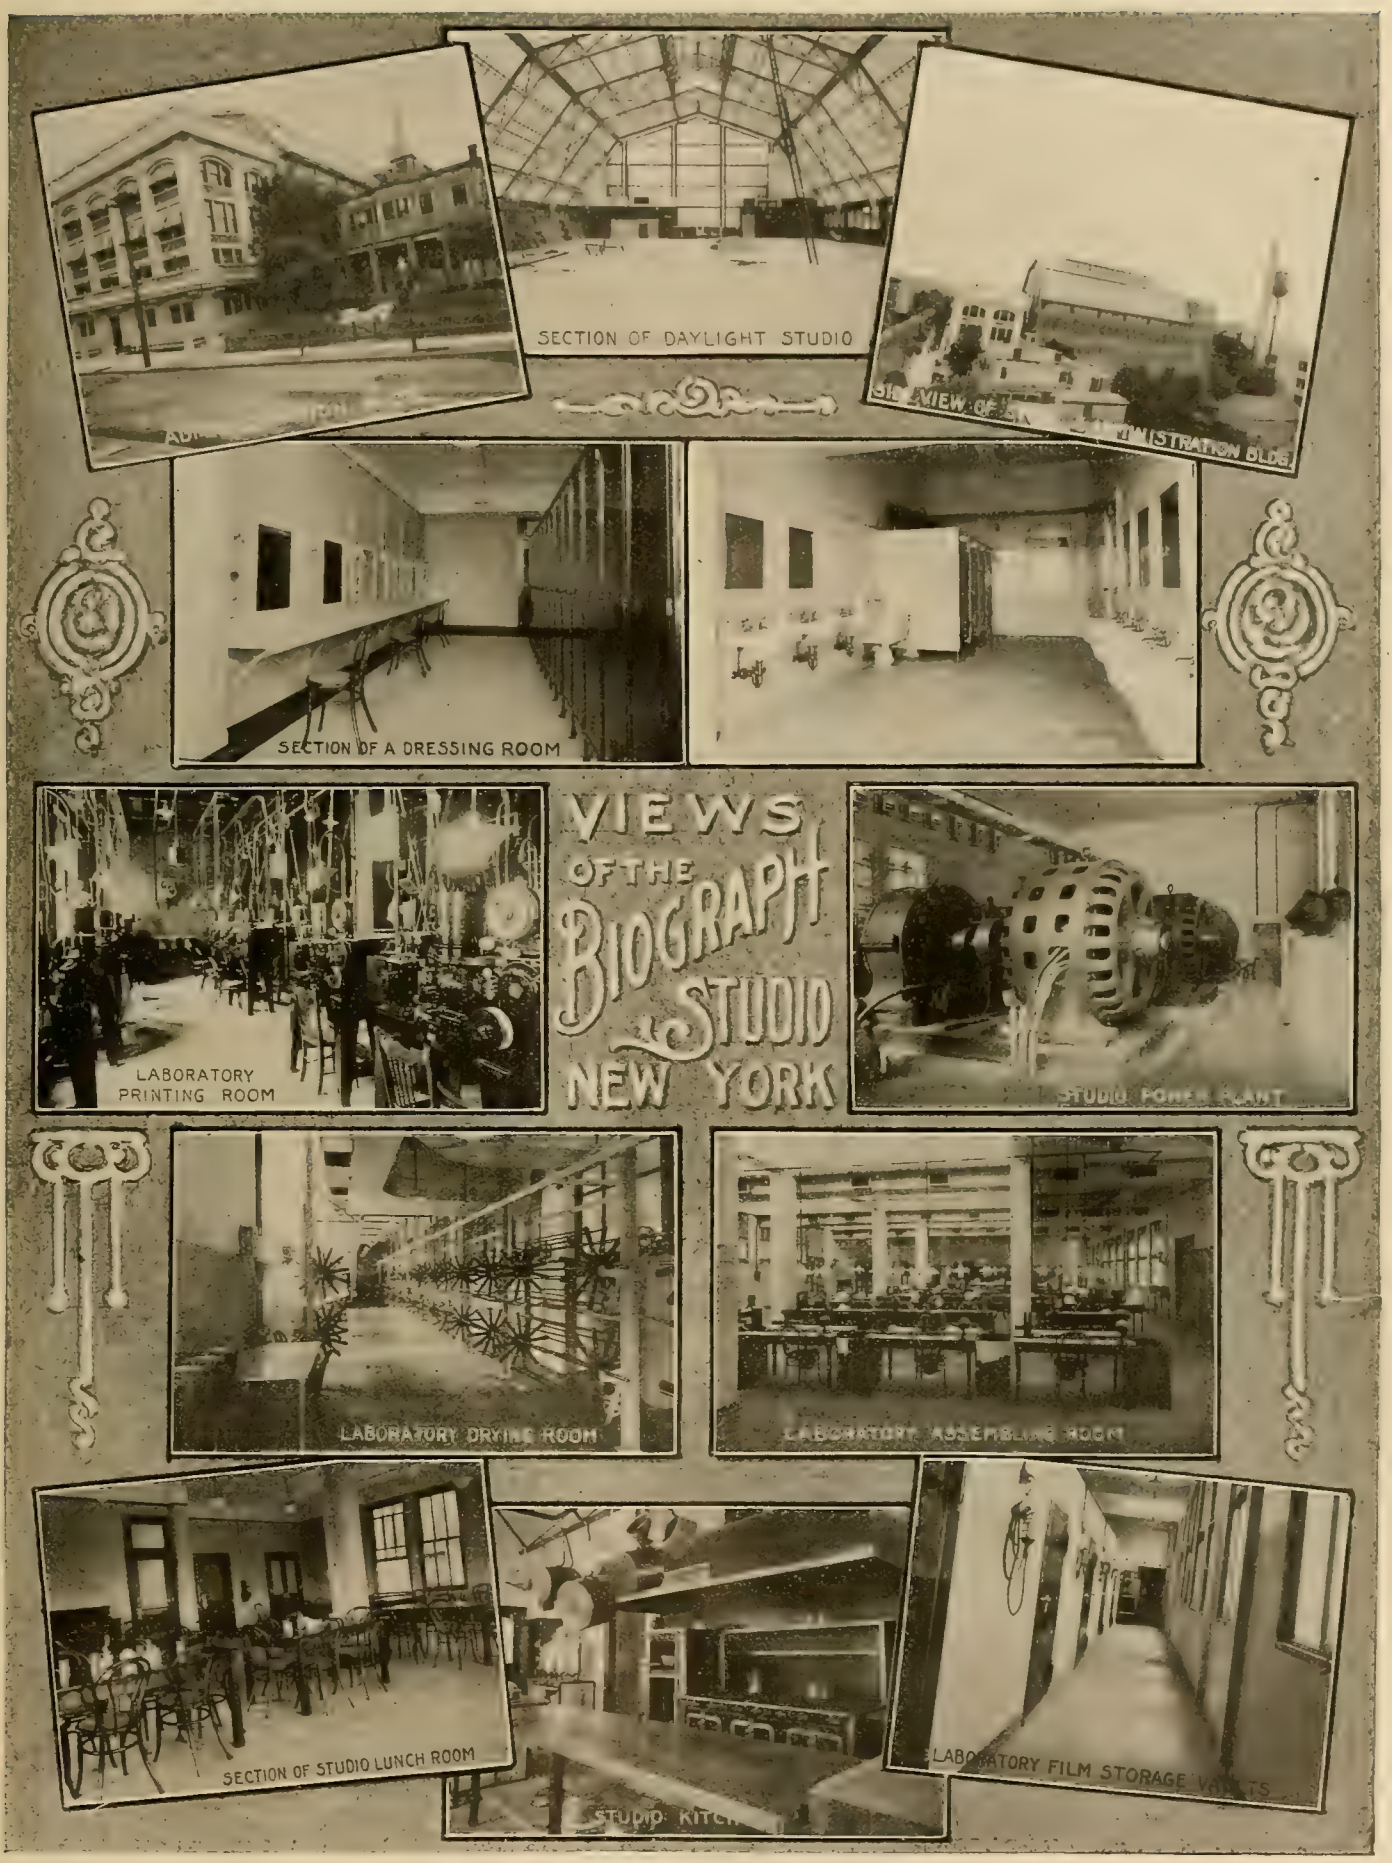
At that time the picture consisted of short comedies of about one minute in duration. Our stage was on the roof of a building at the corner of 13th Street and Broadway. It was built on a circular track so that it could be moved around to face the sun at all times. For in those days, it was a case of no sun no pictures. And moreover, we were not only dependent on the sun, but we were absolutely at the mercy of the elements. I think on several occasions the wind came along while we were in the midst of a scene, picked up our scenery and props and deposited them in Broadway. In the nature of things the weather was our greatest drawback. To get free of this difficulty many experiments were being made with electric lights, but it was not until the Jeffries-Sharkey prizefight that satisfactory results were obtained. The fight was taken under cover and to get these pictures the Biograph Company installed a bank of 400 arc lamps and its own dynamo. There were four motor-driven cameras trained on the ring, and just before one was loaded another would start up and thus the 25 rounds were photographed without a single break in the action. The results, naturally, were very encouraging.

This experiment, for it was really such, opened the way to our present light-equipped studios, where, in some cases, the results obtained are as good, if not better, than in the open. I might state here, for the sake of record, that the Biograph was the first motion picture concern to maintain an electric lighted studio. And you may readily understand that with lighting facilities to release us from the tyranny of the weather and the sun, we could devote more time and energy and thought to the perfecting of film productions in all its phases.

At that time the motion film, as an invention, had ceased to be a nine days' wonder and the general belief seemed to be that it would never rise above the side show or mountebank plane. But I had the conviction, even at that time, and I think I expressed it, that the motion picture drama would rise to as high a plane of dignity as that occupied by the first-class productions of the legitimate stage. However, I did not think then, and don't now, that the moving picture would ever take the place of the regular legitimate drama, any more than the vaudeville stage would supplant it. I believe that the film drama will occupy a place by itself in the world of art and amusement. I might say it is one leaf of the trinity of the theatrical art, the other two being the legitimate drama and vaudeville.

Aside from its ability to show phases of life impossible to the stage, it affords the spectator a varied program of entertainment.

And that thought brings us face to face with the proposition of the feature film. And before going any further I will state to you frankly that I cannot see any future for the feature production. I mean those that are intended to give an entire evening's entertainment. I think they are manifestly an effort to supplant the legitimate drama and they will never be able to sustain the fight. Remember, I am speaking of the extended films that constitute a whole



SECTION OF DAYLIGHT STUDIO
SECTION OF A DRESSING ROOM
VIEWS OF THE BIOGRAPH STUDIO NEW YORK
LABORATORY PRINTING ROOM
LABORATORY DRYING ROOM
SECTION OF STUDIO LUNCH ROOM

program in themselves. As to the three-reel subjects, I think there will always be a demand for them because the exhibitor will, at times, want a special subject to headline his program. These three reelers, or possibly an occasional four reeler, will afford him an opportunity to do some special advertising. No enterprise, especially an amusement venture, can be carried on successfully without an occasional blast of the trumpet and his three-reel picture will give the exhibitor a chance to make an extra loud toot.

My greatest objection to the feature film, I mean the program monopolizers, is that it is in opposition to the very motive that brought the moving picture to the front. One must get into the theatre at the first turn of the reel to clearly understand, and therefore to really enjoy the picture. Whereas, with the varied program of single and split reels, occasionally boosted by a two or three-reel production, one is always sure of being entertained, no matter at what time he enters the theatre. I myself have experienced this, and nothing will produce a lovelier grouch than to witness a fragment of a picture film, which means nothing and gets nowhere.

It is experiences of this sort that have turned me against the feature. I have repeatedly passed up the feature house and gone into a place where a varied bill was being offered. The satisfaction I felt at being able to find entertainment at once put me into such a good humor that I gladly waited for the two and three-reel program headliners.

But there is one thing producers have got to look out for, and that is the tendency to become careless in putting on single-reel subjects. There is at present undeniable evidence that many of them are put on simply to fill gaps. This should not be. The single-reel subject has made the art what it is, and upon its excellence rests the future of the film drama. But, as I said before, there is a place, in fact there is a need, for the three-reel subject as a program headliner.

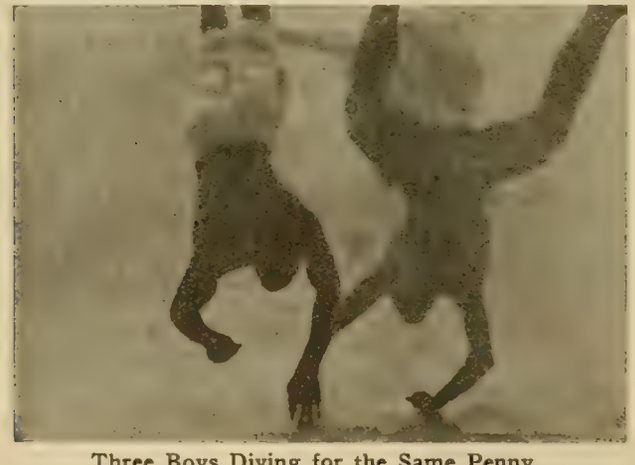
Taking Pictures Under Water.

Submarine Film Corporation's Operations in Waters of Bahama Islands of Compelling Interest.

MOTION pictures made at the bottom of the sea are the very latest things in the film industry. The first release of this kind is to be made coincident with the opening of the Broadway Rose Gardens in the form of a five-reel feature entitled "The Terrors of the Deep."

The submarine "movies" are being made by the Submarine Film Corporation, the strange operations of which are made possible by an invention called the Williamson Submarine Tube, named for Capt. C. Wlliamson, who has spent approximately thirty years in bringing it to its present state of perfection. J. Ernest Williamson is general manager of the company and George M. Williamson treasurer; both these officers are sons of the inventor of the tube.

George M. Williamson, of the company, personally posed for the first six scenes of the big submarine feature forty-five feet under the surface of the ocean, at the bottom of Nassau



Three Boys Diving for the Same Penny.

Harbor, Bahama Islands, May 1 of the current year. He was engaged in trying to pick up "pieces of eight" from an old Civil War blockade runner and the films show him sending aloft cannon balls and salvage from the sunken wreck.

Carl L. Gregory staged the production, safely guarded, in a nine-foot chamber of the Williamson Submarine Tube at the bottom of the "Jules Verne," the floating stage of the Submarine company. Williamson was in a diving suit and was given signals from above on command of Gregory. While at that depth Williamson could have worked from three to five minutes. His work admitted of no rehearsals under the water; he had never had a diving suit on before.

In an interview with John William Kellette, the scenario writer, some time after he had undergone his novel experience as the first man to act before the motion picture camera at the bottom of the ocean, Mr. Williamson had a number of interesting things to say. "The extreme peace which seemed to pervade even the fish was the most impressive thing about the experience," he said. "I was a little nervous lest I should forget the code of signals which had been arranged and upon which my life depended, but, fortunately, no trouble resulted. My brother Ernest worked the air pump, so I knew that I was in careful hands at that point, but I wasn't so sure about the natives that had charge of the haul up rope. And, believe me, forty-five feet down is just as good as 100,000 feet down if anything goes wrong. But nothing went wrong from above. The only disagreeable thing, outside the enormous pressure from the outside, which seemed to make an effort to get my backbone acquainted with my breastbone, was the continual suction sound in my ears. I really felt like I was walking on air. Anything I touched, however slightly, sent me away as if by repulsion or recoil, and I was bobbing about like a cork even if I had fifty additional pounds of lead strapped to my feet. The helmet weighed considerable, and before I got into the water the weight was depressing on my shoulders, but once underneath the pressure seemed to depart and I was as comfortable, so far as weight is concerned, as if I had on my best Sunday clothing.

Sea Garden Thirty Feet Below Surface.

"Because of my father's interest in the Williamson Submarine Tube, which makes these under-the-sea pictures possible, I naturally wanted to be the first man in the world to go down for the experience, first, and to be in a position to know conditions beneath the surface, as it is our intention to do under water stuff for the movies that has never before been approached."

Mr. Williamson said that the expedition which has resulted in the production of the first five-reel feature cost approximately $30,000. Twenty thousand feet of negative were exposed and from this 5,000 feet, embodying the most striking and interesting scenes, have been selected as the first release.

The company intend to use the 3,060 islands and islets of the Bahamas as their working field, taking a camera and scenario bureau to Nassau, and an acceptable cast, and stage dramas of the sea, near the sea, on the sea and under the sea, that never have before been approachable. Eighteen basic claims on the submarine tube alone are controlled by the company.

HAS AN AIRDOME ON THE BOARDWALK.

William Fox has opened a new home for motion pictures on the Boardwalk at Atlantic City. Three thousand people can be comfortably seated in the structure, which is of the airdome type, but can be closed up in times of inclement weather.

A program of general releases supplied by the Greater New York Film Rental Company is being used at the new place which is under the able management of Fred M. McClintic, formerly at the Regent Theater, New York City. Business has been excellent since the opening a couple of weeks ago.

Photoplay Acting is Mental Radiation

BY MARY FULLER

PHOTOPLAY acting has been classed under the heading of pantomime and while that is a just classification, it is not complete. Old-style pantomime meant "putting things over" by physical means; photoplay acting is putting things over in a mental way—the art of mental suggestion.

It is mental and emotional radiation. Many of the big scenes are played without gestures, and it is the thoughts and feelings of the characters, rather than their action, which grip the spectator's attention. That which one "radiates" is caught by the camera and indelibly stamped on the thin film strip. Vibrations from one heart to another—the player and the audience. That is why the emotional film actresses of high rank must be sincere and instinct with feeling during their portrayals. To be technically correct is not enough; it may please the eye, but it does not stir the heart; it may arrest the attention as the motions of a mesmerist before the face, but it is not of that quality of the singing of the nightingale or the sobbing of a woman.

Mental suggestion in film work is a wonderful and unlimited field. For instance, there are moments when a player in a fleeting expression may suggest something more divine than just a person in the heights of joy or the depths of despair. They may interpret several aspects of that universal essence which takes its quirks and twists through nature in a thousand different forms: animal, vegetable, mineral, of the Heavens, the Earth and the Waters. Americans are an imaginative people despite their commercialism, and the fact that the photoplay stirs the imagination is one reason of its popularity.

Mary Fuller.

The mental radiation of a character portrayed also takes outward form in the clothes worn by that character, since the first function of clothes today is not to cover us but to enable us to express ourselves. Everyone has felt the joy of being expressed new and fresh in a frock just home from the dressmaker's. It is the same feeling that the spring flowers have. If one wishes to express himself as a slovenly person, dowdy clothes and run-down-at-the-heel shoes will be half the battle. To be neat and attractive is expressing a mind that is buoyant and fresh. And who does not prefer the latter? I do not believe in extravagance in dressing, but becoming dressing acts as a mental tonic not only on yourself, but on those around you. This is one of the many hints learned at the photoplay.

To one who is a student, acting for the movies lights and enlarges one's vision, as well as makes one more sensitive: Also (though it sounds paradoxical), it makes one more blasé; for we become so used to "effects," catastrophes, etc., that should the sun shine at midnight, we would dismiss the fact with "It is probably Director X— of the X— Company getting a light effect for a picture."

Up to this time scenaries have been so loosely constructed that players have had to call on their own imaginations to supply minutiæ of the plot as well as characterizations; so that after this creative practice, we can conceive an idea and "send it across" in a twinkling. It is a striking example of telepathy, and some players in the movies possess this quality so strongly or have developed it so, that they live in the minds of their audiences long after the film strip has run its course. That is one of the fascinations of this art; one dwells not only within one's own body, but in the minds and hearts of thousands of others. It is a thought dear and snug and warm.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD
THE FILM INDEX
EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

J. P. Chalmers, Founder.
Published Weekly by the

CHALMERS PUBLISHING COMPANY
17 MADISON AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY.
(Telephone, 3510 Madison Square.)

J. P. Chalmers, Sr.....President
E. J. Chalmers.....Secretary and Treasurer
John Wylie.....Vice-President and General Manager

The office of the company is the address of the officers.

WESTERN OFFICE—Suite 917-919 Schiller Building, 64 West Randolph St., Chicago, Ill. Telephone, Central 5099.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and Philippine Islands .....$3.00 per year
Canada ..... 3.50 per year
Foreign Countries (Postpaid)..... 4.00 per year

ADVERTISING RATES.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING—no display—three cents per word; minimum charge, 50c.
DISPLAY ADVERTISING RATES made known on application.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

All changes of address should give both old and new addresses in full and clearly written.

NOTE.—Address all correspondence, remittances and subscriptions to MOVING PICTURE WORLD, P. O. Box 226, Madison Square Station, New York, and not to individuals.

(The Index for this issue will be found on page 352)

Entered at the General Post Office, New York City, as Second Class Matter

Saturday, July 11, 1914.

Facts and Comments

ONE of the great and real evils of our industry is the cheap and reckless producer who lays his hands on the masterpieces in literature and dumps a hideous version, or rather perversion, of a great story or drama upon the film-market. Apparently there is no remedy. No man with even the shreds or the shadow of an artistic conscience would dream of making money or of attempting to make money by such methods. The evil these base "adapters" do hurts not only the reputable and ambitious producer, but it works incalculable injury to the good name of the motion picture. Just as the motion picture is gaining golden opinions everywhere and demonstrating its claim as the most perfect medium of dramatic expression the men in the gutter do their little level best to debase and degrade our art.

A great subject butchered by the stupidity plus the cupidity of a cheap producer becomes, for a time at least, unavailable for the big firms which have shown their ability to handle such subjects. The high-class exhibitor, managing a theater with a large seating capacity, will hesitate to show a finely filmed version of a classic masterpiece if his competitor down the street is advertising a deplorable perversion of the same subject. No visible good accrues to either exhibitor, for a distorted, garbled and mutilated version of a great subject is offensive and disgusting to every audience, no matter what may be its education or intelligence or social standing. Whatever can be done to stop this abuse will be done in these columns by telling the truth about every offense of this character as it occurs. We do not want to be hypercritical and we want to encourage ambition and enterprise in every man who seeks to enter the motion picture field. Where shortcomings are due to inexperience and where an honest effort, joined to some evidence of ability, atones for imperfections we will be eager to praise and slow to condemn. On the other hand, we do not believe in mincing words when rank failure is the result of gross incompetence and an evident desire to deceive both the exhibitor and the public.

* * *

A MEMBER of the staff of THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD who attended a recent convention of exhibitors in Toronto gathered some interesting information concerning the Canadian brand of censorship. It seems that the filmed version of the old popular play, "One of Our Girls," was suppressed by the Montreal Board. The love-making, the censors thought, was too natural and spontaneous. In one scene the lover, a gallant English officer, attempts to kiss the hand of the girl whom he loves, and the girl, disdaining formality in the case of one who is really her betrothed, puts down his hand and offers him her lips. This impulsive but never offensive style of courtship forms, to normal minds, one of the charms of the play, but Montreal will not have it. Another propensity of the Canadian censors is to cut out duel scenes, even where the duel, like a genuine French duel, is perfectly harmless and only serves as an exciting prelude to reconciliation and refreshment.

*

We are glad to observe how the exhibitors everywhere begin to realize that the burden of censorship ultimately falls with all its weight on the shoulders of the exhibitor. As one of the censors in a neighboring state said to the writer: "Mr. Exhibitor pays the freight." The producer at whose door the tax knocks first, simply adds the prospective cost of censorship to the general cost of his negative and thus very naturally shifts the burden first to the exchange and last on the exhibitor. Is the exhibitor in a position to make the public pay? Perhaps he is, but it is difficult to guess the method. There is but one attitude possible for the exhibitors in their dealings with censorship of all brands, whether local, state or national: "War to the Knife."

*

The Pennsylvania convention recently held at Wilkes-Barre went on record in no uncertain terms. It had no use for censorship no matter what its guise and no matter who may be its sponsor. It made an appropriation for maintaining the legal battle against censorship which, in Pennsylvania, has just begun to harass the industry. We are glad of their stand, but we cannot help thinking that it would have cost less time and less money to kill the bill in Harrisburg three years ago. THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD sounded the alarm at that time and pointed out that an ounce of prevention had lost none of its advantage over the pound of cure.

Plays of Purpose

By Louis Reeves Harrison.

"ART for art's sake may imply that the artificer is deeply in love with his craft, not an unreasonable state of mind, but it does not imply that he recognizes the purpose of art when it becomes an expression of thought and a reflex of life. His treatment of a subject may thus engross his attention to the detriment of his grasp of the subject. The camera man absorbed in his scientific work, the scene painter in his background, the director in his selection of types and their management in action, the actor in his interpretation of a role, the dramatist in his technics, all illustrate a love, each for his particular art, for that art's sake. But, of all, the author is nearest error when he is merely skilled in his craft.

The author ceases to be a true artist the moment he is so devoted to structural form, preparation, exposition and climax that he becomes detached from the people and events encountered in daily existence. Without purpose and sincerity of purpose, not in close touch with his times, unaffected by the significance of what is going on in the world, he will rarely sound notes which awaken response. He may even be lost in clouds of self-sufficiency where the light of human sympathy cannot be expected to penetrate. It is all right to be conversant with fundamental conditions in order to reach an audience with the story he has to tell, with the punch he hopes to deliver, but the way to success will be clearer when he considers the story as merely an entertaining medium for the solution of a perplexing problem or to popularize some phase of modern thought.

For the benefit of those who misconstrue or read superficially and only half grasp the meaning of a statement, let it be understood that I oppose no decent form of play, original or adapted, that suits a great mixed audience. I do not care whether the play is original or adapted, in ancient settings or modern, or what the form is so long as that audience is interested, but I am opposed to any form that is lacking in interest, and prefer the modern idea in modern guise.

It is natural to suppose that new ideas and fresh methods of presenting them may interest an audience—they at least provide a refreshing change from what we have been getting. Yet that is no reason why an author should not infuse new vigor in an old play if it is within his power to do so, but he need not expect to succeed even as a corpse reviver unless there is an underlying sincerity of purpose in his work. The fresh blood used to revitalize an old drama must come almost entirely from the author of the screen version and, that fact is more generally than openly recognized. The new sap is drawn from the depths of human nature as it exists, as the audience recognizes it, and from the social environment in which we all exist. Ibsen went straight at the social and political evils of his time and country. The same may be said of other great dramatists of modern times. Listen to what one critic has to say of them:

"All of Strindberg's life he was galled by the irreconcilability of the classes, and, though he was no sermonizer, he painted the degrading effects of class distinction."

"Sudermann teaches that there is potentiality of freedom in the soul of every man and every woman."

Concerning one of Hauptmann's plays, "What significance in the bitter truth that those who struggle for an ideal, that those who cut loose from old fetters are doomed to lonely lives."

"Maeterlinck realizes that there are certain grievances in society, iniquitous conditions, which demand immediate solution."

"Rostand scores the petty jealousies of human creatures in their relations to one another."

"Brieux satirized middle-class morality."

"Shaw has pulled off the mask of affected purity and Christian kindness that we may see their hidden viciousness at work."

"Galsworthy powerfully condemns our cheap theories and cold institutionalism which freeze the soul and destroy the best and finest in our being."

These critical observations are merely quoted in illustration of the trend of modern drama.

So far as "Pictura" is concerned, the trend is largely imitative, and it may so remain as long as there is anything to revive or until interest is moving pictures needs revival with fresh material. I think Mr. Griffith, Mr. Blackton, Mr. Porter and others of experience incline to the live treatment of vital subjects, but there is a powerful array of theatrical gentlemen in the field, who seem convinced that only the "once was" ever "can be" and, besides, they have a stock of old plays to draw upon, most of them are inexperienced in the game and few of them consider the screen portrayal as more than a reflex of stage presentation. They hold the mirror up to artifice.

At the Strand Theatre one night last week was presented a five-reel photodrama that elicited applause and laughter, and, more than that, held a vast audience tense during the high scenes and to the last. Then a picture was exhibited of the author of the stage version and the whole audience roared. His version had been an utter failure—it had not held the stage long enough to pay expenses. People in front knew that he was not responsible for the screen portrayal. They knew that intelligent handling by the producer of a subject set forth by a screen author of sincere purpose deserved credit. We are not true to ourselves and the best ideals of our art in crediting a success in that art to a man who made a failure of the same subject in another art. An author of screen plays is given small credit, considering that the success of producers and exhibitors depends in due proportion on him.

When a screen play of purpose holds an audience it is because of all engaged in its production, an art in itself, not a reflex of some other, similar art. When this is fully recognized, the rewards and credit will not go to those who contribute nothing to the transformation from raw material—some of it is very raw—to the finished product, but to those whose ability made possible the successful transformation. The high element in every successful screen play is that emanating from the capable forces contributing to its artistic and scientific production. What is used of the older form is only raw material. The poorer the raw material, the more creditable its successful use.

It is inevitable that plays of purpose, entertainingly produced, will take high rank, and the sooner this is grasped by men engaged in creating photodramas, the better for all who cherish the ultimate power of this new art. If we are to hold public respect and interest, we must take higher ground than that of imitating others. We must stand on our own ground. We have our own medium and our own methods of visualizing the unseen world of passion and thought. This art has an individuality all its own. The more strongly this individuality enters into the interpretations, the more real the interpretation becomes, the more satisfying, the more convincing, the more true.

A Question of Demand and Supply

By W. Stephen Bush.

WHAT demand is there for a sure and steady supply of educational pictures? Many men and women deeply interested in the educational possibilities of the screen have been asking this question, sometimes hopefully and at other times doubtfully. There has been a lot of silly misinformation printed on the "universal demand for educational motion pictures." Editors, preachers, educators all emphasize the educational value of the picture and we are glad to say some progress has been made in the production of educational pictures, both as to subject and as to system.

It is, however a plain misstatement of facts to say that the demand outruns the supply. The contrary is the case. If we could examine the annual balance sheets of the great producers as to profits on educational pictures a lot of gaseous theories would promptly be exploded. Truth compels the statement that the producers who have specialized in educational films have done so at a loss. If in spite of these losses they have steadfastly continued their educational work they should receive the unanimous praise of all friends of the motion picture and of all friends of education. Instead of receiving such appreciation we see it stated in press and pulpit day after day that the educational picture is neglected by the producers. It is hard to maintain one's patience and composure in the face of such phrases as "the neglect of the film men to produce more educational pictures."

The support which the educational picture has so far received from churches and from schools has been desultory, precarious and generally unprofitable. If schools and educational institutions generally supported the publishers of books no better than they support the publishers of educational films there would be a series of bankruptcies in the ranks of the booksellers. We hope that some day in the near future a broad-minded philanthropist, anxious for the spreading of knowledge among mankind, will endow a great kinematographic educational institute. Unless some such support is given to the further development of instruction by kinematography it may be years before the educational picture can begin its true mission in distributing knowledge. Mr. Thomas A. Edison said in a recent interview that it will take seven years to introduce even the most obviously useful and necessary article. His experience entitles him to be heard with respect. The well-intentioned theorists who invade the news columns of the daily press with occasional announcements that they are going to show the world the advantages of education by lessons on the screen will do especially well by thinking on the subject. If any royal road has been found to perfection in educative motion pictures they owe it to the world to demonstrate it practically and with all convenient speed.

The Moving Picture World has given not a little of its space to the promotion of educational film work and has conscientiously recorded every step of progress along the line. At a time when men who now enthuse over the educational picture had nothing but scorn for pictures of every sort this paper kept the beacon burning. We are most anxious to forward and encourage every movement looking toward widening the influence of the educational picture and especially do we hail with pleasure any movement looking toward a broader scope based on system. We decline, however, in the face of past observations and experiences to become ecstatic about mere plans and prophecies. When churches and schools show not merely an attitude of theoretic appreciation but an attitude of renting and buying educational films we are ready to record the fact and extract all the inspiration it may contain.

In the meantime we would urge all editors, preachers and educators who feel a desire to speak on the past, the present or the future of educational kinematography to acquaint themselves with the real facts of the situation easily obtainable from any film man of experience. That will make them more tolerant we think toward the producer and his position on this question. They will find a rich educational library not always systemized and not always catalogued but sufficiently various to meet most practical demands today. The educational picture is ,as we have pointed out in these columns for many a year, capable of great development. We are far from perfection. We are lacking in system and lacking in classification. There are, figuratively speaking, many shelves empty when they might be full. The field, even at this day, far more often requires the pioneer than the librarian. It should, however be thoroughly understood by all who are interested in educational pictures that there must be a far more general support of the producers before these later developments can be expected to take place. I have no definite and detailed information on the subject but I am sufficiently well acquainted with the situation to say that at this moment there are thousands upon thousands of dollars tied up in educational films with no present returns whatever. Now, the producer of films like any other business man must look to his capital and expects returns. At the present time he sees the dramatic productions or even the pictures of weddings and birthday parties bringing much better and quicker returns than the educational picture. Of course, the contemplation of this obvious fact is bound to influence him. It is also well to note that this condition prevails, not alone in this country, but all through the world. If it had not been for the exhibitor who sometimes willingly and sometimes unwillingly took and paid for educational pictures we might be in a worse position than we are. Churches and schools are quite often willing to use films but lack the funds to pay even a small rental. Time and again exchanges and producers have let their educational subjects work at schools and benefits and social affairs without any charge whatever. The film men are glad to help along the cause of educational kinematography with all the means at their command and it is unfair to them to set up the theory that the demand for educational motion pictures outruns the demand even by the fraction of an inch. The contrary is true.

Our friends may be very sure that the producer will be quick to respond to any genuine increase in the demand for these pictures. If a committee of competent and practical educators want to approach a producer with practical propositions for the making of more educational pictures such a committee will be, we have no doubt, received with the greatest courtesy and their co-operation welcomed. If they are in a position to show the probability of financial returns they will have little trouble in getting what they want.

New York Will Have Censorship?

Under the direction of License Commissioner Bell of New York City there is a plan in the forming to give the metropolis a form of censorship of motion picture theaters. Voluntary censors will do the work, but the strong arm of the Commissioner will be behind them.

"The Lure of Sawdust"

American Film Company Presents an Interesting Story of the White Tents That Shows the Human Side of Circus Life.

Reviewed by James S. McQuade.

A CIRCUS STORY done in two reels, under the direction of Thomas Ricketts, will be released by the American on July 13, with the title "The Lure of the Sawdust."

Producer Ricketts has given us the real atmosphere of the circus ring in the pictures, having taken advantage of the presence in Santa Barbara, at the time of production, of a big three ring aggregation. We are shown how the three big tops are raised from a vast field of canvas, taken behind the scenes where the riders, clowns and a multitude of other performers await their call to the arena, and we are given frequent glimpses of the imposing street parade. It is questionable, however, if all these will cause the small boy and some grownups to overlook the fact that the star circus equestrienne does not appear in any of her graceful and daring feats that win the frenzied applause of the great audience. They may also throw verbal missiles at the head of Tom Ricketts because he has deprived them of a view of the star when she is seriously injured in the ring. These circus fans ill brook any curtailment of the thrills of the sawdust, even if they border on broken necks or limbs.

Scene from "The Lure of the Sawdust" (American).

Leaving these ultra enthusiasts out of the audience, the "Lure of the Sawdust" will commend itself to a wide circle of picture theatergoers. The story is very human, showing as it does the bitter jealousy of the rival star rider and her successful attempt to cripple the popular favorite. The ringmaster, too, shows the shallow fickleness of a man of his calling, and the star of the story herself—in after years, when she is a happy mother and wife—affords a striking illustration of the powerful lure of the sawdust ring. Only those who have followed circus life, at one time or another, can conceive the longing to go back to the old life that takes possession of the man or woman who has been the object of the great crescendo of applause from thousands of human throats, when he or she attends a circus performance after years of retirement.

Scene from "The Lure of the Sawdust" (American).

Miss Winifred Greenwood looks charming in the character and costume of Annette, the star circus rider. Marie, the rival of Annette, is just as faithfully depicted by Miss Charlotte Burton. The circus ringmaster, Henri Dupree, is strongly presented by George Field, and Ed. Coxen, as William Ward, the country lad, gives us another of his well drawn characterizations.

Annette, a star, bare-back circus rider, wins the favor of Henri Dupree, the ringmaster. This arouses the jealousy of Marie, a rival rider, who successfully plans the crippling of Annette. After the accident, the circus moves on, leaving Annette in a hospital.

William Ward, a young farmer who had witnessed the accident, accompanied by his mother, calls on Annette. Touched by the girl's loneliness, Mrs. Ward takes her to the Ward home. There she and William learn to love each other, and they are happily married. A baby is born, and the young mother is happy in the possession of her child and husband.

Soon afterwards the circus comes back to the country town, where Annette chances to meet Dupree, the ringmaster. He begs her to return for just one performance, and the lure of the old life wins Annette's consent. She leaves a note for her husband to that effect.

The crowds cheer Annette frantically during her act and Dupree importunes her to rejoin his forces; but a vision of her baby and husband at home overcomes the lure of the past, and soon she is in the arms of her husband while her own gently encircle her child.

"Kids of the Movies"

Two Reels. Children Photoplayers.

HERE are two thousand feet of comedy furnished entirely by children. The production is therefore entitled to at least the merit of novelty. All the children entered into the spirit of their parts with much vim and zest. This is another point of merit. The plot consisted of what really amounts to a clever burlesque on the "Wild West" type of melodrama. The girl who played the part of the heroine and went through all the experiences which invariably befall the heroines in such plays bore up bravely under the strain. The Cowboy, the Indian, the Villain all did their best.

A good part, too, was the impersonation of the director in the first scenes. The comedy is absolutely clean and decent and there is a commendable absence of excessive rough house and horseplay which in these days often constitute as much as ninety percent of "comedies."

The photography was good throughout and the settings were well chosen.

OLCOTT'S COMPANY REACHES LONDON.

The Sid Olcott Company arrived in London on Friday, June 19th, a very happy party, indeed. The trip across the usually stormy Atlantic was wonderfully perfect from the picture man's view point since the sun shone brightly every day and there was no sign of a storm to mar the pleasure of the trip. Mr. Olcott, being very well known to the officers and crew of the Adriatic, on account of having made a number of trips across on this boat, was able to get some fine scenes on shipboard of the sports in which a number of notables participated and other scenes of interest taken from points of vantage.

Some very striking scenes were made in the steerage with Miss Grant doing the part of a pretty Irish Colleen on her way to America and Mr. Olcott as Dan, a young Irish lad bound for the great new land. The first-cabin passengers and, in fact, every one on the ship took a very keen interest in the work and helped the genial director with their enthusiastic assistance.

Mr. Olcott's party was seated at the purser's table in the dining saloon, which in itself is a great honor on such a big liner. The only other passenger at Purser Palmer's table was Lord Trimblestown, an Irish nobleman, who not only took a great interest in the work, but invited the Olcott party to his estate for a visit while they are touring Ireland this summer.

Mr. Olcott and his company will spend a few weeks in London and then begin their work in Ireland about the beautiful lakes of Killarney. Their first Irish release for this season will be shipped to America in July, part of this subject having been made in America and part on the high seas.

"The Rebellion of Kitty Belle."

A Two-Reel Majestic Comedy, Written by George Pattulo and Directed by Mr. Cabanne.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

CAST

Kitty Belle.....Lillian Gish
Bud Parker.....R. A. Walsh
Joe .....Robert Harron

A TWO-REEL domestic comedy with a punch, "The Rebellion of Kitty Bell" has a wide human appeal. It is a light and dainty social picture on the surface with a strong undercurrent of meaning that should have been left as an undercurrent, not indicated in sub-titles, to be felt the more deeply that it is not made obvious. However, to its credit, the drama's full significance is not thrust down our throats,

Lillian Gish in "The Rebellion of Kitty Belle."

as in many sociological plays whose producers are in a state of mental distress lest their point should escape attention. "The Rebellion of Kitty Bell," with this one exception, comes close to being an ideal screen story of its kind.

"Kitty Bell" is a young wife of no evil tendencies. To the contrary, she is a loyal little thing, with much of that childishness in her nature which brings mothers very close to the hearts of their young children. She is not a mother

Scene from "The Rebellion of Kitty Belle" (Majestic).

—she is only a sweet little bride, trying to keep house for a manly young husband, longing for his love, appreciation, tenderness and sympathy. All the wholesome instincts in her nature crave those tiny attentions which manly men, especially when fighting their battle for existence, often regard as superfluous after marriage.

The young husband is giving most of his energies to the work of building a future for himself and family. His thoughts are concentrated on the natural purposes outlined in his hopes. He only turns occasionally from those purposes to his dainty little helpmate in a mannish way, when he is hungry for what she provides, forgetting the unsatisfied hunger for "sweets" of conduct that torments her. In vain her pretty flowers, in vain the new ribbon in her hair, in vain her timid appeals for attention; he has serious work to do and is too much pre-occupied with what he is doing very largely for her sake. She has no child, no natural outlet for her wells of affection, and she is ripe for the revolt that comes.

There is always a man ready, an easy-going saunterer of little manliness and still less sense of responsibility. The flowers in other men's gardens are for him to pick as he passes by, wear while their beauty lasts and discard when drooping, but the saunterer does not have quite time enough to accomplish his purposes. The husband stumbles upon a book, "How to Make Love to Your Wife" (publisher not given), and makes a few awkward attempts to redeem himself, but he is too much of a man to be insincere. The real stuff in him begins to take shape when he captures the saunterer and exposes the latter's true character.

The story is admirably told and the roles interpreted with great delicacy and charm. We are given an insight into the heart-longing and childish mentality of the wife by Lillian Gish that will remain in the memory of many who see her as "Kitty Bell." The best of it all is that she and the two men are telling intelligently a truth of human life which is well worth the telling. Nearly all the plays that make a claim of this have one or another infirmity of purpose, some jarring note of artificiality, if only false whiskers, which mars the natural harmony. "The Rebellion of Kitty Bell," though flowering into high sentiment for a comedy, does so without sacrificing the autonomy of its characters and without detriment to the artistic fabric. It rings true.

Miss Christine Mayo

RAMO Film Company announces the engagement of Miss Christine Mayo to play the part of Jeanne Marie in that company's forthcoming production, "The Conquerors," a feature that gives promise of being popular because of its excellent cast.

Miss Mayo is a well known legitimate and photoplay star and has appeared in a number of pictures quite prominently. She will be remembered as the actress selected as the most beautifully formed of the dramatic leading ladies of New York and was much pictured in the magazines and daily press on account thereof at the time. Aside from her personal charms she has a wide experience in dramatic work that especially fits her for either the silent or the speaking stage.

For some time Miss Mayo has been appearing under the management of Belasco and Savage, playing emotional parts for several seasons. She has also played leads in stock companies in many large cities during the last few years. She is a remarkably versatile actress and is not only able to play the part assigned to her, but she always looks that part. Although Miss Mayo has had several flattering offers to return to the dramatic stage recently, the charm of the pictures is so great that the chances are she will remain with the silent drama for some time.

Ramo is to be congratulated in securing the services of so clever a player and it is hoped that she will be seen in many of the forthcoming Ramo features.

SOME DAILY CHANGES AT VITAGRAPH THEATER.

The Vitagraph Company has provided a program of daily releases for the week commencing Monday, June 29, that will be an attractive addition to the regular program at the Vitagraph Theater, New York City. A drama of the underworld, "The Gang," is the special release for Monday. For Tuesday, "The Poor Folks' Boy," a two-part pastoral drama produced by the Western Vitagraph Company is announced. A Sonny Jim comedy, "The Circus and the Boy," featuring little Bobby Connelly, is the special for Wednesday. A human interest drama of unusual power, "The Two Stepchildren," is Thursday's release; on Friday, the uproariously funny Bunny-Finch comedy, "A Train of Incidents," is the big laugh-producer of the week, and on Saturday, an alluring two-part drama, "The Toll," will be a special feature.

"Shannon of the Sixth"

Edward E. Kidder's Stirring and Romantic Play of the Sepoy East Indian Mutiny Filmed By Kalem In Five Reels.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

INDIA has always been the realm of romance. Here from the days of the early occupation, when Clive with a few hundred of his intrepid English soldiers stabbed the heart of an almost numberless Rajput army, through the days of the mutiny when a few thousands reconquered its teeming millions, its history has given us one dramatic incident after another and many of them romantic in the extreme. "Shannon of the Sixth" is a melodramatic love story and pictures for us the difficulties of a brave lieutenant and of his beautiful sweetheart, daughter of his commanding general. The villain of the story is a captain, cowardly and thieving, who begins by abandoning his post when danger threatens and then, for a time, fastens his own crime of unlawful loot on his subordinate. To get this bit of loot, a diamond as big as the palm of his hand, the dastardly captain leaves the general's daughter to her fate when he might have been the means of her immediate rescue. All this has been pictured by the Kalem producer, George Melford, with painstaking care and without skimping expense. The picture cost the company $30,000. It was made in America; but the backgrounds and atmosphere are, or seem to be to one who has never seen India, astonishingly like the usual conception of that strange land.

Scene from "Shannon of the Sixth" (Kalem).

Scene from "Shannon of the Sixth" (Kalem).

The plot of the picture has been artfully planned and lays the story before us in a clear and plausible way. It seems hardly necessary to say of popular melodramas like this that they are clean and wholesome or that they are tactful. Heroism in them is made heroic and beauty lovable, wholly, while villainy is painted black. Their aim is to stir the emotions by their sharp contrasts. They are aimed to please simple minds—few but have some simplicity left inside of us—and they never intrude upon our attention things that simplicity dislikes to consider. They never try to instruct; yet it is a great fault if they give wrong pictures of any time; for in the minds of those who see the error it stirs up controversy and controversy is the death of sympathy. In this picture, producer Melford has taken pains to be historically accurate in the quality of his incidents without attempting to give instruction which course would have been the death of his story.

The opening scene gives us warning that the Indians are on the point of mutiny. Then the picture swings to headquarters at Calcutta. Captain Arlington and Lieutenant Shannon who loves Dora, the general's daughter, are sent to Delhi. At that place (the architecture of these scenes is very Oriental), we see how the native regiments pretend to obey their white officers and then shoot them in the backs, and we find the terrible mutiny in full swing. There is an assault on the citadel where the English with their families have taken refuge. It is a hard thing to picture the storming of such a place. These scenes are fair; but there is room for improvement. The place is taken and the lieutenant (the captain had escaped), blows the building up to save the women and children from the ruthless and vile captors. He crawls out from the ruins and makes his way to Calcutta, where the captain already is. The general sets out to retake Delhi. Dora follows and is captured by natives. The harem scene of the king is full of grace and its illusion is good. Dancing girls add to its seeming reality. The captain, sent in disguise to rescue her, might have done so, if he hadn't been caught stealing the diamond. He escapes and, with the not quite plausible help of native priests in arms against the British, he accuses the lieutenant of looting it. The hero is now in disgrace; but Dora's native woman who knows the truth escapes in a artfully produced scene in which she stabs a guard and later tells the lieutenant about the theft.

The general is investing Delhi. The lieutenant rushing out on the field to a retreating line spurs it to a vigorous attack. It is not a moment too soon. The king has decided to kill Dora. She is brought out to the city square and tied to the mouth of a cannon and the fuse lighted. The British are breaking through the last stubborn resistance in the streets and the lieutenant cuts her from the cannon just as it goes off. There is plenty of smoke and shooting in these battle scenes and, with noisy sound effects they will be real enough. The rescue of the girl is a dandy climax and there are many scenes strung all through the picture that are just as good. There are a few scenes not so stirring and some that for a moment or two are not quite so convincing; but taking all things into account it is a worthy feature offering. The acting is intelligent throughout and at times excellent. There is nothing trite in it and it has been lavishly put on as well as beautifully photographed. Above all, the story is a good one.

PATHE PLAYERS BACK FROM BERMUDA.

The Pathe players who have been in Bermuda for the past few weeks working under the direction of Henry Vernot in the production of the big six-reel feature for the Eclectic Film Company called "Foul Play" have returned to the studio at Jersey City.

The company included Eleanor Woodruff, Harold Meltzer, Riley Hatch, Sheldon Lewis and others. They report the most beautiful weather and hearty co-operation of the authorities at the island which permitted them to secure some exceptionally rare sets for some of the scenes.

NEW SELIG PUBLICITY MANAGER.

Franc R. E. Woodward has been appointed Publicity Manager for The Selig Polyscope Company, with headquarters at the General Offices, 20 E. Randolph St., Chicago. Mr. Woodward is known as "the man who made White City famous", having been in full charge of the Publicity Department of White City, the first season. Later Mr. Woodward was at Sans Souci Park for three seasons, after which he went to Europe spending three years in England and on the continent as publicity director for an English syndicate, which operated eighteen amusement parks.

Some Prominent Essanay Photoplayers

IT is not expected that the accompanying cuts of some of the Essanay players will afford any novelty to readers, as they are already so familiar to all in photodramatic productions. The brief biographical sketches, however, will serve to bring them closer to their admirers.

Gilbert M. Anderson needs no introduction to photoplay fans; for he is known wherever moving pictures are shown throughout the world. His "Broncho Billy" escapades have held the eye of millions for several years past, and his recent appearances in so-called "legitimate" roles give ample proof that he can adapt himself, both as actor and producer, to widely varying conditions.

Essanay's four part subject, "The Good-For-Nothing," released a few weeks ago, shows Mr. Anderson's versatility in a most convincing manner.

Mr. Anderson can claim a distinction that is not possible for any other producer or actor of today to assume. He is a pioneer of the industry and, as partner of George K. Spoor, has been largely instrumental in building up the Essanay Film Manufacturing Company, the brand of which is familiar the world over.

Mr. Anderson hails from Little Rock, Ark. About eight and a half years ago the Essanay Company had its birth, the word "Essanay" being formed from the initial letters of Spoor and Anderson.

Francis X. Bushman, leading man of Essanay's Eastern stock company, is one of the most handsome and popular photoplay actors in the business. He has had wide experience in all branches of theatrical work on the legitimate stage. He is an adept in the art of make-up and his remarkable versatility in portraying character studies has won him instant recognition from the most critical of critics.

Mr. Bushman is an all-round athlete, being an expert swimmer, wrestler, boxer, horseman and swordsman. Personally he has a wide circle of acquaintances with whom he is extremely popular. Mr. Bushman recently won the contest for the most popular photoplay actor now before the public, the readers of the Ladies' World being voters. He was recently seen in the following features: "Shadows," "The Three Scratch Clue," "Mongrel and Master," "A Man for a' That," "Blood Will Tell," and "The Elder Brother." His lead in "One Wonderful Night" will mark his finest work.

Richard C. Travers brought an enviable record of success to Essanay, both as a leading factor in the legitimate field, and also in photoplays. He was for two years associated with the Lubin Company at the Philadelphia studio. He left the Lubin people to accept engagements from Wagenhals & Kemper's "Paid in Full," Liebler's "Alias Jimmy Valentine," Shubert's "Girls," and Wm. A. Brady's Making Good," and "A Gentleman of Leisure." He was also with Chas. Klein's production of "The Gambler." His last appearance on Broadway was in "The Passing of the Idle Rich."

Miss Beverly Bayne is a charming member of Essanay's Eastern stock company, whose work in a number of recent productions has won much praise. Miss Bayne is a striking photographic subject and a firm believer in all outdoor sports. She is an expert horsewoman and can be seen any fine morning cantering along Lake Shore Drive. Her favorite hobby is sketching and water color work. Her unusual beauty and ability to portray a wide range of characters have gained for her a host of admirers in the film world. She has played leading roles in such recent productions as "Oh, Doctor!" "The Way Perilous," "Dear Old Girl," "The Love Route," and many others.

LILLIAN DREW

Surely if there be a "best comedy woman in the business" it is Margaret Joslin, of Essanay's western company. The fact that her appearance on the screen is the result of a happy accident, rather than from any consuming desire on her part, makes her success all the more interesting.

G.M. ANDERSON

GERDA HOLMES

RAPLEY HOLMES

Known to all her friends as Mrs. Todd, she declares that her husband got her into the business and she has no reason to think harshly of him for it. She has been playing comedy parts with inimitable humor for the western Essanay company for about three years, all that time playing along with her husband, Harry Todd, whose work is so familiar in the western Essanay dramas and comedies.

MARGARET JOSLIN

BRYANT WASHBURN

Bryant Washburn, one of the "heavy" men of the Essanay Eastern stock company, is a handsome and extremely popular favorite with photoplay fans, even though his work is of the "villainish" and thankless type. Washburn is now completing his third year with Essanay and in that time has portrayed scores of effective studies in an unlimited range of films, including melodramas, dramas, comedies and farces.

He has had long stage experience, playing for several seasons with George Fawcett in his well-known successes. He played with Miss Percy Haswell in stock at the Royal

Who They Are and Where They Come From

Alexandria Theater, in Toronto, and starred for a season in Eugene Walter's "The Wolf." He has also been associated with such successes as "The Remittance Man," "The Great John Ganton," and "The Fighter." Mr. Washburn is a splendid photographic subject in photoplays, and his work is always effective and clean-cut. He is well remembered in such films as "Married After All," "The Grip of Circumstance," "The Conqueror," and others.

Miss Marguerite Clayton enjoys the distinction of playing opposite that popular idol of moving picture fans, G. M. Anderson. None of her predecessors have created a more favorable impression than she. She is unique in her wonderful success in the pictures, as, previous to her association with Essanay, she had no experience whatever in any kind of stage work that counts. But what Miss Clayton lacked in experience she made up for in brains; and, though her physical attractions are very self-evident, she doesn't rely on them alone for a moment. She is a hard and very earnest worker and takes both herself and her work very seriously.

RUTH STONEHOUSE

Marguerite joined the Essanay western company about eight months ago in answer to an advertisement, which, as it turned out, was one of the best investments at nominal cost on record. Her parents live in Utah and her father is a wealthy retired mining engineer.

FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN

Rapley Holmes joined the Essanay Eastern Stock company at Chicago a few months ago. Everybody who has seen the big dramatic plays of the past few seasons remembers Rapley Holmes. With Nat Goodwin he played leading parts in "Nathan Hale," "The Cowboy and the Lady," and "When We Were Twenty-One." Later Mr. Holmes toured Australia, playing the leading parts in "The Virginian" and "The Squaw Man."

For three seasons this dramatic star was featured in the well-known dramatic production "Arizona," in the all-star cast, in New York City. He was in the original cast of "The Man and the Hour," and played in this production for the entire run at Boston, which covered a period of seven months. The closing of the original production of "A Trip to Washington" brought about Mr. Holmes' desire to remain in Chicago permanently, and so he entered the ranks of motion picture players.

RICHARD C. TRAVERS

Miss Ruth Stonehouse is a wonderfully interesting little photoplay actress. Not yet twenty years old, she plays leads and does it so well that you are anxious to see her again. The "Colorado Girl" Miss Stonehouse is called, because she lived in Victor, Colo., where her father is an expert in mining operations.

The remarkable grace of Miss Stonehouse is due to her being a dancer—a professional at that—and her ability in this art makes her adept in many roles for which otherwise she would not be eligible.

It is a pleasure to see Miss Stonehouse in films and a pleasure equally great to meet her out of them. She is vivacious, interesting and pretty and is considered one of the best leading women in photoplays today.

Miss Gerda Holmes was born in Chicago, of Danish parents, 23 years ago. When but a child her parents took her to Denmark, where she completed her education. She then played a few small parts with the Royal Theater stock company in Copenhagen.

Miss Holmes returned to America later, and was given the leading role in "The Round-up." She later made a tour of vaudeville in a sketch with Mr. Holmes, and then joined a motion picture company as leading woman.

Four months later she joined the Essanay Eastern Stock company, and has been playing leads ever since.

Miss Lillian Drew was born in Chicago in 1886. She has appeared in her time in musical comedies, dramatic stock and vaudeville. Her favorite line of work is heavy dramatic. Her principal hobby is the collecting of oriental rugs. Perhaps, the best photoplay in which Miss Drew appeared is "Broken Threads United." The recent releases in which she appeared are "The Other Girl" and "Shadows."

BEVERLY BAYNE

It is no use to try and hide the identity of this funny man, Victor Potel. His comic characterizations are almost household necessities with the fans who see Essanay films. V. A. Potel is not only the comedian of the Essanay western pictures, but he is also chief host to all outsiders seeking a chance to give the famous "Broncho Billy" establishment at Niles, Cal., a looking over. He is a splendid entertainer and knows all about the famous photoplayers in most of the other film companies in the country. The favorite character of Mr. Potel as "Slippery Slim." To the interpretation of this quaint character he has brought a touch of the artistry which made Denman Thompson's "The Old Homestead" an enduring classic of the stage.

MARGUERITE CLAYTON

VICTOR POTEL

Julia Swayne Gordon, Vitagraph Woman of Moods

LOVERS of the photoplay and particularly those who admit a partiality to the choice vintage which carries the label "Vitagraph Life Portrayals," will recognize in the illustration on this page one of their first motion picture favorites—Miss Julia Swayne Gordon. So far as the writer is informed Miss Gordon's work in motion pictures began with the Edison Company some years ago. Soon after she joined the Vitagraph Company, appearing in that company's pictures without interruption ever since and is still a prime favorite with Vitagraph "fans."

"Versatility" is a much abused word as well as a much used word by dramatic critics when speaking of the attainments of the players. To say that Miss Gordon is versatile hardly expresses her ability to portray human life for it would seem that she went deeper into her work than the term implies. "Adaptability" would seem to express that trait which enables one to live in the character of another for brief periods during the course of a day's work. Fancy yourself entering a studio at nine o'clock and then appearing successively in a dozen or more scenes, many of which were not closely related to the others. That was what used to happen in the old days when Miss Gordon was helping to make the pictures popular. It was a great school for any actor or actress and those of them who were able to make the quick changes required in those days are the ones who are dearest to their public today.

It would be impossible to publish a list of all the photoplays in which Miss Gordon has appeared during her engagement with the Vitagraph Company. She will be remembered by her "Josephine' in the big production "Napoleon", one of the first of the Vitagraph classics, and one in which she appeared most charmingly. Present day audiences are enjoying the strong realism of her portrayals in the latest of the Vitagraph productions, "A Million Bid."

Of course there are scores of others in many of which Miss Gordon participated to better advantage than in the two named. Her admirers will not have forgotten the charming portrayal she gave of Lady Godiva, in a picture of that title made by the Vitagraph not so long ago; there are those too, who will remember the parts she took in "The Merchant of Venice", "Sins of Scarlet', "King Lear," "Richard III," "Rock of Ages," "Twelfth Night," "The Light that Failed" and "Fruits of Vengeance."

Mainly her portrayals have been of militant womanhood—the progressive female struggling against the restrictions imposed by the male. Not always have her characters been triumphant, but when they have not they have been sympathetic, but they were ever feminine, revealing the real woman through whom they were transmitted to the screen.

It has been said of Miss Gordon, by way of criticism, that she is at times a bit too melodramatic. Even so; all of us have our faults and it would not be unusual if an actress, appearing in so many different roles in the course of a year, did accentuate her work unduly at times. But the "times" are so infrequent with Miss Gordon that the criticism must be disallowed in contemplating her work as a whole.

Nothing is more exacting than character portrayal, nor does it contribute to a great reputation except when an individual characteristic or eccentricity predominates one's work. To be a dashing circus rider today and a poor old charwoman tomorrow, and to be them convincingly, calls for rare "adaptability." It is this trait that has made Miss Gordon valuable as a member of the Vitagraph Stock Company and popular with the lovers of motion pictures who have followed the product of those well known studios.

Miss Gordon's popularity is of the kind which must taste particularly sweet to those players who are permitted to enjoy it. So long has she been doing excellent work that those who know her and note her first appearance on the screen settle back comfortably with the feeling that the role she is handling will be well interpreted, no matter what else happens.

It can easily be understood that Miss Gordon is one of the most valuable members of the Vitagraph company's forces. She is indeed a "Woman of Moods" in the sense that it seems quite easy for her to completely lose herself in any character even though it be but dimly outlined in the mind of the scenario writer. It is building with such personal units as these that has given the Vitagraph Company such an enviable position in the film industry and a permanent place in the hearts of the picture "fans."

Cines-Kleine Players.

Some of the Notable Ones Who Have Distinguished Themselves in a Number of Great Productions.

FEW photoplays stand higher in the good estimation of American moving picture lovers than the leading members of the Cines-Kleine company. They sprang at once into prominence by their finished work in such celebrated subjects as "Quo Vadis?" "Antony and Cleopatra," etc. They can claim the proud distinction of being the first to break the solid ranks of exclusive circles throughout this country in favor of moving pictures.

Anthony Novelli looks to "Quo Vadis?" as his master triumph as an actor. He maintains bachelor apartments in the Appian Way, a short distance from the Cines Studio. Fond of music and painting, he won some fame as an amateur painter prior to his appearance on the stage. An initial engagement with a stock company in Naples paved the way for his appearance in pictures. His only noteworthy experience has been with the Cines-Kleine Company, and he has played "leads" for them for the past three years. His face and mannerisms are familiar to picturegoers the world over, not only because of his wonderful interpretation of Vinitius in "Quo Vadis?" but for many other splendid bits of character work. However, Novelli is not a "character man." He is emphatically Cines-Kleine's leading man, but the difficult roles given him entitle him to the distinction of "character man" as well. Novelli scored a big success as Antony in "Antony and Cleopatra" and Captain Larive in "For Napoleon and France."

Lyda Borelli is unquestionably the most charming woman appearing in European film. Miss Borelli is not pretty; she is beautiful, with a grace and refinement distinctly European. Miss Borelli is probably the highest paid motion picture actress in the world. For years she has toured the Continent, appearing in the best theatres in Germany, France, England and Italy. She has been starred in some of the biggest dramatic successes of the past four years and her wonderful beauty, coupled with her extraordinary histrionic powers, induced the Cines company to make her an offer so flattering that Miss Borelli accepted. Moreover, like most of the really great actresses of the present age, she is anxious to preserve her image for the future.

Group of Leading Cines-Kleine Players.

Bruto Castellani is a Herculean man physically and a splendid actor. He will be remembered as the Ursus of "Quo Vadis?" His work in that feature alone marks him a great photoplayer. Just now Castellani is touring the Continent with Lea Giunchi, the Lygia of "Quo Vadis?," both in costumes of the arena scene as they appeared in that great masterpiece. Castellani proved a great favorite in the fashionable salons of Europe after the release of "Quo Vadis?" and met practically all the members of royalty on the Continent. Castellani will be seen frequently in Cines multiples during 1914.

Ignazio Lupi has a strong personality that one instinctively feels. He has the undefinable power called "stage presence," that most valuable quality without which no one can win lasting success in the drama or photodrama.

Signor Lupi played the Octavius of "Antony and Cleopatra." How well, many thousands of picture fans on both sides of the Atlantic can testify. In those parts calling for gentleness and refinement Lupi's work is soothing and pleasant, yet in roles requiring a dramatic "punch" he shows to best advantage.

Lupi is one of the oldest of the present Cines players in point of service. He has been featured in "Quo Vadis?" and "Between Savage and Tiger," as well as "Antony and Cleopatra," and will be seen often this year in big Cines multiples soon to be released.

Francesca Bertini is a remarkably talented and graceful woman with a face and form of singular beauty. Miss Bertini is twenty-six years old. She bore an enviable stage record prior to her appearance as leading woman in Celio-Kleine film subjects. Miss Bertini is already well known to American picture fans and promises to create a genuine impression this year because of her powerful work in several multiple reel features now ready for the market. She is well known on the Continent as a singer and stage favorite.

Miss Bertini was selected to play the leading role in "Pierrot, the Prodigal," an elaborate motion picture opera recently presented and still running at the Candler theatre, New York City.

Emilio Ghione is one of Europe's really great actors. He was a leading player for the Cines company until the new Celio establishment was launched, when he was transferred to play opposites to Francesca Bertini. Ghione is tall and extremely slender. His lean, cadaverous face marks him a splendid type for character work of all kinds. He plays Prince or beggar with equal grace. His peculiar power lies in his remarkable personality as well as in his odd physical characteristics. Ghione plays an important role in "Pierrot, the Prodigal."

Lea Giunchi has played leads for the Cines-Kleine Company for more than three years. Naturally, she looks on her part in "Quo Vadis?" as the very best thing she has done in pictures. She is twenty-six years old, rides like a Centaur, is a splendid swimmer, and a master with the foils. From the beautiful, serious-minded, religious Lygia to the rough and ready girl of the West is a long step, yet that suggests Miss Giunchi's most remarkable ability. She can play the vampire woman, the budding society belle, the widowed mother and the midle-aged woman of fashion with equal ease, and when it comes to jumping from a four-story building, hanging by her arms from the top of a high bridge, carrying on a knife duel in the middle of a stream, riding a bare-back horse at breakneck speed, and doing similar hazardous stunts to amuse a fickle public, Signorina Lea is always the one selected for the work.

Captain Leslie T. Peacocke.

CAPTAIN Leslie T. Peacocke, who has been on the staff of the Scenario Department of the Universal Film Company for the past eighteen months, has the reputation of having had more photo-plays from his pen produced than any other scenario writer in the United States.

Up to date he has 338 produced photo-plays to his credit and two in course of production by the Universal Film Company.

He is the author of "Neptune's Daughter," the seven reel feature exploiting Annette Kellermann, at present enjoying a successful run at the Globe Theatre and in many of the large cities throughout the United States. He is also the author of the following big successes released by the Universal Company: "The Closed Door," "The Girl and the Tiger," "The God of Girzah," "The False Bride," "The Honeymooners," "Temper versus Temper," "Traffic in Soles," "Heaven Will Protect the Working Girl," "A Girl and Her Money," "The Fatal Verdict," "The Happy Family," "The Simple Life."

Capt. Leslie T. Peacocke.

More than half of his efforts have been comedies, not of the slap-stick order, but of the subtle sort so much in demand.

Captain Leslie T. Peacocke was born in Bangalore, India, and subsequently served in that country for some years as an officer in the 88th Regiment (The Connaught Rangers). He was educated at Eton College, Windsor, and at the Royal Military College, Sandhurst. He was military correspondent for the Irish Times when in India, and has written many stories of that country for American, English, Canadian and Oriental magazines. He is well known as a contributor to The Smart Set, Town Topics, Short Stories, The Strand, Overland Monthly, The Pacific Graphic, 10-Story Book, Satire, Snappy Stories, MacClean's Magazine, The Canadian Magazine, The Anglo-Indian, The Morning Telegraph, and other periodicals, and was a feature writer for several years for the Los Angeles Times.

He is a writer also of humorous verse and his efforts in this direction have appeared in nearly every well-known publication in the English speaking world. He is also an actor of no mean ability, and was stage manager of the amateur dramatic company of his regiment, composed of the officers and their wives, and produced many plays in India, which the company presented before the Viceroy and in many Hindu cities, the proceeds from which were given to the various charities throughout the land.

He played the leading role in "His Neighbor's Wife"—a film production made by the Famous Players Co., in which the fair Lily Langtry was starred, and proved that he can also act before the camera.

He has written several three-act plays, one of which, "An American Bride," was secured four years ago by Al. H. Woods to feature Julian Eltinge. A. H. Woods paid the Captain a substantial advance royalty on the play, but at the last moment Eltinge threw it down in favor of a musical comedy, and the Captain's play was shelved. However, Lester Lonergan produced it later in New Bedford, Mass., and it was also produced on the Coast and is now in Stock. Another of his three-act plays, "Platonic Love," has lately been purchased by the Universal Company for a big film production and Captain Peacocke is writing it into scenario form for Miss Florence Lawrence, to be produced immediately.

He is also the author of numerous vaudeville sketches, and two years ago had five sketches playing successfully throughout the country. His sketch, "Lady Pat," which was published in The Smart Set some time ago, has been well received abroad, and was presented by Captain Peacocke's sister (Lady Gardner) and Captain Philip Scott (son of the late Clement Scott) before the Viceroy of India last year.

Captain Peacocke has in contemplation another big feature for the Universal Company, which, he claims, will surpass in thrills the Annette Kellerman production, "Neptune's Daughter."

LUBIN OUTDOOR STUDIO AT LOS ANGELES.

The stage shown in this picture is 150 feet by 100 feet and will accommodate several sets at once. Many of the indoor scenes of the Lubin Western photoplays are made on this stage.

Mabel Normand, Key to Many Laughs in Keystone Comedies

"DELIVER us, O Lord, from the woman who attempts comedy," is a prayer quite commonly uttered by those who sit in judgment on the performances of those who earn their livelihood by entertaining the public. The reviewer's contention is that if there has been granted the gentler sex the saving sense of humor the proof of it is not frequently given in the amusement field. In support of the contention it will be pointed out that the women of the stage whose fun-making efforts are not pitiful to behold can almost be numbered on the fingers of one hand.

It is to the credit of the women who have directed their attention to the photoplay within the past few years that among them are to found numerous exceptions to the rule which these captious critics imply, and notable among these women is Miss Mabel Normand, regularly appearing in Keystone comedies and known wherever "the movies" thrive, whether it be in Nome, Alaska, or Cape Town, South Africa.

Miss Normand's initial appearance before the camera was as a member of the Vitagraph forces. Thence she went to the Biograph Company, where she was thrown into contact with Mack Sennett, than whom there is no more favorably known director of comedy pictures at the present time. In these two engagements it was clearly established that here, indeed, was a woman with a sense of humor, and when Mr. Sennett undertook the formation of the Keystone Company, Miss Normand was invited to fill the position of leading woman with the organization which has since become so justly popular wth that large percentage of moving picture fans who crown comedy on the screen as king of all the styles of photoplay entertainment.

Soon after the establishment of the Keystone studios at Edendale, near Los Angeles, Cal., under the direction of Mr. Sennett, Miss Normand's development as a premier screen comedienne was begun.

The Keystone comedies captivated the public from the start, for the reason that it once became apparent that they had a style and character all their own. Mr. Sennett's fertile brain created one novel plot after another, each more fantastic and more excruciatingly funny than the last. And Miss Normand, always original and full of clever inventions in make-up and stage business, collaborated with him to make the releases the huge successes which they have proved to be.

In those early Keystone days, as now, Mr. Sennett and Miss Normand were supported by players selected with the greatest care with regard to their fitness for comedy work. Performances were of uniform excellence with high lights here and there, but "Keystone's Mabel's" extraordinary ability is attested by the fact that she easily outstripped all of her sisters in the company and became as great a screen favorite as some of the male members who had been recruited from the regular theatrical ranks after having established themselves as specialists in comedy.

Miss Normand's power is due, in a large measure, to her extraordinary ability in facial expression. It seems to make but little difference what kind of a character she is called upon to impersonate—she is never at a loss to create the type. Her versatility and daring, her compelling type of beauty, and, most of all, her sympathetic understanding of what the average man or woman regards as humorous, have made Miss Normand one of the most fascinating of actresses, either in pictures or the legitimate. In private life she is just the energetic, enthusiastic, fun-loving girl that she typifies each time she appears on the screen. She rides like a Centaur, swims like a fish, and, with muscles as strong and springy as cold-rolled steel, is well qualified to hold up her end in any of the Keystone stories, which are noted for their strenuous action.

Some of the best work which Miss Normand has ever done has been while playing opposite Mr. Sennett, and that she is destined to add greatly to her reputation is assured by the announcement made not long ago that Mr. Sennett himself is to resume his roles before the camera, serving both as director and actor.

That Mr. Sennett is to appear in comedy releases of his own direction is the result of a strong popular demand voced by moving picture fans who remember his splendid work of other days. While Miss Normand's art is absolute, there has always seemed to exist between her and Mr. Sennett a more perfect artistic understanding than has ever been noticeable between her and any other playing associate. This perfect understanding makes for perfect pictures.

American Studios at Santa Barbara

Beautiful Architecture and Extensive Modern Equipment Combined to Form One of America's Great Motion Picture Plants.

SANTA BARBARA, "city of the smiling channel," is one of the most charming resorts of the state of California. It is one of the foremost "see-America-first" points known to travelers. Enterprising copywriters have referred to it as "sun-kissed, ocean-washed, island guarded, mountain girded." Little wonder that it has become a Mecca for tourists from all points of the world.

Santa Barbara, indeed possesses a rare charm that is distinctly its own. Within the curving bay is a smiling sea, reflecting by day the rays of sunlight and by night the beams of moonlight that fall over the mountain crest. The natural beauties have been enhanced by appreciative residents who have spared no expense in adding tasteful architectural structures.

In this veritable paradise are located the studios and laboratories of the American Film Manufacturing Company. On July 5, 1912, the "Flying A" cowboys rode up from LaMesa—a distance of about 250 miles—as did the padres of old over the first trail blazed in California, El Camino Real (The King's Highway). The natives of Santa Barbara looked askance at the travel-stained aggregation, which made a rather picturesque appearance. The players followed and the entire troupe formed a highly respectable colony. Temporary quarters were secured for the time until a permanent location could be found. In the fall of the same year, ground was broken for the new and permanent home. Elaborate plans had been prepared and the construction work was carefully executed.

Few, if any, studios, can claim better appointments or an environment so well designed by nature for the production of moving pictures than are possessed by this American studio. It is a studio of beauty and brilliancy, firm and substantial, serviceable and satisfying, making a fine setting on the dreamy slopes surrounding it, with the mountain ranges forming a magnificent background. Its proximity to the famous Santa Barbara Franciscan Mission, whose altar lights have not been dimmed since its founding in 1786, has lent the studio a soul and atmosphere that could scarcely be found elsewhere. The graceful, commanding towers of the mission have been reproduced, as have also the arched cloisters; but instead of brown-robed friars finding seclusion and rest therein, the photoplay stars find inspiration and incentive for their task of serving the public. Less imposing features of old architecture have been embodied in the low adobe buildings by the ornamental wall, which forms the major portion of the front. In the center of this attractive front is the principal arch with its ornamental iron gates, constituting the drive-way into the semi-tropical gardens within.

The spirit of early California has been renewed in all that makes up the exterior of the buildings. The main buildings cluster about the open court, like the Spanish mansion patios, where in times of old gracious and polite cavaliers paid homage to fair senoras and senoritas with true Castillian gallantry.

Not unlike a sentry the administration building towers over the other structures in majestic dignity. Upon entering this structure, with its exterior appearances of quiet, it seems somewhat incongruous to encounter the busy atmosphere of a metropolitan office. Immediately off from the main office is the sanctum of the president, Samuel S. Hutchinson, with its windows looking out on the gardens and the street. An inside tier provides offices for each of the directors. In the same building is located the projecting room, as completely equipped as a modern theatre. The chemical laboratories, where all negatives are developed, are located on the first and second floors of the same building.

On the opposite side of the grounds, to balance the artistic architectural ensemble, is a building quite similar to the one just described, where are located the Green rooms and dressing rooms for the players. The most imposing structure, the magnificent glass studio, sits far back from the street, always glistening, whether in strong sunlight or in the slanting moonlight rays.

The garage, carpenter-shops, etc., are conveniently located and add to the artistic effect of the whole. The large court in the center of the group of buildings really constitutes two beautiful gardens. One is tropical and sub-tropical in its growths, with palms, ferns and other specimens that flourish in such climates; the other may be called a formal garden with its hedge-bordered walk, plots of beautiful vari-colored flowers, Roman seats and splashing fountains, embellished by pergolas with luxuriant climbing roses and floral vines, all making a gorgeous picture, the full view of which is obstructed from the street by the high ornamental concrete and iron fence, through the gates of which one can secure only a glimpse of the beauty within.

Every consideration has been given to the personal convenience of the players. The grounds are beautifully laid out and no expense has been spared to supply the most pleasing environment. The natural beauties and the artistic effects installed make a delightful combination, which stimulates the highest ideals and yields most efficient results. The buildings and grounds cover an area of several acres.

Three companies are now working at Santa Barbara and the whole aggregation makes one happy colony. The first two companies are under the direction of Sydney Ayres and Thomas Ricketts, respectively, producing the "Flying A" releases. The third company produces the "Beauty" pictures, under the direction of Harry Pollard.

The location of the studios in a community of culture has added remarkably to the personnel of the acting forces. They are not of the street-posing variety, but have established their own homes or have taken up their residences in the foremost hotels, where the comforts of home life can be enjoyed. They move in the best society in the city and suburbs.

Leading American Players

Some of the "Flying A" Stars Who Have Delighted the Patrons of Many Photoplay Theatres.

THOUGH most of the members of the stock company of the American Film Manufacturing Company are on almost speaking terms with the readers of the Moving Picture World the accompanying sketches will serve the purpose of a more intimate introduction and create a livelier interest in them.

The versatile young actress, Margarita Fischer, was born in the Middle West. As a child her talent was so pronounced that her father decided to form a company and star her as "Babe Fischer." As early as fourteen years of age she played the leads in all the well-known stock productions. On the death of her father, Margarita secured an engagement with Walter Sanford and played leads for a long season. Other prominent engagements were with T. Daniel Frawley in Canada, and Joseph Medill Patterson.

Her motion picture experiences have been a continuous triumph. Miss Fischer is blessed with youth and great beauty, and possesses wonderful powers of facial expression. She can literally "talk with her eyes." She is exceptionally good in emotional parts, but is almost as much at home in light comedy—and surely there was never a more pathetic "poor girl" on the screen, or a sweeter "old lady" when the opportunity presents itself.

Margarita Fischer is now universally known as the "Beauty Girl."

Harry Pollard is Kansas born, but his family migrated to California, where he was brought up on a ranch. He learned to ride and became strong and athletic. He got his first liking for the stage by winning a competition at school for the best recitation, and at the age of eighteen secured a minor position at the Alcazar Theater in San Francisco. His rise after this was rapid, and although he held many positions as lead in prominent stock companies, he returned several times to be welcomed warmly at the Alcazar. He is well known in vaudeville circles, having toured the country with Margarita Fischer in "When Hearts Are Trump" and other sketches.

His years of experience, coupled with an excellent screen appearance, sound dramatic training, and absorption in his work, as well as an unerring eye to detail, fit him peculiarly for his position as director and leading man for the "Beauty" brand.

Miss Vivian Rich entered the theatrical profession as a child, specializing in boy parts. She frequently made her appearance on Broadway to large and appreciative audiences.

Miss Rich enjoys the singular distinction of having been born on the high seas, but as her parents were United States subjects she rightfully claims this as her country. The first years of her life were spent in Philadelphia, and her education was acquired in New York and Boston.

She maintains bachelor quarters at Santa Barbara, California, and enjoys all out-door sports—riding, swimming and tennis, and is particularly fond of aeroplaning. She enjoys the wierd and uncanny. Miss Rich has marked histrionic ability and applies herself to her art with an untiring devotion which marks her successful career.

The popular photoplay artiste, Miss Winifred Greenwood, acquired a large following on the legitimate stage, having starred in "The Midnight Express," "Sapho," "Camille," etc.

ADMINISTRATION BUILDING.
GLASS STUDIO.
SECTION OF FORMAL GARDEN

GENERAL EXTERIOR VIEW.
INTERIOR OF STUDIO.
MECHANICAL LABORATORY.

American Film Manufacturing Co.'s Studios and Laboratories, Santa Barbara, Cal.

She subsequently toured the country with her own company for two seasons.

Miss Greenwood has played approximately three hundred parts in "legitimate." This, of course, is only a small percentage of the parts she has played in pictures since her debut some three and a half years ago, and she attributes her great success in this field to her fine emotional ability. As a student Miss Greenwood is devoted to music and French. Outdoor sports are very attractive to her and she freely indulges in swimming, riding, canoeing, tennis and golf.

The basis of her phenomenal popularity lies in her indomitable desire to please the public.

William Garwood has been graced with a charming personality that has endeared him to a vast public and a host of personal friends. He has had an extended experience in the at Oakland, and then played in stock, such as Belasco's Alcazar, Felice Morris, Liebler and others.

For the past two years he has played in pictures with great success and he has won a large following among ardent picture fans throughout the country.

Miss Louise Lester, character woman for the "Flying A" company, was long identified on the legitimate stage before her advent in motion pictures. She has played in various stock companies throughout the United States, being supported by such stars as Sid Toler, Howard Hall and Maurice Freeman. She has been starred and featured from coast to coast, and when with Liebler she created her own parts. She made her first appearance in character work in Bush Temple, Chicago, about five years ago, after which she entered the ranks of picture stars.

Group of Screen Favorites Who Appear in American Film Manufacturing Co. Productions.

legitimate, and pictures have claimed him only for several years past.

In one production he took the part of a farmer. The atmosphere and the environment of the scene so fascinated him that he took up agriculture as a hobby and is now operating a complete farm.

Edward Coxen is a good-looking, virile young man and a manly lover. He was born in London and as an infant made the voyage to America with his parents. They journeyed on to San Francisco, California, where he secured his education. Mr. Coxen spent some time at the University of California, at Berkeley, and then launched out on a commercial career. From this he drifted into prospecting and took up civil engineering; but, as he puts it, "a problem in mathematics interested me only so long as it remained unsolved," so he followed the bent of his heart and sought the foot-lights.

In 1906 he spoke his first line at the Majestic Theater, San Francisco. After the big fire there he played in "Ye Liberty"

Miss Lester made a big hit in her characterization of "Calamity Anne," in a special series under this title put out by the American company, and has proved a success in every picture in which she has appeared.

Jack Richardson, who plays heavy leads with the "Flying A" company, made his first appearance on the legitimate stage in Chicago seven years ago in "The Royal Chef." Later he played in the far West in the Metropolitan and Orpheum stock companies. In the year 1909 Mr. Richardson made his first appearance in pictures.

His initial work with the American company was in the production of "$5,000 Reward, Dead or Alive." Since that time he has been killed so often that he sometimes finds it hard to believe that he is really alive. Mr. Richardson is a thorough horseman, having been trained in Culver Military Academy. His favorite mount in pictures is "Mike," the most valuable horse in the corrals of the American Company.

The principal characteristic of Mr. Richardson is his general good nature.

Doings at Los Angeles.

THE funniest happening of this week was the "Movie Concert" given by the municipal band of Santa Monica, which plays at Ocean Park. Friday night the band was led by members of the N. Y. M. P. Co., from Inceville, and of all the fun that was experienced there, nothing eclipsed it. George Osborne, "the dear old man director," started the music with "I Love You California," and followed it with "Auld Lang Syne," making quite a hit with the thousand hearers. The band is a good one, and the temporary director took all the honors, which he deserved. Barney Sherry followed with a few bits of Irish melody, and then came Water Belasco, with a make-up that stormed the plaza. Slim Goddard whooped 'er up with cowboy tunes, and dainty Mildred Harris then took the baton and the many listeners applauded long after she had played "School Days." Cyril Gardner, the juvenile player, then did his best with some rag time, and Glenn Snow rendered a few "selections." The last leader was W. A. Brooks, of the 101 ranchers, who played the grand finale. Next week the Vitagraph players will give their concert. Many people were present and they all enjoyed seeing the musical movies.

* * *

And they still come! This time articles of incorporation have been filed for the Navajo Film Co., for $100,000. M. N. Vassar, P. H. Kent and others are at the head of the new concern, but no particulars can be had.

* * *

G. P. Thurman, of the Balboa Co., probably did not think much of motor cops, but since last week he has changed his mind, for he was doing 70 miles per, in an effort to elude one of the nimble tired men, and in consequence he went before the court and answered to the charge of speeding. Th speed officer swore that Thurman had gone 70, and it took 76 for him to catch up with the speeding movie man, who was on his way to Long Beach.

* * *

Rollin S. Sturgeon started work this week on a three reeler that he brought back with him from New York. It is a roaring Western, and ought to get the story over well as he went over it coming out on the train. He has joined the 100,000 and over motorists of Southern California, by taking into his garage a nifty gray baby touring car. He is now learning to slip the clutch and shift gears, and also to steer. Mary H. O'Connor, who was formerly in the scenario department here for Mr. Sturgeon, has again come under his supervision, being "special feature reader." As a side line she is the coast representative for the various literary agents and publishing firms that control the moving picture rights of famous authors and playwrights.

* * *

The Santa Barbara M. P. Co., headed by capitalists of that city, has started work in the mountainous country with Lorimer Johnston as director general. He was formerly with the American, but went to the new concern, which is to make only features. It seems to be a pastime with rich men to start studios.

* * *

H. B. Warner arrived here this week and started immediately on "The Ghost Breaker" for the Lasky Co. He was met at the station by Fred Kley, and escorted to the studio. There is much improvement going on here, as several new buildings are in the course of construction, and more ground is being sought by the managers.

* * *

June 18 it rained here, and David Hartford, producing for Jesse Robbins, on the telephone said: "What? We not working today? Well, if you come out here you will see a pretty busy stage. Been working all day, and will only have to delay the exteriors; let 'er rain." Their electric lighting system is working to perfection.

* * *

Field Manager Allen, of Inceville, is happily at home in the new two-story building in the canyon studio. It was finished this week, and everyone is happy to have the office so near to the main part of the town. A new road has just been finished which gives access by wagon to 18 acres that could only be reached before by horseback. This opens a new territory which is luxurious in new scenes and settings.

* * *

The Jungle Film Co. has been organized at the side of Eastlake Park, opposite the Selig wild animal farm. It has a large collection of domestic and ferocious animals. Edwards and Ronan are at the head of the new film company which will turn out only wild animal pictures. Paul Machette is the director. A company of players is being collected for the first release.

* * *

Wilfred Lucas has started a 48-reel series featuring Cleo Madison, and in this big installment release she doubtless and more, even plays a twin sister and then her own mother. The title of the first is "The Flower of the Flames."

* * *

Carlyle Blackwell, although across the continent, has sent for his car, and it has been shipped to him in the east. That means then that he will not return very soon to the old hunting ground.

* * *

One of the Selig companies is busy producing a few reels at Glendale this month. New settings and atmosphere caused the company to send a few players out to a new pasturage.

* * *

Another director has been added to the fold. William D. Taylor, who led the large cast in "Captain Alvarez" has been given charge of a company at the Balboa and has already completed a three-reel story from his own stock. Next week he starts on still another original one.

* * *

Courtenay Foote, already introduced, has joined Bosworth and will soon be busy on some new Jack London pictures. The new studio is progressing rapidly and will shortly be ready to house the growing company.

* * *

J. P. MacGowan and Helen Holmes, together with other Kalemites, have gone up to Death Valley, Goldfield, and on to Funeral Range to get some true desert stuff. They certainly will get it there, from mirages down to the white, bleaching bones of long-dead prospectors, whose lives were lost in the hunt for gold.

* * *

Los Angeles is quite a literary hub, as is shown by the large number of scenario writers. If the postal department suspended payment of ordinary postage, the fees for scenarios would afford enough revenue to keep the office going full blast. Everyone from car conductor up to high officials "dashes" off movie plays, and even about "1/10 of 1 per cent." sell.

* * *

It seems that everyone has little ups and downs. Unfortunately Mrs. Thomas H. Ince, while driving her roadster accidentally ran into a woman who tried to cross a down town street in front of the automobile, but the pedestrian was not seriously injured.

* * *

Walter Edwards, Harry Keenan, Leona Hutton and cameraman Gove returned from a pleasant trip to Pinecrest, way up in the clouds, where they did some wonderful snow pictures. They tell of a fine time and say the weather was unbearably hot, although a mile and over above sea level. Some college chaps and tourists furnished background for the mob scenes, and trailed the company about the mountains. The Broncho players are aways having funny experiences.

* * *

Director Barker is putting on a seven-reel rip-snorting Western at the Broncho camp, with W. S. Hart featured. Some real old western properties are being used, and Bat Masterson, Hickok, and others of the old regime, or "gang" would surely recognize the old truck. Clara Williams is the woman lead, and the two are busy now in their respective roles. The company will go to the Grand Canyon to get appropriate settings for parts of the picture. Barker looks like a senator with the seven-reel script, which resembles some kind of a tax bill about to be brought before the house.

* * *

D. W. Griffith diplomatically secured some true society scenes recently in Pasadena when a garden fete was in progress. The leaders of the fete would not permit him to use the film until they had witnessed the running of the first print at the studio. The settings were so beautiful that they could not refuse him permission to use them.

* * *

At the Photoplayers' Club last week a delightful session was enjoyed by many members. They reveled in a good old smoker, beerfest, and a few boxing matches. Saturday evening last was ladies' night, and a great party it was.

CLARKE IRVINE.

Moving Picture Educator

Conducted by the REV. W. H. JACKSON

Educational Pictures in Government Hands at Home and Abroad.

IN AMERICA, as well as in England, the best uses of the moving picture for educational purposes only, is to be seriously taken up by the national government. England has been rather slow in respect of authoritative adaptation of the powers of kinematography—this may have been from the fact that in scholastic circles the moving picture was feared rather than understood; further, it seemed that it was necessary that a beginning had to be made in a manner distinct from the ordinary channels, which at first seemed the natural one.

Educational Kinematograph Association Formed.

An association of the above name has now been formed and has held its first meeting, with an attendance of leading men from every profession, and under auspices of a most exceptional character, the list of names being a most formidable one, and one which is in itself a guarantee of immediate, definite and profitable results. A member of parliament present reported that he had brought the matter up in the House of Commons and had received governmental assurance that His Majesty's Board of Education "being fully aware of the possible uses of this new instrument, were making investigations." In speaking upon the adoption of the report of the proceedings Professor Gregory (Editor of School World and of Nature) said "the time had come when they must look to the positive and constructive side and to help to turn the kinematograph into one of the most efficient educational instruments." A strong board of directors was appointed with a most efficient executive committee, of which Mr. Morley Dainow, B.Sc., is secretary.

Recommendations by Mr. Morley Dainow, Secretary E.K.A.

The secretary of the new organization named above, writing to the London Bioscope, advises that current events form about the best films with which to attract and instruct the young in the schools. Such advice is most natural to anyone studying the best interests of juvenile development. The Educator more than a year ago made this suggestion here, and, in exactly the same way in which Mr. Dainow now advises, i. e., that at least once a week children should be taken to see pictures of this character. Dr. Dainow says:—"Apart from the purely pedagogical value of illustrating current events by the kinematograph, there is the historical value. These films are recording history. What is a current event this week will be an historical event next week or next year, and for all time. If a historian wished to write the social history of the twentieth century, the moving picture would give him the best and most reliable information. It is most important, then, to devise means and methods of keeping these films, for they are much more than 'the abstract and brief chroniclers of our time.'" As a result of this suggestion the following resolution was adopted:

> That representation be made to moving picture firms of the desirability of taking steps to keep a record and specimens of these useful topical films for educational purposes.

In America.

The American Government has long ago blazed the way for our British friends in the handling of educational kinematography, although no definite organization has been formed, yet much work has been done and every department is using the moving picture in a very practical way. It really seems that the public school is about the last place where systematic kinematography can be taught; this is only because the effective working out of the necessary plans is such a Utopian one. Everywhere except in the educational department it has been possible to make an immediate beginning, and it must be said to the credit of the government that where it was possible to use the moving picture not a moment has been lost in making an effective start. Probably the Department of Agriculture because of the wider scope of its work has so far done most for the good of moving picture teaching.

Traveling Government Picture Houses.

The Department is now equiping special cars to go over the entire country, making stops at the best centers for the purpose of exhibiting at that center whatever is most necessary for its welfare. In poultry regions, for instance, pictures are shown of the best ways of keeping poultry, the ways of candling eggs, or of storing or packing them for long-distance travel; also the best markets and the best routes.

Where dairying is the staple trade every known advantage in the knowledge of the government is freely given in picture and lecture form to the dairyman; most important are the descriptive lessons on all kinds of diseases and ravages with which from time to time the farmer has to contend, and upon which the government has, after much cost, gained much valuable information, and which, thanks to the picture, can be given freely everywhere, especially to those too far away from help. No greater boon has come to the rural communities bringing practical and financial help than that conveyed by means of the moving pictures of this kind.

The office of Public Roads of the department has now been organized. It was found that many communities suffered great loss because often the roads were of such a nature that the farmer could not market his produce. Road building as it is done in France, where they have become expert, has been filmed. These pictures, together with a lecturer, are now touring the country, leaving behind suitable literature in very instance so that after the example has been shown it may be easy to follow the printed instructions. Thus a campaign of education is being carried on.

Using Picture Houses.

The government is by no means selfish in this great undertaking in that they would keep all this helpful work in their own hands. Any section of the country may apply for the loan of the films most required for their particular advice and they will be loaned to them, so that wherever there is a picture-machine and operator, there may be established a branch of the governmental service. From this plan it can readily be seen that if the work is so successful in one department it may be equally so in another; therefore, it will not be long before the Department of Education will be equally well fitted to carry out a similar idea and so the time is not far distant when the "little red school house" will be as well off as the university.

Church and School Social Service Organization.

Under the above title there has just been organized in New York a company having for its object the teaching in a systematic way of all those subjects which are required by churches, schools and social institutions. It would seem that the personnel of this new organization is largely made up of those connected with the National Board of Censorship, and of the International Peace Forum.

Dr. Carter, the president, says:—"This organization is not joined to commercial interests, but is one of clergymen, educators and social service workers, formed for religious and philanthropic purposes, to uplift humanity through this popular and widespread amusement." Offices have been opened at No. 18 East Forty-first street and arrangements are being made for immediately establishing the service among the organizations it seeks to help. That there is a large field awaiting such an organization everyone interested in educational kinematography well knows. It now remains to be seen how far this society will be able to go towards filling the demand. Another society is also being formed under the management of the Rev. Charles Stelzel, who gained his experience as to the requirements of such a work when in charge of the Labor Temple in New York. The most difficult part of this proposition will be the securing of 400 churches to pledge their co-operation.

The Paul J. Rainey African Pictures.

The second series of Paul Rainey's pictures, taken in British East Africa, are now being shown in New York. Of course they are interesting and educational, but they are not equal to the first series. With the exception of local conditions many of the scenes might have been taken in the quiet of an English or American zoo. The animals gathered about the "water-holes" are those of common knowledge like the giraffe and zebra. Their coming long distances to drink must have taken away their wildness, for they certainly seemed a very domestic herd.

A cheetah hunt, in which natives show their method of killing the animals with poisoned arrows, seemed rather a simple chase, the animal is easily treed and is thus a ready victim for the hunter. Everyone is perhaps sufficiently familiar with baboons, not to need special pictures of them; of course they form the amusing part of the series. Judging from these pictures this section of Africa is certainly not attractive in scenery, although the lecturer said it was beautiful. The lion hunt is evidently intended to be the masterpiece. It may possess certain dangers not realized by those sitting peacefully before the screen, but there are no "thrills," so that the audience is not held breathless in anticipation of any tragedy; the lion took his part with good grace, hiding in the brush from the dogs, until forced out only to be shot before taking a run of more than twenty yards. The best part of this picture is in the detail of the photography, whereby it is possible to see the dying convulsions of the fallen animal. It would appear, judging from the series, that the hunting of wild animals in Africa is not very hazardous. Many young Americans will want to be competitors of Paul Rainey unless he shows more dangers than are depicted in this set of films. The whole forms a good addition to those of a similar character.

Educational Notes.

Burton Holmes will shortly issue a series of his "Travelettes" in the motion picture theaters of the country. They will occupy about 50 minutes instead of two hours, and Mr. Holmes' interesting trips will be presented on the screen and a lecturer will deliver the traveler's original lecture at each performance.

* * *

The United States revenue cutter McCulloch is on its way to the Pribiloff Islands, carrying with it a moving-picture outfit and operator, who is instructed to make films showing conditions throughout the seal-bearing islands off the Alaskan coast. The three United States commissioners, Prof. C. H. Clark, W. H. Osgood and E. A. Preble, have been sent to investigate the seal fisheries, as well as Canadian commissioners who are on the McCulloch, and will be accompanied everywhere on their inspection trips by the moving-picture operator, who is to supply the government with record films of seals and the seal fishing industry.

* * *

"William Tell," Schiller's famous drama in six parts, is now on the market. The pictures were actually taken in the Alps, and thousands of Swiss people were used in the cast.

* * *

A good suggestion for school teachers who desire to reach the children is to devote one language period a week to oral expression and story-telling, using as a basis a moving-picture scene which they have witnessed. From teachers who have tried the experiment, the results have been more than pleasing, and as a constructive work it is said to be one of the best experiments ever tried in the public schools.

* * *

Churches continue to advance the cause of kinematographic illustration and instruction. Philadelphia is inaugurating a church supply service among various protestant churches of the city—if the project is successful it will be worked out in permanent form by the formation of a company which by the fall expects to be fully equipped for the winter work.

* * *

In Norfolk, Virginia, also, the use of the moving picture in the churches is spreading. The N. T. Supply Co. of that city has just installed a complete outfit in the Cumberland Street Methodist Episcopal Church, the same to be used in connection with the regular religious work of the church. A correspondent says that the congregation greatly appreciated the helpful addition to their services.

William A. Pinkerton, world-renowned as one of the greatest detectives, recently addressed the twenty-first convention of the International Association of Chiefs of Police in Grand Rapids, Michigan, among other things saying: "The moving picture has become a mode of instruction as well as a form of popular amusement. Within its province lie powers that cannot be too seriously considered. We have all felt the power of pictured suggestion, the spiritual spring of action which makes so much for good or evil in the world." He deplored the making of pictures under conditions where it was evident that lust for money was greater than the sense of decency, believing that such people should be brought to book for their sins on this score. The young and unsophisticated have need of our watchful care in these days when fashions and pleasures are pitched in an Oriental key.

BRITISH NOTES.

(Special Correspondence of THE WORLD.)

THE FIRST of the Vitagraph Broadway features was unspooled to a representative gathering of English renters and exhibitors in London two days ago. For their first importation to this country of a series of films, news of whose quality preceded their arrival, Mr. Smith chose "A Million Bid."

* * *

"Mr. Jack Spratt" is the newest creation of the Clavendon Company. He will make his debut in a few weeks in a number of short comedies for which a great sale is anticipated by the makers. Speaking of comedies, Keystones are going "great guns" both in London and the provinces, comparatively few programs at the better class theaters being without a representative subject of this company. Generally those with a touch of sensation prove the most popular, such as "The Gusher," or "Love and Gasoline." At a theatre in Liverpool the former was exhibited twice to the same audience; by unanimous request, of course.

* * *

Lucille Love, of Universal, is touring the English countries by motor to make the acquaintance of exhibitors, press-men and the general public previous to the release of the films in which she is featured. The reception in Manchester was really enthusiastic and gave the observer to wonder why she did not have her hands in bandages when not in use, so prolific and vigorous were the shakes. Although not absolutely original, there is no disputing the success of this system of advertising forthcoming features, especially from the point of view of the foreign manufacturer. To see picture favorites in the flesh is an incentive and encouragement for patrons to see the subsequent picture.

* * *

Some time ago the Transatlantic Film Company, Ltd. (the British office of the Universal organization), announced it had taken over certain articles of the Keystone company. This statement had a sequel in the law courts when the first-named company was ordered (upon an injunction given to the New York Motion Picture Corporation, jointly with the Western Import Co.), to cease circulating such statements pending the trial of the case. In the Appeal Court last week the Transatlantic Co. appealed against this order and was successful.

* * *

Heat has its effect upon films in more ways than one, and the lesson of the last two summers has been brought home forcibly to showmen during the recent spell of the sun's brilliance. Those who have fortified themselves by continuing to exhibit pictures of the best standard do not experience any great falling off in receipts, but unfortunately there is a class of exhibitor in this country who as soon as June arrives shows nothing but junk until October. He defeats his own object by anticipating the evil, whereas if he kept a level standard the fluctuation would not be so noticeable. Unfortunately the tendency to economize at the expense of a theater's reputation is evident at some of our best shows.

J. B. SUTCLIFFE.

B. NICHOLS, OF LONDON, IN TOWN.

B. Nichols, the well-known film man of London, arrived in New York on June 27. It is his intention to push through some urgent business and return to England on the Mauretania on July 11.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Serials.

SUPPOSE we look into serials for a moment. A few weeks ago every one was saying what fine things serials are. Now several have hinted that they are put out by the manufacturer for no other reason than to clinch the service and that the serial habit is worse than opium, in that once it gets the manager in its clutches it is hard to let go.

Personally we favor the serial. The good serial makes good business for the man who handles it properly. He may be required to hold to one service until the serial comes to a close, but he holds his patrons in the same manner and get more good than hurt. Lately we told of one man who was in an exchange service in which the last of the "Who Will Marry Mary?" series was burned before it came his turn and he spent time and money in finally obtaining it from another branch of the General Film.

That man went at it in the right spirit. He interested his patrons in Mary. He stood right by her until she was married off, and the destruction of the last story of the series was a good business for him in the long run since he gained credit for enterprise in finally obtaining a copy.

On the other hand a manager recently complained that he wanted to change to a better exchange service, but he was held down by a series story. He is situated in a town where but a single exchange is able to serve him without an almost prohibitive expressage account. He must take what he gets or give up the serial and the weekly serial is not—to his thinking—an offset to the vile condition of the films by the time they reach him. His letter suggests that he feels that he has become a slave to the "habit." And yet it is clearly shown that the series picture is helping his business, perhaps to a point where he might pay for a newer and better service. He is taking 60-80 day stuff. A small additional payment would get him newer and therefore fresher service. He blames the serial instead of general conditions. Just as a matter of fact we think that he could drop the serial and his people would soon forget it, but a change to some other service would merely bring him some other serial. If we had his house we would be grateful for something that held the interest from week to week.

The Newspaper Series.

Another correspondent argues that the newspaper series is an imposition in that he has to run the story within two weeks to get the benefit of the newspaper advertising.

This presents another proposition, but a very simple one. He has only to answer one question. Will the advertising; and the increased patronage the advertising will bring, offset the additional cost of getting the series early enough? If it does, he is not being imposed upon. He is getting what he pays for and perhaps more. No one is requiring him to take that particular series. Take the "Perils of Pauline," for example. The Eclectic cannot insist that he take their reels. If he does arrange for the Pauline series, it is because he makes money by it. If he makes money by it he is not being imposed upon. The same holds good with Lucille Love as it will with the coming Thanhouser series.

Of course he may not be able to afford to hire the fresh reels, and perhaps his patrons are asking for it. He doesn't want to get the reputation of being behind the times. If the demand is strong he has only to ask his patrons if they will pay an increased admission to return the added cost of the series. If they will, let him sell season tickets for the series that he may be assured of this additional return and then book the stuff.

Of course the manufacturers are looking for their own return, but they are not trying to gouge this money out of the exhibitor. They merely say that if he wishes to participate in this extra advertising he will have to stand his modest proportion of the increased cost. It is a simple business proposition and in no way an intentional swindle.

Then Again.

Here is a third angle presented by a live wire.

> And while I'm about it—what do you think about serials? In a town of this size, about four thousand, a feature a week is all you can afford to put on. You lose money on them sometimes. If you take the serial every other week it is hard to hold the interest, and if you take it every week, you have to cut out the features.

We don't quite get the proposition that it is difficult to hold the interest in a feaure issued every other week. The first of all features was "What Happened to Mary," and this came out only once a month, and yet held the interest. Then why is it not possible to hold to the biweekly feature? In the interim a couple of home-made slides will keep the interest up. In the intervals the single features can be run. In time the manager can decide which of the two makes the better return and then make a choice. In most cases the choice will probably be in favor of the serial; at least for the moment, though the serial idea like the multiple is likely to be run down through the presentation of too many serials which lack the proper preparation.

To work up interest while gaining a line on the preference, why not put the matter to a vote? Announce the vote a couple of weeks in advance, and give out the votes every night and not merely one night. More than this, urge everyone to vote each night. Then the man who comes two or three nights has two or three votes, as he is properly entitled to. Here is a suggestion for a form of ballot.

The Photoplace.
John Doe, General Manager,
Doughville, N. Y.

Please assist the management in its desire to please you by indicating on this card your preferences, and depositing it in the box at the entrance or handing it to the usher.

I prefer features.

I prefer serial stories.

Mark with a check the one you prefer.

At a cost of a couple of dollars you can resolve your doubts and at the same time interest your public in the matter.

Why Not?

Here is a letter that reveals a deplorable condition of affairs. A manager writes:

> Up to a short time since we have gone along very nicely, and got along just as well as if we furnished three or four reels.
>
> Now, however, things have changed, and I wish, without comment, to inform you what is happening here.
>
> New elements in the field have started in to corrall the business and here are some of the stunts put on. What do you think of them?
>
> The Country Store.
>
> The Tango and Maxixe dances.
>
> The Post Office.
>
> Pay Day.
>
> Shoson. (Putting on shoes, I believe, but not sure.)
>
> Boxing Contest.
>
> Catching Pig.
>
> Amateur Nights.
>
> Last, but not least, they are now giving away Lots to the one getting the largest number of Coupons.

There are three or four stunts that appear to have been overlooked, but it seems to us that the best idea would be to give a really good show and trust to that to bring business. We like the three-reel show better than the two reeler, as that is a trifle too short, but with three good reels for five or ten cents, according to the service, there should be no need of all these other schemes. As a general thing the management argues that these special nights bring extra business, but, as a matter of fact, they simply advertise that the actual show is not good enough and that something must be done to bolster up a falling business. The burlesque theaters started most of these schemes and now they dare not drop them. A house that has never used these ideas can fight them effectively with advertising.

Three Essentials.

In small space the Lotus Skydome, West End, N. J., explains that there is more to a picture than the subject on the film. It tells it so neatly that perhaps others can use it in this form or with proper adaptation. It might be better to say that there are at least three other essentials. Here it is:

—AND thou NOW OPEN
BESIDE ME IN
THE WILDERNESS
SANG THE PERSIAN POET, FAILING TO REALIZE THAT AFTER ALL, A PHOTO-PLAY CONSISTS OF
MORE THAN THE SUBJECT.
THERE ARE AT LEAST THREE ESSENTIALS—THE
PHOTOGRAPHY, THE SCREEN AND THE PROJECTION.
ALL THESE AND
MORE YOU'LL FIND
IN THE SILENT DRAMAS
At THE LOTUS SKYDOME, OCEAN & BRIGHTON AVES,
WEST END, N. J.
WE HAVE THE EXCLUSIVE SHOWING, BETWEEN LONG BRANCH AND ASBURY PARK, OF ALL THE BROADWAY STAR PRODUCTIONS OF THE FAMOUS PLAYERS—ALL STAR AND JESSE L. LASKY FEATURES.

This is a summer resort airdome, just below Long Branch proper. It might be well to give the hour of performance for the benefit of the stranger within the gates, particularly as they use multiple reels and many people like to see the first reel first. We would like the card a little better were it not all capitals. It would look as well and be easier to read.

Exactly.

"Real Reels" is the house organ of the Notable Feature Film Co., of Salt Lake City. Its editor is George E. Carpenter, R. E., which means regular editor. He preaches advertising and good prices in every paragraph. Here are two separate paragraphs that should be read together.

> The photo-drama has captured the masses. Now go after the classes. Segregate your patrons. Then watch your receipts and bank account grow.
>
> No, the above is not an advertisement of Notable Feature Film dramas, although one is ours—"Les Miserables."
>
> It is a demonstration of how Denver is endeavoring to cut prices. The two advertisements just as they stand, were clipped from the Denver Post. "Les Miserables" at the Princess Theatre for 10 and 20 cents. "Million Bid" at the Isis for a nickel.
>
> Both houses did good business. When the battle was over the management of the Princess Theatre reported that about 75 per cent. of his receipts came from the 20 cent patrons. Enough said!

The "above" is a reproduction of two Denver advertisements, the facts of which are stated in the paragraph. To connect these two paragraphs read the advice that you segregate your patrons and watch the receipts and then the statement that at the Princess the larger receipts came from the twenty cent patrons. If it was a level proposition, 66⅔ of the receipts should have come from the twenty cent seats and not 75%, which argues that these were in greater demand. It usually is the case.

With some managers complaining that they cannot get advanced prices for features and others telling that they sell the best seats first, it is hard to figure the business from one angle, but any old time theatrical man knows there are cheap towns and good towns. Some of them also know that the change from one to the other is largely a matter of education. Time was when Philadelphia theatres largely lived on club benefits (selling tickets at reduced rates for certain nights to lodges and societies) where now they take in regular money at the box offices.

Suppose that some one night you have ten and fifteen cent seats. Then again the next week and the next. Now figure out whether or not it does not pay to have an advance sale and reserved seats. The business is not always going to stay where it started with a flat five cent admission for all parts of the house. Mr. Carpenter knows this. We know it. Now you know it. On your own head be it after this.

An Anniversary.

This shows the Dover (N. J.) Opera House all dolled up for its tenth anniversary. The opera house is not celebrating its tenth anniversary as a photoplay theatre, but as a general place of amusement, though most of the time now it offers pictures in its pretty auditorium. A souvenir program with a lithographed cover was one of the markers, and there was a lot of press notices to go with a gigantic newspaper advertisement. The picture programs were made up of some of the really big features now current and Dover fans must have had a real carnival of features. H. P. Fenimore, the manager, seems to have laid his plans well to make the anniversary something to be remembered.

Can't Be Beaten.

The conductor of a photoplay page in a medium sized town writes that his department has been shut down for the summer "because of the lessening interest in theatrical affairs." It can't be done. With nothing but photoplays in town, at a time when there is nothing else to appeal with, the intelligent managing editor shuts down the one thing that can possibly attract attention ouside a cheap vaudeville show on the roof of the original ten cent store and a cheaper show out in the park. This is the time of year when the intelligent small town editor—if there is such a critter outside of Billord Wright—should be making his big play for the photoplay end against the fall season and some hayseed hair genius shuts down a profitable department just because there is nobody home and doesn't know it's nobody home under his own gable roof rather than in the town itself.

A Diamond D. K.

Eugene O'Keefe, of the Luna Theatre, Billings, Montana, sends in a diamond shape door knob special, and says if we do not like it to go ahead and "pan" it. If a thing is not right we'll proceed to pan even without waiting for consent, but we would rather praise than "pan" a thousand times over. One man profits by adverse comment; that is if he appreciates the spirit in which comment is offered, but a thousand may benefit from the exploitation of something worth while, the same as this very door knob special, one of the most useful forms of advertising yet devised. You are welcome to comment if you want it, but don't think that we want to blow holes in your stuff, because we don't. We want to help and if the best help comes from pointing out error, be it so, but we would a lot rather praise where we can do so honestly. Any darned fool can say stuff is great, because he is not called upon to prove it. And a man can say "rotten" if he does not have to prove it, but constructive criticism is not panning, and we do not want to have any of our friends feel that we find fault merely to find fault. We have never had any part of any job in which we took more real pleasure than this Advertising for Exhibitors department and we'll modestly remark that we have done a couple of good departments in other lines, at that. But nothing is more important at the moment in the photoplay line than helping the managers to advertise their wares properly, because the entire prosperity of every person in the business is, in the last resort, dependent on the angle widely covered by this department.

Now that we have this off our ample chest, let's go back to what Mr. O'Keefe has had hanging on the door knob all this time. It is a white card, five and a half inches square, printed diamond wise. This probably attracts more attention than the square card. Whether it is worth the difference in price depends on what must be paid for the lockup of this form. It costs more because it is more trouble. It costs more in some places than in others. We would prefer a straight card say five by seven, which would probably cost no more and permit a better makeup since it is straight composition. The wording is ambiguous. It announces "two extraordinary features Monday-Tuesday" with the date and "Featuring" and the cut of Miss Alice Joyce. She is featured in but one of the stories, the other being a Biograph. This and the misspelling of Primitive, an "A" being used where the second "I" should be, is about all the real comment. Mr. O'Keefe adds that he does not often use this door knob form of advertising. He says that he also hung them on telephones, etc., which is a new use. He is working on a real program, and we hope that he joins the crowd. He words his small stuff well.

Better.

R. J. Tindell has not yet learned how to ship photographs for reproduction, but this time the fates were kind and at least he did not wrap it up in a newspaper, and so we can show his cycle advertisement. This one, he writes, is pointed at both ends and three feet wide at its greatest diameter. Whether he puts it on over his head like a woman gets into her skirt or draws it over his feet like a man with a pair of trousers, he does not say. We think that the best way would be to build a V in which might be called the prow of the land-ship and draw the back end together with catches after the navigator has entered. We do not know what the tear-like affairs are that drape around Lucille's face, but perhaps they are ribbons terminating in Christmas tree spangles. If they are not, some such affair probably would be very effective. Mr. Tindell works this advertisement stunt for the Grand Theatre, Valdosta, Ga.

Booming Circulation.

Appreciating a good thing, the New Orleans Spotlight, the Fichtenberg publication, now runs in its houses a slide showing the front page of the issue and urging its patrons to be certain that they get a copy. This is a scheme that may be put to good use elsewhere. We think that the Spotlight might be a little less earnestly an advertising sheet and a trifle more gossipy, but it is a capital publication as it is and it makes business. The editorial page alone, almost any issue, would pay the cost. But they do not back up the editorial page.

A Britannica.

J. E. Alford, of the Lomo Theatre, McComb City, Miss., writes that this paper is an encyclopedia, which is a good description, at that. He sends in a program, his first. It is small even for its age, a four by five and a half, four pages, barely announcing the titles and giving the lengths. There is room for a little more, and more should be written and a better use should be made of the back page. There is too much white space. The back could have been made to argue for the house and a reader about the advantages of the theatre would have helped more than an undated "coming." The titles in any case should be in black type, and the days should be dated. It is too white as it stands.

THE PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Going Slowly.

DID you ever see a man being trained for the high jump? The trainer takes a promising jumper, puts him in a gauze shirt, an impressionistic pair of pants, socks and shoes and takes him out to the jumping pit. He does not, at the start, put him over the seven-foot mark. First of all he wants to teach him how to handle his feet on the take off. For that any mark well within the immediate capacity of the jumper will do. The candidate is shown how to get his start, how to make his run, how to "take off" and finally the little tricks by which he seems fairly to lift himself while in the air. Then the bar is put up inch by inch, then by halves, by quarters, even less, until the man's fullest capacity has been developed, but no athlete, amateur or professional, ever, in the history of sport, came out on the field and the first day reached his highest mark.

Hug close the lesson. You try to write a script, a two-reel script, perhaps a six-reel script, right off the jump. Suppose that you try the training method. Learn to write an action. Learn to write a scene. Learn to write two scenes, then three; learn to write a leader. Learn to write a better leader. Learn when to make it a straight leader and when to cut it in. Learn when to write a conversational leader and when the fact leader would be better. Learn to combine the leader with the scene. Learn how to dispense with the leader by making the scene itself more fully explanatory. Learn how to write inserts, then learn when, how and why an insert is better than a leader; learn when a newspaper clipping is better than a letter and when a letter is better than a newspaper clipping. Learn why. Learn what a plot is. Learn what a plot is not. Learn how to take one plot and give it several developments, thereby arriving at as many different results. Then try writing a one-reel script. When you master the one reel, learn to build up the plot, with more plot, into two or more parts. Then go to the jumps and shove the bar up just as high as you want, and keep at it until you make the jump, but first learn the tricks of your trade before you come out in a meet to make a spectacle of yourself.

Don't just sit down and write plays. Perhaps by this method you can, now and then, hit it off and make a sale, but instead of getting all puffed up over that sit down and think how much better you could do if only you had a solid foundation of actual knowledge instead of playing on guess work. Lots of people who sell plays and think they are playwriters are nothing of the sort. They are merely fortunate accidents. The untrained athlete may jump higher than the trained man. He may be a natural born jumper, but he'll beat his own mark by several inches with the proper training.

Be willing to start at the start. Master the mechanics of a single scene before you try to write connected scenes. Right to this day we sometimes find it more fun to sit down and ring the changes on a scene than to dash off the first scene that presents itself and very often the experimental mental visioning of several scenes will start us on a new lead and give a far better finish to a story than was first intended. If a man who sells from eight to twelve subjects a month finds that it pays, cannot you, a beginner, learn to take the same careful pains?

Look on writing as a game and not merely as a means of getting an occasional check. Here is a scene, a piffling little thirty-foot scene. It's just a trivial action. See if you cannot make every movement of that scene pregnant with meaning. Jim enters and takes a knife from a table. Then he goes out and kills someone. That's all there is to the scene, merely that this is where he gets the knife. In he comes, picks it up and out he goes. It's the murder that's important. But is it? Are you certain that this one-man short scene cannot be made to yield more tragic intensity than the actual killing? If you are certain it would seem to be up to you to go back to the ribbon counter or wherever it was that you came from. Stop and think a moment. It is not the murder; not the actual taking of life that is dramatic. If it were all you'd have to do would be to kill a man in every scene—where you do not murder six or eight—and get a most thrillingly dramatic script. But too much murder would be a huge joke and the audience would laugh heartily at your tragedy if it ever got into film. You've got another guess coming.

Think a minute. Here is Jim. Jim is a decent and respectable member of society. Perhaps he stole apples and watermelons when he was a kid, and it is a cinch he went in swimming without the maternal permission, but as matters go Jim is a pretty decent sort of chap, a law-respecting member of society. He knows that it is wrong to stick a knife into another gentleman's heart, and that unless he has a mightly good lawyer, or can do it in entire secrecy, the consequences of the act are apt to be embarrassing, to say the least. But Joe has wronged his sister and will not redeem his fault. Jim is wrought up to the point where lust for vengeance rises superior to his respect for law. He gets a knife and hands it to Joe where it will do the most good. If he merely rushes in, gets the knife and rushes out again, to rush into the next scene, stab Joe and rush out again, the murder is done before we have a halfway decent thrill.

And mind you, the thrill is not in the sight of Jim stabbing Joe. It is in the thought of Jim doing murder, and the longer you can play up that thought the better the mental effect. If you take fifty feet for the two scenes it's all over so soon than it has no effect or may even become comedy.

Now suppose that Jim comes for the knife. It's the first time he ever killed a man. The thought is abhorrent to his instinct, to his reason, even while his passion calls loudly for the blood of his sister's seducer. Play up that emotion. Play it in such a way that it gets over to the audience, and the scene where Jim gets the knife will be vastly more important than the scene where Joe gets it. Compare these two developments:

18—Room—Jim enters—gets knife—exits.

19—Woods—Joe enters—Jim follows—stabs him—exits.

That is one way it might be done. Here is the other.

18—Room—Jim opens door—glances cautiously in—no one there—he enters—quickly closes door—goes to bureau—opens drawer—takes out knife—door slowly opens—Jane appears—enters—Jim does not hear—Jim regards knife with horror—puts down—half turns—rage overcomes his better judgment—with a scowl he picks up knife—feels edge—keen—he is satisfied—Jane horror stricken—comes down—Jim turns—faces Jane—hides knife—she points—slowly he brings knife from behind back—defiant—points accusing finger at her—all her fault—she shrinks back—he makes as though to pass her—she recovers—springs forward—arms about Jim's neck—pleads—he is resolute—he thrusts her from him—throws her to floor—she lies still for a moment—he rushes to door—takes key from lock—exits—closes door—Jane rouses—runs to door—locked—she beats on it with her fists—almost insane.

19—Path—Joe comes toward camera and passes over line—Jim follows—something of the tiger in his ferocity.

20—Another path—Joe coming toward camera—Jim in distance—Joe hears—startled—half turns—Jim sees he is discovered—bounds forward—gives Joe warning—Joe seeks to repel Jim's assault, but Jim rushes in—they struggle.

21—Room as in No. 18—Jane gives up trying to get through door—goes to window—climbs out.

22—Back to No. 20—Joe on ground—dead—Jim stands over him—starts to withdraw knife—cannot—shrinks back from body—alarmed at sound—rushes off—Jane enters—does not see Joe's body until she almost stumbles over it—looks despairingly after Jim—with a sob she sinks down on ground—vainly calls on Joe.

Which of these developments do you think would most rouse your own emotions were you sitting in the theatre instead of at a desk? Certainly the second is the more dramatic. But until you have studied the handling of action to the point where the second development naturally presents itself, you are apt to trust to the mere fact of the murder itself to give your story strength and so you'll write it the first way and let it go at that, knowing no better.

That is only one study. Study all scenes in the same careful manner, that you may learn to get the fullest good from them. Then, when you have mastered scene writing, learn how to condense, for the second development will play three or four times as long as the first, and you must remove other matter if you would keep within the proper limitations of length. Cut out the dead matter that you have been padding with and keep the live material.

And always remember that in drama mental suggestion and appeal to the emotions is more potent by far than the mere sight of crime. When you learn that crime and violence are not synonymous terms with "punch" you will have learned the first great lesson of photoplay.

Writing.

We do not agree with William Lord Wright, who advises authors not to see how many scripts they can write, though perhaps he really means send out. There is a big difference. Fluency and clearness of expression are to be gained only through practice work. Facility in plotting is to be gained only through practice work. The proper development of the action is to be gained only through writing many scripts many times, but the bank account is not be gauged by the number of scripts sent out, but the number sold.

The trouble is that too many persons send out all they write instead of only their best. It is difficult to sell the best. It is impossible to sell the worst, and yet some persons will not see that certain sheets of typed paper are not necessarily good scripts.

One reason for this is the eagerness to gain checks. Naturally one wants to be successful in any undertaking, and success in script writing is to be gauged by acceptances, but if you think only of the checks you want you will not get many. To the contrary you'll lose the value of your postage stamps and obtain nothing in return.

Unless you have some sort of selling arrangement with one or more companies, it is not possible to earn a decent living unless you are able to keep forty to sixty good scripts going the rounds, but this means good scripts and not merely scripts. At the present time there are few photoplay writers who are able to keep this string up for the exceedingly simple reason that few photoplay writers have had a sufficient amount of practice. It is one thing to write and sell a dozen or two dozen, but you need to sell two a week, with the present prices, to get the income you should, and with proper allowance for those that do not sell anywhere this means writing from one hundred and fifty to two hundred a year; no light task nor one lightly to be undertaken.

Each year the market for the writer grows more profitable, the field grows wider, a more intelligent class of editors are replacing the old timers who have not kept pace with things, there is a demand for a better grade of story and more of them. The outlook is excellent, but not more than passing success can come to the man who does not give to the work the careful preparation that a profitable business—any profitable business—demands. Training in this instance is nothing more than the writing of innumerable practice scripts, some of which may eventually be placed on the market, the study of literature (not for plots but for training in plotting), a study of the market that the style may be understood, and the cultivation of patience.

Five years ago the American output was twenty-one scripts a week. It was not easy to find good scripts for that number. Now the output is at least six times that and there are several persons earning a competence through their writing who are not connected with any studio. These persons and the studio people, as well, are largely drawn from those who started to write photoplays five years ago. The newcomers who have succeeded have been men and women trained to literature—or in other words, to some form of plotting—and the real encouragement to those who started to write plays with no previous literary experience is that they have a chance to become the good writers of three or four years hence.

Emmett Campbell Hall has disposed of about 450 scripts, but he has been a writer for twenty-one years. The man who started to write only last year and with no literary experience back of him, will come to the fore in time but not until he has served his apprenticeship. Apprenticeship is only another name for practice, but practice is the writing of scripts for the purpose of study and not always for the purpose of sale.

Most editors will agree that if only ten per cent. of the present output of scripts came into the studios and that the best of the present production, it would be far easier to get better money for those whose work is accepted, but the manufacturer remembers that in the old days the editor used to pay five and ten dollars for stuff and fix it up himself after a fashion and he cannot understand, nor be made to understand, why, with crude ideas more plentiful than ever, he should be asked to pay more. If he could be shown that the average has been bettered, he would be willing to pay for a better average, and so the incompetent who doesn't stand a chance, now or at any time in the future, holds back the success of the man who has made a steady advance.

With one exception, the poorest produced stories come from the studios where the editor is not permitted to pay more than $25 a reel save in exceptional instances, and where his value is judged by the money he pays out and not by the value of what he takes in. This condition is rapidly improving and the market is getting to be more and more difficult for the untrained man, but there probably never will be a time when the studios will be free of hopeless scripts any more than there will ever come a time that magazine editors do not have to return stories that are not even properly spelled.

The first real step in the advancement of the novice comes when he learns to hold back the bulk of his product and sends out only his best. Some do not last that long and some never get beyond the first stage, but the real success of the future will come to the man who is working hard now and bothering the editors as little as possible.

Simple.

Comes another correspondent who wants to stand up for his "rights" and get his scripts back in at least two weeks. He wants to know if he cannot write a line on the script to that effect. Sure. Write that the script must either be accepted or returned within fourteen days and every blamed one of them will be back before then. That's the only trouble with the system. The scripts come back promptly, but they invariably come back. If you want to sell them, let them lie a reasonable time.

And another correspondent, this time a veteran who has mostly been dealing with a single company, writes that he does not like to enter the general market as the editors take so long to pass the stuff. He adds: "The————————gives action within a week. If they can, why cannot the others do the same?"

No doubt they could, and assuredly they should, but the point is that they do not, and to do business with them one must conform to the rules of the buyer. But there is more than one company giving prompt decision for the excellent reason that the companies are finding out—slowly, it is true—that they get better stories in proportion to their recognition of the courtesy that is due the author not because of his "rights" as an author, but as one business man dealing with another. The manufacturers themselves are beginning to realize that they cannot deal with the better class of writers on the old plane and they are mending their ways to meet the new conditions. The company that now pays twenty-five dollars a reel and takes weeks or months to pass on a story, now gets only the junk that the fairer dealing companies have refused. They are using the brains that God gave them and are finding out that it pays to be polite. But at the same time it will pay the author to be the same and not to put a time limit on his scripts.

Be Polite.

The other day we said that the Al Bartlett Film Company was about the only market open for scripts about negroes. As the Bartlett Company has no regular releasing connection, we stated that fact. Mr. Bartlett writes that he has received many letters asking if he is honest. Naturally, a tactful letter like the sort he has received, may pave the way for a lot of sales—and then, again, perhaps it won't. It was not our intention to suggest that you write Mr. Bartlett and ask if he intended to do the fair thing. The facts were stated as they were, merely because this was not a releasing company and not as a suggestion that the honesty of the company was in question.

If you want to do business with any company, risk a script to test them out, don't hustle in a letter asking them for references. This applies to any company and not particularly to the Bartlett.

Another Book.

Adding to the already long list, Ernest A. Dench contributes "Playwriting for Cinema" (Adam and Charles Black, London) a shilling book of about eighty pages of actual text. It seems to be a rather free adaptation of the Esenwein-Leeds "Writing the Photoplay" and our own "Technique of the Photoplay" done over to fit the English mode of thought. Mr. Dench has written nothing new, but on the other hand he has steered clear of bad advice, and the book should prove helpful to the beginner who cannot afford a more complete study of the art.

Thinking Plots.

Lately a woman told us that she had no trouble at all thinking fine ideas while she did her housework, but when she came to think them back again when she had a chance to put them down, she could not recall them properly. There is nothing to prevent the housewife carrying a pad and pencil in her pocket and stopping sweeping long enough to jot down the idea, but we think the trouble with this particular writer was that the plot that sounded good enough while she was sweeping, lost some of its charm when she thought it over again in cold blood.

Even practiced writers sometimes hit a false lead. An idea comes that sounds big, but when it gets to the point where the idea has to be put down on paper, it loses its charm. The trained writer can take out the part that looks the best and build it up, but the beginner may not be able to do this.

It is a great trick to be able to think only the right sort of plots. Few escape having some poor ideas, but the practical writer knows that if there is any value in a story it can be used sooner or later, and some of the bits of plots that look most unpromising because they are combined with the wrong factors, can be set aside until the right combination comes along.

Four or five years ago it was no uncommon thing to buy two stories and combine them. Then most purchases were made for idea only and at times for less than half of an idea. The clever editor would buy two plots, combine them and get one really good idea from the two, using perhaps the start of one and the climax of another.

Half-plots are not in such demand today, but it pays the authors to hold onto the scraps until they make a whole, just as there are men in Wall Street who buy fractional holdings of stock from various persons and exchange them into the more desirable full block.

A plot may suggest itself that on dissection offers but a single good factor in combination with some poor developments. Perhaps next week or next month something else will suggest itself that had but a single good situation. It may be just the factor neded to redeem the other discarded material and work into a practical and attractive whole. The veteran may carry these factors in his memory until the chance comes to combine them, but the beginner, not yet used to having ideas runing around loose in his brain, will do well to enter them on a catalogue card or note book page. Classify these under drama, comedy and farce or make more minute subdivisions, if you are methodically inclined, and draw on this fund when ideas are coming slowly.

Even the brilliant novelist may not be able to get a story offhand. He may bring to a single volume the thought of years, and he may have the materials for scores of best sellers still churning around in his grey matter, but he learns to think plots and think plots constantly, or he never can become really great. He knows it, so he works hard, but some fail because they do not realize the need for constant thought, and so they dry up, and become but a memory.

Don't think out loud, and don't pose, but let your brain be busy all the time.

One Way.

Here's a new way of getting ideas developed. The inventor is so fortunate as to have a "den" of fair size. When he gets an idea he pins it to the wall, using a smooth plank for a foundation. When he is not writing he wanders up and down before the plank fingering a pencil. As he surveys his assortment of ideas ideas come and he adds the suggestions to the proper sheets, until a page is filled. Then he takes it down, studies all the hints, and writes his story. A sheet may hang on the "idea tree" for a week or more or be taken down almost immediately, but the inventor claims that it enables him to keep a lot of ideas going at once without letting them slip from memory.

There would seem to be something in this scheme. It is practically an elaboration of the note book idea, but one that makes for speedy use of the thought.

Stop That.

It's not nice of a correspondent to refer to a new movement as a "sealskin" game.

Technique of the Photoplay

(Second Edition)

By EPES W. SARGENT

Not a line reprinted from the first edition, but an entirely new and exhaustive treatise of the Photoplay in its every aspect, together with a dictionary of technical terms and several sample scripts.

One hundred and seventy-six pages of actual text.

Special chapters on Developing the "Punch," Condensing the Script, Writing the Synopsis, Multiple Reel Stories, Talking Pictures, Copyrights, etc.

In cloth, two dollars. Full leather, three dollars.

By mail postpaid. Add ten cents if registration is desired.

Address all Orders to

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

17 Madison Avenue, New York City

Projection Department

Conducted by F. H. RICHARDSON

Operators' Union Directory, I. A. T. S. E.

NOTICE:—Each union is entitled to have its roster of officers, meeting nights, etc., listed here once per year, free of cost. Preserve this list as it will not be republished. The mail address of the secretary should be included, and the address of regular meeting place, if any.

Local Union No. 306, New York, N. Y.

President, Thomas Costello; vice-president, Simon Terr; recording secretary, Joseph Crehan; secretary-treasurer, Fred Stofferegan; business agent, Dave Chaney.

Manufacturers' Notice.

It is an established rule of the Moving Picture World and of this department that no apparatus or other goods will be endorsed or recommended editorially until such articles have been demonstrated to a member of our staff. In case of apparatus pertaining to projection this means the editor of this department.

Important Notice.

Owing to the mass of matter awaiting publication it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two to three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending 4 cents, stamps (less than actual cost), will receive carbon copy of the department reply, by mail, without delay.

The first seventy-four questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form. They may be obtained by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor. Every live, progressive operator should get a copy. You may be surprised at the number of questions you cannot answer without a lot of study.

Question No. 40.

Best answer will be published, and the names of others sending in replies of excellence will appear in the Roll of Honor. Permission to use the contributor's name must accompany each answer, otherwise only the name of the city will be used. Theatre managers looking for high class men will do well to watch the Roll of Honor.

Suppose your manager said to you: "I am thinknig of getting a gas, gasoline, or kerosene engine to supply light for the theater. What do you think about it?" What would you say to him? Les us see with what degree of intelligence you could point out the advisability or inadvisability of installing such a plant, and what its advantages and disadvantages would be. Suppose 110 volt d. c. from city lines cost 8 cents per k. w., and you can install an engine and dynamo for $500, which will produce current at 3 cents per k. w., including fuel, labor and ordinary repairs. If capital is worth 6 per cent., depreciation amounts to 10 per cent. annually, and you use an average of 40 ampers (70 volt generator) six hours a day, six days a week, how would your account stand at the end of one year?

Roll of Honor on Question No. 34.

The Roll of Honor on question No. 34 is minus. Only three of our correspondents even made a respectable stagger at it, viz.: Harry T. Dobson, Toronto, Canada; Joseph H. M. Smith, Fort Worth, Texas, and Sydney P. Dunn, Lancaster, New York. None of these replies, however, were altogether satisfactory, and they were the only three worthy of any consideration at all. In view of this fact I have decided to ask the manufacturers of the Wagner Rotary Converter to answer question 34, and the reply will be given, if possible, next week.

Qualifications.

Wisconsin makes the following inquiry:

> Please answer these questions: (a) What are the qualifications of a first-class moving picture operator? (b) What, in detail, are the educational requirements? (c) What are the best means by which such education may be acquired?

(a) A first-class moving picture operator should be a pretty good electrician, very well grounded in optics, a good mechanic, somewhat of a machinist, have a good brand of sotto-voice profanity at command. To meet the requirements of some managers he should also be a first-class janitor, an A1 sign writer, a fair bill poster; also to satisfy this brand of "manager" he should possess a luxurious growth of whiskers, so that his face may be utilized, during spare moments, as a pen-wiper or door mat. (b) Judging by some operators I have met, there is no such requirement. (c) Serve an apprenticeship and study.

A Strenuous Kick.

From Ashland, Wisconsin, comes a letter making a very serious complaint with regard to a certain outfit of operators' tools advertised and sold by a concern in a large middle-western city. If the complaint is legitimate, this department will not hesitate to publish the fact, but that would be too serious a proposition to consider until I have corroborative testimony. According to the complainant the concern insisted on $11.50 cash in advance, and this was sent, whereupon, after long delay, the outfit, which, according to the purchaser's figures, totals $3.61 in value, was received.

Personally the editor is of the opinion that some of the values Ashland attaches to the various articles, are low. What I want to know is have any other operators purchased this outfit, and if so what is their opinion of the proposition? Is it an honest deal or a dishonest one?

Film Cement.

R. W. Freeland, Harbor Springs, Michigan, writes.

> Here is a film cement formula which will do the work. Equal parts of amyl acetate and acetone. This cement will not turn white on the film; also it will not dissolve the film as ether does. Works equally well on all kinds of stock. It is best when used with an all-steel three-flap film mender. However, those who are still making patches by hand can use it by working fast. Scrape the film as usual; use a small camel hair brush, and keep the bottle tightly corked when not in use. The brush will soften the instant it is put back in the bottle, so that it is not necessary for it to be kept in the cement. Here are a few things which six years of operating have taught me. Keep things clean, and keep them in their place, learn the sound of the arc, the hum of the machine and train my left hand to find everything automatically, so that I do not have to remove my eyes from the screen a single second. It is strange, but every time the eyes leave the screen for a second that very second is sure to be one when crank speed needs changing, or the light needs adjusting. The public pays for the operator's attention every second of the time, and the operator is guilty of stealing when he fails to produce the best possible results.

The brother is absolutely right when he says the operator's eyes should never leave the screen when the picture is on, and that is one reason why I contend that long hours are a practical impossibility for the operator, if he is to produce the best possible work. To obtain high class results, even in an operating room where everything is as it should be (and there are not very many rooms of that kind), requires absolutely constant application on the part of the operator, and the kind of application that is required cannot be given for seven or eight hours at a stretch. It is a physical impossibility. If any man attempts it he will do either his nervous system or eyes up sooner or later.

From an Owner-Operator-Manager.

W. P. Wannamaker, St. Matthews, South Carolina, encloses a whole handful of bad patches, ripped sprocket holes and other film defects, and writes:

> Enclosed find some clippings from my today's program. Don't you think they (Lancaster, Orangeburg—Amusu theater and Reliance theater respectively, and the exchange) deserve a good roast? I make a little money out of my show, of which I am owner, operator and manager, but really run it more for a natural love of the business than for the money. I have often read your assertions that the convex side of the lens should always be toward the screen. How about the front condenser? And also in the front combination of my moving picture objective the heavy lens does best with the greatest bulge toward the arc. It is a B. & L. 4¾ e. f. Picture size 12 feet at 62 feet. Here's another. Users of Power's Five will do well to secure from the Powers Company a Six A gate and tension springs. It is no trouble to attach it to a Five, and it will improve the picture a great deal. Enclosed find check for $1.00, for which I want a set of the questions, and a carbon copy of your reply if there is any. You may use the change to buy some gasoline with which to start your go-devil on the South trail.

As to the lens, there is something wrong if the heavy bulge (heavy convex) of either combination of your objective is toward the arc. In speaking of this matter I supposed everybody understood that I referred only to the objective end of the condenser. As to the film samples, an exchange which would put a program out in that condition ought to be put out of business. There were nearly fifty clippings, ranging from bad to worse, and, according to the brother, they were all taken from one day's program. There is no use saying this is an outrage; that is altogether too mild to cover the case, and the exchange is, after all, the guilty party. It is about time somebody took this matter up and see if there is not some way by which the sending out of films in such wretched condition can be stopped. Come again, brother. We are pretty well crowded up right now, but perhaps we can give you more space next time.

Address Wanted—Newton Wallis Take Notice.

Brother Newton Wallis recently asked for the address of Earl Wooden of this city. Mr. Wooden comes forward with the same, and, inasmuch as friend Wallis is en route, we do not know where to find him. Brother Wooden writes:

> My address is 2262 Seventh Avenue, New York City. On Page 1114, May 23rd issue, the article entitled "In Error," leads me to say a few words to the brother official mentioned, but please understand this is only said in a spirit of friendship trying to convince him that he is entirely wrong, and not with any view of prolonging a controversy. In 1898 I was attracted to the moving picture business, and finally came to follow it as a means of livelihood. In those days we used no top or bottom sprockets or loops, as our longest films were only one hundred feet. I had endless trouble, first in trying to keep my light, and then in watching the film so that it would not kink, as we used to fasten the tail end to the beginning, and run it continuously. I was perfectly satisfied with the result, never dreaming that a better picture could be had, or more light secured by tilting the lamp, etc., and I, like many others, drifted along until in 1908, I think it was, when I secured a little handbook, sent out by the Viascope Company, Chicago, which same you had written. I read this over and over again. If anyone had told me it required brains to project pictures before I saw that little booklet, I would have laughed at them, but the pamphlet started me thinking, and I studied all it contained. It was the starting point with me, and when the Moving Picture World came out I followed it closely, including the various articles you wrote, until you finally inaugurated the "Operators' Column," which finally became the Projection Department. And I want to say to the brother in question that if he were to read the editorials and newspaper clippings I have, from the time of the Projection Department's inception, he would himself see that, as knowledge was advanced to us through the medium of the department, projection improved, until, today, we can point to operating as one of the professions, and we ought to give credit where credit is due, and thank the editor of the department for that fact. Let the brother please answer this question, whereupon I will retire to the rear and be seated. If, as he intimates, he and the members of his organization do not, and never did need the handbook or the department, where on earth did he learn, for instance, that a ray of light in passing from one medium to another of different density at an angle is refracted from its course, and also how did he know that the pressure exerted by tension springs is about 75 working pounds?

I succeeded in convincing the brother in question of his error, friend Wooden. So far as the matter of learning that a ray of light is refracted is concerned, there are a number of works from which this could be learned, but I believe that I may fairly say that my own books and the projection department are the only mediums through which the application of the law referred to with regard to projection has even begun to be made clear. I cannot, of course, but thank brother Wooden for his approval of the department and the editor.

I Should Say Not.

F. A. Coleman, Whitman, Massachusetts, writes:

> Excuse the liberty I take in addressing you (You are excused. —Ed.), but I want to ask this question: What do you think of the moving picture business as a popular form of amusement? Is it going to increase and take the place of the legitimate theatre, or will it have a comparatively short life and then to a large extent die out? Of course, I understand this must be merely an opinion.

Yes, brother, it can only be an opinion, but I think that opinion will come true. In reply I will ask if you ever knew of any really good, clean, cheap form of amusement falling into disuse, or dying out? The picture is here to stay, and while the future may show many changes, and while the number of theatres may decrease, the moving picture will be enjoyed by our great-grandchildren—and theirs ad infinitum. We are only beginning to learn how to make a perfect film, and how to project a perfect picture after it has been made. The motion picture is a permanent institution, and it will be one of the popular forms of amusement for all time. Also it will, to a considerable extent, put the cheap form of theatre drama out of business. In fact it has already done that in many cases.

A Remarkable Circumstance.

D. W. Taylor, New York City writes:

> Recently my sister was in The Virginia Theatre, Washington, D. C. It is a long narrow house with only one aisle, and no side exits, though there is one under the screen. She was seated a few rows from the front, and at the beginning of the show noticed some queer happenings on the screen. Turning she looked up at the operating room, which is one of those box affairs, just in time to see the operator make a dive and slam one of the port shutters. Just as he banged the other shutter down a puff of smoke came out, and showed up very clearly in the light of the projector. A man seated in the rear got up suddenly and started for the door, and then the operator came out in a cloud of smoke, coughing and choking. Instantly half the people were on their feet, and men began to shout "sit down, there is no danger!" A few women became hysterical, but were quieted, and a number of policemen came in and the crowd calmed down, behaved in fine style, and walked out through a smoke that, while terribly dense, was sufficient to make us all gasp, and our eyes to smart. Nothing was damaged, except the inside of the operating room. Now when the smoke came out of the port and the operator rushed out of the room with a cloud of smoke around him, some one might just as well have jumped on the stage and yelled fire, and everyone in the house know what was wrong instantly. The audience was remarkably calm and well behaved, and no one was injured, but that would only happen in one crowd out of one hundred. If everything had been arranged as you have suggested in this department, and in your Handbook, the ports would have closed before any smoke would have gotten to them, and not have been dependent upon the operator's quickness and coolness; also he could have come out of the room with no smoke around him had there been a flue large enough to carry away the gases and smoke, since a proper flue would act as a chimney, and there would be an in-rush of air when the operator opened the door. I send this to give you the satisfaction of seeing proof of the necessity of having a room equipped as you have time and again suggested.

I do not think that comment is necessary. The installation of an adequate vent flue, and the hanging of shutters in such way that they will close atuomatically and instantly on the inception of fire, is only a matter of good sense, though the authorities don't seem to have brains enough to recognize that fact. It is almost a miracle that the audience in question did not stampede and get some of themselves hurt or killed.

More Accurate.

A. T. Weiss, New Orleans, Louisiana, writes:

> I note that the brother from Eagle Pass, Texas, submitted another solution for measuring lenses after you pointed out his error, but I find the Ansonia, Connecticut, brother's method, April 25th issue, to be more accurate and simple. As you pointed out, brother Usher is in error in his figuring in Question 26. It should read $4.75 for 12 hours on rheostat and $2.96 for 12 hours on economizer. (For which brother Usher has duly apologized. it was merely a mathematical error.—Ed.) The answer to Question 27 brought about a dispute which I would like you to settle. A brother stated that the rheostat is subject to shorts, grounds, etc. A argues that the brother is wrong in stating that a rheostat can be short circuted, as it is only on one side of the line. B says that it can be short circuted by the coils coming into contact with each other. A further claims that, while a rheostat can be grounded, it can never be shorted.

The question concerning the short and ground is a peculiar one, and I think I will have to decide in favor of B, with the following explanation, however. Let us suppose that two coils come into contact with each other, but that all the coils are thoroughly insulated from the frame. You could not call this a ground, could you?

Let us examine the matter in the light of common sense. Suppose you attach the leads directly to the lamp, without any resistance, and bring the carbons together. What would that be? Why, a dead short-circuit, of course. All right, we insert a rheostat in series with the arc and bring the carbons together. Is it then a short circuit, or at least a limited short circuit—limited by the resistance of the rheostat? You may leave the carbons frozen together and nothing will happen except that there would be a somewhat heavier flow of current, due to the resistance of the arc being eliminated. Under this condition if you take a heavy piece of copper wire and lay it across the two rheostat terminals what would you create? A dead short circuit, of course. Where you make your mistake, brother Weiss, is in assuming that the rheostat is on one side of the line. It is not. It is in series in a circuit which, through the arc, connects the two sides, and where shall you say that the one side stops and the other begins? Presumably at the arc, but, nevertheless, the effect is such that the arc and the rheostat must be considered as a whole in the creation of what is a circuit connecting the two sides. I guess you catch the idea I am driving at, though possibly I have not made it quite as clear as it might be made.

Safety Device.

W. C. Rodgers, St. Paul, Minnesota, encloses copy of patent papers covering a device invented by Harvey Barre Cunningham, St. Paul, the same being designed to cut off the film and automatically close the magazine opening in case of fire. Mr. Rodgers asks from me a frank and candid opinion of the merits of the device, and suggestions of how best to dispose of the same.

The contrivance is quite simple, so far as I can make out from the drawings. The attachment is to go over the fire trap of the upper and lower magazines, the same being equipped with two knives sliding in ways, held normally pressed together over the opening of the film magazine by springs. When the machine is in operation, however, these springs and knives are pressed back by two levers held up by a cord which attaches to a fuse located directly over the aperture plate of the machine, so that in case of fire the fuse will melt, releasing both sets of knives which instantly close, cutting off the film at the upper and lower magazines, and closing the opening in the fire trap, so that by no possibility could the flames get inside the magazines.

The device is, as I have before said, simple and entirely practical. There can be no question as to that, and if the fuse be made of celluloid I would think that there would be no earthly possibility of a fire ever getting into the magazines of a machine thus equipped—that is to say a fire starting at the aperture of the machines. The only way I know of disposing of an invention of this kind profitably would be to present it to the various machine manufacturers. Frankly, Mr. Rodgers, I doubt their buying it, because machine manufacturers buy very few patents, preferring, as a rule, to evolve their own improvements. Unless, however, you can sell it to a machine manufacturer I do not believe you will find the device to be profitable, though you might write John D. Elbert, care Market Street Theatre, San Francisco. He manufactures specialties and might be interested.

It Looks Good.

H. C. Richardson, Othello, Washington, evidently of Scandinavian descent, writes as follows:

> I have learned so much through the department that I feel the least I can do is to publicly admit that fact. In conjunction with a partner, am running a theatre here, giving two shows a week in a town of only 600. However, we get the crowd at fifteen and twenty-five cents, using three-reel features with a comedy; also I make comic slides, generally of some local event. Came near getting licked several times, but always succeeded in talking them out of it. The slides take well and always get a hand. Have both Handbooks and study them hard. I try to combine such knowledge as I have with common sense, and, as a result, I will put our show up against any small-town show in the country. We have a Power's Six A, and own our electric plant. Our screen is as near a mirror screen as you ever saw, and it is this screen and an eye shade I want to tell you about, as I am satisfied it will help any operator or manager who is unable to buy a mirror.

> The sketch of the eye protector speaks for itself. It is nothing more than a transparent eye shade of dark color, worn under the nose instead of on the forehead. By its aid the operator can look at the spot or straight out at the picture without moving his head up or down or touching the shade with his hands. A rubber band around the head allows the shade to be raised to the forehead when threading the machine. Having once used this shade no operator would be without it, and it only costs twenty-five cents. The screen is a hard, smooth plaster wall painted a dull white, without any gloss, with a fine grade of sheeting stretched tightly over a frame just a half inch from the white backing. Anyone who can stretch a piece of sheeting can make it, and I would not give five dollars for the difference between it and any screen made. The pictures are life itself, and there is no excuse for any picture house having a bum screen. I would like to have others try this stunt and note the difference. We are not getting rich in this small town, but are trying to produce the best possible picture, and this is the way I learn these things, and am learning every day, but without the Handbook and the Moving Picture World I would be lost.

Well I am bound to say that that eye shade stunt does not look at all bad; in fact it looks pretty good to the editor. As to the screen, I do not know just what effect the white backing would have, though frankly I do not see why it would have the effect you claim. It will, however, be an easy matter for managers having a plaster screen to test this out, and certainly there is nothing which gives as artistic a picture as a cloth surface. The main difficulty, however, is the high amperage required to project a brilliant picture on the same. The white backing would, of course, reflect back a considerable amount of light; in fact a large amount of light, but it would reflect to the back of the cloth, and I cannot quite see why this would add much to the brilliancy of the picture. However, I shall be glad to have a report from anyone who will try the scheme out. If it is an improvement, it would be a splendid thing, because it it simple and cheap.

Condenser Lenses.

I must again call the pointed attention of lens manufacturers to the urgent necessity for a "pearl white" condenser which will remain "pearl white," instead of turning some shade of green, violet or yellow after a few hours' or a few days' work. The writer is in receipt of a continuous stream of inquiries from operators and exhibitors as to where pearl white condensers which will not discolor can be had. He is unable to answer these inquiries, because he does not know of any lens manufacturer who makes a perfectly white lens which can be depended upon to remain white.

I am not sure, but think most of the fault lies in the cheapness of condenser lenses. The exhibitor has demanded cheapness, and he has gotten it at the expense of quality. He has demanded a pearl white condenser which will retail at fifty or seventy-five cents. He had found the pearl white condenser all right, but the trouble is the thing won't stay white. The manufacturer has clarified the glass, but he has had to do it in a cheap way, and the cheap way reacts in discoloration when you subject the lens to heat. I do not absolutely know that the glass could be clarified permanently by more costly processes but I believe it could. Let me tell you Mr. Exhibitor that you can carry the matter of cheapness altogether too far, and, in many instances, my dear sir, you have done it.

A correspondent recently asked a very pertinent question. He said: "Are the problems of the microscope or the telescope guessed at?" No indeed they are not, and, moreover, cheapness is the one reason why the condenser proposition is "guess at." It is about time that exhibitors woke up, and came to an understanding of the fact that quality is now the ruling factor, and that quality and excessive cheapness do not go together, and that it is the poorest kind of poor policy to make cheapness the main point, instead of excellence.

Wake Up, Mr. Machine Manufacturer!

It seems to the editor of this department as though it were about time some of the machine manufacturers woke up to the importance of the condenser breakage proposition, and took some sensible steps to stop it. Actual experiments have proven to me that if a condenser holder made of metal something like one-half inch thick does not entirely stop condenser breakage, it at least reduces it by a considerable percentage. I am much inclined to believe that if such a holder were carefully made, and had an inside ring of asbestos to hold the lens, that condenser breakage would absolutely be a thing of the past; yet, up to date, only one machine manufacturer has made any adequate move in this direction, notwithstanding the fact that condenser breakage will probably, in the aggregate, amount to several hundreds of dollars a day, in the United States alone.

Quite recently I had this matter brought most forcibly to my attention. I have been having a rather expensive meniscus bi-convex (lens combination) tested, but the trouble was the meniscus lens showed strong tendency to crack. I ordered one of the Elbert holders from San Francisco (I have been calling it the Woods holder, but it is really the John D. Elbert holder, though, as I understand the matter, Mr. Woods is its inventor), together with a new meniscus lens. This lens was placed in an Elbert holder and used for two days, whereupon, as an experiment, it was taken out of this holder and placed in the regular machine holder—a new one, by the way, just put out by a machine manufacturer—and the lens snapped in three pieces at the second reel, all of which seems to teach a very pointed lesson. I may be in error, but I believe the Elbert holder is subject to improvement. The way the thing lies in my mind now is that the correct condenser holder, for the rear lens at least, is one of metal approximately one-half inch thick, made either of brass or cast-iron, with the inside diameter of the hole 4¼ inches on the side next to the arc, but the same to be turned out to 4⅝ inches, ⅝ of an inch deep, on the other side, and this offset to be lined with asbstos. The lens is then placed in this offset, where it rests its flat side and its edge on the asbestos. It must then be clamped firmly in place by a suitable metal ring, the edge of which is also lined with asbestos, and this ring must be screwed down tightly, so that the asbestos clamps the lens solidly. The asbestos should not exceed 1-32 of an inch in thickness.

This description is somewhat crudely put, and some of the details of the clamping ring are left out, but the main idea is there, which is that the lens shall be tightly clamped in a ring of metal ½ inch thick, but shall touch only asbestos. I am firmly convinced that this kind of a holder would, to all intents and purposes, stop condenser breakage. It is all nonsense to say that condenser breakage cannot be stopped, and the failure to stop it is injuring projection in practically every theater in this and other countries by reason of the fact that high class, costly condenser systems cannot be used until the liability to breakage has been to all intents and purposes eliminated. I would also like to say, in this connection, now that we have some sort of a vent pipe in practically all operating rooms, in cities at least, the ventilation of the lamp house could be enormously improved, and the liability to condenser breakage greatly lessened, by connecting a two or three-inch pipe into the top of the lamp house and extending the same directly up into the vent flue—in the bottom of the flue if there be no fan, and into its side if there be one. In many cases in order to do this these pipes would have to be run up through the roof of the operating room and join the vent pipe outside, but that is easy. If the officials offer any objections to such an arrangement all you have to do is to surround the lamp house vent pipe with fire proof material at the point where it cames outside the operating room.

Chattanooga, Tennessee, Scrap Settled.

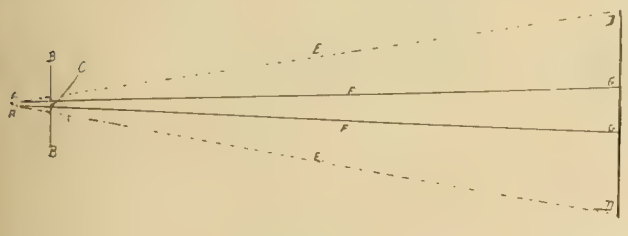
The Chattanooga Operators' Local has been at war with the managers for some time, and the scrap was a pretty hot one. It is now settled, however, and a two year agreement has been signed. So acrimonious was the "argument," that many charges of questionable procedure were made on both sides. On many occasions what are known as "stink balls" were placed in theatres and this act was charged to the striking operators. Now this department does not believe the operators were guilty. However, even allowing they were, a strike is nothing but war, and all is fair in both love and war. I am not prepared to say that the statement holds true, but, nevertheless, I am a firm believer in keeping out of a fight as long as possible, but when you do fight be sure to let the "other fellow" know that war is on. I am not going to scrap as long as I can keep out of it, but if anybody compels me to adopt a pugilistic attitude, why I will guarantee that he will get a black eye if I am able to give it to him, but when the fight is over I will shake hands, even though he licks me.

I trust that all now is peace and harmony around the foot of Lookout Mountain, and that the next time the boys ask an increase in salary the Chattanooga managers will realize that increased salaries mean, on the whole, better results on the screen, therefore it is a good investment, provided, of course, no unreasonable demand be made, and there never will be any unreasonable demand made until operators' salaries are much higher than they now are.

Asbestos Operating Room Ports.

Many times the editor of this department has, through its columns, called attention to the absolute necessity for ample sized operating room observation ports, particularly as to the matter of width.

Many theatre managers have seen the point, and have widened their ports, at least to some extent. However, there are now in use in this country thousands of asbestos operating rooms, and the manufacturers of these rooms are persistent offenders in this particular. Almost without exception they make their observation ports ten to twelve inches high by four or five inches wide, and this is injuring projection in thousands of theatres, hence is every day lessening the enjoyment of millions of people who pay their money to see photoplays.



It is a shame and an outrage that after putting out thousands of these rooms the manufacturers have not even taken the trouble to learn how to make a proper observation port. I say it is a shame and an outrage because it is an outrage on the operator and the public. I say it also because this knowledge has been available for a long time, and is still available. The editor of this department has no desire to hurt anyone's feelings or business, but he is getting pretty tired of having projection needlessly injured, and operators inconvenienced by such things as this, and unless these manufacturers see fit to change their observation ports, and make them conform to common sense, he will be compelled to name the offenders, and inform exhibitors and operators that their asbestos operating rooms (booths they call them) are unfit for use, and not a desirable thing to purchase until the faults complained of are remedied.

I will once more explain and illustrate the matter, so that even an intelligent child can understand it. Understanding that the sketch is not drawn to scale, we will assume the picture D D to be 16 feet wide (we are supposed to be looking down on top of the light ray). The eyes of the operator, when he is in ordinary operating position, will be between two and three feet back of the observation port. In the sketch, A is the operator's eyes, B B the operating room wall, C one of those little, narrow, contracted, inefficient four-or-five-inch-wide observation ports. The operator's eyes, A, is supposed to be two or three feet away from the wall B. F F are the actual lines of vision that port will afford, G G the actual width of screen surface he is able to see when in the ordinary operating position, whereas dotted lines E E are the lines of vision he ought to have, and would have with an adequate observation port. It seems to me that this is simple enough that anyone could understand it, and yet not one operating room in ten in this country has an observation port of sufficient width'

And now I think I see some of the wise ones get up and give voice to the opinion that I am wrong, because the law in their particular locality won't allow an observation port larger than eight by ten. But I am right just the same, and all you have to do is to turn that 8 x 10 observation port on its side, making it eight inches high by ten inches wide, and there you are. But again, we hear the wise ones say: "Then it would be too high or too low. When a man stood up he would have to stoop down if it was made for sitting position, or if made for an operator to stand up he could not sit down at all." Wrong again. All you have to do is to turn to page 74 of the Handbook (second edition) and you will there find complete and simple directions and illustrations for overcoming this difficulty. I have not space to publish all this in the department, but will say that it means a hole in the wall of the operating room 12 inches wide by 24 inches high, over which is placed an asbestos board shutter hung with a counter balance weight so that it can be moved up and down at the will of the operator, and in the center of this shutter is an opening ten inches wide by six or eight inches high, and thus the law is complied with, and at the same time the operator has a chance to do good work. There is no reason why these asbestos operating rooms cannot be equipped with a port of this kind just as well as not, and it is about time it was done.

Later: Since the foregoing was written the H. W. Johns-Manville Company, to whom the same was shown, has communicated with the writer as follows:

> For your information would state we furnish a great many of our operating rooms with the openings uncut, in view of the fact that many purchasers prefer to cut the openings themselves after the machines are set. We believe, therefore, that you will appreciate we are not responsible for the size or location of many of these openings. However, we can readily see the justice of your arguments in having the observation ports made larger and turned around, and will arrange to overcome this difficulty in all future operating rooms we ship, where the purchaser does not stipulate uncut openings, or any special location or size.

Being of a forgiving nature, we will therefore, in view of this promise, overlook the sins of the past and exempt the H. W. Johns-Manville Company from the foregoing criticism, at least as applied to the future. With proper observation ports the asbestos operating room is a very good room, since it is light (in weight), reasonably cool and very sanitary. Also it is to all intents and purposes thoroughly fireproof, in so far as its construction is concerned.

James Replies to Professor Wall.

W. S. James, Camden, New Jersey, writes as follows:

> Regarding Professor Walls' article in which he comments upon some of my efforts, I must say that, while there will be no smoke or fire emitted, I certainly have a few words to say. First of all I must call him to order, as we are talking on projection lenses only. I wish to thank the professor for letting us know that I stated the method for finding the e.f. correctly, but if my method coincides with his then am I wrong? The reason for my using the method which I did was that I found it to be the nearest correct, by actual test, of any I have heard of. Here is a rule which I use and which any of the boys can verify by a very few moment's work. The greater the separation between the pole of the condensers the longer the e. f. of the combination. As to my achromatizing, must still contend that I am right with regard to projection lenses. I know what Professor Wall says is correct as regards photographic lenses, but that is for the photographer, not the operator. Professor Wall says that I said the rear lens has no focus. I did not. I said the rear combination of the M. P. objective has no true focus, and must still stand by my guns until he comes forth with something more than simply an assertion. If he wants to help us fellows why doesn't he tell us something tangible, and set forth methods so that we may prove them out to our own satisfaction. Will some operators try and duplicate the photos, and then the "warnings" may, or may not, be of value. As to the refractive index of lenses, I think that is a matter for the lens manufacturers to contend with. All the operator wants, is to be able to match the objective with the condensers, or vice versa. As to the condensers, if they are measured by the sun, then I consider the index refraction of them to be negligible. For those of you who wish to experiment on measurfing the e. f. of condenser combinations, I would suggest a pair of holders such as the Simplex people use in their lamp houses. With condensers in the holders, place a piece of wire screening, of a fairly fine mesh, in a window, and darken the room. Now focus the screen on the wall. Every time you change the separation of the condensers measure the e.f. of the combination, and then let us hear from you. I will close this with the request that the Professor give us details of what he claims is correct, since, up to the present, all he has done is to say that you, I and others are wrong, without giving his reasons.
>
> And now a few bricks for friend Clay of Utah, though I guess they will be rubber ones, as he has set forth some very sensible comments, and, while I do not agree with him in all he says, there is much food for thought in his remarks. There is only one point on which I wish to comment at the present time, viz.: I did not say that the positions of the points in Fig. 8 of my article would change the focus of the image, but I did, and do say they will seriously affect the illumination of the image. As to his idea of the principle of the optical system I want to try things out before getting into a discussion. But I will say this: If the object is smaller than the image, as we all know, how can the lens converge the light rays of the object to a point on the screen? It seems to me that it is a case of diverging rays and not cenverging. Regarding the rest of the stumbles he made I think you have covered them. Oh, yes, by-the-way, will Professor Wall tell where he sees the ghost in photograph 7 of my article? Photograph 4 is a ghost, I know, and I intended it for such, but No. 7, no! If you had looked this up you would have caught his mistake, as you have the original photos. (Personal) Or mebby you were scared. Huh? Now F. H. R. I would like to see this in print just about as it is, and maybe it will stir Professor Wall into action, and we may get some of the real knowledge he is undoubtedly in possession of.

With regard to this controversy, I am very glad indeed to see it. I know that both Professor Wall and brother James are too broad minded to take any personal offense at the criticism each makes of the other, and others make of them, or rather their ideas. Victor Wellman, of Seattle, hits the nail on the head in a letter which reached me this morning. He says:, "Let the Professor and brother James go to it and fight it out; that is what we need." With which same I thoroughly agree. As a general proposition it is through friendly controversy and argument that real knowledge is brought forth. As to James' remark that mebby I am scared, why, frankly, I guess I am. I am placed in the position of being a sort of umpire in a scrap that I don't very thoroughly know the rules of, and that is not exactly an enviable position. With regard to brother James' remarks concerning the converging light rays, if we take the point for point theory and assume the film at the aperture to be an original source of light, certainly, in so far as the objective lens is concerned, the rays would necessarily be converging, since rays from every infinitesimal portion of the film picture would reach the entire back surface of the objective, and thence would have to be converged to a minute point on the screen. Whether this was what brother Clay had in mind I do not know, and I have not the time to look the matter up, and anyhow I guess this original-source-of-light is wrong. And right there let me correct, or rather set brother James and others right. In one place in his article brother James says: "If I had looked it up I would have caught his (Professor Wall's) mistake." Brother James makes the error that others make, in not realizing the fact that if I kept accurate track of all these details, and looked up every thing, compared, and sifted out, and straightened out all matters of this kind that come before me, I would not get much sleep, and in a year or so they would either be planting me in one of those places familiarly referred to as "bug house," or in some nice, shady cemetery. It is all very well for you fellows who only have one particular phase of the game in mind, and who have less mail to attend to in the course of two years than I have in one day, to keep close tabs on one thing, but for me to keep that kind of tabs on hundreds of things is quite different. I simply, as I have said before, do the best I can.

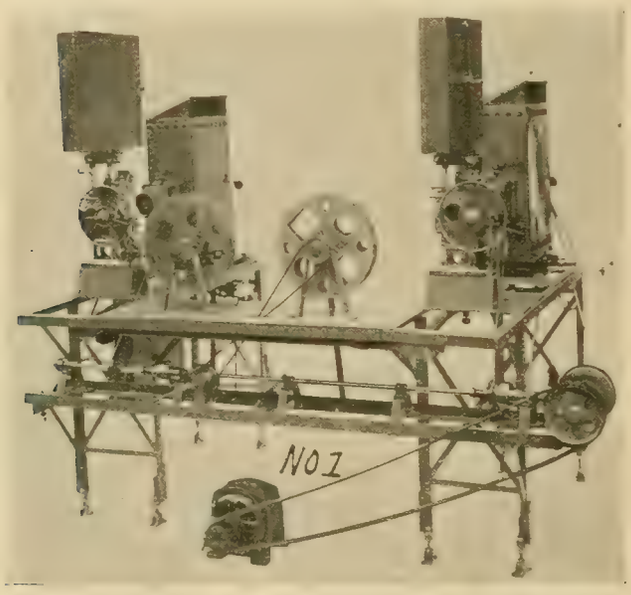
A Unique Installation.

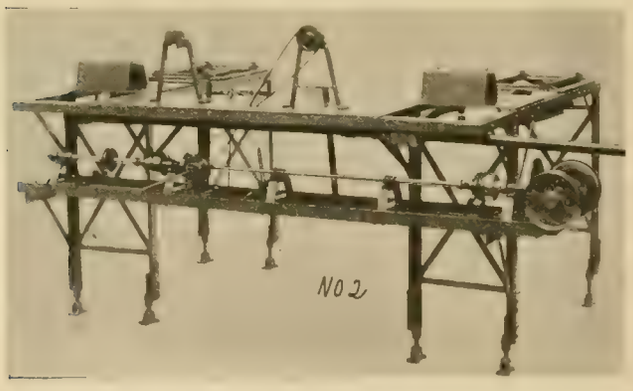
From Tacoma, Washington, comes the following from A. N. Walstad, of the Walstad Machine & Electric Company, who writes:

> In August 16th, 1913, issue, under the caption, "A Remarkable Performance," you spoke of having seen, in Tacoma and Seattle, a novel method of driving two machines with one motor, and, later on in the article, expressed a desire for further details so that you could give a complete description, as you were well impressed with the whole scheme. I am the designer and builder of the tables in use in Tacoma and Seattle, and reserve to myself all rights of design and manufacture. This table is not a hit-and-miss proposition, but the result of much thought and study on my part. Furthermore my friends, the Tacoma operator have offered criticisms and suggestions which have resulted in improvements from time to time. I wish to add one further word with regard to the Tacoma operators. We have a fine bunch of fellows, and I am sure you would travel a long distance before you find another set of men who take as great an interest in their work, and their machines, as do the members of Tacoma Local No. 175. I have been working on a new table which I consider very superior to the ones you saw in Tacoma and Seattle, and I wanted to give this table a thorough "try-out" before writing you. It is now complete, and has been approved and highly commended by the operators who have seen and used it.

The table shown was made for the Bijou Theatre, Tacoma, Washington, of which Walter McNeish is proprietor. The idea is to provide a complete power driven unit for operating two heads and a rewind, which can be used wherever two machines are employed. Much attention has been paid to the convenience of the operator.



It will be seen that this table is arranged for two Power's Six heads, with large magazines and Six A lamp house, but the table is so constructed that any desired combination of lamp houses and heads may be used



As will be seen in the second illustration the drive consists of a horizontal shaft with a friction variable speed attachment which allows of the variations of film speed from fifty to one hundred feet per minute. The adjustment lever for speed control is at the center of the table, within easy reach of the operator who sits at all times between the two machines. The horizontal shaft is equipped with two clutches, one for each projector, the controlling levers of which are in the center of the table, within convenient reach of the operator. The rewind is driven from a friction on the main shaft and is controlled by a lever in front of the table. It may be operated independently of either head, or in conjunction with either one, and is so constructed that the speed of the unwinding reel remains practically constant. A tension device is attached to that reel so that the film rewinding is done tightly and quietly without scratching the film. The magazines on the right hand machine are reversed, so that they open toward the center of the table, thus making it possible to get the reels in and out of the magazines, and to thread the head without the necessity of passing around to the right of the machine. The reversing of the lower magazine necessitates the re-arrangement of the take-up drive, which is accomplished by placing a small pulley on the right hand end of the main drive shaft. This part of the shaft revolves only during the time the head is running. The table itself, as Mr. Walstad says, is very rigid, and there is practically no vibration, and it certainly looks as though his claim is more than true. The table is five feet long across the front, and the sides measure four feet from front to back. The legs are adjusted to any angle necessary to locate the picture on the screen. The main shaft, while a part of the table, and rigidly fastened to it, is a separate and distinct unit which may be used without the table itself. This table was of such neat appearance that Mr. McNeish exhibited it in the lobby of the Bijou Theatre a week before it was intalled in the operating room.

This department is glad to give the details of any new machinery or appliance having to do with projection, particularly where it seems to have real merit, as is the case in this instance. The only thing I would criticise is the re-wind part of it, which, if it is going to be located where it is, ought to be enclosed in fireproof magazines. However, even with an arrangement of this kind the editor seriously objects to the operator doing the re-winding, as that will naturally presume him to do the necessary patching, etc., and as I have time and again said, no operator can do two or three things at one time, and do all of them in the best possible manner. The proper projection of a picture is absolutely all any man can attend to, and re-winding or anything else which distracts his attention makes for imperfect work on the screen.

Told to Deliver the Goods.

W. V. Norris, Liberty, Missouri, writes:

> Enclosed find twenty-five cents for the question booklet. I have been working on those published in our department and have been very greatly benefited by the study. I read of other operators who seem to have a hard time of it, but that is not my case. I am placed in the operating room, which is a good one, and told to deliver the goods. This is all I have to do, and I get paid for it, too. Projecting in this part of the woods is very good, but we try constantly for something better. And right here I wish to thank both yourself and the World for the help I have received. As to the "Bible" (Handbook) Well, there are not words enough in this one language to describe its usefulness. I thought it would please you to know that there are some of us who do not have to run the whole show, but are paid to put on a picture, and nothing but a picture, without any bill-posting side issues.

Now that is a manager after my own heart. My view of employing an operator is to pay his price, and maybe a little more, and then simply tell him that it is up to him to deliver the goods and not excuses. Any fool can make excuses, but it requires a real operator to deliver perfect projection.

Ozo-Carbi.

A few weeks ago a correspondent inquired regarding the merits of the Ozo-Carbi light. In my reply I stated I knew nothing about it, and requested anyone who was using the outfit to report. In this I was in error, because something like a year or two ago I made an investigation of this particular light, and found it to be excellent. Therefore it is but right that I correct the error, and to say that the Ozo-Carbi light is worthy of the recognition and recommendation of this department. Detailed data concerning the same can be obtained by addressing Moore, Hubbell & Co., 713 Masonic Temple, Chicago, Illinois.

Patent Expires.

Wendell White, Urbana, Ohio, asks:

> Can you inform me as to whether or not the geneva or star wheel and pin cam intermittent movement is patented by any of the projection machine manufacturers? Could any manufacturer use the geneva movement in a projection machine without conflicting with a patent?

While I would not have you take this as final, Brother White, still I am reliably informed that the patent on the geneva movement expires this summer, and that it then becomes public property. This patent has been claimed by Mr. Armat.

OPERATORS Are you perfectly satisfied with the results you get on the screen?

The new second edition of the

MOTION PICTURE HANDBOOK FOR MANAGERS AND OPERATORS

420 Pages Illustrated

By F. H. Richardson

$2.50 Each Postage Paid will be the standard textbook on the subject for many years.

Address all orders and remittances to

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

17 Madison Avenue, New York City.

Comments on the Films

Licensed

THE BASKET HABIT (Edison), June 22.—A little domestic comedy, written by Mark Swan. The colored girl's dusky beau carries off the chicken, but it is rescued by the daughter of the house and her lover in time for the company dinner. At no time very laughable, but light and amusing.

MARIA'S SACRIFICE (Vitagraph), June 22.—This sociological study, taken from a story by Arthur V. Train, is a rare treat in some respects. It pictures something deeper than mere motion and change of scenes, and is acted with spirit by a clever cast. It portrays, very effectively, how an Italian woman accepts the imputation of shame in order to save her husband's life. The settings and characterizations are excellent. A good release.

A SONG OF SUNNY ITALY (Biograph), June 22.—This is a pretty, well-photographed story of a young Italian who hears his sweetheart singing in an American home, and mistakes the mistress of the house for her. Tony is on hand at the time a robbery is committed and as a result of his services finds that his sweetheart is indeed there. A light, pleasing offering.

A FOOLISH AGREEMENT (Edison), June 23.—This story, by Geo. A. Posner, is presented by a pleasing cast and involves a nice little mystery concerning stolen money. The scenes are necessarily short and choppy, as they cover much ground, but the piece is well constructed throughout. This holds the interest, although it contains no extremely dramatic situations.

NICE NURSEY (Lubin), June 23.—A half-reel comedy in which the sick son refuses to recover while he has such a good looking nurse. This is well photographed and carries the interest along very well, though it contains no very laughable situations.

BROWN'S BIG BUTLER (Lubin), June 23.—This, on same reel with above, is an amusing skit. It features a dwarf of pleasing appearance, who acts as a butler. He is so small that the visitor and the policeman can hardly see him. This gets numerous laughs.

THE COUNTESS (Essanay), June 23.—This is a highly romantic story, with Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne in the leading parts. She is pursued by Nihilists and he defends her by fighting her enemies hand to hand. A new feature, by way of subtitles, are actual extracts of conversation, which furnish something of a novelty. This highly colored melodrama is not very convincing, but will find plenty of admirers.

THE SERVANT QUESTION OUT WEST (Selig), June 23.—The Western married folks bring numerous girls out from the East, but they all marry speedily. This is a very amusing conception and brings much laughter.

DOC YAK AND THE LIMITED TRAIN (Selig), June 23.—More of Sidney Smith's animated drawings, showing a moving train and his well-known eccentric character. A good release.

THE CONDUCTOR'S COURTSHIP (Kalem), June 23.—This railroad story has a couple of new features which give it exceptional interest. One is where the young conductor swings the girl aboard his caboose in motion and the other when they pour oil on the track to halt the pursuing engine. A very pleasing railroad romance.

THE EPIDEMIC (Essanay), June 24.—An amusing little satire on the tango craze. The performers enact an old-fashioned melodrama while doing the tango steps. This becomes very funny in places, though a half reel of it would have answered. It makes a good novelty.

ON THE ICE (Edison), June 24.—A half-reel number in which Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Syers, amateur skating champions of England, give some pleasing evolutions on the ice. The scene is somewhere in Switzerland. Tangoing on skates is a feature.

THE MYSTERIOUS PACKAGE (Edison), June 24.—A half reel, with above, in which some hoboes are run out of town and afterward suspected of sending dynamite in the mails. This makes only a fairly amusing offering.

THE "BEAR" FACTS (Vitagraph), June 24.—A good yarn, particularly for children. Bobby runs away into the woods and comes to the house of the three bears—three real, live, friendly bears. The first part of this story told so much that the scenes were rather confusing, but it makes good in the latter scenes and is altogether a pleasing novelty.

SOMEBODY'S SISTER (Selig), June 24.—Instead of showing the adventures of merely one country person in the city this pictures the adventures of two—a brother and sister. They meet unexpectedly in a cafe, both having yielded to the pitfalls of the metropolis. This is an interesting subject, well handled throughout. The close seemed very much to the point and conveyed a strong moral.

HAPPY-GO-LUCKY (Vitagraph), June 25.—The story of a young man who falls in love with an actress in a traveling show. She faints from hunger and is taken to his mother's home. This is a slight plot, made interesting by the charming personality of Clara Kimball Young. Some of the scenes toward the last were very attractive.

SOPHIE FINDS A HERO (Essanay), June 25.—This is the second chapter of Sophie's Wooing. Mustang Pete and Slippery Slim again compete for her hand, this time in a duel. This seems very much drawn out with meaningless action, but there are some laughs toward the close.

THE RAGAMUFFIN (Biograph), June 25.—There is quite a little human nature in this story of the poor gardener's son who whips the rich boy for making fun of his clothes. The garden scenes are attractive and the offering as a whole proves entertaining.

A PECULIAR INHERITANCE (Melies), June 25.—A Batty Bill number in which he inherits a camel,, a pony and a dog. The chief humor of this is in seeing the animals run over the house, up and down stairs and in the parlor. It seemed to us a half reel of this would have answered.

A PRACTICAL DEMONSTRATION (Lubin), June 26.—This story, written by Emmet Campbell Hall, shows how a young suffragette makes good as a station agent. Her unique signal for help in hanging out the clothes is the main feature. This could have been handled more dramatically. The offering is of about average merit.

THE CAPTAIN'S CHAIR (Selig), June 26.—A comedy number containing a curious mixture of real acting and burlesque, which gives it a rather amateurish tone. At the same time it proves entertaining and the disposal of the old man's fortune makes quite a pleasing little yarn.

AN ELOPEMENT IN ROME (Kalem), June 26.—A burlesque on the old-style Roman play put on by John E. Brennan and his fellow players. The scene is in a sort of Roman garden on some big estate. Fattus and Thinus fight with gloves and then do some rough-house wrestling. Some amusement in this.

LABOR DEMONSTRATION IN HYDE PARK, LONDON (Kalem), June 26.—This, on same reel with above, is a topical number, containing numerous views of interest taken in England.

THE OLD MAID'S BABY (Vitagraph), June 26.—A number introducing John Bunny and Flora Finch. The latter has a dog which she dresses up as a baby and takes with her on the train. Bunny makes himself strong with her by rescuing it. This proves very amusing and is bound to please.

THE GYPSY GAMBLER (Kalem), June 27.—This picture relies for interest chiefly on its picturesque, romantic settings. Both the Indian and Gypsy camps are pleasingly shown. The gypsy gambler is killed and his daughter goes to the Indians for protection; later the young brave falls in love with her and they go out to seek their fortunes together. The closing scenes in this are very attractive.

BRONCHO BILLY'S JEALOUSY (Essanay), June 27.—Broncho Billy becomes jealous of the young surveyor and proceeds to fill himself with booze. He then endeavors to get his rival into a duel. This plot is far below the average and places the hero in a bad light, from which the moral ending does not succeed in rescuing him.

THE RIGHT TO HAPPINESS (Selig), June 27.—In this story a girl is falsely imprisoned for two years and on her release is pursued by a criminal, even after her marriage. This deals entirely with the seamy side of life and has settings of about ordinary appeal. The plot is quite obvious and not very strongly handled.

HIS SUDDEN RECOVERY (Lubin), June 27.—Jones reads a medical almanac and imagines himself ill until his relatives begin carrying off all his belongings. The idea in this is quite amusing and it makes a very fair half-reel comedy.

WHO'S WHO (Lubin), June 27.—This, on same reel with above, pictures the antics of a burlesque police force. Not enough plot in this to hold the attention very strongly.

DOLLY PLAYS DETECTIVE (Edison), June 27.—This tenth of the Dolly series proves an interesting number. Dolly uses her reportorial and detective instincts toward exposing the light-fingered count. This latter gentleman is well portrayed by Duncan McRae. The plot is a little obvious, but well handled and nicely pictured.

A SPANISH OMELET (Biograph), June 27.—A half-reel comedy number, in which the characters appear in Spanish costumes. The garb and settings impressed us more favorably than the plot, which seemed rather lacking in point.

RIBBONS AND BOXING GLOVES (Biograph), June 27.—This, on same reel with above, is better than the other. It demonstrates how a young department store salesman gets his ire up and whips the champion pugilist. This is well pictured and full of action.

THE REVENGEFUL SERVANT GIRL (Edison), June 29.—Another of the Wood B. Wedd series and a farce well calculated to make laughter. The revengeful waitress gratuitously falls in love with Wood and when he becomes engaged to another girl, she makes all kinds of trouble for him. It is a very fair offering.

Licensed Specials

THE SHOW GIRL'S GLOVE (Kalem), June 22.—A two-reel number, featuring Alice Joyce as a maid who unravels the mystery of a young man's death. We could not understand why Dick's death was so clearly pictured as an accident, during his struggle with Stella, and then later treated throughout the story as a murder. The production, except for this feature, is a very entertaining one and leads up to a pleasing close. Some of the situations are quite tense.

ME AN' BILL (Selig), June 22.—A two-reel number picturing the life story of two characters from the time they were boys till they were old men bereft of their families. This, like numerous stories of its kind, contains a note of pathos throughout. The scenes are, many of them, very effective, particularly the son's death on the battlefield and Kitty's death from drowning. The story occurs about civil war time, or rather leads up to that period. At the end the two lonesome old men are seen sitting together, having been lifelong companions. A good release.

THE PASSING OF DIANA (Vitagraph), June 23.—A two-reel number, brilliantly acted and well pictured. The story concerns a young artist whose model turns out to be his best friend's wife. Later she makes the artist's life one of misery, threatening to kill herself when he marries another. The death scene at the last was realistic but a little too horrible to leave a good feeling with the observer. The chief fault of the production is a slight tendency to the morbid. It is artistically done and a strong story of its type.

THE GREATER TREASURE (Lubin), June 24.—This story, written by Ethel Glenn Hall, pictures the evil fortunes of a girl who put aside the man she really loved to marry a millionaire. A second love affair adds complications to the plot, which is always full of action. The worst fault of the piece is its rather sordid tendency, but it should prove a strong object lesson to girls who place wealth above honest affection. In spite of many unpleasant features this deals strongly with facts and is to be commended on that score.

THROUGH THE FLAMES (Kalem), June 24.—The wife and husband quarrel, she turns to another and is afterward supposed to have perished in a fire. He marries another and later the first wife turns up; the second dies of grief after her child is born. This deals throughout with strong, tragic, emotional subject matter. It is sincerely acted and there is one dramatic scene where the first wife returns. The latter part is very pathetic. This makes a strong offering of its type.

THE CANDIDATE FOR MAYOR (Lubin), June 25.—This story of twin brothers, written by Will M. Ritchey, proves a very interesting two-reel number. They are first shown as boys and later in early manhood. The young physician takes the place of his brother, who has been abducted on the eve of his nomination for mayor. This situation is very improbable but handled with a degree of skill which makes it seem real. L. C. Shumway doubles in the parts of the brothers. A conventional political story freshened up by some adroit touches and sincerely acted.

THE MAN IN THE STREET (Edison), June 26.—A three-reel number taken from a novel by Mary Imlay Taylor. It has for its theme the theft of a play from a starving man, and is very much like a two-reel number entitled "The Sword of Damocles," put out by the Pathe company, as we recall it. The story is a gripping one and well-pictured and nicely handled. Marc McDermott is strong as the real playwright and Duncan McRae and Gertrude McCoy play the remaining leads. Except for the fact that the idea is quite familiar to many observers this is an offering of unusual strength.

THE CHASM (Essanay), June 26.—A two-reel number, with Richard Travers, Gerda Holmes and Bryant Washburn in the leads. The setting and treatment are ordinary, but the story works up quite a little problem. The girl marries one man so she can get money to pay for supporting the one she really loves till he regains his health. The scene on his return was quite well handled and the girl very sensibly chose to remain with her own husband. A fairly strong number.

HIS WIFE AND HIS WORK (Vitagraph), June 27.—This two-reel number puts in motion a short story plot written by Rupert Hughes. It concerns the marital affairs of an artist whose wife objects to him employing nude models in his studio. This is handled frankly, as the plot demands and raises quite a problem. Each observer will have to decide for himself where the canons of art should leave off and the restrictions of respectability begin. Alfred D. Vosburgh and Myrtle Gonzales play the leads very acceptably. This is an entertaining offering; it will shock some observers but undoubtedly will pass.

THE HONOR OF THE LAW (Biograph), June 29.—A two-part picture which depends for its chief dramatic struggle on bringing to a warden of a prison, word that a prisoner doomed to die is innocent and is to be pardoned. A thunder storm has cut off all means of communication and a pigeon sent out in the storm is killed, but in the end comes all right. This struggle with the elements is heightened by much that is emotional and human. The doomed man's mother is well played and the tangle of misunderstanding that made the district attorney refuse his help in the first part is interesting. The picture is not great, but makes us feel the suspense of the action and is a good offering. The photography and the acting are commendable.

THE FLAW IN THE ALIBI (Kalem), June 29.—A special two-part offering with much that is clever in its detail and with a story that holds well. It shows how a scheming bank employee manages to get an alibi and fix the guilt of his theft on the assistant cashier. The flaw in his alibi is so cleverly shown up by the detective that it gives one a distinct thrill of satisfaction. The photography is clear and it is competently acted.

THE LEOPARD'S FOUNDLING (Selig), June 29.—Kathlyn fans have been waiting for this picture and they will not be disappointed in it. There have been other big Selig pictures of Africa and with wild animals in them and the quality of this picture may be judged from them. The theme is new and has a touch of the wild in it that is most pleasing. The action is of a kind that is improbable, but it has been made plausible and convincing while we watch it. A good offering.

Independent

AN EAVESDROPPER (Keystone), June 22.—Very funny and sure as anything almost to make laughter. There have been better Keystones, for there is a touch of vulgarity in one of the early scenes. Its situations are irresistible and its sensational ending is new and a scream.

THE TALE OF A TAILOR (Beauty), June 23.—A farce that is not clear at first and no one can laugh while he is wondering what is going on. Here the chief cause for misunderstanding is that the situation is so improbable that we hardly believe that the picture intends us to take what is shown in the way we finally find that we must. There are comic things in it and it develops into a fairly comical misunderstanding between the husbands of sisters who look alike, but this is badly prepared for. As an offering, we can count it only so so.

OUR MUTUAL GIRL NO. 24 (Reliance), June 24.—"Our Mutual Girl" is still one of the best of current serial pictures and this installment will interest. Irving Cobb tells Norma one of his best stories, that of the bad man and the colored keeper of a frontier eating house, and next day they bring her home from the house in the country where she has been too sick, after being knocked down by a motor car, to let her friends know where she was.

PROFESSOR SMITH (Princess), June 26.—A farce with Muriel Ostriche. Its best asset is photography and pretty scenes. The situation was once fairly comic and will still please such as have seen few pictures, but it is quite artificial.

A HASTY EXIT (Royal), June 27.—A speedy farce, but full of meaningless and causeless tumbles. Not all of it is palpably artificial and we have noticed that the people want some of this rough-house stuff with their good comedies and dramatic stories. This is not exactly what they want, but it imitates it, and is a fair offering. The scheme on which it is built is slight and not new.

THE WIDOW'S MITE (Thanhouser), June 28.—It will make an excellent offering that will be liked by nearly every spectator. This is not so much on account of its story, which is not new and only fair, but because the "mite" is played by the Kidlet in her most charming way. The Thanhouser twins also appear. The heroine of the romantic love story is the school teacher and most of the scenes are in the school room filled with youngsters, but the best part of it is the smiles and winsomeness of the Kidlet. A cute and delightful offering, very well photographed.

THE WHITE SLAVE CATCHERS (Komic), June 28.—This is a comedy, though the caption smacks of a melodrama. Fay Tincher plays the lead and Tod Browning and Edward Dillon help her to fool Pa and the detectives. The story is of an elopement. The white slave theme pertaining is somewhat of a burlesque. The elopement proves a success, and Pa loses in the shuffle. An amusing offering.

CAUGHT IN TIGHTS (Keystone), June 29.—A Keystone comedy of the usual order that has many funny and rapid scenes. The actors work hard and obtain results—edifying and laughable. This picture will make good on any program.

UNIVERSAL IKE, JR., AND THE VAMPIRE (Universal Ike, Jr.), June 30.—Bob Fuehrer covers himself with glory in this comedy by winning Zingara (Louise Glaum), from the "fools there was." This had to happen to break a spell of quietude at Alkali flat. Zingara is the vampire and locoed the whole bunch of cowboys, including Ike, custodian of all the little personal trinkets the cowboys donated to Zingara. The outcome is quite humorous. A well photographed production.

IZZY, THE DETECTIVE (Reliance), July 1.—Max Davidson instills a lot of ginger into the scenes of this picture by getting himself into trouble attempting to become a sleuth. He purchases a tin badge and his imagination does the rest. He gets his man all right and creates a lot of laughter doing it.

THE ONE BEST BET (Imp), July 2.—This is a King Baggot comedy which of course contains a love episode. Arline Pretty plays opposite Mr. Baggot, who is known as Jack and an inveterate gambler. There is a stern old father who is also an objector, not only of Jack's attentions to his daughter but to his gambling proclivities. The outcome of this meritorious offering causes much amusement and is highly edifying.

THE CRASH (Sterling), July 2.—The last third of this comic picture is so unusually speedy that it hardly fails to take strongly with gallery and with downstairs too. It uses an old situation, but goes its predecessors one better in startling incident at the close and is truly laughable.

THE BROKEN BARRIER (Frontier), July 5.—One of those Western picture plays wherein the theme and plot embraces ambushing, deception, etc. Much action is evolved in this plot. A murder mystery pertains. There is a thrilling series of scenes where the heroine is rescued from a runaway horse by a forest ranger; also a "punch" of a fall over a high cliff. While many inconsistencies occur this picture is certainly exciting.

BILLY'S RIOT (Sterling), July 6.—Little Billy's efforts as an actor grow funnier the more you see of him. He is always clever and amusing, but he needs a little more definite plot some times. This number contains a lot of good fun and is sure to please.

AT MEXICO'S MERCY (Victor), July 6.—J. Warren Kerrigan appears in this as a young mine superintendent in Mexico. Vera Sisson is the girl. Affairs become very complicated and there is much gun fighting. The hero is in all kinds of trouble, but saved at the last. The picture comes to a close with Kerrigan waving the stars and stripes in the faces of the enemy. This will go well.

NEARLY A STEP-MOTHER (Crystal), July 7.—A domestic comedy which contains many amusing situations. The plot is conventional but the director has used good discrimination and produced quite a number of laughable scenes. There are a couple of chases which cause laughter. This offering is well produced.

LUCILLE LOVE, THE GIRL OF MYSTERY, SERIES NO. 13 (Gold Seal), July 7.—Grace Cunard, Francis Ford and Ernest Shields cover themselves with glory, assisted by the usual able cast. Many exciting scenes occur.

A RANCH ROMANCE (Nestor), July 8.—A story of the great Southwest, with Murdock MacQuarrie, Agnes Vernon and Lon Chaney in the cast. Chaney appears as the villainous Mexican, who abducts the girl with his companions. The scenic effects are good and the situations, while very familiar, have a little more dash and go to them than usual.

BESSIE THE DETECTRESS, IN THE DOG WATCH (Joker), July 9.—A burlesque detective story, with Bess Merredyth disguised as a sailor and William Wolbert as the man she is shadowing. There are a few smiles in this, but on the whole the humor is not very strong.

OUT OF THE DARKNESS (Rex), July 10.—A number featuring Robert Leonard as a man of the underworld who enters a house in which his adopted daughter lies asleep. Leonard gives us an appealing character sketch and the night scenes in the house were pleasing, with Ella Hall as the little girl. The close seemed to require something to give a finished effect to the story.

LOVE, ROSES AND TROUSERS (Joker), July 11.—The author of this picture, Clarence Badger, might have got his idea from former farces and hardly deserves credit, but the joke is still comical enough and we can commend the picture as a good offering. The box of pants is mixed across with a box of roses and the lover says to his sweetheart "Please wear these tonight." There is some new, but unimportant stuff in it not wholly unlike that which made the old Biograph farces amusing. The people like this sort of picture with their more substantial offerings; it seems to take remarkably well everywhere.

Independent Specials

ARMS AND THE GRINGO (Majestic), June 28.—This is a two-reel romance with the scenes laid in Mexico, the author being Anna Tupper Wilkes. Present conditions in that country are used as a basis for the plot. It is all very interesting and many gripping scenes occur. The cast is made up of very clever people. Dorothy Gish has the leading part, the principal members of her support being F. A. Lowery, Wallace Reid, Fred Kelsey and H. Gaye. Good photography and clever direction makes this a most pleasing number.

ADVENTURES OF A GIRL REPORTER (Imp), June 29.—This two-reel picture drama introduces Ethel Grandon, as the girl reporter, backed by Tom, another reporter, who is played by Ed Mortimer. The nervie girl clears up a famous jewel robbery assisted by Tom. Many adventures are encountered, but overcome. It is an interesting and gripping offering and will not fail to please any audience.

THE LITTLE HOME IN THE VALLEY (American), June 29.—A two-part picture that is pretty rather than strong. Some surveyors see a ranch with an orchard nestling in a beautiful valley below them. The story that ensues is romantic and very fair. Before it ends there is a battle between the engineers who, much to the disgust of the owner (invalid father of a pretty girl) are carrying the line of a railroad across the ranch. Mexican desperadoes attack the house at night to rob, but in the battle with the surveyors they are practically destroyed. The noteworthy thing about the picture is its perfect photography and beautiful backgrounds.

THE HARLOWE HANDICAP (Thanhouser), June 30.—A two-part race course melodrama in which the villain tries to destroy the rival's horse by setting the barn on fire. It isn't a well written picture; the villain is poorly introduced and his affection for the heroine, destined for the hero, owner of the winning horse, seems dragged-in. The whole picture is filled with suggestions of artificiality and we dare not commend it as a first class offering, though it has some exciting scenes, like a race course crowd, and a burning stable with the horses rescued with bags over their heads to keep them from seeing the flames. The photography is good.

HER RAGGED KNIGHT (Victor), July 3.—A two-reeler that will be acceptable as a fun-maker. It features Florence Lawrence in one of her hoyden roles, but carries an old plot through with remarkable detail of freshness and is a sure entertainment giver. H. L. Solter is the producer. The photography and staging help much in keeping it alive.

THE FINAL RECKONING (Broncho), July 8.—This is a two-part picture written by William H. Clifford and produced by Walter Edwards, who plays the lead. While there is lots of intense action in this picture the plot is not a wholesome one, either in the first or second reels, and the ending is certainly most gruesome. The photography is commendable.

DUTY (Eclair), July 8.—A two-reel number with Belle Adair as the charming young wife of a middle-aged doctor, played by Alec Francis. She falls a victim to the advances of a designing artist, played by Robert Frazer. The doctor's heroic efforts to restore the boy's health made an unusual situation. In this he is successful and later the young wife learns to appreciate his good qualities. The photography is uneven. As a whole the number is entertaining and agreeable in plot, although not at all powerful.

CURSE OF HUMANITY (Domino), July 9.—This is a two-reel picture the authors of which are Thomas H. Ince and William H. Clifford. Scott Sidney produced it. Elizabeth Burbridge is in the lead and faithfully portrays the part. Miss Fanny Midgley, Harry Keenan, Charles Ray and Thelma Salter are in the cast and do good work. The plot is an interesting one in which the curse of drink pertains, but the finale is satisfactory, ending on Christmas morning.

THE FEUD AT BEAVER CREEK (Kay-Bee), July 10.—This two-part story is somewhat conventional, along the lines of the usual plot and theme, embracing the eventualities occurring amongst the primitive population of the back woods. It contains stirring scenes. The photography is bright and the acting on the part of all is commendable.

PROWLERS OF THE WILD (Bison), July 11.—A two-reel story of adventure, with Herbert Rawlinson, Anna Little and Frank Lloyd in the cast. This catches the interest from the very start, in the circus scenes, and the later developments occur in the wilds of Africa. The discharged foreman creates trouble with the natives. The blind girl with the tame leopard made an interesting feature. This is full of exciting novelties and from start to finish makes a stirring adventure number.

NERVE (Balboa).—A one-reel offering in which there is continuous action pictured with little art. The poor man has nerve trying to rob the house of the mining sharp who sold him a worthless claim. The woman has nerve when finding the man in the house she holds him up while waiting for the police. But the most nervy thing of all is when, after she hears the man's story, she tells the cop that the man is her brother. A one-reel offering might be a true feature, but we dare not command this as better than a fair, ordinary offering.

THE SANDS OF LIFE (Balboa).—A two-part story of a prize fighter, with his wife and child, who goes the downward way. It is strongly acted and is speedy, that is it has continuously significant action. There are two prize fights (sparring that is quick and seems scientific) in it, but the story is clean and has a good, wholesome moral tone which makes it a very good feature. The most earnest minded spectator in the house will be interested in it. A story by Jack London furnished the basis for it. The photography is excellent.

THE CALL OF THE HEART (Balboa).—A two-part offering made to fill the demand for elemental western ranch romance, "the good old kind." A new and clever camera expedient is used to contrast the ranch girl's three lovers, one a villain who has been discharged from the ranch, one the cowboy foreman who has been displaced by the new man from the city who, in the end when the villain comes to capture the girl, proves a coward, thus leaving the way open for the heroic foreman. Its photography is the best thing about it, but, like all of its kind, it is speedy and certainly has action.

THE LITTLE CONTORTIONIST (Milano—Warner's).—A picture-feature in three reels that is acted considerably better than the average. The plot is commercial and made to utilize the power of a little contortionist to hide himself in unexpected places. At one time, he startles a laugh out of the unsuspecting audience. Yet the story is never dry and most of it is highly entertaining. It has been carefully directed and the action is full of suspense. The camera work is commendable and the lighting often helps the dramatic quality of the scenes. The whole is a pretty good offering.

WHARTON PRAISES NEW YORK POLICE.

Leopold Wharton, of Wharton, Inc., Ithaca, N. Y., came down to New York last week to take some scenes on the busiest part of Broadway. Taking a scene on Broadway is not the easiest thing in the world, as the least bit of excitement will draw thousands to the spot in a few seconds. When the scenes were over Leopold leaned against a railing and said, while mopping his brow: "There's no use talking, the New York police are the finest body of men I ever knew. Without being asked they stepped right in and cleared a space for us. Where they came from I don't know but they seemed to spring up out of the ground and did their work as though they had been rehearsed for the job. I will always have a warm spot in my heart for the New York police."

CAN'T KEEP HOUSE WITHOUT IT.

Aspen, Colorado, June 19, 1914.

Editor, Moving Picture World.

Dear Sir:—Enclosed herewith find P. O. order for $3.00, being payment of my subscription to "The Moving Picture World."

I wish to congratulate you on the wonderful improvement in your neat publication which I have noted from time to time. I have been a subscriber to your publication almost since its inception, some time around 1907, and have seen it grow from a small struggling little booklet to the magnificent trade journal it now is and every number, I assure you, is a source of much pleasure to me.

How anyone connected with the industry in any way can keep house without it is a mystery to me. With kindest wishes, I am,

Yours truly,

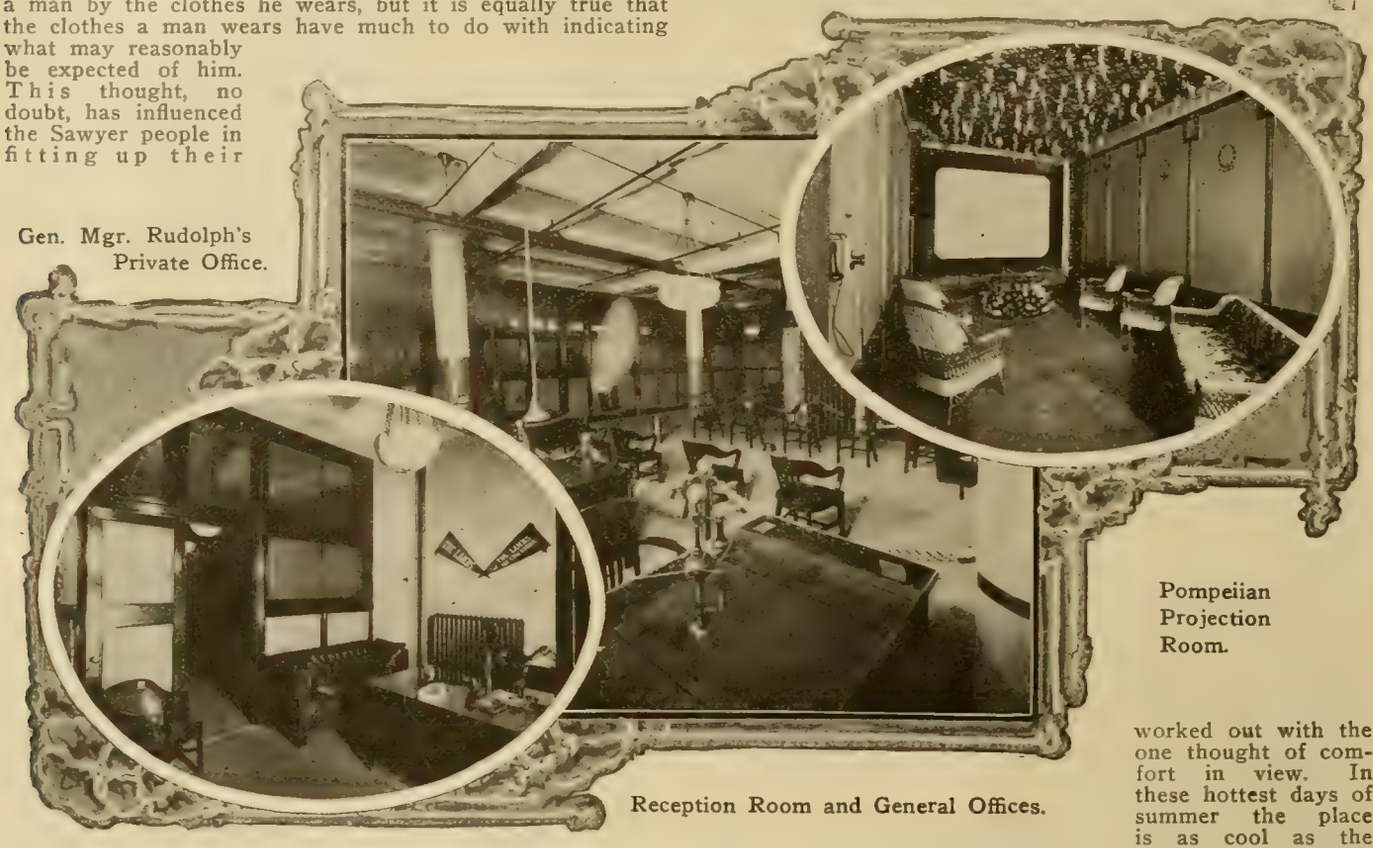
JOHN BOWMAN.

Sawyer, Inc., Quarters Superb

Visit to Film Mart's Plant in Mecca Building Sends One Away with Soberer Thoughts of Film Industry.

THOSE who "visit around" among the people in the motion picture industry in Greater New York have found much to talk about after their first visit to the offices of Sawyer, Inc., on the eighth floor of the Mecca Building at 1600 Broadway—and talking, they have had food for thought. The Sawyer quarters are different and that they are different is because the men back of the new enterprise are looking at things from a viewpoint different from that which has heretofore been taken by men launching big things in the picture industry.

Here is an indication of the solid, substantial business concern which has accepted the premise that the day of the fly-by-night has passed and that there is at hand a new era, in which there can survive only those who can prove their claims to superiority. It may be true that one can not tell a man by the clothes he wears, but it is equally true that the clothes a man wears have much to do with indicating what may reasonably be expected of him. This thought, no doubt, has influenced the Sawyer people in fitting up their quarters and the visitor now finds them amid surroundings of quiet elegance which not only suggest that they have come to stay but that they may be "reasonably expected" to have something quite out of the ordinary to offer.



Gen. Mgr. Rudolph's Private Office.

Pompeiian Projection Room.

Reception Room and General Offices.

Quietly and simply elegant about describes the equipment scheme of the new offices. There is no glare and nothing gawdy but everything that has been used is the best that money could buy and, what is more important, there is the ever present conviction that intelligent thought has been given to everything done.

From the hall one enters the big reception room and general offices. The boy who politely inquires your business wears a suit which matches the expansive stretch of the thick Wilton carpet, delft blue in color, completely covering the floor. Three or four office employees are seated at heavy mahogany desks in this big room, but there are none of the cold railings and partitions commonly found. Brass posts supporting heavy plush ropes, also deft blue in color, enclose the reception room space in which visitors are courteously invited to wait until those they have come to see find time to talk business with them. On either side of this big room are sets of the latest steel poster racks which display the attractive advertising matter which the firm provides for the use of those who offer their feature photoplays to the general public.

At the rear of the general offices, but really facing right out on busy Broadway, are the private offices of the executives of the company. H. Sawyer, the president, has a large well furnished room and adjoining it is the office of W. H. Rudolph, vice-president and general manager of the company. F. H. Tinker, secretary and treasurer, has comfortable quarters adjoining those of Mr. Rudolph.

Leaving the general offices, to the left, is the pride of the establishment, the Pompeiian projection room—and it is a creation of which any motion picture organization might well be proud. The room is adequate in size for any use to which it will ever be put and its technical equipment is of the very best. A screen much larger than those usually found in house projection rooms is nicely "furnished" with draperies, etc., in keeping with the quiet red-brown color scheme. There are two Power's 6A projectors in the operator's booth, which is of asbestos construction, and so placed that one identifies it only by the portholes through which the pictures are projected. The thing which impresses one most about the projection room, however, is the regard for the comfort and convenience of the company's guests and patrons which has been shown in fitting it up. It is splendidly decorated—but every detail of the decoration has been worked out with the one thought of comfort in view. In these hottest days of summer the place is as cool as the proverbial cucumber. Artificial vines and flowers hang from the arbored ceiling. An electric fountain, banked with flowers and placed just at the base of the screen, keeps shooting perfumed and cooling water into the air while vari-colored lights play upon it. A battery of electric fans on the floor—up near the screen, in order that they may be out of the way—keep the air constantly in motion and waft back from the fountain the cool scented breezes which make one think of a quiet day in the woods rather than of the arduous duties of the city which make it necessary for him to spend his time in selecting photoplays for his theater. The half dozen chairs and big settee in the room are of wicker, upholstered in wistaria cretonne. A small table, with a drop light on it for the convenience of those who wish to make notes while the pictures are running, is also of wicker. A telephone on the wall will keep one in close touch with his business blocks, or even miles away. Special arrangements with Rector's, on the first floor of the Mecca Building, make it possible for the man who is looking over the Sawyer features in the projection room to have whatever he wishes to eat sent in to him and served while he is viewing the pictures. In its furnishings and plan of conduct, the little place very much suggests the most exclusive of the big city clubs.

In another portion of the quarters are located the workshops and shipping rooms in which the actual mechanical operations of marketing the photoplays are looked after. The most modern devices have been installed there.

The transformation which has been effected in their portion of the Mecca Building by the Sawyer concern is truly remarkable. The building is of modern fireproof construction and this means that its concrete floors, ceilings, etc., as unadorned, are cold and univiting. All "loft building" atmosphere has been destroyed in the Sawyer section, however, the only thing remaining being the clean, lofty ceilings which make for freshness and good ventilation.

Although the final touches have just been put on the new quarters, after a couple of months of work, it must not be imagined that the firm has been idle in the matter of pushing its wares. Mr. Sawyer stands sponsor for the statement that there has not been a single week since the organization of the company that the business done has not been sufficient to turn a tidy profit. "What we had to sell," Mr. Sawyer says, "was ready before we opened our doors and we sold it despite the difficulties which were presented by the unfinished state of our quarters. As things have been straightening themselves out the business has increased and now that we are in such shape that we can give our entire attention to the purposes of our organization there is every indication that there will be a truly wonderful increase in the volume of our business."

Speaking of the policy which the firm has adopted, General Manager Rudolph said: "We have coined the descriptive title, 'Film Mart,' for our place and this tells the whole story. Our aim is to provide expert service in the matter of marketing features—that is, in getting the pictures which producers make before the public in a way which will make them most profitable to those who own or control them. To the makers of pictures we offer the argument that all they have to do is provide the negatives. After we have accepted the negatives, we take care of all remaining details—and these details are often so many and absorbing that the average producing concern is so weighted down with them that their best work in production is found impossible. We have the positives and prints made, provide all printing and advertising matter, advertise the pictures to the trade and general public, and make returns to the producers on the basis of whatever contracts we make with them. This general proposition is broad enough to permit of our marketing pictures on either the states rights plan or by dealing directly with the exhibitor. Since we have been doing business we have sold not a few states rights but it has been, perhaps, our rental business, dealing directly with the exhibitor, which has been found most profitable. In view of this experience, it is our plan to open offices all over the country within the next few months."

Mr. Rudolph is a firm believer that the ultimate salvation of both producer and exhibitor in the film business will be a plan which will eliminate the middle man and make the exhibitor deal directly with the producer. The comforts which have been provided in the splendid quarters in the Mecca Building very much suggest that Sawyer, Inc., are quite anxious to meet individual exhibitors who wish to select their own programs and to impress these exhibitors with the Sawyer company's superior equipment for looking after their every need.

Another original plan which is being worked out by the concern is the production of short-length features which the Sawyer executives think will fill a long felt want among the exhibitors. The production of these photoplays, which will be known as Tinker's Tabloid Features, will be directly supervised by the Sawyer company. The plan is to make releases of not more than 2,000 feet per subject, strong enough, by reason of the story told and the players featured, to stand up on any program. Most of the pictures will be comedies, and such celebrities as De Wolf Hopper will appear in them.

Miss Agnes Mapes in "Il Trovatore."

THE Centaur Company has in course of preparation a six-part production based upon Verdi's opera, "Il Trovatore," which promises to be a considerable addition to the list of feature pictures now offered. The story is one of gypsy vengeance. Azucena, a young gypsy girl, in an attempt to avenge her mother who was put to death by Count di Luna, destroys her own child which is mistaken for that of the Count. She afterward rears the child of the Count with the idea of gaining revenge some day. This part of the story is told in the first two parts, bringing out the motive of revenge.

Miss Agnes Mapes.

The picture is under the personal direction of Charles Simone who has engaged an excellent cast for the portrayal. Dear old Mrs. Julia Hurley takes the part of the Gypsy Queen, and by this sign we know that the part will be well depicted.

For the part of Azucena Miss Agnes Mapes was especially engaged. It is a part calling for the depiction of the strongest passions. Miss Mapes will be recalled for her finished work in "Colleen Bawn" and "Arrah na Pogue" for which the Kalem Company secured her services during their second trip to Ireland.

Thus far Miss Mapes has devoted only her summers to work before the camera, the silent drama not yet having weaned her entirely away from the legitimate stage where she has won such pronounced success. Her most recent appearance was in the spring production of the religious drama entitled "Pilate's Daughter," in which she played the leading role.

Miss Mapes says that she is thoroughly enjoying her work in "Il Trovatore" and has never handled a photoplay role for which she could get up as much enthusiasm. This deep interest insures another notable screen portrayal.

Miss Katharine Eggelston.

IN CONNECTION with recent film activities around New York City which have "made" the daily newspapers, the name of Miss Katharine Eggelston, well known magazine writer, has been mentioned in a manner which warrants the supposition that Miss Eggelston has decided to join, in greater spirit, the ranks of the many men and women of prominence in the literary world who are now interested in "the movies."

Miss Eggelston has written numerous short stories and poems which have been published to her considerable financial profit and is also widely known in the amusement world for her work on the lyceum stage where she has made her original monologues and dramatic recitals quite popular.

Miss Katharine Eggleston.

Two distinct movements of more than the usual consequence in the "uplift" class have drawn Miss Eggelston more closely to the motion picture industry within the past few weeks than she has ever been before, despite the fact that she served the Mutual Film Corporation as film editor for a number of months and gained a lot of valuable information and experience. One of the new movements has for its object the use of churches and other suitable buildings for the purpose of providing selected programs of educational pictures for both children and adults in certain sections of Greater New York who are wont to use their spare time in the pursuit of less healthy and healthful diversions. The other movement embodies the organization of a big company, along strictly commercial lines, to make educational and religious pictures of the kind particularly adapted for use in churches, schools, social settlements, etc.

Miss Eggelston's interest in these movements has been helpful to those who promoted them originally in providing information on the subject gleaned by a mind highly trained to observe.

Box Office Attractions Company

Compelling Circumstances Responsible for Spectacular Growth of Big William Fox Enterprise.

GAINING size and importance fully as much because of compelling circumstances as because of plans laid well advance, the Box Office Attractions Company, a dominating influence in the feature film rental field, has been like the snow ball which the small boy releases at the top of a little knoll as the first step in the construction ot a snowman. Here the simile must end, however, for the William Fox money and enterprise back of the Box Office Company, provide assurance that the project will not melt into the earth no matter how warm the days become.

The Box Office Attractions Company was organized in January, 1914, and, marking its entrance into the activities of the film industry, its first releases were made February 9.

With William Fox as its president, the company began business fortified with the experiences of a live amusement impresario who had seen the value of moving pictures years before and had successfully fought what he regarded as pernicious influences which threatened to destroy not only him but the entire industry.

Mr. Fox's firm conviction that the demand for multiple rèel pictures would grow until features would dominate the programs of all progressive exhibitors is said to have been responsible for the organization of the company which came as his second big film handling enterprise.

Primarily the Box Office Attractions Company was to be the parent of exchanges, conveniently located for efficient operation in New York City and State, northern New Jersey, and in the New England States. To secure and handle feature films in practically the same manner that other similar organizations had done was the original object. Circumstances ruled otherwise, however. The snowball began to roll, growing as it rolled, and today the company is possessed of half a dozen different interests which had not been thought of last January. An extensive plot of ground has been purchased in the suburbs of Greater New York and a studio in which feature pictures are to be manufactured is being projected. The entire output of the Balboa Amusement Producing Company, of Long Beach, Cal., for distribution not only in the limited territory in the East, originally counted upon but throughout the United States and Canada, Central and South America, and the West Indies, has been contracted for. Twenty-one separate and distinct manufacturers in this country and abroad have been paid liberally for the privilege of first choice of their products.

Portraits—William Fox, President (Center); Winfield R. Sheehan, General Manager.

Scenes—Charles Mortimer Peck in His Publicity Headquarters (Upper Left); Reception Room (Lower Left); One of the Two Projection Rooms (Upper Right); Poster Display Room (Lower Right).

In originating the Box Office Company, it was Mr. Fox's idea that at least four features per week should be offered exhibitors. It was understood that the mere matter of discovering four features each week of such quality that they could be bought and resold to the better class of exhibitors, was no small task, not to mention the difficulty of financing so big a proposition. The plan was adopted, however, and for months the Box Office people have been wheeling along pretty steadily with their four-features-a-week idea. It is confessed that there have been a few weeks in which the company has made more or less expensive bargains with some of the manufacturing concerns to which they were under contract in order that they might be excused from accepting features which they did not regard as suitable.

The determination to build and operate their own studios, the big contract with the Balboa people, and the arrangement with big European makers of photoplays so early in the Box Office Company's history have all resulted, it is said, because of conditions which became apparent as the business unfolded itself. That the day might come when even the most persistent search would not reveal sufficient features of the necessary quality has been considered as at least a possibility and the Box Office manufacturing plan has been worked out as a means of protection. When the studios are in operation, three all-star stock companies will be kept at work twelve months a year, providing a source of feature photoplays which the distributing company will control absolutely and which cannot fail them. The contract with the Balboa company whereby the entire output of the Balboa studios goes to the Box Office Company was a bigger one than it was planned to make, but was also found necessary as a protective measure for customers of the distributing exchange.

The Box Office organization is a particularly strong one and a visit to the handsomely equipped offices occupying the entire fifth floor of the Leavitt Building in West Forty-sixth Street, New York City, is convincing that the company is in the field, not only to stay, but to enjoy continued and rapid growth. As president, Mr. Fox, past master of providing popularly priced entertainment for the public, controls the destinies of the company. Winfield R. Sheehan, a trained and aggressive executive long connected with an important department of New York City's government, is general manager of the company. Abraham Carlos, whose knowledge of the film business has been conclusively proven by the success which he has made of a number of theaters around New York, is the company's expert film purchasing agent and head of the State Rights department. L. T. Rogers serves as booking manager and Charles Mortimer Peck as manager of advertising, publicity, and sales promotion.

The company's quarters are complete. There are nicely furnished business offices, two very pretty projection theaters, a complete poster department, and thoroughly modern rooms for the handling of film.

Exclusive Supply Corporation.

Pioneer Venders of Features Soon to Open Branch Offices Throughout the Country for Exhibitors' Convenience.

IT is claimed for the brand of films known as Great Northern Special that they were the very first feature films ever marketed in the United States. This distinction is at least interesting in view of the wonderful development which has been made in the feature branch of the moving picture industry within the past year or so.

In this connection it is also of interest to recount briefly some of the past activities of the men who have had to do with these pioneer feature films and to tell of plans which they have formulated for the future.

Great Northern features, listed as Great Northern Preferred and Great Northern Specials, are controlled by the Exclusive Supply Corporation, from whose offices in the Candler Building, West Forty-second Street, are also marketed the feature releases now being made by almost a dozen other large companies.

The Exclusive Corporation was formed in May, 1913, at a time when feature films were the exception and not the rule in the photoplay theaters throughout the United States and at a time when the chap with a feature film under his arm was wont to hawk his wares from theater to theater, often quite successfully. Herbert Blache, president of the company; I. C. Oes, vice-president; Harry R. Raver, secretary and treasurer, and Joseph R. Miles, general manager, were agreed in their opposition to the "forced program" which was a lot more common in those days than it is now and in their determination to make it possible to buy just the kind of a show he wanted from time to time the Exclusive was born.

Joseph Miles.

Mr. Blache's personal interests include extensive holdings in the Blache-American, the Solax, and the United States Amusement companies. Mr. Oes is president of the Great Northern Special Feature Film Company and the American representative of the Nordisk Film Company. Mr. Raver is president and general manager of the All Star Feature Corporation and is interested in the Itala Film Company of America. Mr. Miles is president of the Films Lloyd Company and an officer in the Great Northern Special Company. With the products of all of these companies as a nucleus, the Exclusive Supply Corporation was able to start its career in a most pretentious manner.

At the present time, the Exclusive is handling features made by the following well-known companies: All Star Feature Corporation, Blache-American, F. R. A., Gaumont, Great Northern Preferred, Great Northern Special, Itala, Lewis Pennant, Ramo, Solax and Films Lloyd. Their program calls for the release of five features each week and distribution is made on the states right plan, big exchanges handling the product in certain territories and independent exhibitors in others.

For some months, the Exclusive people have been at work on important changes in their general marketing plan, and it has just been announced that at least a score of branch offices are to be opened in various cities throughout the country in the fall. Under the new plan, the Exclusive will deal directly with the exhibitor in every locality instead of with the exchange, or middle man. Just where these branch offices are to be located and other details of the plan have not yet been announced, but it is said that investigation which has been made by officers of the corporation within the past few months has resulted in a charting of the country, based upon its feature film needs, the following of which will insure the success of the new arrangement. When the branch offices are established two more features per week will be added to the schedule, making "a feature a day" possible for those who care to avail themselves of Exclusive service. The plan also calls for the release of a sufficient number of commercial films to round out programs, making it possible for the exhibitor to buy his entire show from the one source of supply.

While all of the features handled by the Exclusive people are those of well established concerns, film people in general have, perhaps, heard more about the Harry Raver string than about the others within the past few months. The All Star Feature Corporation has been attracting considerable attention because of the association with it of Augustus Thomas in the capacity of general director of productions. "The Jungle," photoplay version of Upton Sinclair's powerful novel of the same title, made under the personal direction of the author and introducing Mr. Sinclair in a couple of the scenes, has recently been released and is proving a big drawing card in theaters throughout the country.

Through his association with another allied company and also reflecting credit upon the standing of the men who direct the destinies of the Exclusive Corporation, Mr. Raver has lately put over a notable film success in "Cabiria," now running at the Knickerbocker Theater, New York City.

Warner's Features, Inc.

Company's Success in the Film Industry Is Notable Example of Strict Adherence to Carefully Thought Out Purpose.

THE commercial world at large is full of examples of successes which have been made by strict adherence to a purpose. Big businesses have been built by men possessed of an idea in which they had faith and upon which they were willing to stake their reputations by closely identifying it with their names. The Warner's Features, Inc., business is a notable example of this in the moving picture industry.

One cannot go back to ancient history to begin a yarn about the development of any business in the moving picture field for the reason that the industry itself is still quite young. However, it may be said that it was a good many years ago Abe Warner and a couple of equally aggressive associates began the campaign which has made the Warner's Features, Inc., business what it is today, possessed of little more than an idea.

The first company formed was Warner's Feature Film Company, with A. Warner as president, H. M. Warner as secretary and treasurer, and H. M. Goetz as general auditor.

Directors' Room, Warner's Features, Inc.

General Office, Warner's Features, Inc.

The idea was to supply what seemed to be a healthy demand for multiple reel pictures as business builders in thousands of theatres which had sprung up throughout the United States.

In August, 1913, the original company gave way to the present organization known as Warner's Features, Inc., with the following officers: P. A. (Pat) Powers, president; A. Warner, vice-president; H. M. Warner, sales manager; H. M. Goetz, assistant sales manager.

In the eleven months which have elapsed since this reorganization, strict adherence to the original idea and intelligent and conscientious effort on the part of Mr. Powers and his associates have worked wonders until the name "Warner's Features" has been established as a guarantee of quality in photoplays from one end of the country to the other, and is equally well known among moving picture tradesmen and mere "moving picture fans."

As he looks back at what has been accomplished, Mr. Powers likes to recall the first trio of feature releases, made in September, 1913. "In the Power of a Hypnotist," "The Living Corpse," and "Jephtha's Daughter" caught the public fancy in such a way that "Warner's Features" were immediately set upon the high road to success.

The Warner idea was to buy films in the open market, to avoid all contract entanglements which might result in the company's exploitation of something not up to standard because of obligations previously incurred, and to pay the highest prices to film manufacturers in order that the house of Warner might be the first place visited by the producer with something particularly meritorious to sell. Important also was the company's plan to protect the exhibitor by granting him exclusive rights to Warner features in his territory.

When the Warner's Features, Inc., moved into their handsome offices on the eighth floor of the Leavitt Building in West Forty-sixth Street last October, they owned outright twenty-one branch offices located in the principal cities of the United States and Canada. The string of offices had been established after careful consideration of shipping problems which, in the earlier days, had been bobbing up day after day and week after week to drive exhibitors and exchange men alike to distraction because of disappointments which it seemed impossible to prevent. With the present Warner organization, New England and the East in general receive their film supply from offices in Boston, Mass.; Syracuse, N. Y.; Buffalo, N. Y.; New York City, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Wilkes-Barre, Pa.; Washington, D. C., and Wheeling, W. Va. The Southern exhibitors are taken care of by offices in Atlanta, Ga.; New Orleans, La.; Dallas, Tex.; and Louisville, Ky. The Middle West is served by offices in Cleveland, O.; Cincinnati, O.; Indianapolis, Ind.; Chicago, Ill.; St. Louis, Mo.; Kansas City, Mo.; Minneapolis, Minn.; and Detroit, Mich. Exhibitors in the West and Far West look to offices in Denver, Col.; San Francisco, Cal.; Los Angeles, Cal.; and Seattle, Wash.; for their service and those in Canada to Toronto and Montreal.

The Warner's Features schedule, from the beginning, has been made up almost exclusively of three-reel releases, the judgment of Mr. Powers and his associates being that features of this size are best suited to the needs of the average exhibitor throughout the country. For a long time it has been the company's practice to release three features a week. As a rule, these features are three-reel subjects, but occasionally one six-reeler and a three, or a five and a four, the total number of reels invariably being nine for the week, are released. This policy of specializing in three-reel features may be mentioned as indicative of the intelligent care which the Warner people have expended in building their business. The company's representatives spend as much time in finding out just what exhibitors need as they do in the work of actually pushing their film wares, with the result that the exhibitor is led to believe that he is always "in the hands of his friends." At the recent exposition at Grand Central Palace the Warner company asked exhibitors to decide by ballot what length features were best suited to their needs.

The company's policy of paying the highest prices for features has served its purposes in attracting some of the best producers, and among the regular contributors to the Warner programs are the following companies: Gene Gauntier Feature Players, Sid Olcott International Players, Marion Leonard Film Company, Colorado Motion Picture Company, Albuquerque Film Manufacturing Company, Milano Film Company, Miller Bros. 101 Ranch Features, Ambrosio American Company, Pyramid Film Company, Paris Eclair and Mittenthal Bros. Film Company. Sidney Olcott, Stanner E. V. Taylor, Marshall Farnum, Jack J. Clark, H. C. Matthews, J. Farrell MacDonald, Otis B. Thayer, and Frank Beal are some of the popular directors whose work stands out in the Warner programs.

Mr. Powers, who has always been one of the most aggressive men in the independent film field, has used his intimate personal knowledge of the requirements of exhibitors throughout the country with striking success in building up the business of his company. His is, and long has been, the policy of not only providing the exhibitor with the right kind of features but also of helping the exhibitor "sell" his show to the public. The handsome lobby displays, lithographs and banners, which are sent out with the pictures to provide a regular "circus billing," have helped a great deal in making Warner's Features popular.

Ruth Roland, Kalem Girl Who Does Things

RUTH ROLAND, the popular Kalem comedienne, no doubt, has not realized that she has devoted her life to the entertainment of the public. She would probably tell you that she is having just as much fun as her audiences and really had not thought about working for the amusement of humanity. The fact remains, however, that she went on the stage at the age of four and has practically been an actress ever since. Miss Roland's first appearance in photoplays was in the Kalem western dramas, and when Kalem established a permanent comedy company in California, she became the bright star. Of late she has been featured in lively farces, which have been of such a strenuous character that the spectator has not always had a chance to study her natural charms. The accompanying illustrations—Miss Roland's latest photographs—will give her many admirers the opportunity they have been awaiting.

Should you ask an authority what particular equipment an actor or actress must have to captivate and hold an audience, he will answer in one word: "Personality." And a little reflection will bring a wealth of evidence to prove the statement. The plays and vaudeville acts which owe their success to ingratiating artists are legion and the director of photoplays will tell you that the silent drama is even more dependent upon the strong personalities of his players.

Miss Roland and her directors, however, have not been obliged to capitalize upon her prime asset, for there seems to be nothing which this versatile young woman cannot do when called upon. She has handled an aeroplane and high-powered motor boat with the same facility with which she drives her automobile.

Speaking of automobiles, the comedienne recently had a large "Kewpie" doll fitted with electric lights and mounted it on the radiator of her machine. The innovation started a craze and, as a result, many of the illuminated "Kewpies" are to be seen along the Los Angeles highways.

An expert with the rifle and shotgun, Miss Roland has brought home many a canvasback, when she found it possible to slip away from the Kalem studio for an afternoon's outing, and she is equally proficient with rod and line.

When the director announces a day at the beach, Miss Roland just knows that she is going to take a high dive. If the play does not call for one, she dashes away between scenes and dives for her own enjoyment. At the natatorium which she visits, it is not uncommon for the bathers to assemble and applaud the variety of fancy dives and swimming strokes which she has mastered.

The boxing gloves and fencing foils which adorn Miss Roland's room are not there for decorative purposes entirely, as any venturesome challenger may learn. For further information you can apply to a certain actor who took part in one of Kalem's "athletic comedies" and was foolish enough to discredit Miss Roland's right-hand swing by stepping into it.

Occasionally the Kalem comedies offer Miss Roland an opportunity to present the modern dances, of which she is an accomplished exponent. The feminine fans who have admired the handsome gowns which Miss Roland wears in such productions will be interested in learning that they were designed by the actress. And we do not think we are betraying a confidence when we state that she makes many of them herself. Few outside of the studio know that Miss Roland can "clog" just as cleverly as she executes the tango and maxixe.

Miss Roland likes to talk about her work in the pictures, but the person with whom she converses will know little about the part she has been playing when the chat has ended. He will, however, carry away with him an account of some strenuous adventure which was not on the original schedule of picture taking. Perhaps her saddle girth broke when she was taking one of her daring horseback rides, or it may have been that a clumsy super got in the way of her lasso.

"What were my most successful roles on the stage?" Miss Roland repeated in response to a recent inquiry. "That's ancient history now. I had almost forgotten that I had ever been in musical comedy and, until I sang those selections at the benefit performance tonight I was not sure that I still possessed a voice. At that, I couldn't tell whether the house was joking with me or not. That's one advantage of being in the pictures. You're miles away from your critics. And you can figure that I am in the pictures to stay."

Paramount Pictures Corporation

Marketing Plan on Novel Lines, as Regards Photoplay Producers, Expected to Accomplish Wonders.

ANY LEGITIMATE THEATER
Broadway, New York City
Any Date
First Performance
"HIS MASTERPIECE"
by David Belasco
All-star cast.

ANY PICTURE THEATER
New York or Elsewhere
(Same date as above)
First Presentation
"HIS MASTERPIECE"
by David Belasco
Original Cast and Production

UP TO the present writing newspapers in this or any any other country have not been asked to carry advertisements like the foregoing. That publicity of this kind may be in order, and that very shortly, is not a far cry from what one gathers in inquiring into the plans of the recently organized Paramount Pictures Corporation, and a discussion of this possibility will pretty accurately emphasize the points of distinction which are claimed for the new combination, recognized as one of the most important which has ever been effected in the moving picture industry.

It was announced not many weeks ago that the Paramount corporation had been formed with the following officers: W. W. Hodkinson, president and general manager; James Steele, vice-president; Raymond Pawley, secretary and treasurer; additional members of the Board of Directors, Hiram Abrams and W. L. Sherry. It was explained in a general way that the new organization was a combination for the purposes of distributing the products of the Famous Players Film Company, the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, and Bosworth, Inc.

Officers of the Paramount (Left to Right—Hiram Abrams, W. L. Sherry, James Steele, W. W. Hodkinson, Raymond Pawley).

Described in a way which will explain the real significance of the organization, it may be said that the Paramount Pictures Corporation movement represents the whole hearted embarkation in the moving picture business of that class of amusement purveyors commonly referred to as the "high brows" and hitherto violently opposed to what they have contemptuously called the "canned drama." This is a broad description and is based upon the inevitable happenings of the future as well as upon what has transpired in the past.

The representation in the Paramount organization of the Famous Players Film Company and the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, which have already established reputations for handling the productions of some of the foremost men in the theatrical business, calls attention to the fact that big producers had been lured into the moving picture field before the formation of the Paramount organization. Plans which have been announced by each of these component organizations, as well as by the Paramount concern, within the past few weeks, however, would seem to bear testimony that the Paramount organization idea has been the clincher in securing other productions and producing talent greatly to be desired and in providing a means for the future whereby nothing that is really worth while can escape the photoplay screen.

The Paramount plan, intended primarily to interest producers who have hitherto worked in the so-called "legitimate" branch of the amusement business, is the identical plan under which these producers have always operated in their old field. The Paramount features will be handled on a percentage basis, the producer of the picture making much or little money in accordance with whether his product is or is not satisfactory from the public's point of view, after it has been passed upon by the distributing agency.

For the percentage plan, which is a new one in the feature film field, the Paramount people claim as the principal advantage that it will keep alive a spirit of co-operation between manufacturer and distributor which is sometimes lacking under other arrangements.

While no statment to the effect has been made, it seems quite evident that the percentage, or royalty, plan devised by the Paramount, has had much to do with influencing such producers as David Belasco to enter the photoplay field. Certainly, if Mr. Belasco has ever objected to the photoplay on the grounds that it might belittle his art, this objection has been removed in providing him with a way in which he can spend as much time and money upon a photoplay production as he can determine to be justified, reasoning that superior merit in a photoplay will call for superior reward in which he is to share.

Nothing definite has been said upon the subject of filming New York dramatic successes while they are still running on Broadway, but that this plan is being seriously considered is quite evident from remarks let fall by the Paramount people.

The plan, then, to present a first-night of both the regular stage version and the photoplay version of something which gives every promise of proving a success, seems perfectly within reason. Certainly the advertisement of a Broadway run would do greater things for a photoplay of the reigning success offered in every corner of the country within six weeks' time than it would for road companies striking communities months or even years afterwards, when the enthusiasm for the original success had begun to wane.

Of the Paramount's definite plans for the future it has been anounced that a definite schedule of feature releases is to be put into operation about September 1. The features will come, not only from the three big producing companies represented, but also from such other companies either in this country or abroad as are able to produce stuff up to the distributing company's high standard and are anxious to have it handled throughout the country.

World Film Corporation.

ONE of the most important combinations ever made in the motion picture industry has recently turned the limelight on the World Feature Corporation, with sumptuous offices in the Leavitt Building, in West Forty-sixth Street. As the result of the combination, the World Film Corporation will distribute exclusively the photoplay features, either past or future, of the Messrs. Shubert, William A. Brady, Charles E. Blaney, Owen Davis, and the McEnnery Syndicate of New York and London. Included in the formal announcement of the big deal made not long ago was a list of more than 160 features, either made or to be made, which will constitute the distributing company's catalogue.

The World Film Corporation has been one of the most active feature organizations in the field for some time. It started as a big thing but its growth, nevertheless, has been spectacular and its participation in this latest deal which represents the forming of a $3,000,000 company is therefore something which might reasonably have been expected. Back of the gigantic scheme to provide one photoplay feature a week of a most extraordinary nature, it is said, are some of the wealthiest financial operators in the Wall Street district of New York and certainly it is true that directing the scheme are some of the ablest film men in the industry.

Outside of the announcement that the new features would be added to their program early in September, the World people have said but little of the effect the recent big deal would have upon their organization and plans. Twenty-one offices, in addition to the principal one in New York City, were controlled by the distributing concern before the big deal and it is very likely that many additions will be made to this already big list of headquarters for the World features.

The New York offices of the World Film Corporation are handsomely furnished, with everything in the best of taste. The color scheme is gray, the partitions dividing the numerous offices and departments being of ground glass. The projection room is quite comfortable and the projection equipment is of the very best obtainable in order that the pictures may be shown at their best.

The Stuff That Dreams Are Made Of

A New Two-Reel Version of an Old Edison Comedy

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

Farmer Davis.....Harry Eytinge
Nellie, his daughter.....Gladys Hulette
Joe Skifkins.....Richard Tucker
Mrs. Davis.....Cora Williams
Mr. Stephens.....William Bechtel
Grace, his daughter.....Gertrude McCoy

VERY FUNNY, so funny that every actor and actress in moving pictures should see it, "The Stuff That Dreams Are Made of," has a serious purpose concealed in its merriment. In every studio there are quite a few self-sufficient ladies and gentlemen who think they could act if they ever had a real chance. These Vanity Boxes, more familiarly known as "Vee-Bees," have a passionate fondness for publishing their performances, past and present, with an additional hint at the offers they have been compelled to turn down.

Scene from "The Stuff That Dreams Are Made Of" (Edison)

While the plain and disagreeable truth is that a lot of us are getting easy money in this line of business who ought to be earning wages, some of us appreciate that the business made us, whereas "quite a few," especialy Vee-Bees of guady publicity in magazines and papers with space to fill, think they made the business. These actorettes and actorines are the idols of immature minds, from children to kitchen maids and hopeful clerks. Postal cards bearing hectic half-tones of movie hero and heroine are widely circulated among the unthinking with a sad result. When one of the Vee-Bees lays his, or her, tired head down at night, the tire is usually punctured if the head has not suffered a blow-out.

Scene from "The Stuff That Dreams Are Made Of" (Edison)

Supposing you had an unbelievable publicity man handing out a lot of knock-kneed epigrams, decrepit narratives and press-agent perversions of God's naked truth about you while you were engaged in a campaign perpetual of self-exploitation wherever you could find a listener, perhaps your well-tired head would suffer a blow-out, just as did Nellie, the daughter of Farmer Davis, in Edison's revived comedy. Nellie saw strange things in her dreams but nothing more wierd, really and honestly, than much we see on the screen at the picture show. She saw actorettes and actorines strut about and mouth "My God" in an omelette souffle of yellow nothingness that was only mildly amusing until I saw the point. The point being that the participants in Nellie's nightmare were taking off Vanity Boxes of moving pictures; then I began to sit up and smile.

It was the art of acting left to itself, unguided by directorial control, a rampant reproduction of all that makes serious photoplays so screamingly funny, just such a shifting of violent incident without meaning or purpose as we find in five-point type among the release notices, and watch in a bewildered state of mental appendicitis on the screen when we pay ten cents to loop the loop with that little remaining sense we have. It was all much funnier than I expected because it was so much like what we often expect, and much funnier than the performers may have expected. They were not exaggerating a great, after all.

"The Stuff That Dreams Are Made Of" also takes off with rare ingenuity those old scenic devices which used to thrill in stage melondrammers, which are not greatly removed from the million-dollar effects of the present day in actual photo-dramatic value. People will laugh at the comedy for various reasons, some of which are above enumerated, and thanks be to the producer who gives an occasional chance to enjoy ourselves in that way.

The Picture Saleslady

WOMEN achieve success in so many fields of human endeavor that it is not in the least surprising that she should succeed as a seller of motion pictures. A notable example of woman's success in this line is found in the subject of this brief sketch, Miss Agnes Egan Cobb, who conducts the features department of the Eclair Film Company, known to the trade as the Leading Players Film Corporation and Features Ideal. Though Miss Cobb has occupied this position but little more than a year, she has greatly popularized the brands under her control and has demonstrated that at least there is one woman who can sell motion pictures better than some of the men who have preceded her in the same position.

Agnes Egan Cobb.

Miss Cobb has been connected with the motion picture business for several years and is as fully conversant with the trade as any man engaged in the business today. Energetic and persistent, she has built up a stable market for the Leading Players and Features Ideal brands that will last for some time to come.

In her work as sales manager she has charge of the publicity appertaining to the subjects to be disposed of and not only prepares the text descriptions and the display advertising matter, but selects the poster copy, a very important item in the marketing of a feature motion picture.

Miss Cobb is a regular attendant upon the various exhibitors' conventions, state and national, and few men in the business are better or more favorably known than she to the exhibitors of the country.

Essanay's New Studios.

The Equipment of the Additional Studio in Chicago is Said to Realize the Last Word in Artificial Lighting.

WITHOUT any blare of trumpets Essanay's new studio in Chicago was completed and opened early in the present year. The new structure is situated west of the old and, like the latter, faces on Argyle Street, the entire front making an imposing appearance on that thoroughfare. Gigantic willow trees line the sidewalks along the frontage of both structures, affording only a partial view as one drives past.

George K. Spoor, president of the Essanay Company, was seen by the writer shortly after the new studio was in operation, and referring to the outlay on the new building and its appointments he preferred to look on it rather from the viewpoint of the additional utilities it provided than from the expense incurred.

"Our new studio has proved already a great time-saver," he said. "Our old Chicago studio was a pretty fast studio, excellently equipped, but the new studio will, I believe, from present indications, save us fully eight working days in the month. More than that, its lighting equipment is pretty close to the last word in artificial lighting.

"We have now sufficient facilities in our Chicago studios alone, if put to the test, to turn out 14,000 feet of negative per week. The capacity of the new Niles studio, in California, is easily 6,000 feet per week.

"Our additional studio here will be devoted to dramatic subjects exclusively. These subjects will not necessarily be all multiple reels, as I am a firm believer in the single reel features and intend to devote great effort to single reel comedies and dramatic subjects. The Snakeville Western comedies, with Margaret Jocelyn, Victor Potel and Harry Todd, will continue to keep up the former and will create even the increased demand. The Anderson "Broncho Billy" releases are holding their popularity, and Mr. Anderson is appearing regularly in his famous role."

The new studio building occupies a ground space 90 by 70 feet. The studio occupies 90 by 50 feet, and 90 by 20 feet on the south is devoted to the property room, the costume department and dressing rooms. The property room is on the same floor as the studio, and here much of the time-saving already referred to can be credited, owing to the facility with which scenes can be set. The costume department and the dressing rooms are on the floor above the property room, the combined heights of both floors being equal to that of the studio.

The three dynamos installed in the new building are equal to running all the lights in both the old and new studios, and are so constructed that, if necessary, they can be run on their own power. Six sets of Cooper-Hewitt lights have been installed. Each set has four sections and each of these sections has four tubes.

The tubes in each section are lighted automatically. The four sections in each set can be used independently, or all the six sets (the twenty-four sections) at the same time. A section of any set can be lighted or extinguished instantaneously. The entire sets can be operated in the same way. Each set can be moved independently—or all sets together—from one point to another as required, being hung from a horizontal crane on ball-bearing wheels. To move an entire set of these overhead lights, weighing about a ton, a man or a boy is required to exert a pulling weight of ten pounds on a pulley wheel. As soon as the power at the pulley is released, an automatic brake stops the set at the point desired. These overhead lights are to the photoplay what the border lights are to the drama in stage productions. The floor side lights are supplied by numerous movable carbon arcs on carriages. The side head-lights, two to each set, are placed to the right and left of each set.

Wardrobe and Dressing Rooms in New Essanay Studio, Chicago.

Interior of New Essanay Studio, Chicago.

Essanay's Studio at Niles, California.

On Monday, June 16, 1913, the Western studio and plant of the Essanay Company at Niles, Cal., was opened, and a ball and banquet marked the completion of the project.

Formerly, since the Anderson Company moved to the Niles Canyon, the western home of Essanay had been a barn with an open-air stage, Mr. Anderson's private office being a tent beside the entrance. Even under these adverse conditions the average production ran between two and three thousand feet of negative a week.

View of Essanay Studio at Niles, Cal.

The new structure is a steel shell, with brick facing, and has an indoor stage 50 by 50 feet, ten dressing rooms, a carpenter shop, proof room, property room and a paint bridge and wardrobe room. A fireproof concrete developing room and a film vault are now under construction. An outdoor stage, 60 by 75 feet, enables two companies to work at the same time on interiors, with plenty of room for other settings.

Bungalows at Niles Studio.

Close at hand is a commodious stable for the riding stock, and four additional bungalows have been built, bringing the Essanay village up to ten houses, in addition to the studio and plant buildings. Tennis courts have been laid out, a baseball diamond has been leveled and improved, and from a camp the Niles establishment has been transformed into an attractive hamlet.

REEL FELLOWS CLUB GIVES STAG.

On Friday, June 19th, the Reel Fellows Club of Chicago, met at the Advertising Club and a very interesting program was executed. Members who had visited New York convention furnished considerable amusement in their efforts to evade giving details of their deportment in the Eastern Metropolis. Professional talent in addition to impromptu numbers added to the good time in a general way.

Of course, an excellent spread was provided. Seven new members were enrolled. A resolution was passed authorizing the board of governors to investigate and report on permanent quarters, the rapid growth of the club necessitating this action. Those not yet members and desiring to join had better come in before the present low initiation is increased.

DOROTHY PHILLIPS SIGNS WITH UNIVERSAL.

Miss Dorothy Phillips, formerly leading woman with the Essanay Company, has signed with the Universal to play the leading roles in the Imp Company under the direction of Frank Crane.

Lost in Lubin Fire.

Many Valuable Motion Pictures Destroyed by Recent Explosion at Big Philadelphia Plant.

THE recent fire of the Lubin plant in Philadelphia, apart from the financial loss of a half-million dollars' worth of films that could not be insured, caused Siegmund Lubin many a heart ache, which even this stoical business man could not well conceal. Films that were made in his little unassuming laboratory, and which represented his first efforts meant almost as much to him as the beautiful productions which cost him thirty and forty thousand dollars to make at the present time.

Not alone because of a sentimental atachment for these old prints but largely because they represented the first attempts of an American manufacturer to film objects of interest and incidents which can never take place again.

One of the films which Mr. Lubin prized as highly as any which he lost was that of President McKinley and his Cabinet at Camp Alger, during the Spanish American War. He also possessed a valuable film which showed the funeral of the martyred president as well as some films of funerals of foreign monarchs. These of course, had a large commercial value abroad.

When the Lubin Company started to manufacture and produce well known plays, Uncle Tom's Cabin was one of the first which the firm made and Mr. Lubin essayed the part of Simon Legree and his acting and the entire picture was one of the films which the Philadelphia manufacturer prized as highly as almost any other film in his plant. Jack and the Bean Stalk and Little Red Riding Hood, two of the plays that appealed strongly to the children who are always dear to Mr. Lubin's heart, were other films that were destroyed and which it is unlikely will ever be restored as there is no market for them in these days of high priced productions.

Among the other important films which can never be replaced, and which are included in Mr. Lubin's losses are, pictures of the Pan-American Exposition, the Buffalo and the Paris Exposition, the Galveston Disaster, the San Francisco Earthquake, the Transvaal War, the Death of Macelo, General Miles and Staff and several of the Naval Commanders of the Spanish American War, and the almost priceless films showing the war between Russia and Japan and the Bombardment of Port Arthur.

There were also valuable pictures of great industrial and educational movements of interest—pictures of the Pennsylvania coal strike, films showing wonderful surgical operations by renowned American and foreign medical men, new inventions by men of prominence in the scientific world and some of the most important reproductions of technical discoveries were destroyed.

This great collection of films would not be complete without a mention of the pictures which Mr. Lubin possessed of record making athletic contests, and these, too, were all lost. Among these of special interest were the films of the Dixon-Gans fight, the Corbet-McGovern fight, and a picture of the crucial game of the baseball season of 1902, when Rube Waddell pitched the Athletics to their first American League championship.

Pictures based on Revolutionary and Civil War themes and of such pageants as the Delhi Durbar in India, can of course, be reproduced when new plots are prepared and new incidents occur, but the pictures of the events that will never occur again, are lost forever to posterity.

The most peculiar part of the fire was that everyone of the Lubin films had been stored in a steel and concrete vault which was supposed to be fire-proof and able to resist every explosive force. Each of these vaults was lighted from above by small prisms and the rays of the sun beating through these magnifying glases formed a direct conductor of heat that set fire to the films and later exploded the gases, which could not be carried off through the perfect ventilating system that had been installed.

With the rebuilding of the vaults, in which will be stored the new negatives, Mr. Lubin has planned for the construction of a lighting system that will not give rise to any such condition that caused the recent fire, and with all his plants and studios busily engaged in re-making the films to replace those which were lost, and the production of new and more expensive productions than ever, he has promised to have shortly a collection of films that will greatly surpass those whose loss cost practically a half-million dollars.

Toronto Exposition Closes

While the Exhibitors Held No Meetings, Many Attended the Show—Some Came from Out of Town.

By George Blaisdell.

THE first trade exposition under the auspices of the exhibitors of Toronto was not the success its sponsors had hoped for. Unquestionably the experience gained this year will enable the promoters so to handle affairs in the future that the public will be brought to the show and arrangements made to entertain them; and, of course, what is of more importance to the trade, the exhibitors of Canada will be assured that the showing of motion picture appliances will be so extensive they cannot afford to miss it. The exposition was held in the great Arena, and was opened on June 20. It closed on June 27. In the World of last week was given the names of the booth-holders. It had been announced that the third convention of the exhibitors would be held in the same building during the week. Up to Thursday evening there had been no meeting, and the prospect was that none would be held. Quite a number of exhibitors dropped in at the hall from time to time, most of them on Thursday, on which day the Universal Exchange was in charge of the entertainment for the public. It was the first tangible recognition of the exposition by the public, and it turned out to see Annette Kellermann in the seven-reel production of "Neptune's Daughter." The picture was sent up from New York especially for the showing, and made a pronounced hit. It had never been seen in Canada before. The censors passed it on Wednesday. No alterations were made, on the understanding that it be exhibited only in the Arena, but Chairman Armstrong said it was possible there would be one or two minor eliminations in case the picture should be shown in a Toronto theatre. The Universal Exchange also distributed many hundred pinks as well as fans carrying the photographs of players. It was a lively day and evening.

Henry Fischer, the manager for Toronto of Warner's Features, was much in evidence during the week. His booth was near the door, and no exhibitor got by without being nailed. He is a real entertainer, and he had some expert associates, among them Dave Warner. The Universal crew also was on the job, and so, too, were the Power and Simplex men and the Wyanoak bunch. The Wurlitzer organ was one of the big attractions.

R. H. Cockburn, of the Sturgeon Falls Opera House, came down from the Cobalt district to see the show and incidentally buy an automobile. He says there is fine fishing up in his country—and Cockburn looks the real host. Incidentally he tells us there is a strong picture community in Sturgeon Falls.

Mr. Mannist, who controls the Gayety, Princess and Lyceum in Port Arthur, 900 miles northwest of Ontario, came to town to look over the show. Also he wanted to examine the plans of the Arena; Mr. Mannist is going to put up a structure 100 by 350, which will, in many respects, duplicate the exposition hall. It will contain a ballroom, skating rink and last, but not least, a picture theatre. Asked as to how he found the picture business, he replied tersely: "If you get the stuff you get the money." When he took hold of the first of his houses in Port Arthur he started right in to build up business. As a beginner he brought on from Chicago a Hungarian orchestra, for which he paid $225 a week. And he says he got the business fast and plenty.

George Magie, the confidential representative of the executive officers of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, dropped in on the show on Wednesday night. Mr. Magie got the glad hand at the World booth. It was a familiar face from old N. Y., and it looked, if possible, better than usual. The well-known film man covers in his travels for the Universal a wide range of country—from St. John, N. B., to Vancouver in Canada alone. He has recently taken over for his company the seven Canadian exchanges of Allen Brothers. In six of these he has installed new managers. He instituted new methods of control, put in a large number of new pictures, and reports that everything is running very smoothly. He says that under the new regime business has markedly increased. It is Mr. Magie, by the way, that the exhibitors and people of Toronto have to thank for the showing of "Neptune's Daughter."

Gordon L. Smith, of the Victoria Theater, Montreal, representing also the Perkins Electric Company, Limited, was present during the week. C. M. Burroughs, of the Princess Theater, Sudbury, was accompanied by his manager, W. B. Walker. John Powell, of the Grand Opera House, Barrie, was in attendance at the show during the middle of the week.

W. I. Kemp, of the Classic Theatre, Stratford, as pleasant to meet as he is big in frame, was a caller at the World booth. Mr. Kemp says that while he subscribes for the Moving Picture World he often has difficulty in keeping track of his copy. His five children are always on the watch for the arrival of the paper, and Mr. Kemp says that only after the children and Mrs. Kemp have each devoured its contents does he get a look-in. He considers this an unusual tribute to a trade publication. The Classic seats 625 persons, and shows straight pictures. Speaking about the popularity of certain kinds of pictures, Mr. Kemp says that while he has a fine patronage, he notices that his receipts do not show very strong on days he runs a historical or a scenic subject. He says a scenic may get by sometimes. It has been his experience that criticism of pictures comes mainly from those who so far as he can learn never attend picture shows. Mr. Kemp's progressiveness is indicated by the care he plainly gives to the selection of his subjects and to the scrutiny which he personally gives them before putting them before his patrons.

Mr. Schierholtz, who runs the Gem Theater in Aylmer, looked over the exhibits. So also did Jack Cairns, traveling Canadian representative for the World Film Corporation. Mr. Cairns is an old-time exhibitor, one of the pioneers in Canada. He says business is good throughout Canada with the possible exception of Toronto. There, he says, there are too many theatres—the big houses are eating up the little ones. Vaudeville business he reports in a bad way. The Griffin Circuit has cut out vaudeville in most of its big houses. Mr. Cairns says the elimination of vaudeville has had a disastrous effect on the personal fortunes of the men and women engaged in this branch of entertainment.

George O. Philip, of the Star Theatre, Berlin, dropped in at the World booth. For five years, he says, he has been a subscriber to the World—"How do you suppose a man can do business without it?" is the way he puts it. Mr. Philip has in his time controlled six houses, which he has built up and disposed of to his profit. He was in evidence during the evenings, and among his other activities kept things moving in the hall devoted to dancing.

Bert M. Moran, representing in Canada "The Million Dollar Mystery," reported this new feature going strong. It opened at the Toronto Strand on June 22 to big business.

John De Gruchy, one of the pioneer motion picture exhibitors in Scotland, was a caller at the World booth. Mr. De Gruchy's son, Edward, is the manager of Queen's Hall, Laistergate, Bradford, England. Our visitor told of the days when he showed pictures on a 4 by 6 screen and was obliged to use water condensers to keep his lamphouse from "burning up." At the Glasgow Exposition in 1901 Mr. De Gruchy took forty night pictures which he showed afterward on slides. He believes he was one of the first to do this sort of work. He referred to the days when a hundred-foot subject was considered really big.

Mr. Till, of the Conness-Till Film Company, Limited, of Toronto, was a visitor at the show on Thursday evening. He said his studio was nearly completed, the floor having been laid on that day. It is his intention to begin production in about six weeks. It is intended to make regulation dramatic and comedy subjects. Already he has under engagement two directors with experience in the larger companies in the States, and a third one, a man of whom Mr. Till expects great things, will join the company at the conclusion of his present engagement. The executive office of the company at 1 Adelaide Street East.

W. A. Campbell and Samuel Bailee, of the United Features, were present on Wednesday evening. (And there's another story.) Mr. Campbell said that up to a short time ago there were thirteen exchanges licensed to do business in the Province of Ontario, most of them right in the city. Several new ones had been opened recently. He said he thought the exchange business was being overdone, and that it looked to him like a case of the survival of the fittest. "Exhibitors tell me that three or four representatives of exchanges visit them every night, trying to drum up business," he said. "Some of the showmen are getting so they will not talk with exchangemen any more—they are tired of seeing them."

Among the Toronto film men seen were E. G. Noble, traveling representative of the Consolidated; Charles Laidlaw, of the Savoy; J. D. Thompson, of the Laretta; W. R. Westcott, of the Arena and the King; Art. Larente, formerly with the General Film Company, but now Toronto manager of the Mutual Film Corporation; H. T. Dobson, of the King; J. Aber, of the Duchess; M. Gebirtig, of the Savoy and the Bluebell; Ralph Reesor, of the Vaughan; Louis Fiegehen, of the Eclipse; Charles Allen, of Allen & Ryan, of the Wytchwood, and M. A. Aziz, of the Comique.

The Rev. W. R. Armitage, of Wycliffe College, was one of the interested and interesting visitors at the show. Asked if he ever saw any of the pictures, Mr. Armitage smiled dryly. "Yes, I keep my eye on them," he said. "You know I am interested in pictures from the point of view of amusements. It is essential that the people get the best. The C. M. S. of England, which is the Church Mission Society, under the Church of England, has made use of motion pictures in its stations. Canadians are very straightlaced," added Mr. Armitage when the subject turned on Sunday amusements. "We are conservative and we like the things that are old-fashioned when it comes to a matter of Sunday observance." He spoke of the good effect of pictures on a community, of the influence they exert in reducing the evils of the saloon.

Work of the Ontario Censors

Chairman G. E. Armstrong Talks of the Problems Confronting His Associates and Himself.

By George Blaisdell.

IN the first five months of the year 1914, 131 reels were condemned outright by the Board of Censors of the Province of Ontario. There were cutouts or eliminations in 449 other reels. These are the figures given by the chairman of the Ontario board, G. E. Armstrong, with whom the writer had a most pleasant chat last week. Mr. Armstrong is freely credited by such film men as were heard discussing the subject with being the least captious, the more reasonable, of any of the heads of the various Dominion boards. For, be it noted, every province has its own body of film overlords, and what the film men say about some of the boards is not always complimentary. Mr. Armstrong is a churchman. He would not admit that his appointment was due to church influences; but there was a trace of a smile on his face when we asked him if he had any reason to believe that his position on the board was in any way unsatisfactory to his fellow churchmen.

In the first five months of this year Mr. Armstrong and his two associates have reviewed approximately 4,000 reels of pictures. The jurisdiction of the Ontario body extends over territory containing about four million people, over half of the population of the Dominion. No picture can be shown in Ontario without the authority of the censors. At present about 225 reels are being censored each week, said Ottie Elliott, one of the members of the board, who, with Mr. Armstrong, was a visitor at the booth of the Moving Picture World in the recent exposition in Toronto.

"I can't understand," said Mr. Armstrong, "that nothwithstanding all the censorship boards there are now in existence, the character of the pictures have not improved. We have condemned, cut into, possibly more reels this year than when we began our work four years ago, when there was no censorship. It is strange manufacturers will produce so much stuff containing gunplay and shooting, all of which unquestionably is familiarizing young people with the revolver and gun. You know it is not necessary to use weapons to make a story. We had an Imp here some time ago, a regular Western story, in which was used neither a revolver nor a knife. It was a splendid subject and it was well put on. It was far better by reason of the omission of the shooting, and it proved that this sort of story does not lose in strength by reason of the absence of firearms. I believe it would be beneficial to all concerned if there could be some pressure brought to bear on the manufacturers so that they might see that it would be better to meet the wishes of the exchanges and the censors.

"I believe we are in a position to say this, because it is my impression that we cut into and condemn less reels than any of the other boards of the Dominion. Of course, we are more particular about subjects which have been condemned by other boards, but that does not mean that we are controlled by their decisions. In Montreal, you know, they condemned Pathe's 'Passion Play' and Kalem's 'From the Manger to the Cross.'

"We have one theater man on our board, but I had had nothing to do with pictures until my appointment as chairman. All subjects here get fair consideration. Our first object is to elevate the business and to protect the morals of the young. Three or four years ago the picture theaters did not get much business from church people. Now when you elevate the business you are going to put it on a sound, safe basis, and you are going to draw on the church people. I have watched the patrons of the picture shows, and I know that the church people are going to those theaters that are properly conducted. To my mind, the work of the censorship board has been one of the greatest factors in making a success of motion pictures—in regard to the character of subjects shown and also the class of people that the theaters are drawing now, and these are from the very best in our towns and cities.

"Is there any source to which appeal may be taken from our decisions? Yes, there is a board of appeals. In three of the four instances in which exceptions have been formally taken to our decrees we have been sustained in three. In the fourth the appellants got some of the things they asked for—it was a sort of drawn verdict."

"It has been my observation that your community is one that might be described as extremely conservative—in its strict observance of the Sabbath and its rigid regulation of the liquor traffic it seems more like an old-fashioned New England town than a large city. How do you treat the question of the clergyman on the screen?" we asked.

"Why, we will not stand for anything that savors of ridiculing the clergy," was Mr. Armstrong's prompt response.

"That's rather indefinite," was the suggestion. "I have noticed that the conception of some directors is a clergyman of anaemic aspect, a namby-pamby, hand-clutching, eye-rolling, impossible sort of person. I even tried to point out on one occasion that possibly this was due to unacquaintance on the part of a few producers with the real every-day, up-to-date, red-blooded minister, the man who meets men on common ground, and who outside of his church refers to spiritual matters only when he feels that the subject is one of mutual interest. Have you noted anything along this line, Mr. Armstrong?"

"Indeed, I have. I have no patience with some of the representations, the holier-than-thou creatures they would have us believe portray the man of God. Muscular Christianity we cometimes let go through; for instance, where a minister would be justified in using his muscles. What manufacturers have got to take into account is the character of the clergyman. Our business is to protect the public, and we are going to do it. We are government employes. The government appointed us. We are absolutely free to deal with the matters that come before us as we in our judgment see fit. We condemned yesterday a six-reel subject, 'The Master Criminal,' a World Film picture. We cannot condone anything that tends to glorify crime. What about 'Traffic in Souls?' We condemned it. We concede that it is all right for certain audiences. We deny that it is all right for all audiences, where children are present, for instance."

"Do you keep in touch with the National Board of Censorship, the New York body?" we asked.

"We do," answered Mr. Armstrong, "and we have their weekly reports. We have been getting them for almost three years."

NED FINLEY'S VITAGRAPHERS FLIT SOUTH.

Ned Finley has started for Hendersonville, North Carolina, to produce a number of mountain pictures, royal mounted police stories and a sequel to the "Strength of Men," entitled "O'Gary of the Royal Mounted," written by Mr. Finley himself. The following players will accompany Director Finley to Hendersonville: S. Rankin Drew, Edith Storey, Ada Gifford, Lillian Herbert, Virginia Ackerman, Logan Paul, Harry Hammill, Capt. George Webb, Charles Byer, Jack Keppell, Walter Healey, Val Dean, Jack Brawn, Tommy Gordon, Frank Le Strange, Mrs. Storey, Mrs. Jack Brawn, Cameraman Tommy Malloy, Assistant Cameraman Howard Hunt and Property Man Frank Heath. Hendersonville will be their headquarters, but they will make many trips into the mountains and the wilds of North Carolina.

Ned Finley and His Company of Vitagraphers.

The Kleine Optical Company

The "Old Reliable" for Motion Picture Projecting Machines and Supplies Still Leader in that Field.

THE Kleine Optical Company was incorporated in 1897 by George Kleine, who has remained since then the sole owner of the company. Mr. Kleine having been in intimate touch with the optical business from boyhood and having made a specialty of projection apparatus when motion pictures first appeared as a commercial product, the company naturally included within its field of operations the projection end of the motion picture business.

During the early years of the life of the Kleine Optical Company, it dealt in general optical goods as well as projection apparatus; but in the course of a few years the latter achieved such overwhelming importance, that all other lines were dropped. After the year 1900 Mr. Kleine devoted his energies exclusively to the exploitation of motion picture machines, films, stereopticons, lenses and other accessories pertinent to the business. During those early years there were only two other concerns in Chicago that made a specialty of projection apparatus, and not more than three in New York City. With the growth in popularity of motion pictures and the great increase in the sales of motion picture machines and films, others firms started in business; but the reputation of the Kleine Optical Company in its specialties of motion picture machines and lenses remains paramount at the present day.

In 1908, at the time of the formation of the Motion Picture Patents Company, George Kleine became a personal licensee, and the film business was separated from that of the Kleine Optical Company, the latter continuing its operations in motion picture machines and accessories, but dealing no longer in films.

In the course of time the George Kleine film business grew so rapidly and to such proportions that it demanded chief attention, and for several years the Kleine Optical Company forged ahead under the force of its past record, without any special effort to keep it before the trade. That record stood for efficiency in technical knowledge, for the absolute integrity of the representations made concerning the articles handled, for the range, quality and prices of these articles, and for the promptness with which the orders of patrons were attended to.

In November, 1912, new life was injected into the still sturdy body of the "Old Reliable," as many stanch adherents of the Kleine Optical Company are pleased to call it. In one of his retrospective moods, not at all frequent in his strenuous business life, George Kleine bethought him of the valiant service rendered to his fortunes by the company; and, perhaps, with qualms of conscience because of oversights made in matters of publicity and in bestowing upon "Old Reliable" a due share of his personal attention, he called time and set about doing things.

Frank L. Hough, formerly traveling representative of the Edison kinetograph department, and one of the best experts in the country on the projection of motion pictures, and also well informed on all matters affecting the needs of exhibitors, was appointed manager of the Kleine Optical Company. Since that time the business of the company has increased by leaps and bounds. A new catalogue, comprehensive and progressive in its treatment of all the modern requirements of motion picture theaters, was published in August, 1913. The issue, though large, failed to meet the demand. Requests for the work were received from all parts of the United States and its dependencies and Canada. Even from far away Australia, India, the East India Straits Settlement, South America and other countries came requests for copies.

A new catalogue, fully up to the times and listing the very latest appliances and supplies for motion picture theaters, will be out about the middle of July. This work also contains much valuable information and guidance for exhibitors.

A Corner in the Kleine Optical Company's Office, Chicago, Ill.

For Exhibitors the World Over

Something New in Pictures Every Day:

Classy
Entertaining
Popular
Interesting

Superior Drawing Powers Distinguish Selig Releases.

They Magnetize the People, Fill Your Theatres, Get the Money, Bring Big Profits.

ORDER THROUGH GENERAL FILM CO.

THE SELIG POLYSCOPE COMPANY
CHICAGO

(SEE NEXT PAGE)

Selig Peerless Productions

Every one the standard product of our own Studios and Laboratories; the Animal Pictures all produced in the justly celebrated Selig Zoo where one of the world's greatest collections of wild animals, captured and imported at enormous expense, permits the Selig Animal Pictures to present to the world scenes and action beyond the scope of other producers.

With the world's greatest producers and masters of stage-craft, together with the leading stars of film-dom, all of whom are known well and favorably to theatregoers—the most clever products of the world's leading authors and dramatists—costly stage accessories, an army of builders and constructors—the Selig Studios have no actual competitors in giving to the public vastly superior Photo Plays.

Selig productions are distinguished by exceptional qualities, including genuine heart interest, pathos, love, humor and psychological climaxes.

Selig Productions Are Universally Popular Everywhere

Selig Features

Recognized the world over as the best and most ably written, produced, portrayed and pictured Photoplays offered to the public. E hibitors find the Selig Features the most profitable, and have discovered that the announcement of a Selig Picture brings the crow and builds up the bank account. Whenever a poster, bearing the "Diamond S" (the trade mark of Selig) is displayed in the theatre lob it is at once recognized by the public as a meritorious production and the business of the theatre is thereby benefited appreciably. T trade mark of quality (the "Diamond S") is convincing evidence to the patrons of any picture house that the production will possess inter and be well worth seeing. Selig productions are known t world over as being the very best and most productive interest. They have been exhibited in every country a millions of people have been delighted, interested and ed cated. Probably no method has done more to popular picture plays and to making moving picture theatres pop lar and profitable than the product of the Selig establis ment. Selig pictures are always sure winners.

"Adventures of Kathlyn"

A wonderful success. Made millions of dollars. Was copied and pirated throughout the world. Has made millions laugh and cry. Has made millions of hearts beat and throb with self-imposed terror and anxiety. Kathlyn was the biggest picture success the world has ever known. Competitors endeavored to produce "something as good." But the world accepted "Kathlyn" only. It has been a typical Selig Success. Watch out for the next.

NOTE: We are Book

Selig's Latest---"IN TUNE WITH THE WILD"--- IN THREE REELS

Here's a new, big one. A fitting production to follow other big SELIG successes. Most extraordinary animal pictures ever shown.. "IN TUNE WITH THE WILD" is depicted in South Africa. A missionary and family are attacked by wild tribes. There is fighting, shooting, hand to hand combats—resulting in the escape of the women folks and the transformation of the husband and father into a wild man of the jungle through mental aberration. The jungle man becomes in tune with the wild. He strokes ferocious leopards, teases fierce lions, makes wild elephants his servitors, and it is amid such scenes that the observer receives more thrills than have ever been incited by any moving pictures unless it has been some of the big SELIG productions.

"IN TUNE WITH THE WILD" comes in three big reels, every foot of which bristles with thrills. To be released in the near future. "IN TUNE WITH THE WILD" will be exploited with the aid of specially designed colored posters, heralds, etc. Ask at your film exchange about it.

(SEE N

Selig Current Releases

RELEASED JULY 13th.—"THE WILDERNESS MAIL."—A story of love and adventure amidst the snows of the Far North Country—from the pen of James Oliver Curwood, featuring Bessie Eyton—IN TWO REELS.

RELEASED JULY 14th.—"AN EGYPTIAN PRINCESS."—The story of a chemist who attempts to bring an Egyptian mummy back to life.—A combination of French actress, jealous wife, astounded experimenters, etc., create a most interesting comedy drama.

RELEASED JULY 15th.—"HIS LAST APPEAL."—A reformed forger returns friendly offices by exercising his skill to forge a reprieve from death, which saves his friend, until explanations are made.—IN TWO REELS.

RELEASED JULY 17TH.—"WIGGS TAKES THE REST CURE."—A runaway automobile, a mountain desperado, and a ferocious fist fight cure a victim of insomnia.

RELEASED JULY 18th.—"THE SQUATTERS."—A society girl —a sociological worker and a Junoesque heroine engage in exciting adventures which end happily.

REMEMBER: The HEARST-SELIG PICTORIAL, released every Monday and every Thursday. Immensely popular with the public. The world's leading events pictured.

Make Your Bookings Through General Film Co.

Hearst-Selig News Pictorial---Released Mondays and Thursdays

This latest and greatest illustrated NEWS SERVICE has been established and is conducted by the two greatest powers for public interest and benefit;—Hearst, the news-getter, and Selig, the pathfinder to the hearts of the people. It covers a territory embracing Europe, Asia, Africa, Australia, North and South America, from Pole to Pole. The public enjoys such features. Every theatre manager will find this service a big hit with his patrons. Order it through your exchange NOW. Special lithographs in colors for each release.

"The Spoilers"

In the history of picture making no success has been so immediately recognized and commercialized as that intensely dramatic and powerfully appealing Selig production. "The Spoilers," from the masterpiece of fiction written by Rex Beach. It was at once seized upon by the leading picture houses in various large cities as a great production and a money maker. Their expectations have been more than realized. Crowds have waited to obtain admission night after night in Chicago, New York and other cities, holding their places in line at the box office for hours in order to witness this most remarkable production. Thousands of dollars were expended to make the production realistic in every way; property was dynamited and burned to give the requisite effects in the picture making; hundreds of men, women and children participated in the production, and the leading dramatic stars of America played the principal parts. Many thousands of dollars have been put into the pockets by the managers who have booked the hit of the year, "The Spoilers."

We are now booking "The Spoilers" on advantageous terms. Get into line. Write at once for territory. Get the money. Don't miss this great opportunity.

Book "THE SPOILERS" Direct

FROM OUR GENERAL OFFICES
20 East Randolph Street, Chicago, Ill.

Selig Studios and Laboratories---Biggest in the World

Limitless facilities are afforded the producers and directors of the numerous SELIG companies in the making of photoplays. Likewise, limitless facilities are afforded the workmen who develop the films and make the finished product ready for distribution to the thousands of exhibitors all over the world. With the aid of these exceptional facilities, an army of employees is constantly at work, so that practically every day in the year the patrons of moving picture houses are treated to a new SELIG production.

SELIG ZOO

Those who live in the neighborhood of the SELIG Zoo at Eastlake, Los Angeles, Calif., can give some valuable tips to anybody desiring to spend a night in the jungle. Scores of the most rare and curious animals of all kinds, including ferocious beasts of prey, queer-looking camels, long-necked giraffes, alert llamas and alpacas, and in fact, representatives of every kind of animal are now to be seen at the SELIG ZOO. These animals are all used in making the thrilling, wild animal dramas produced by SELIG. Mr. Selig has some plans in connection with the zoo, which, when carried out, will make it one of the biggest show places in America.

General Offices: 20 East Randolph Street, Chicago, Ill.

Hearst-Selig News Pictorial

Semi-Weekly Service

All the Big News Events
Throughout the World

SHOWN IN GREAT PICTURES

The most clever, intrepid, fearless, active, camera men in all parts of the world are at work every day to portray by expert photography the leading news events for this department.

JUST WHAT THE PUBLIC DEMANDS

Special Lithographed Posters

Order From Your Exchange

Released Mondays and Thursdays

Order Your Posters and Heralds for all Productions
Beautifully Printed, Artistically Illustrated, Up-to-date
Supplied through General Film Co. or by Selig.

Selig Productions Are Distinctive Standards of Quality

All RELEASES Through The General Film Co.

THE SELIG POLYSCOPE COMPANY
CHICAGO

(SEE PRECEDING PAGES)

Fifth Fantomas Feature

Sensations Galore Crowded Into the Five Reels Which Will Show Arch Crook as "The False Magistrate."

Reviewed by Randall M. White.

THE fifth of the Fantomas features made by the Gaumont company has been advertised as ready for shipment July 10; the feature will be in five reels, including a prologue in one reel and the story proper in four additional reels.

The Fantomas features are already quite well known in the trade as providing some of the most thrilling and realistic screen representations which have ever been conceived. The fifth installment of what is really the life story of a crook who has Sir A. Conan Doyle's wildest creation gasping for breath is well up to standard and will furnish a good topic for discussion among the patrons of every theater in which it is shown.

It has been said that the aim of a photoplay should be to provide for the one who sees it exactly what is provided by a well written novel—in other words, that the good photoplay has to commend it all of the best points of a good novel. From the viewpoint of one who reads only for passing enjoyment, the photoplay, which gives its effect with less trouble, may be said to have many advantages over the novel.

Scene from "Fantomas" (Gaumont).

With this statement of a standard for photoplays, the fifth Fantomas feature, with the subtitle, "The False Magistrate," is worthy of the highest commendation. The man who drops his book at home to visit the moving picture theater in the hope of being as well entertained by what he sees on the screen will suffer no disappointment

When they made their first picture in this series,. the Gaumont people introduced Fantomas as a master crook and set upon his trail police officers equipped with superior intellect and all aids of modern science. While the troubles of the principal character are sufficient to discourage others from following in his footsteps, in order that the stories may be made interesting and kept on going, the crook invariably proves just a trifle too shrewd for those who are seeking his punishment.

The Fantomas stories will be criticized for their sensationalism. Their champions, replying, will admit that they are sensational and are offered as nothing else but will claim that the sensational incidents which are strung together are handled in a manner which makes them consistent and portrays a type of man who, while an admitted undesirable, still exists in every country in the world. Fantomas steals, blackmails, and murders in the most cold blooded and scientifically calculating manner, but it is remarkably evident that rarely does human pasison influence him; his crimes are all committed for money.

Sensational incidents in the feature about to be released show: The crafty release by the master thief catcher (Inspctor Juve) of Fantomas who has been imprisoned for life but who is needed by the police to lead them to his confederates; the escape of Fantomas from police surveillance, involving a crime which provides the opportunity for the crook to become the "False Magistrate" of the subtitle; the fiendish ingenunity of the crook in providing a foundation for a blackmailing scheme with the aid of a scientific asphyxiation; the hazardous predicament of a fellow crook whom Fantomas has thought it best to get rid of and has left hanging to the clapper of a bell high up in a church tower, and the neat escape of the hunted criminal from under the very eyes of the police after all their carefully laid plans to apprehend him.

The bell scene in the picture is certainly one of the most thrilling which has been devised in a long time. The incident is well worked up in the story and every trick known to photography to make the impresison stick has been used. When the subtitle "Blood and Pearls" is flashed on the screen and later there is shown a man clinging from the clapper in an enormous bell as it plunges back and forth spilling his life's blood in company with jewels he has stolen and has in one of his pockets, the resultant thrill can only be compared with the one given the wild eyed boy hidden in the hayloft with his first Nick Carter when a sensational coup by the lone detective has brought a full dozen desperadoes cringing to his feet.

The feature has been admirably made, as regards the choice of scenic settings and the acting of the company. It has all the elements which make for success.

Charles "Feature" Abrams.

SINCE the earliest days of feature productions the name of Charles Abrams has been identified with that branch of the motion picture business. His first venture was as general manager of the Great Northern Feature Film Company, then located at No. 1 Union Square, New York City, from which office some of the first of the big feature pictures were distributed. Later the company moved its quarters to the Candler Building on Forty-second street and the Films Lloyd was organized to handle good pictures of any make with Mr. Abrams at the helm.

Charles Abrams.

As a salesman of motion picture features Mr. Abrams has been exceptionally successful. This is probably due to his vigorous methods. He is a hard worker and when on the trail of a prospective customer grass has no time to grow under his feet. Some of his methods are very original and daring. A recent example of this trait was developed in a campaign in behalf of a certain picture in the course of which he sent out a package of posters and advertising matter descriptive of the subject to several hundred buyers on the chance that they might be thereby induced to order the picture. Nearly $1,000 were spent in this flyer and, according to Mr. Abram's report, the money was well spent. Of course some of the packages came back, but there were returns sufficient to satisfy him that the plan was good—once, at least.

Mr. Abrams is about to start upon an extensive trip which will take him to the Coast. He will stop at nearly all the important cities on the way and make a careful canvass of motion picture conditions in every town. The trip will extend over several weeks and by the time he returns Mr. Abrams expects to have the feature situation throughout the country pretty well in hand.

SHEEHAN ON LONG TRIP FOR BOX OFFICE.

Winfield R. Sheehan, general manager of the Box Office Attractions Company, left New York Monday night, June 29, for an extended tour of the West in the interests of his company. The Box Office people are about to open branch offices throughout the country and Mr. Sheehan will make preliminary arrangements in the following cities: Cleveland, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Chicago, Minneapolis and Kansas City.

It is announced that quarters have been secured in Syracuse, N. Y., for an office which will be opened there to handle the up-state business and that a proposition made the company by a Philadelphia concern to provide a building for the use of the Box Office company is being considered.

The Father of the Feature.

A Glance Backward to the Origin of the Multiple Reel Production as We Know it Now, and a Few Words by the Bright Mind That Conceived it.

By Hugh Hoffman.

WHILE distinguished dramatists are getting up at banquets and admitting that a new art has been born, and while eminent producing managers are penning for magazines their delayed approval of the motion picture, there is one young man in the offing who has refrained from blowing his own horn, but who in all fairness may be written down as the Father of the Feature. His name is Pliny P. Craft, president and manager of the Apex Film Company of New York. The title of "Father" will, perhaps, come as a shock when bestowed upon an energetic young man who has no thought or appearance of growing old, yet it is time that Mr. Craft should take his place among the list of men who have done things in the business.

It is largely through his efforts that there is practically an open market in America today. While others were talking and writing about it, Mr. Craft was in action. Those in the trade today who are profiting by the feature owe thanks at least to the young hustler who came out of the west and changed the whole film situation in a few months. In the early days of 1911 the control of the motion picture business was showing signs of becoming syndicated with some danger of its getting into the hands of too few. The trend was decidedly toward a combination which never materialized, owing to the advent of the feature as a regular thing.

There had been a few multiple reel subjects, notably Pathe's "Passion Play," that earned a lot of money for all concerned, but they were looked upon as monumental exceptions, and were never handled in true theatrical fashion. The idea of a five, six or seven reel production for every day in the week was undreamed of until Mr. Craft, with the audacity of a born showman, came to New York and proposed that very thing to a decidedly incredulous trade that was too busy making good money and bad pictures to worry very much about the future.

P. P. Craft.

The Birth of the Feature Idea.

For a number of years P. P. Craft had been an advance agent for various theatrical companies and circuses, and was thus occupied when the state right feature idea came to him. In July of 1910 he was connected with Buffalo Bill's Wild West in his usual capacity, and about that time the newspapers the country over were filled with matter concerning the Jeffries-Johnson prize-fight. Fabulous sums had been paid for the moving picture rights to the event and violent agitation had been aroused in opposition to the showing of the pictures. As a business undertaking the taking of the fight pictures was a big risk in view of the tremendous opposition to their being shown. At all events the fight pictures were exceptional and could hardly be considered as an every-day affair. Where permissible they were shown at high prices and when their drawing power was over they were shelved with nothing of the kind to look forward to until the next big fight should take place, which might be for years, or never, as the powers ordained.

The question uppermost in Mr. Craft's mind as he watched the crowds paying high prices to see the fight pictures was whether such sums of money could not be made every day if other subjects of equal drawing power were provided at low prices and which would be suitable for women and children. Answering the question himself he set about providing big pictures that the public could not resist.

The First Feature.

With limited means at his command he was obliged to work with what material was immediately available. He had one big asset close at hand and he was quick to see it. This asset was Buffalo Bill himself. History has produced few men who have so immortally endeared themselves as a popular idol to all the world as Buffalo Bill. Therefore why would not the Wild West and Far East Exhibition be an acceptable picture to all classes? Acting on the impulse he went to Major Lillie and Col. Cody and outlined the plan. While the Colonel and the Major were willing to appear in such a picture, and even to sign a contract to appear, they were unwilling to risk any of their money in the venture. But with the contract in his pocket Mr. Craft had enough to undertake the rest. He left the show and came to New York to get the necessary capital.

The capital was found and the picture was made, and though a crude production as standards are today, it was a big success and made money for all who handled it. This production was in three reels and was considered a very big undertaking in those days.

The State Rights Idea.

The state rights idea came into vogue with this picture as a necessary after consideration. Film exchanges could not be induced to buy the Buffalo Bill Show film, because it was thought to be too long to be much in demand. The only course for Mr. Craft under the circumstances was to divide the territory and sell it by states as an independent proposition. All of the men who bought state rights for the Buffalo Bill Show pictures made money. The idea was a success, but then came the overpowering question of where to get another big subject.

About this time a friend in Europe wrote to Mr. Craft of a certain big picture that he had seen exhibited in private in Paris. The recommendation was so strong that Mr. Craft took the next steamer for Paris with all the money he had saved in his pocket. When he saw the picture with his own eyes he pushed over his savings and started back for America with the production under his arm. That was early in 1911. This being the only big subject that had taken America by storm up to that time, it is hardly necessary to add that the subject was the famous Dante's "Inferno."

Turning the River Out of Its Course.

From that time the film situation in America changed abruptly. Europe was invaded by an army of agents looking for big features. American manufacturers, caught napping, were not prepared to meet this new form of competition until about a year later when the big feature had gained such headway that all plans for the cornering of the market were overwhelmed by the vastness of the feature idea and discarded. For this revolution in the moving picture trade Mr. Craft is directly responsible. There are many who believe he is entitled to a monument for bringing it about, and there are others who think that he should have been consigned to a front seat in the Inferno before it was ever put into moving pictures.

Mr. Craft is far from being the imp of darkness that Dante's "Inferno" made him appear to some. He is one of the brightest, cleanest cut, quick thinking, far-seeing men in the moving picture trade today. He was the first to put a moving picture production into legitimate houses at high prices as a regular road attraction, using approved theatrical methods. He was the first man to order a 24-sheet stand for a moving picture, when many an exchange man did not know what a 24-sheet was. His advertising methods have always been ahead of the times. He first used the traveling lobby frame. He first began the use of posters as a regular thing. He was the first to send out several companies exhibiting a purely dramatic production. His reward has been to build up the largest strictly film importing business in America, and he points with pride to such feature as Homer's "Odyssey," "Sealed Orders," "The Blue Mouse," "East Lynne," and many others.

The Future of the Feature.

The views of a man so long experienced in his line are worthy of attention, especially as to the present and future status of the feature.

"It is getting easier to sell good pictures and harder to sell bad ones" said Mr. Craft recently in discussing the situation. "Not long ago all positive film sold for ten cents a foot regardless of what was on it. Today it may be worth five cents or five dollars, according to the subject and the way it is done. This means that the exhibitor is king of the business. The old hot-house method of raising and selling film is giving way to intrinsic value. If pictures were like the cans they come in, the market could easily be cornered. Woolworth can tie up the product of a can factory, but fortunately he cannot tie up all the brains in the world. It is impossible for any one concern to corner all the writers there are, or print all the books there are to be printed or to monopolize all the art. The moment such a thing were done, if possible, other writers, bookmakers or artists just as good would spring up. Therefore the idea of consolidation has no more terrors for me now than it ever had. 'Sealed Orders' is a case in point. A new story by a new writer produced by a new company. And as copyrighted plays become fewer there will be more original features like 'Sealed Orders.'"

The Syndicate Idea.

"There has been much talk about the possibility of all the theatres of any account being put into an exclusive circuit, along the same lines that legitimate theatres have been controlled and supplied with arbitrary attractions for so many years past. When one considers such a proposition in its details it becomes absurd. It was feasible in theatricals because there were only about thirty cities to be organized and all the rest were left to the small fry. In those thirty cities there are actually hundreds of theatres now where formerly there were only dozens. To lease all the hundreds of theatres in those thirty cities would be a giant's task, but to subsidize all the theatres in about 400 cities that have thousands of theatres would be an undertaking that would stagger the government itself."

VITAGRAPH WRECKS A TRAIN.

At Milltown, N. J., Sunday, June 21st, the Vitagraph Company photographed one of the greatest railroad accidents ever enacted in moving pictures. The locomotive and three coaches were precipitated down a forty-foot embankment, the cars toppling over each other, catching fire and burning to ashes. It was a daring performance, as the engineer, firemen, brakemen and actors were obliged to jump just before the train, going at forty miles an hour, tumbled down the ravine. This thrilling scene, one of many to be shown in "Four Thirteen," will complete one of the most stirring, sensational dramas yet produced. The pulling off of the wreck was kept exceedingly quiet to avoid the great crowds that might have attended and interfered with the taking of it. As it was, there were at least one thousand persons from Milltown and vicinity who looked on in fearful anticipation. Just before the train went over the embankment they all made a rush for safer quarters. There were twelve camera men on the job taking the picture from different angles.

Ralph Ince, the director, was assisted by Victor Smith, Walter Ackerman and Walter Arthur, head camera man.

G. L. P. VERNON IN BIG DEAL.

It has been announced that while G. L. P. Vernon, President of the World Film Corporation, was in Europe recently, he formed a $20,000,000 combination of film exchanges and manufacturers which will be world wide in its scope, and which embraces all of the big people in the film industry. He has returned to London for the election of officers at which time he is to be made President and General Manager.

Mr. Vernon brought over with him "Excelsior," "A Romance of Modern Rome," "Mizpah," "Rip Van Winkle" and "A Child of the Slums" to show to the World Film Corp.

Due to the fact that the corporation which he has just formed will require his entire attention, Mr. Vernon has resigned as President of the World Film Corporation and has disposed of his holdings in this organization. He intends returning to America in about four weeks at which time further announcement of his plans will be made.

The Universal's "Handy" Joe Brandt.

THE Universal Film Manufacturing Company are justly proud of the system they have devised of co-operating with their patrons in the important business of popularizing the Universal film products. They can substantiate their boast that they not only make good pictures but make moving picture devotees know that they make good pictures.

In the "boosting" of Universal products, Joe Brandt is perhaps the most active man in the organization, although the fact that he is applying the rules of a strict science to his work keeps his personality in the background.

Joe Brandt.

No person seems to know just what Joe's job is—and from the variety of things he is called upon to do for his employing company, it is perhaps permissible to say that the Universal Company themselves would probably be unable to describe hs duties. He's just a "handy man," devoting his attention to advancing the Universal interests in general, principally in the advertising department, but on tap to do anything which bobs up to be done.

It hasn't been so many weeks since Mr. Brandt returned to New York after a trip which had taken him all the way to the Pacific Coast,, principally in the interests of the "Lucille Love" serial which has proven so successful for the Universal. All he had to do on that trip was to talk to newspaper editors in a couple of scores of cities, towns and hamlets and convince them that they could increase the circulation of their papers by running the "Lucille Love" serial story which, of course, would not do the Universal company any appreciable harm in the matter of selling prints of the "Lucille Love" picture in the community. On this same trip Mr. Brandt also "confabbed" with the officials of the forthcoming Panama-Pacific Exposition in San Francisco with splendid results as far as the Universal was concerned. On another occasion—to illustrate the vagaries of "Fixing Joe's" job—Brandt responded to a hurry call for the doctor when the Universal interests were being jeopardized by the fussy censorship officials in Chicago. Still later, if memory fails not, Joe was made the official partner of such unattended ladies as wanted to dance at the Universal Dansante, established by his company at the Exposition at Grand Central Palace—and he did this as well as he is known to convince newspaper editors and moving picture censors. In connection with this same Grand Cental Palace affair he also delivered one of the most important addresses on the program of the annual convention of the International Moving Picture Association.

Mr. Brandt has been with the Universal Company for some time and has been using for them the knowledge which he had previously gleaned in a good many years' experience in all branches of the profession of entertainment. Among managers, producers, actors and workmen—whether connected with the moving picture or any other branch of the profession—Mr. Brandt is one of the most widely known men in New York City.

VAL PAUL, BISON, TAKES A WIFE.

Friends of Val Paul, of the McRae 101 Bison company, just returned from Hawaii to the Hollywood studios, are offering the young Universal actor belated congratulations. It was known last year that Cupid had ben busy using Paul's heart as a short range target. The night before the McRae company was to sail to Hawaii the young actor proposed a plan and—well, Mrs. Paul was Miss May Foster, known as the "Queen of Ragtime," and, four months later, is more radiant than ever.

Betzwood, the Great

The Lubin Plant Is More Than a Studio or a Factory—It Is an Institution—The Biggest in the World and the Most Complete—Some of Its Excellent Features.

By W. Stephen Bush.

WITH the completion of the plant at Betzwood, Lubin may claim to have the largest and the best equipped motion picture factory in the world. The term factory really describes but part of this unique institution, which meets every conceivable need of the producer of motion pictures. Having seen all the great motion picture plants of the world, I am bound to say that, both in size and in the character and value of its improvements, Betzwood takes the lead. There are other studios which may excel it in some respects, and I am thinking specially of the Vincennes plant of the Pathes and of the marvelous features of the Cines Company, hard by the gate of St. John in Rome. On the other hand, Betzwood has features which are lacking in both the French and the Italian plants, and, holding the scales evenly, I must decide in favor of the American institution.

It is therefore meet that the readers of The Moving Picture World should know that the greatest plant for the perfect production of motion pictures is situated in our own country. No doubt the press will in due course wake up to this fact, and I hope imitate in some measure the patriotism of the French press toward Vincennes. All France sings the praises of Vincennes.

I saw Betzwood some months ago when it was still in its chrysalis state, the buildings but half finished, the fixtures just being adjusted, the vast grounds with the exception of the pretty garden plots being in a state of transition from neglect to improvement. Now, with landscape gardeners skilfully playing with the thick green carpets of Nature, with the two-mile river front made ready for every possible river and lake setting, with the factory in actual occupation, with companies wandering about the vast and variegated estate, with the tented fields, with the six studios, three of them lighted by the sun and three by electricity, Betzwood fully keeps the great promise of its beginning. Let me add that Betzwood has stood the test of emergency. When, during the recent fire the printing and perforating rooms of the plant on Indiana avenue had been flooded and almost put out of commission, their work was quickly transferred to Betzwood, and prestige of the Sign of the Bell suffered no dimming of its lustre. Betzwood is now doing one-half of all the work sent to the Lubin plant besides its regular tasks. Right here it may be remarked that the outside printing done by the Lubin plants is very considerable and that some of the best-known and most successful film-producing companies are giving their orders to Lubin. Mr. Lowry, to whom the Betzwood institution is as dear as to Lubin himself, is justly proud of the many testimonials he received praising the excellence of the work at Betzwood. Among these testimonials is one from a great director who fully realizes how much depends on proper printing. The film in Betzwood is under minute supervision from the time it leaves the camera to its arrival in the shipping room. Two hundred capable men and women are engaged to make this process of supervision as sure as it can possibly be made. "The water we have is of a superior quality, and you have seen our dust-killing devices last winter," said Chief Engineer Simmons, to whom much of the credit for the work at Betzwood is due.

Mr. Lowry has fitly described Betzwood as a "director's paradise."

"We are prepared to meet the demands of every conceivable scenario," said the young general manager to the writer on the latter's recent visit. "Whether we want a prairie or mountain, river bank or railroad, farm yard or Western plain, quarry or factory, the quaint, wide-porched mansion of Civil War times or a present-day suburban 'two by four,' no Lubin director need wander outside Betzwood in search of the proper settings. The factory proper is probably the height of efficiency in film-preparing plants. By the arrangement of the rooms devoted to the various processes, reductions of seventy-five per cent. in handling have been secured, so that now the film goes in at one end of the building and comes out at the other end a finished product. From the perforating room to the loading of cameras, then to the developing, fixing, washing, toning, drying and finishing rooms in succession the film passes and not an employee of one department will have to enter the next room. Efficiency does not stop at even such a little thing as air. All the air that enters the Betzwood factory, although already a pure country air, is cleansed of any impurities it may contain, by large machines with a capacity of 75,000 cubic feet per minute, especially designed to wash the air. The result obtained assures the entire absence of dirt particles on the film."

Studio and Interiors of Factory, Betzwood, Pa.

Those who have seen the feature "Michael Strogoff" will remember the setting afire of the river. It is an impressive scene, realistic and spectacular in the extreme. Betzwood and the Schuylkill River furnished the settings.

I must not omit to mention the great farm with its world of wild and tame animals, now as complete as any naturalist could wish; the gardens, the vegetations representing so many countries and climes, the wonderful flower-beds—all these would require separate description to do them justice. The theme of Betzwood has more variations than a page or two in a newspaper is capable of rendering.

Picturesque Scenes at Betzwood

"Germania."

Impressive Spectacle of Napoleon's Defeat in the Battle of Leipsic Done in Five Reels by Savoia Studio.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

THERE have been a number of Napoleonic pictures; for the great conqueror's magnificent triumphs and his dramatically impressive overthrow lend themselves most happily to making big, emotional spectacles. Brilliantly produced spectacular pictures are in demand at this time. The Leading Players Film Corporation has just released "Germania," an emotional and spectacular offering in five reels from the libretta of Luigi Illica, which is well calculated to stir the hearts of all Teutonic peoples, and all liberty-loving folk, to patriotic fervor. It opened at the Strand Theater, at Broadway and Fiftieth Street, New York, on Monday, June 29th and it seemed to hold a large audience pretty strongly. A fine orchestra accompanied the picture and in the music the German national anthem was prominent at the right places and added significance of its scenes. Sound effects both of bugle calls, of drums and of firing made the battle scenes realistic. Shown under such favorable auspices it makes a thrilling and quite satisfactory offering of entertainment. Of course, such a picture is peculiarly adapted to special occasions such as Teutonic festivals and the like; but it has the quality that can be depended on to stir the heart of the general spectator at almost any time.

The action opens at a time of Napoleon's greatest pride and closes after the battle of Leipsic when, beaten by the armies of the two German nations, Austria and Prussia, and of Russia, he retreats dejectedly toward France, soon to be dethroned and imprisoned on the island of Elba. The story is tragic and gives us a terrible picture of war. Its hero and heroine are not at the head of affairs and are brought in as though to show how the fangs of war get through to the vitals of the common people. The most interesting feature of the story is the struggle of the German people to get a little breathing room, as it were, so that they can strike a telling blow at the conqueror whose troops are holding the Fatherland in subjection. The fate of the patriotic Palm who was filling the country with literature, calling the people to throw off the yoke, and who was betrayed by a peasant lad for money to give his starving mother food, is interlinked with the fate of two lovers at whose mill the fugitive publisher takes refuge. There is in it plenty of sorrow and death; but in the end the spoiler is driven from the land and by the dying hero, his shadow is seen slowly and steadily passing away.

The picture, with its emotional story, stands on its big scenes, its battle pictures, both over wide sweeps of country and in small details which are often stirring and realistic in the extreme. These scenes will be acceptable without music and sound effects; but they will be greatly enhanced by such. The staging is excellent. There are in it many big scenes in which graphic composition must have been no mean problem; but throughout the picture with few exceptions these scenes have been handled very well, indeed, and made to seem natural and convincing. In the smaller pictures there is a great deal of beauty and many a bit in it appeals to one as reaching perfection.

The acting is better than fair all through. Napoleon is pictured at a time when he has grown petulent and overbearing and one feels that there is poetry in his overthrow. This, as shown, may not be perfect history, but it is effective pictura. Many of the other characters are played with an unbroken humanity that is most pleasing and there are no bald places in it. Impatient people may think that the story might have been carried to its final climax with more speed. That is because there is so much military spectacle in it that the story should wait a little. There is no part in it that will not seem exciting to one who comes in late. It is not at any point a dull picture. The photography is clear and often the camera has been skilfully handled to give imaginative effects that are delightful.

SAWYER, INC., ENTERTAIN NOBILITY.

Thursday evening, June 25, the Sawyer, Inc., Pompeian projecting room contained what was probably the most distinguished audience ever gathered together in a private projecting room. The Duke of Manchester entertained a party which included the following distinguished guests: The Duchess of Manchester, Duke and Duchess de Richelieu, Prince and Princess Troubetsky and several others nearly as distinguished. In spite of the hot weather the projecting room with its double ventilating system was cool and comfortable and the party remained viewing the pictures until after midnight. The Duke's party expressed themselves as having been wonderfully entertained and they all evinced keen interest in the details of the film business.

CHICAGO LETTER

BY JAS. S. McQUADE

National Censorship at Washington.

IT WOULD appear on the surface that national censorship of films at Washington is gaining considerable support throughout the country. A recent dispatch from that city states that "a flood of letters from all parts of the country is pouring in upon the committee on education of the house asking that action be taken at the earliest possible date upon the bill introduced by Representative Hughes of Georgia providing for a national censorship of moving pictures. The bill provides for a board of five censors, who are to pass upon films and to license them if they are found worthy."

The Chicago Tribune took the dispatch as a text for the following editorial:

How many readers of that report—readers that are "educated," readers who consider themselves imbued with simon pure Americanism—realize that within these few lines is indicated a profound change in American opinion, a vital departure from American principles? In fact, in this paragraph is shown perhaps the most conspicuous tendencies in American thought at this time, and it is important for us to realize now that they are tendencies away from what have been accepted as fundamental principles of the American system.

The Hughes bill illustrates the growing tendency to throw upon the central government local responsibilities. Let Uncle Sam do it, is the cry. If the tendency continues there will be but one result—the establishment of all the evils of bureaucratic centralization on the ruins of the American system, which was especially devised to prevent them. Load the central government with duties we ought to attend to at home, and presently we shall destroy both local freedom and national efficiency.

When commerce and transportation became nationalized, national powers and agencies were developed to deal with them. That seemd necessary and desirable. But now we are going on to extend the control of the central government over relations which can and should be governed by local standards and local agencies. We think we are getting a more efficient agent, but we are really on the way to destroy one. That may be proved from the history of nations, and the makers of the constitution remembered the lesson, though our zealous reformers do not stop to think of it.

If we are to adopt censorship in the United States, in spite of experience of its ineffectiveness and abuse; if we are to increase public control over our private lives; if we are to rely more and more upon public agencies to "protect" not only the immature but the normal adult from what a majority considers harmful, then let us at least see that the new duties and responsibilities of government are not all dumped on the central machinery, but are distributed so that they may be fulfilled competently, or rather as little incompetently as possible.

Censorship by five persons in Washington over all the pictures to be shown to a people of 100,000,000 will be either ineffective or excessively restrictive. Happily for us we are not yet so standardized that what would give offense in one community would give offense in all others. There is still variety in our national fabric, but what will the censors do with it? Will they bar out all films that might be offensive to any community? That will restrict the great national entertainment rather drastically.

And here we have suggested one of the reasons for resort to the central government in this instance. Censorship advocates assume that there is a common standard of exclusion. They do not admit that this standard is merely their own standard, and they turn to the central agency to avoid that variety of standard which local self-government permits.

We have had a beneficent growth of the social conscience in the last quarter century in the United States. But we ought not to permit it to carry us into extreme forms of paternalism, and we need already to temper our zeal for our brother's moral well being with a little consideration of the traditional ideals of American individualism.

Of all the forms of censorship of films yet evolved, national censorship by the national government is the worst. It does not represent the views of the great majority of the people of the United States. "The flood of letters" referred to in the dispatch already quoted does not come to the legislators at Washington from citizens at large, but from an organized band of reformers under the leadership of the Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts, superintendent of the International Reform Association, who drafted this censorship bill himself, and who has been campaigning throughout the country in its behalf.

On page 793, in the issue of the Moving Picture World of May 9, this year, an exhaustive article by W. Stephen Bush, a member of the World's editorial staff, discusses Mr. Crafts and his activities in connection with this bill. There Mr. Bush states:

It will be seen that Mr. Crafts, author and advocate of the bill, takes it for granted that federal censorship would supersede all other censorship of whatever kind. This is far from being a fact. On the contrary, Senator Smith of Georgia, Congressman Hughes of Georgia and Dr. D. P. Caxton of Tennessee, and legislators generally are quite emphatic in their belief that national censorship of the kind proposed by Mr. Crafts will not hinder any individual state from establishing a censorship of its own. All admit that the state would have concurrent jurisdiction with the national authority. Herein lies not only the fatal error in Mr. Crafts' reasoning, but the positive danger to the motion picture interests. If feueral censorship were possible and the proposed measures would be enacted into laws, the motion picture interests would have to satisfy not only the vagaries of state censorship, but would be, in addition, subjected to national censorship.

Should the national government participate in film censorship, it will inevitably become seriously concerned, in the course of time, in fashion plates for women's gowns, in the strict observance of Sunday, in the regulation of a national diet and in a special soothing syrup for babies, etc., etc.

Frank Cook Resigns from Saxe Enterprises.

Frank Cook, formerly general manager of the Saxe Amusement Enterprises, in Milwaukee, resigned that position on Monday, June 22, to accept the position of general manager for F. O. Nielsen, who controls the state rights for "The Spoilers" in Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin and Illinois—Cook County excepted in the last named state.

An office has been opened in the Schiller Building, Room 720. All letters regarding the booking of "The Spoilers" in the states mentioned should be addressed to Mr. Cook.

Mr. Cook has had valuable and varied experience in the management of moving picture theatres and in the booking and presentation of pictures. He is also well known as a practical showman. He entered the moving picture field ten years ago, being manager of the Theatorium, Milwaukee, for the Saxe Bros., in 1904, when Hale's Tours came into existence. Ever since that time he has been with the Saxe people, engaged as booking manager, publicity promoter of all their Milwaukee houses, besides having a general eye on all the houses of the circuit in Wisconsin, Minnesota and Missouri.

Phil H. Solomon, who has been Chicago manager of Warner's Features for the past two years, has been appointed special traveling representative for F. O. Nielsen for "The Spoiler" rights owned by him. Mr. Solomon left Chicago Monday, June 29, for Detroit, from which city he will travel all over the state of Michigan.

It is Mr. Nielsen's intention to present "The Spoilers" first in the larger houses throughout the states controlled by him. This will give the pictures wide publicity, and will assist the owners of smaller houses when the subject is offered them.

"The Spoilers" will be presented in Dayton during convention week and all exhibitors are cordially invited to attend. The presentations will be under the personal management of Frank Cook.

Ashland Theater Fire Stirs City Authorities.

Mayor Harrison had a conference with the building commissioner and the fire prevention bureau chief Monday morning, June 29, to devise plans for making every picture theater in Chicago safe.

The fire that drew attention to existing conditions took place Saturday evening, June 27, in the Ashland Theater, 1656 Twelfth street, owned by A. L. and Joseph Schiff. The theater was crowded with women and children when a film exploded and in an instant the interior of the operating room was in flames. The operator, Albert J. Jones, realizing that all the other films were likely to explode, threw as many of them into the street as he had time to stop for and then leaped for his life through the door leading into the auditorium.

A sheet of flame shot out as another film exploded before the spring door swung to. Those in the audience waited for no further demonstration. They started, shrieking, for the door they had entered. To reach it they had to pass down a sloping aisle with the operating room directly over the exit. Flames were clearly visible behind the window slides and wisps of smoke curled from cracks in the compartment.

Those in the lead hung back while those behind pushed forward. Every one seemed to have forgotten the two entrances at the rear of the theater.

The Schiff brothers rushed in and dragged several of the struggling women toward the rear exits. Others followed. The rest ran under the burning operating room and escaped.

Meantime the fire had been discovered by Municipal Judge Scully and Deputy Bailiff Joseph Cohen. They rushed into the lobby and seizing a fire pike broke in the front windows of the projecting room, giving the flames outlet to prevent their breaking through into the theater.

"Schiff did his best and is entitled to credit for the way he handled the people," Judge Scully said after the occurrence. "The situation was dangerous because every one was afraid of that projecting room and the exploding films.

"Something should be done to put a stop to such conditions. Schiff's theater was in no worse shape than others, really dangerous, though complying with the law. There must be some means by which the danger can be minimized without unreasonable expense. One thing that should be insisted on is an ample supply of effective extinguishers."

"When I tore away the tin from the front of the operating room it tore like paper," Bailiff Cohen said. "It appeared to me as if the paint on the tin was burning and spreading the fire. It was a mighty good thing that luck was with the people in that theater or there certainly would have been heavy loss of life."

Mayor Harrison will insist upon the following measures:

More stringent regulations for fireproofing motion picture theatres.

More effective means for preventing the spread of fire when a film explodes. Removing operating rooms from over entrances and exits.

Regular fire drills by employes of picture houses.

Fire extinguishers which will extinguish.

Warnings against panic in case of fire and attention of the audiences called to exits by means of signs flashed on the screen at frequent intervals.

"Do not wait for a calamity before taking precautions," is the Mayor's orders to his department heads.

"The situation is very serious," the Mayor said. "Stringent regulations must be made and vigorously enforced. I do not want to work any hardships on any theatre, especially on the little fellows, but I cannot let any consideration stand in the way of putting an end to the menace to life.

"There is less danger from the fire itself than from the panic which accompanies it. An operating room only a few feet above the floor suddenly bursting into flames and showering an escaping audience with burning debris would result in a casualty that would stagger Chicago. Placed as they are over the entrances they present a constant source of danger.

"The rear exits are available, of course, but fear-blinded persons always rush to get out where they got in and it is only the cooler-headed ones who would make use of the emergency exits.

"It is fortunate that every one in the Ashland Theater escaped, but that is no reason for delaying the important work of clearing out the death traps.

"Not only do the building department and fire department have supervision over the picture theatres, but the censors as well are instructed to report any apparent violations of the safety regulations.

"The motion picture business has developed so rapidly that legislation has not been able to keep up with it. Therefore, we must be constantly changing and improving our regulations."

Building Commissioner Ericsson promises enthusiastic cooperation in Mayor Harrison's plan.

"Most of the large picture theaters are well constructed and conducted," Mr. Ericsson said. "It is the old houses and the 'store' type of picture house that present the greatest dangers. Many men try to get into the business on a 'shoestring.' They have not the means to protect their patrons. Tin foil and metal paint show as well as steel sheathing to some of them.

"Even under the most favorable conditions picture shows are dangerous. There has never been any plan devised whereby they can be made entirely foolproof or fireproof. They can be made much safer than some of them are today, however.

"The new ordinance is effective in the case of new theaters being built, but it does not reach those running before. It would be declared confiscation to put them out of business. There are many picture houses in Chicago which are not fireproof and are nothing but firetraps."

"Adults Only" Ordinance Will Be Carried.

An ordinance permitting the exhibition of certain moving pictures "to adults only" was recommended by a sub-committee of the judiciary, Saturday, June 27. The measure was advocated by Second Deputy Funkhouser, who has charge of the censorship bureau. He explained that injustice was often done under the present system of censoring all films, so that they could be shown to children.

A number of club women and social workers at the outset expressed opposition to the ordinance, on the ground that it would let down the bars. Finally they were convinced, however, that the measure would not have this effect.

As originally presented to the council, the ordinance provided for the division of films into two classes. Those in the first class could be given general exhibition and those in the second class could be shown only to audiences in theaters to which persons under 18 years of age were not admitted. The sub-committee substituted 21 years of age for 18.

Among those who attended the hearing were Mrs. Gertrude Howe Britton, Miss Harriet Vittum, Mrs. David Lyman, Jr., Mrs. Herman Landauer, Mrs. M. L. Purvin, Mrs. Henry Sullivan, Mrs. Charles Stieling, Miss S. P. Breckinridge, Miss Alcie Brackett, and Mrs. Charles Henrotin. The subcommittee is composed of aldermen Kjellander, Powers, and Doyle.

Chicago Film Brevities.

Wm. N. Selig strongly denies the rumor that his big Chicago plant has been closed down. True, no producing is under way at the present time, but arrangements are being rapidly made for the reorganization of the Eastern force. New blood will be secured both for the directing and acting departments. In a few weeks the new company and directors will be at work.

* * *

R. J. Snowhook and Park C. West called at the World office Thursday, June 25th. Motion pictures depicting important news events in Chicago are to be released July 6th, by Snowhook & West, in conjunction with the Chicago Daily News. The films, in addition to the news events, will carry each week a feature in the form of a prize cartoon. This is the first film of the kind to be released in Chicago, though newspapers in other sections of the country are cooperating with picture interests in similar services.

* * *

The Chicago Herald, formerly the Chicago Record-Herald, has also entered the film news service field. Beginning Monday, June 29th, this paper will issue a weekly which will include all the current events and happenings in Chicago. "Easy to see and worth seeing" is the motto of these films.

* * *

Essanay will send the following players to the Dayton convention: Francis X. Bushman, Beverly Bayne, Richard Travers, Rapley Holmes, Gerda Holmes, Ruth Stonehouse and Bryant Washburne. V. R. Day, manager of the city office, left for Dayton June 25th to make arrangements for the representation of the Essanay Film Mfg. Co., in the exposition hall.

LAMBS PICTURES AT THE STRAND.

The first showing in America of the wonderfully interesting motion picture of the Lambs All Star Gambol was given the week of June 29 at the Strand Theater, the picture being head lined for the week's run. Over 6,000 feet of positive was printed which was reduced to 3,000 feet of the most interesting sections. The subject has been well handled in assembling, short flashes being given of over forty of the most prominent stars of the stage. One of the most popular sections shows George McManus, R. F. Outcault and Hi Mayer drawing cartoons of their well-known subjects including Little Nemo, Buster Brown and the Newlyweds. Frank McIntyre and De Wolf Hopper are shown in some very funny scenes. The scenes of the Lambs' "Leading Ladies," all made up as beautiful girls and sitting outside of the stage door smoking pipes, cigars and cigarettes are all very funny. Short sections of some of the different parades are shown with the veteran band director John Philip Sousa in advance. Scenes from the "Book of Life," one of the big hits of the Lambs Gambol, are shown, as well as the principal scenes from George Hobart's big success "Experience."

Pathe Players on their Annual Outing, Leaving the Jersey City Studio for Greenwood Lake, N. J.

Marketing a Projection Machine

BY H. B. COLES

VERY few people in the moving picture industry realize what a stupendous task it is to place on the market a new motion picture projector. It is a most delicate and difficult machine to design. What other kind of machine has its mistakes and inaccuracies magnified so many thousand times? A microscopic movement in the mechanism of the machine will show boldly on the screen and at once condemn the machine. Not only must it project perfectly when new, but also after months of hard wear. There is little wonder that so many efforts to produce a good motion picture machine have failed. After the design has been perfected, and the machine is ready for sale, the task of building up a volume of business, which makes it a profitable manufacturing enterprise, is a herculean one.

The fact that The Precision Machine Co., 317 East 34th street, New York, has surmounted all of these difficulties, and now stands forth recognized as the manufacturer of th highest grade machine on the American or European market, qualifies it for prominent mention in these columns.

In the early part of 1911 the Simplex projector was designed, and the first model made by Messrs. F. B. Cannock and E. S. Porter. The work was started in a small corner of the 9th floor of the building at 317-323 East 34th street. By the Fall of that year the machine was ready for the market, and the manufacturing operations required half of the floor space, or a little over 4,000 square feet.

Wrought into the design of the machine is many years of operating experience, combined with a high degree of mechanical skill. Having a thorough, personal knowledge of the requirements of a motion picture projector, the inventors were able to create a machine which completely filled the demand for high-class projection, such as was demanded by the photoplay studio, film importers and modern exhibitors, who were then just starting to manufacture and exhibit in high class theatres, feature photoplays of higher standard than had ever been attempted before.

Among the first to recognize the merits of this modern machine were R. G. Hollaman, the Managing Director of the Eden Musee on West 23rd street, New York, where motion pictures were first shown to the American people (Mr. Hollaman has always been considered a connoisseur in the art of projection, and his adoption of the machine was a strong endorsement of its merits), and the Monopole Film Co., which was among the first to start the feature film movement. When it put out Dante's "Inferno" they used Simplex machines for their road shows. These are mentioned merely to show that at the very start the Simplex machine was appreciated by those who were capable of judging, and it is not at all to be wondered at that other exhibitors quickly followed their lead. In the three years which has elapsed, the Simplex machine has won fame and is in great demand all over the world. It is interesting to note that according to the records of the factory, over 75 per cent. of their machines are purchased by established exhibitors who have had many years' experience, and are constantly on the lookout for the very best apparatus available for their shows.

F. B. Cannock,
Designer of the Simplex.

A visit to their factory on East 34th Street, between 1st and 2nd Avenues, New York, will explain much that the trade has gradually been impressed with, namely, the wonderful methods and pains exercised in the manufacture of every small part, and the care with which they are assembled to produce in the finished article a simple, durable, scientific motion picture projector.

Occupying three floors, or over 25,000 square feet of space, we visit first the lower floor, where are grouped the various machines used for the manufacture of the parts. We see before us through a maze of belting and shafting, milling machines, profilers, gear cutters, grinders, engine lathes, bench lathes, drill presses, etc., each the very best of its kind, and all busy under the direction of skilled workmen in the production of the parts. From these machines the parts are taken to the floor above where they are inspected and put in stock.

The stock room is a model of orderly arrangement of over 10,000 different items, each neatly packed away in metal bins with labels on the front, indicating the catalog number and name of contents. On this floor is also located the shipping room, the Lacquering Department, and the department for assembling the lamphouses, magazines, arc-lamps and rewinders, and the projection room with a 40-foot throw, where all machines are tested before being shipped.

On the top floor, which is flooded with bright, cheerful daylight by numerous skylights, are located the general offices of the Company, and the Assembling Department. The assembling of the mechanism must be done with care to prevent noise, vibration and undue wear. Working under such ideal conditions, the Simplex Assemblers cannot help but do high class work, which is very evident in the finished product. After being assembled and inspected for mechanical defects or lack of adjustment on the top floor, the mechanism is sent down through a dumbwaiter to the floor below, where the Projection Room is located. Several hundred feet of film is run through it to test it for unsteady picture, flicker, etc. That is the final test, after which it passes into the stock-room, and thence to the Exhibitor, in whatever part of the world he may be located.

Up to recently the sole business of The Precision Machine Co. was the manufacture and sale of the Simplex projector. Realizing the demand for a good, but moderate priced motion picture camera, they have designed and just placed on the market the Simplex Camera, which in every way is in keeping with the Simplex projector. It is intended more for the Amateur than the Professional, although its light weight, excellent design and workmanship will undoubtedly cause it to be used to a great extent for professional work. It weighs only 24 bs. including the tripod and 600 ft. of fim. The mechanism is simple and easily manuipulated by anyone without special instruction. The shutter can be set for different light values from the outside of the case. Carefully worked out to make them handy and reliable, are such features as a protected Finder, mirror focusing device, direct reading 200 ft. Counter, two way level, etc. The intermittent movement is unique, in that it has a picker which engages a sprocket hole on one side of the film only; this movement is carefully corrected and well balanced. The magazines have tell-tales on the outside of the box to indicate whether or not the take-up is properly working. The belt take-up has been eliminated, and in its place is used a very reliable ratchet arrangement. The Camera can be operated at either 8 to 1 ratio of the handle, or 1 to 1. Instead of the commonly-used punch to indicate the end of a scene, the Simplex Camera is provided with a knife which cuts the edge, enabling the mark to be easily found in the dark room. The lens is securely mounted to the mechanism of the camera, instead of the wooden box, so that warping of the box will not throw it out of focus. All velvet has been eliminated and anti-static magazine valves have been provided.

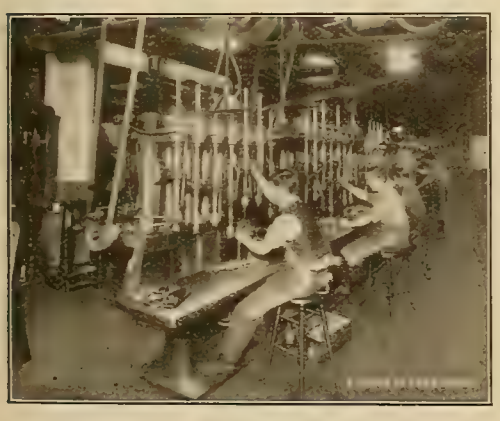
J. E. Robin,
Simplex Sales Manager.

The camera is mounted in a very fine, mahogany box, which in turn is supplied in a fine, sole leather carrying case, with a compartment for the lens and two (2) extra 200 ft. magazines. The tripod, while light in weight, is remarkably steady and has an ingenious panoramic and tilting head.



A View of the Simplex Factory.

It is expected that these cameras will be in great demand by exhibitors, who, for a reasonable price, will be in position to take local events and show them on their screen within a few days after they happen.

The Precision Machine Co. inform us that visitors to New York are always welcome at their factory, where they take pleasure in showing all who are interested the wonderful equipment.

BEAT STORK BY A NOSE.

William Clifford, of the Henry McRae 101 Bison Company, which has been in the Hawaiian Islands for the past four months, arrived home with the company at 5 o'clock on Saturday. At four o'clock on Sunday Bill was presented with a bouncing baby daughter, weight nine pohnds. Everybody fine and Bill prohd as a peacock.

Cathedral Chimes for Motion Pictures.

By E. J. Exter.

RECENTLY the writer had occasion to visit a splendid new "movie" which is located in one of the very best residential districts of Chicago, and the audience, though meagre, was intelligent and discriminating.

During the course of the evening the film "Dear Old Girl" was run. In this, as all exhibitors know, college bells or chimes are shown in action. If in this instance drummer or manager had exercised the foresight to provide a set of the tubular cathedral chimes which are being offered by various firms, and which are an exact imitation of fine cathedral bells, this scene could have been made wonderfully realistic and effective. In the absence of these, the pianist attempted to imitate chimes on the piano. The attempt was a rank farce, of course, and what otherwise would have been a very charming and impressive effect fell flat.

This is only another instance of the lack of appreciation of proper musical effects. No ambitious, wide-awake drummer could be thus caught napping; and that a manager would permit such a short-coming, especially in a location where patrons are from a select district, is almost unbelievable. It shows a woeful lack of knowledge of the requirements. Such slovenliness should not exist even in the tenement districts. That it was permitted in a house catering to a select class, no doubt, accounts in a measure for the scant attendance.

Manufacturers of pipe organs appreciate the need of chimes, for it is seldom, indeed, that a pipe organ finds its way into a motion picture house today that is not equipped with a set of chimes.

The mere fact that a theater is not equipped with a pipe organ, however, need not be a bar to the use of chimes. They may be had for playing with mallet by either drummer or pianist, or may be played electrically, by pianist, from a small supplementary keyboard. They may be all located in one place or distributed throughout the theater.

Victor Herbert is a great admirer of such chimes and in his play, "Sweethearts," makes very profuse use of them.

It is seldom that a film somewhere throughout its length does not afford several opportunities to use them. The appearance of a church, college, or gathering of any kind, a funeral or wedding or any of the many other scenes that lend themselves to the introduction of such an effect, should be the signal for their use.

For effect purposes four or five chimes will do, while a range of twenty-five or thirty-two notes is sufficient for playing complete selections and requires but a small outlay.

A new idea is the installation of such chimes in the lobbies of theaters. Even four or five chorded or modulated chimes which may be either sounded all at once or played from push buttons in the ticket booth within easy reach of the occupant are an advertisement par excellence. They may be sounded from time to time for the benefit of those in waiting as well as for the purpose of attracting people from the street. Exhibitors who have installed them are invariably surprised by the number of casual passersby who are attracted by the chimes.

The best known manufacturer of these chimes is the firm of J. C. Deagan, of Chicago. The quality of his product is such that pipe organ manufacturers all over the country are installing, and consumers insist on, only Deagan Chimes. They excel especially in point of the accuracy with which they are tuned. This firm has designed also a special electric action which is fool-proof, is inexpensive, and gives unexcelled service.

NEW PUBLICITY MAN AT WARNER'S.

James B. Kirk, formerly production manager with the Blackman-Ross Advertising Agency, has succeeded V. B. Johnson as advertising manager and director of publicity with Warner's Features, Inc. The change resulted a short time ago when Mr. Johnson left the Warner company to join the business staff of the New York Morning Telegraph.

Mr. Kirk, the new Warner publicity man, has had a lengthy and varied experience in the advertising field which should make him a valuable acquisition for the big feature photoplay concern. With the Blackman-Ross company, as production manager, Mr. Kirk had charge of that important branch of the agency's inside work which dealt with the preparation of the patrons' advertising copy, including the writing of the copy, its embellishment with art work, the typing of the ads, and the engraving.

"Little Mary" and Her Correspondents

BY GEORGE BLAISDELL

PICTURE, if you can, a rainy afternoon early in May, and a prosaic, everyday business office, the window of which looks out on humdrum Twenty-sixth Street. In the center of the room is a good-sized drawer filled to the limit with letters postmarked from every corner of the world—from as far away as Australia. On her knees in childlike freedom in front of this great mass of correspondence is the young woman to whom all these messages of admiration and encouragement have been addressed. "America's Sweetheart" is the striking title applied to her by Exhibitor Grauman, of San Francisco, when he announces to his patrons the coming of a picture in which is starred Little Mary. "America's Sweetheart" in all truth she seems to be in the minds of many others when we are permitted to get a peek at the contents of these letters sent by writers ranging in age from seven to seventy. Few of them are from men, and of these a majority are unsigned, thereby more perfectly testifying to the sincerity of the authors. The great mass are from children and women. Some cranks there are, to be sure, but of flirts there are not any.

We had gone to the studio by appointment for a chat with Miss Pickford. This is a good place to say that to attempt to put into cold type an adequate description of the personal charm of this young woman requires a better pen than this one. She is all you see on the screen, multiplied many times. Simple in manner as a child; wholesome, unspoiled, saying just the thing that comes first to her lips and never hesitating a second or giving evidence of any internal effort to utter something impressive or bristling with great wisdom; absolutely contented with being Mary Pickford the woman (how strangely extravagant this expression sounds, for girl she seems to be), sincerely unable to comprehend why anything she has done should be the occasion for anyone to make a fuss about.

"Yes," said Miss Pickford, in answer to a question, "I get quite a lot of letters. Just wait a moment, if you will—I have some that have come to me in the last few months." When the little actress returned from her quest she carried a receptacle containing hundreds of missives. They were arranged in packs and tied with the care that might have been bestowed on love leters. "How many of these do I get in a day? Why," answered Little Mary, "my record is sixty-three. Which I think is quite enough, don't you? Of course, when I have been traveling there are accumulations. Here's the kind of a letter that especially appeals to me." The handwriting was of a child—a very young girl. "I have choosen you for my favorite actress," it said. There was another from a little girl in Baltimore, identifying nerself by reminding Miss Pickford of the day in the Oriole City, where "A Good Little Devil" was then playing, when the actress' taxicab was held up by the crowd awaiting her, and the child planted a kiss on her face as she leaned out of the window. "I am so sorry to hear you were sick in the hospital," writes another little girl. "What side did you have your appendicitis on, because my left side is hurting me."

"It is wonderful the way people remember pictures, pictures I had forgotten myself," said Miss Pickford referring to a note in which reference was made to Biograph days, when she played with Florence Lawrence and Billy Quirk in "Sweet and Twenty." Here's one from a child in San Francisco, referring to "Hearts Adrift": "Your work was lovely and the ocean beautiful." Who will gainsay that? From a more mature admirer came the advice: "Take care of your upper lip. It is your fortune." From Denver came a compliment greater perhaps than its author realized. "Your acting does not seem like acting," it said. "I enjoy your work," says another correspondent similarly impressed. "I won't call it acting because it is not acting."

It was about this time that Jim Kirkwood, Miss Pickford's director, then putting on his first Famous Players picture, strode into the room and looked real hard at his leading woman. Miss Pickford glanced up. "Oh, you are in for a lot of trouble," she said, mischievously. "I am going to be a real prima donna—temperamental eccentricity and all that sort of thing, you know." Mr. Kirkwood smiled a grim smile, but it was not one of fear. Miss Pickford did not by her manner betray the knowledge that a large company awaited her appearance in the studio, which days later we learned was the fact.

Many of the letters inclosed stamps for photographs. "Really," said the actress, "I must get busy on my correspondence. I feel guilty when it piles up on me, but I find so many things to do. I am told I should not answer these letters, especially the ones that ask for money, but some are pathetic. I know I used to dream of some millionaire coming along and leaving me a lot of money, and I sympathize—but only sympathize—with dreamers. I enjoy reading letters from my friends. I sat up in bed the other night from 12 until 2 going over accumulated messages. You know, if I get discouraged and think I will leave pictures or do something like that I get out and go through a bunch of mail. Then I feel better.

"Yes, I do get some letters asking for money. One man wanted $1,500. I wrote him and explained he was only one; that I had people of my own who had prior claim to any surplus possessions. Do you know he wrote again? This is what he wrote: 'I have no desire to be selfish, but could you not make an exception in my case and give me $650? If you want to you can have it in your own name so you can get it later, because I only want a home, and the land will be very valuable in a few years. Do your best and you will not be sorry.' This man, however, was moderate compared to the one who wrote: 'My mother's ambition is to own a beautiful home, well furnished. If you have a generous heart you will send me ten thousand dollars in the next mail.'

"Many women

"I remember you every night in my prayers," she read.

send me pictures of their babies; some of them express the hope that I am fond of little ones. Really, I am crazy about babies."

Just here Miss Pickford was called to the telephone. "You want to arrange to make a bronze bust of me?" went an answer over the wire. "You will have to talk with my mother," was the following remark. The eternal feminine crept out as the receiver was hung up. "Just suppose it shouldn't be a good one?" she suggested.

"Do I get letters from girls anxious to join picture companies? Yes, indeed. And I always advise girls not to leave home. If there is a studio in their own town and their mother accompanies them it is all right. I really think if a girl can have her mother with her she ought to."

Miss Pickford returned to her letters. Her face became grave as she read a note in a childish hand. "I remember you every night in my prayers," was the simple but eloquent message. "Who wouldn't be happy to get a letter like that?" she said. Then there was a message in the chirography of an elderly woman. "My husband says sometimes, 'I wonder if there will be a picture of my little girl tonight,'" it ran. "He always calls you his little girl."

"Do you ever have any interesting experiences when you visit the theatres," we asked.

"Yes," replied Little Mary. "For instance, the other night I was watching 'Tess of the Storm Country.' Two ladies sitting behind me were arguing as to whether in the scene where my head is doused in the bucket of water it was my own hair or a wig that was getting the scrubbing. Then when I threw the broom one of them said: 'I'll bet that girl has a bad temper.'"

"How about offers of marriage?"

Miss Pickford laughed outright. "Yes, I get a few," she admitted. "There was a boy in England who seemed very much in love. He assured me he would be eighteen years old in nine months. Then there was a man in Vancouver who was anxious to know what I did with my money. He told me he was a religious man, that he sang in the choir, and that he would marry me and would make a good husband. But these letters are very few."

It has been several years now that we have known of Little Mary by that name. The origin of the appellation Miss Pickford ascribes to her fellow-players in the Biograph studio. Later the Imp Company advertised the appearance of Little Mary in its subjects. When Miss Pickford was asked if she knew how many pictures she had appeared in she admitted she did not know. "I wish I did," she added.

Just one more letter. It was one of the hundreds. Like many of the others, it was written in a hand that denoted education, as its phraseology indicated the finer feelings that impelled its utterance. It was from a woman, and she lived in Manchester, N. H.: "After seeing you play in 'Caprice' I simply had to write to tell you how much I admire both you and your work in the pictures. Really, Miss Pickford, your position is an enviable one. Think of having people whom you never saw or even heard of love you. You must be the happiest person in the world."

And the beautifully garbed vision crowned with masses of brown curling hair that faded into the noisy studio seemed to be just that.

OPERATIC STAR IN PICTURES.

Mme. Emmy Destinn Tells of Her Appearance in a Cage with a Lion.

By Terese R. Nagel.

MADAME EMMY DESTINN, the well-known dramatic soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, acted for the moving pictures in a cage with a lion in Berlin recently. Most people were skeptical when they read this announcement in the papers. They shook their heads and said, "newspaper talk," "press agent story" and "fake."

But it is all true and the interviewer heard the circumstances and story of the photoplay from the lips of the noted artist herself. We were seated in the drawing room of Madame Destinn's temporary home on West Seventy-second Street. The diva, clad in a silver-embroidered flowing Japanese robe, sat forward in her chair and became alert and interested as soon as the interviewer uttered the words "moving pictures."

"Ah, yes," said madame, "movies, you call them here. We call them Kino over on the other side. You want to know whether I really posed for the movies? It is so, and to prove it to you, I will give you a picture of my dear lion-friend Goliath. He was the leading man, and I was the leading lady in a picture gotten out by a Berlin Film Company. The story is this:

"Two American girls are living in Berlin with their millionaire father. One of the girls is an opera enthusiast and the other is an animal fancier. The girls are bent on making Emmy Destinn's acquaintance, and they finally succeed, and invite me to their home where they shower attentions and admiration upon me. During one of my visits there, I meet a young man who is in love with one of the girls. He is jealous of the attentions they bestow upon me, and in a moment of rage he challenges me to prove my power over animals as well as human beings, and dares me to sing in a cage with a lion. I accept his offer, and that's where Goliath and I come in."

Mme. Emmy Destinn and Goliath.

"And were you not at all afraid," the interviewer asked, breathlessly.

"No," answered Madame Destinn, "I was more afraid of that awful moving-picture operator who kept on turning his crank right there in front of me, than I was afraid of Goliath, the wild beast who stood right next to me. And I sometimes have been more afraid of New York first-night opera audiences. Opera is much easier than motion-picture acting. A three hours' performance of such a difficult opera as Mozart's 'Magic-Flute' would not be as hard work for me as the acting of a thirty-minute photoplay. I admire your American motion picture actors. They are so natural, and possess so much abandon, ease and grace. Perhaps some day in the near future, I may become better acquainted with the American motion picture public."

Only a woman of Madame Destinn's calibre could accomplish and do as much as she does—operatic work, literary work, moving-picture acting, photographic work, and painting.

TO REISSUE MARY PICKFORD FILMS.

Innumerable requests from exhibitors and motion picture "fans" throughout the country have influenced the Universal to release again the famous Mary Pickford plays made by the old Imp company some three and four years ago. Commencing Monday, July 20th, with a one-reel drama, "In the Sultan's Garden," one of the Imp-Pickford dramas, will be released every other Monday for an indefinite period.

The negatives of these plays, which were among those which made the old Imp company famous, have lain in the Universal vaults for two years or more without ever having been projected upon the screen.

Playing opposite Miss Pickford in most of these plays is Owen Moore, brother of Matt Moore, Victor star, and an actor of wide reputation and unusual ability. Special lithographs have been made to accompany each release.

Augustus Thomas Retrospective

Great Playwright Tells of the Motion Picture Show in the White House, Where President Saw and Admired "Cabiria."—Observations on First Anniversary of His Entrance into Field of Motion Pictures.

By W. Stephen Bush.

AUGUSTUS THOMAS, the famous playwright, is an old friend of Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States. When a few days ago he received an invitation by telegram to dine with the Chief Magistrate he accepted with becoming pleasure. The two men have often sat at meat before, enjoying to the utmost the meeting of their minds and the generous spice of humor with which these two distinguished Americans are wont to season their intellectual food at all times. Thomas and Wilson, Wilson and Thomas thus liked to look out upon the world together and the sacred relations of guest and host were in frequent interchange when the President was Governor and long before that; back in the days before Wilson took his leap from the professional chair into the "seething maelstrom, etc., etc."

The President had invited his old friend, of whose entrance into the motion picture field he had knowledge, to show him one of his own All-Star pictures. The president felt very sure, as we all did, that in his contact and connection with the motion picture Thomas would display some of the energy and splendor of mind which have put him in the front rank of American playwrights. Those of us who have seen the All-Star plays would have been at no loss to choose the program for this gala night of the screen, but Thomas wanted the President to see the last word in motion pictures, the ne plus ultra in kinematography.

While telling what he chose of the story of the motion picture entertainment in the White House, Mr. Thomas sat in the office of the All-Star Company, flanked on one side by Joseph Farnham and on the other by Harry R. Raver, both of them eager listeners. He prefaced his talk by remarking upon the splendid appearance of the President, saying he had never seen Mr. Wilson look in better shape physically and mentally. He attributed much of this to the President's love of golf.

"Please," began Mr. Thomas, "eliminate as much as you can the pronoun 'I' in what you are going to print. We talk using the 'I' freely and then when we see all the accumulated 'I's' in print it raises a suspicion of conceit. We felt that it would be disloyalty to the art of kinematography to introduce any American-made picture to the President while we had this great 'Cabiria' brought here from abroad, from Italy. The President took a keen interest in the play; he was eager to learn more and his knowledge of the technical side of the production of motion pictures showed careful study and diligent observation. The President loves a good picture. He and Tumulty, his secretary, go once a week to a variety show—I was going to tell you just on what day, but it might cause them annoyance if it were generally known. Of course they go incognito."

Mr. Thomas was reminded that he had now been in the moving picture field for just about one year and that his observations and some recital of his experiences would be of interest to the public in general and to the readers of The Moving Picture World in particular.

"Really," he said, assuming an attitude of defense, "I did not think you wanted to interview me. Why, did I look ingenuous?"

Mr. Thomas had looked ingenuous if the truth must be told, and after we had rallied ourselves back into becoming seriousness he said, in a tone of deep conviction:

"Well, of course we do learn something in the course of a year. We are more enthusiastic in our work than we ever were before. While a year is not much of a period after all there has been within that time a noticeable change in the productions of all companies, a change for the better. We are getting rid of what may be called 'moving picture hurry.' We see more of the necessary repose coming into the newer pictures through an infusion of more experienced players. Repose is not a native thing; it is an acqured thing, and one does not acquire it from coming into contact with machinery, but through coming into contact with other people. It would seem that the most reposeful actors are they who have played before audiences rather than they who have played before the camera. The actor who has had his training before the audience must of course acquire something more, a slight margin or addition to fit him for the best camera work. Perhaps at the start the picture player has more of what may be called camera wisdom, a shade of greater technical knowledge. There is probably no entertainment in which the moving spirit is at once concealed in the work and at the same time so plainly evident. We have had more of better acting within recent times. It seems that in producing a picture the actor and the director have an equal share of responsibility; ordinarily the actor's responsibility would probably be the greater, if the actor knew the entire projectory of which each individual scene is a part. He does not know that. If he then overdoes or underdoes it is the office of the director to restrain or to stimulate. One point of improvement stands out: We prepare our plays with greater skill, all the companies put their productions out more coherently and with greater economy of attention. In "Cabiria" they strike twelve in every sense. A man takes a most daring leap into the sea, but it is merely part of the connected tissues of the play; formerly such a leap would have been made the basis of a special scenario and would have meant a climacteric effect. Note, too, the development of the spectator within the last year. Indeed progress has come not in any single direction; we see not the progression of a line but a widening circle."

Speaking of directors Mr. Thomas, while quite loath to criticize and always eager to excuse and explain unavoidable limitations, dwelt with humorous emphasis on the lack of directorial skill which is often found in conjunction with the best of directorial intentions.

"A well-bred man," Mr. Thomas explained, with splendid control of the twinkle in the strong blue eyes, "will always appear at ease or try to and he will always try to put others at ease. Well, reasoning from these sound premises and anxious to imitate the gentleman, such men, as say for instance famous prize-fiighters or other groundlings of society, would acknowledge an introduction with a yawn."

Mr. Thomas here rose from his seat and mimicked a man striving desperately to be at ease and yawning almost loudly after acknowledging an introduction. I was reminded of what Macaulay told us about David Garrick and his inimitable mimicry of poor Dr. Johnson. It was a brief but exquisite performance.

"Another point might be mentioned," continued Mr. Thomas while the vivid recollection of his feat was still jolting our risibles into reflex action, "On large stages in the olden days of melodramas exaggerated pantomime was frequent to convey the meaning to the audience in every part of the theatre; the camera has made this pressure of emphasis unnecessary—we use a close-up view, in which the slightest motion of the face can be perceived by all, being multiplied by so many diameters; the raising of an eye-brow means something. Add to this the concentration of vision and the elimination of a background. The last year has seen much progress in this direction. The most important element until you reach the lens is the director and after you reach the lens it would seem as if the most important factor was the camera man. The camera man, who is also a chemist, is the best. There are camera men with a startling control of light who stop there. The camera man who continues his interest in the film as a chemist is likely to achieve the best results."

Mr. Thomas drifted back to the director. "The director," he resumed after a pause, "looks at his settings whether they with subtlety express the atmosphere he wishes to put around his people; you know every room has its chemistry. After he has done that he looks for little hints and details which sometimes speak more eloquently of the history of his people than the biographies of two generations. The director must guide his actor to that shade of expression that will, for instance, reveal his degree of culture, the condition of his temperament and his relation to the people about him. He must be able to establish all that in some single action, the central interest of which is to tell the story. In the emotional moments of our lives we think in pictures and not in words; words are but symbols, pictures are the things themselves."

Mr. Thomas was asked for a summary of the impressions of his own work. "Ah," he said, with a sigh born of ambition, "I would like to go back and do the work over. I would produce the same pictures but I do not think they would be recognized." And here he breathed a second sigh of ambition. He would venture no prediction as to the future achievements of the All-Star Company.

"The future must speak for itself not in words but in deeds," he replied when we urged him to become oracular and prophetic, while Brothers Farnham and Raver murmured something about neglecting golden opportunities.

Augustus Thomas wooed the new art when others of similar prominence in the theatrical world mocked and likewise scoffed and scorned and consulted synonyms on "fad" and "craze." All the more gratifying then to record the fact that not only has his ambition and enthusiasm grown with his work, but the crown of material success has come with all its glittering jewels, though Mr. Thomas does not care to wear it ostentatiously.

"She Stoops to Conquer"

In a Four-Part Adaptation by George Tucker of Goldsmith's Comedy Jane Gail and Henry Ainley Score Heavily.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

IT is a delightful performance Jane Gail gives us in the London Film Company's four-part adaptation of Oliver Goldsmith's famous comedy, "She Stoops to Conquer." The script is from the pen of George Loane Tucker, who also produces the story. Mr. Tucker does his work with a sure hand. It is a difficult task coherently to mold a dozen characters into a story, to preserve for the eye the full strength of the situations so forcefully presented to the ear by the dialogue. Those who are acquainted with the quality of Miss Gail's acting will not be surprised by her finished playing. They will be gratified, however, to see the former Imp star in a role which provides such abundant opportunities for the display of those deft touches of which she is so thoroughly a mistress. Her portrayal of Kate Hardcastle, the girl who, to win a bashful young man, permits him to believe her the barmaid—with which particular class of young women he is always more than at his ease—is worthy of all praise.

Scene from "She Stoops to Conquer" (Cosmofotofilm).

Henry Ainley, as young Marlow, the just mentioned bashful youngster, supplements in high degree the work of Miss

Scene from "She Stoops to Conquer" (Cosmofotofilm).

Gail. He is convincing and he is strong. Miss Christian Rayner, as the ward of Mrs. Hardcastle, is a charming companion to Kate. Windham Guise, as Tony Lumpkin, the burly, riotous son of Mrs. Hardcastle and the half-brother of Kate; the practical joker who sends the two visiting young men to his own home while pretending to direct them to the nearest inn, thereby precipitating all the trouble and incidentally all the fun that follows, fills his part to the full. So, too, do Lewis Gilbert as Sir Charles Marlow, Charles Rock as Hardcastle, and Miss Stella St. Audrie as Mrs. Hardcastle.

There is action aplenty from the beginning of the story to the end. The introduction of the many characters is skillfully accomplished; we know without guessing just who's who. We get a clear insight into the situation in the Hardcastle home, of the troubles of the master of the house with his servant Diggory and his boisterous, roisterous stepson Tony; of the cleverness and charm of his daughter Kate and Mrs. Hardcastle's niece Constance, the latter of whom the ambitious mistress of the house is anxious to marry to her impossible son, to the justifiable dismay of Constance and her lover Hastings. So, too, we are shown the way things are in the home of Marlow; of the failure of Sir Charles to overcome the awkwardness of his son when in the presence of women of quality—the father does not know that the young man is untroubled by any of these inexplicable spasms when in the more congenial and less formal society of barmaids. Appearances are very much against the successful working out of the plans of Hardcastle and his old friend Sir Charles to unite in marriage the daughter and the son.

It is the prank of unsober Tony in misleading young Marlowe and Hastings that makes possible the happy denouement. The entrance of the two young men into the Hardcastle home, where they are expected; their belief that Hardcastle is an innkeeper, their brusque directions to him, and his inability to comprehend the situation are all amusing. Best of all, though, are the coyness of Kate and the bashfulness of young Marlowe at the introduction, when the young man fails to look at the daughter of the house; his later freedom with the same young woman when he finds her so arrayed that he takes it for granted she is the barmaid, and the gradual revelation to the young man that it is not a barmaid after all and that he really is in love with her. It is not all comedy in the concluding scenes. There is a sharp checking of the mirth as we see Kate, her face now as serious as before it was mischievous, being sued as a supposed poor relation of the family, to the unbounded joy of the two eavesdropping fathers, and the happiness of Marlowe when he is told by the assembled families that the girl with whom he is in love is the daughter of the house.

There is a subsidiary action in the attempts of Hastings and Constance to elope. These contribute to the humor of the story.

"She Stoops to Conquer" is well staged. Furthermore, it is rare comedy, refined comedy.

CENSORS PASS "THE LURE."

Mme. Alice Blache's Adaptation of Famous George Scarborough Drama Beautifully Done.

WITHOUT the suggestion of a single change, George Scarborough's much discussed drama, "The Lure," was passed by the National Board of Censorship for motion picture presentation.

The production is in six reels and it is said the strong heart interest story is so beautifully told and so cleanly and artistically presented that the fading of the last scene leaves with the audience the feeling that they have learned a valuable lesson through the medium of an absorbing and intensely interesting drama.

Madame Alice Blache adapted and staged "The Lure" for pictures for the Shubert Film Manufacturing Company and was so impressed with the beauty of the story and the splendid opportunities it offered for strong dramatic climaxes that it is claimed that "The Lure" as a photo drama is not only conspicuous for its lack of a single objectionable feature, but is even stronger than the stage version.

A private performance of the picture for the benefit of the "National Board" brought forth the following simple statement:

Blache Studios, Fort Lee, N. J.—Gentlemen: The following picture seen at your office today was passed by the National Board: "The Lure," six reels—Shubert. Very truly yours, National Board of Censorship, W. D. McGuire, Jr., Ex. Sec.

BUTLER, PA., GETS NEW HOUSE.

The Grand theater is the name of the new moving picture house which was opened in Butler, Pa., recently by J. D. Dunmyer, who has an ownership interest in the house with Messrs. G. and T. L. Schenck. The Grand is situated in North Main street, a central part of the town. It has a frontage of 24 feet and is 180 feet long. The furnishings and appointments are up-to-date in every respect. The auditorium, which is 24 by 140 feet, has a seating capacity of 500, and a clear view of the screen can be had from any position in the seating arrangement. There are three aisles and each one is four feet wide. One hundred seats of total seating capacity are in the balcony where smoking is permitted. The smoke is immediately drawn away by large suction fans in the ceiling.

Expediting Service

Innovation by Pathe Freres and Eclectic That Is Meeting With General Approval.

IT TAKES a man with the courage of his convictions to start anything new. This has been proved time and time again. Columbus was laughed at before he discovered America. Stephenson was considered a "nut" for ever thinking that the steam from the teakettle would be of any use for commercial purposes. It has always been the case when anyone has tried to get out of the rut and start something new: he has had everyone else in the same line of business hold up his hands in horror and say, "It can't be done." As we said before, it takes a man with courage to go ahead under the storm of ridicule and prophecy of failure and prove in spite of every handicap that the innovation he is backing is needed and wanted by the customers of his house.

L. P. Bonvillain.

This is true in the moving picture business as well as in any other. There have been several lines of action that have been followed ever since the photo play has been commercialized. One of these has been to have as few prints of a play made as possible. These prints have been worked from house to house as long as they would hold together and as long as the projection on the screen resembled in any way a decent picture. This often resulted in a very poor projection on the screen of the theater showing the film after it had become a few weeks old. In spite of the fact that the natural result was a black eye for the firm producing the picture the extra returns from the poor print were considered to be of more value than the good name of the manufacturer, and the old prints were kept working long after they should have been in the scrap heap. Some of the live wires among the manufacturers used to speak of this and wonder if it would not be better to put out more prints and work them for a shorter time. Every time it was mentioned the subject was "pooh-poohed" and allowed to drop. The position of leader was left open for a long time.

But it had to happen. The men who finally took the bull by the horns and went ahead in spite of precedent were L. P. Bonvillain of Pathe Freres and Arthur Roussel of the Eclectic Film Co.

When the serial, "The Perils of Pauline," was in contemplation the matter of getting the full value of the immense advertising campaign was given serious consideration. As everyone knows, timeliness is the great factor in advertising. It would have been a great mistake to lose any part of the value of the story running in so many of the great daily papers throughout the country. After much thought and planning it was decided to break away from all the old methods of booking and start something which would afford the exhibitor the fullest returns from every episode.

Before the advent of the "Perils of Pauline" the greatest number of original prints put into circulation at one time of any one subject in any one place was about twenty-five or thirty. The first firm to put out this number of prints raised a howl that could be heard from coast to coast. But they did it only once and then went back to the old way. Their plans had miscarried through not being well laid. When plans were being laid for "The Perils of Pauline" every minute detail was thoroughly studied. Nothing was left to chance. And then the big change in policy was introduced.

One hundred and forty-seven prints of the first episode were made and distributed to the different Eclectic branches. When the other manufacturers heard of it they predicted all kinds of calamities. Loss of money was the least thing that was going to happen. But what did happen was that the Eclectic Film Co. actually made more friends among the exhibitors and boosted their returns to a degree not even expected in the most optimistic moments.

The exhibitors appreciated the fact that each one of them could show the episodes as they were releasd and so soon after the story had appeared in the papers that they received the fullest benefit from the publicity. Where formerly an exhibitor often had to wait for weeks before he could get his turn now he could show the same week as the story ran. It meant that the public had the story fresh in their minds and were looking for the opportunity to see it before the memory of the thrilling adventures had become faint. Every theater is showing their patrons "The Perils of Pauline" within such a short time after the release date that they are reaping a harvest. So great has been the demand for accommodation on the days "The Perils of Pauline" have been shown that in many instances the exhibitors are issuing reserved seat tickets and find that a large proportion of their patrons are buying for the full series so that they will be sure to be able to get into the theater to see their favorite picture. Reports have come in from many of the exhibitors that the people line up for an hour or more waiting their turn.

Arthur Roussel.

The success of the experiment is assured. Not only are the exhibitors finding that their patrons appreciate the quick service, but they find that the films are in much better shape for projection. They know that when they get a print of "The Perils of Pauline" they can put it right in the machine and be assured that it will be a perfect copy.

The financial benefit to the Eclectic Film Co. and to Pathe has also proved that the exhibitor has been waiting for this change. Thousands of letters have been received offering congratulations to the men who could make such a radical change in conditions. The Eclectic Film Co. has found that the returns from the films are much greater than formerly. The prices received for an early booking are higher than when the film is older. This added price more than makes up for the difference in the loss of time the film is worked, and for the added cost of putting out a greater number of prints.

It is the same old story. A quick turnover, better service, more first runs, pleased exhibitors and interested patrons—a combination that cannot be beaten.

"URIEL ACOSTA."

Five Great Reels. Great Players Company.

THE figure of Uriel Acosta is one of the most fascinating and striking in the history of the world's reformers and martyrs. The halo of mystery which surrounded the life of this great Jew has tempted the pen of novelist and playwright. In the middle of the last century the dramatized version of Uriel Acosta by Karl F. Gutzkow had a great vogue on the stages of the civilized world. The drama is still popular, for it has elements of permanent value.

The filmed version presented by "The Great Players Company" leans but lightly on the Gutzkow drama, borrows here and there from some biographical sketch, but depends in the main on such improvements as the director thought were necessary for the screen adaptation. The result has been anything but satisfactory. The really big dramatic moments have been crimped and spoiled.

No doubt the director was hampered by his actors and actresses. The part of "Uriel Acosta" has been intrusted to a man who had no conception whatever of the character he was called on to portray and whose histrionic ability fell far below that of the average performer in amateur theatricals. The other members of the cast were of about the same type. Settings and photography are fair.

Learned Business From Bottom Up.

RALPH W. INCE, Vitagraph director and star, was born in Boston, Mass., in 1887, and is one of the youngest really big men in the motion picture business. He comes of a theatrical family, his father being the late John E. Ince, a well known comedian both in America and Great Britain.

Ralph is the youngest of three brothers, all of whom have become famous in the field of motion photography. When Ralph's determination to become an actor reached its height, his father was an influential man and thoroughly in touch with theatrical conditions. With the idea of completely sickening and disheartening Ralph, his father placed him with an exceptionaly poor company, practically devoid of financial backing, organized to produce "Hazel Kirke" in the one-night stands. Ralph's season in "Hazel Kirke" lasted one consecutive night, and the stranding exeprience had the desired effect, for Ralph came back to New York and readily entered newspaper work business as an artist.

Shortly after, one of his brothers scored a success in the theatre and Ralph's histrionic ambition was rekindled. Within a few weeks, Ralph was a member of the Richard Mansfield company in repertoire, during which engagement he played all sorts of parts and rapidly absorbed many of the technicalities of the theater, and finer points in production. At the end of his first year as a member of the Mansfield company, Ralph was a very valuable man, for he had kept his eyes open, had learned much from that eminent artist, and, in addition possessed a natural inborn histrionic instinct.

Mr. Ince as Lincoln.

Ralph Ince.

His next engagement was with Klaw & Erlanger's company presenting "Ben Hur," during which time he absorbed his first ideas of handling spectacular effects and huge armies of people. Later, he joined the "College Widow" under the Henry W. Savage management, and in this company he was instilled with the values of ensemble activity.

About this time Ralph met the young lady, who later became Mrs. Ralph Ince. When he thought of leaving her to go on the road with a theatrical company, he confronted a tough problem. It proved to be the psychological moment in his career. The idea of remaining in New York was uppermost in his mind, but with no New York theatrical engagement in sight, he turned his attention towards motion photography, which was at that time just commencing to attract general attention. He applied to the Vitagraph Company for a position and, after working in several small parts, attracted the attention of the owners of the company. They made him an offer, but the offer had a string to it.

At this time, the Vitagraph was not the prosperous organization that it is today, and every actor had to help in setting scenery, running props and be a general motion picture utility man. Ralph accepted an engagement with the Vitagraph, and was handed a hammer and saw with his contact. He went to work and he learned how to set scenery and how to run props, learning his business from the ground up.

Mr. Ince has been with the Vitagraph Company seven years, the first two as an actor and sort of a high class property man and scenery shifter. The next two years were devoted to acting important parts, minus the hammer and saw, and the past three years have been given over to directing. In all, he has appeared in probably 500 different pictures and has produced about 150 Vitagraph successes. He has staged more big feature pictures for the Vitagraph than all of their other directors combined.

Mr. Ince's impersonation of Abraham Lincoln is startling, in its reality. Because of his heighth—he is considerably over six feet tall—the Vitagraph naturally cast him for the Martyred President when the character of Lincoln was required in a picture taken several years ago. Ralph's ability as an artist, in conjunction with his extraordinary efficiency in making up for the stage, permitted him to produce a representation of Lincoln sufficiently important to make Ralph famous throughout the world. Within the past two years the study of Lincoln, his personality and characteristics, has become Ralph's foremost hobby. Now, old friends of Lincoln unite in declaring that Ralph Ince is as near an ideal counterpart of Lincoln in all particulars as it is possible for one human being to impersonate another.

Ralph has written, or more properly speaking, evolved many motion picture plays. His ability for getting together a picture may be surmised by considering that when he had a large coasting schooner at his disposal, he conceived, with in an hour, the story of "His Last Fight," placing practically all of the scenes in the picture aboard the schooner.

Ralph married Lucille L. Stewart at Sheepshead Bay, L. I., in 1908. Mrs. Ince is a sister of Anita Stewart, who, a few years ago, played unimportant parts with the Vitagraph. Ralph eventually placed Anita Stewart in a principal part in "The Wood Violet" and his careful coaching made it possible for her to do the greatest work in her career in the first part of importance she ever played. Since then Miss Stewart has been his leading lady in all of his pictures, and her rise to world-wide fame can partially be traced to the effective direction of Ralph Ince.

Ralph's first entrance into pictures seven years ago, was to make it possible for him to marry and have a home for his bride. His remaining in pictrues since, has made it possible for him to purchase, out of his earnings, one of the most beautiful garden spots in Long Island. He has a miniature Paradise which he calls home at Bay Shore, L. I.

VANCE TO WRITE NEW UNIVERSAL SERIAL.

Louis Joseph Vance, one of the best known modern fiction writers, has been secured to write the new serial, "Trey O' Hearts," which is to follow the present Universal serial, "Lucille Love," to be released in fourteen or sixteen distinct parts, each of two or three reel lengths. The serial will commence the latter part of July, and will be exploited in a manner similar to that used with "Lucille Love."

Through the Robyne Syndicate the story, in serial form, will appear in sixty to seventy of the largest newspapers throughout the United States. In Europe, Australia and South America, the new Vance serial will be arranged along the same lines in conjunction with the photoplays as they are released.

The decision to release another big serial was reached by the Universal officials after the present one, "Lucille Love," had proven its worth in a surprisingly satisfactory way. The field of literature was thoroughly scoured by the Universal, with the purpose in mind of securing a writer who not only commanded marked popularity but could conceive and execute a story which would lend itself thoroughly to film production. The selection of Mr. Vance was the result. His novels, which ran serially in Munsey's Magazine, "The Brass Bowl," "The Black Flag" and "The Bronze Ball," were particularly noted for the virile treatment given them.

Mr. Vance believes himself that the "Trey O' Hearts" will come to be recognized as his masterpiece. It is very probable that during the adaption of the story of the screen, the author will be present to assist and suggest.

The production work will be done at the Universal's West Coast studios, Los Angeles, Cal.

NEW THEATER OPENED.

A new moving picture theater has been opened in St. Louis, Mo., by A. Gutzman. The house is situated at 2912-14 Chippewa street, and has a seating capacity of 600. The admission price is five cents. The theater opens at seven o'clock on week days, and on Sundays the shows begin one hour earlier. The name of the house is the Melvin.

OBSERVATIONS

BY OUR MAN ABOUT TOWN.

MUCH is being said at present regarding the necessity for making motion picture exhibitors what they ought to be by a system of schooling, or otherwise. If "otherwise" means forcing the deficient exhibitors to do what the law requires and common sense dictates, all interested in the welfare of the motion picture business will give unanimous endorsement to the suggestion; as for a schooling of exhibitors, little serious attention is given the idea. The prevailing opinion among the real exhibitors and those who have direct dealings with those controlling picture houses is that the chief thought should be extermination and prohibition. Education should be encouraged at all times when legitimately directed, but to seriously consider it as applied to exhibitors of motion pictures under existing circumstances is purely a waste of time.

* * *

Day after day students of conditions attending the motion picture field at present are spending hours in throwing into shape lessons for the guidance of exhibitors. All publications devoted to the trade publish columns in each issue telling the exhibitors what should be done and what should not be done for the advancement of their personal interests and the interests of the business as a whole; but a certain percentage of the men who should show some appreciation of what is being done continue in the same old rut. Many explanations are given for this. Some say the exhibitors are too busy to read; in many cases exhibitors are unable to intelligently read what is prepared for their benefit; and in some instances exhibitors feel that the information is for the other fellows.

* * *

One of the oldest and most progressive exhibitors in this city says that there are ample opportunities for all men in the business to learn everything pertaining to it without sending any of them to night school. "The trouble with many of them," sad he, "is that they will not understand, and will not do anything that is likely to cost them something. Most of the people who fail to come up to the mark as successful managers are those who are in the business to get all the money out of it that they can in the shortest space of time. I do not take much stock in the explanation that they are unfortunate because they cannot read, and therefore do not profit by the suggestions given in the trade journals. Every one of them is sufficiently educated to be able to keep tab on the box offices with the best of us and nothing in which they are directly interested gets by them in the trade, whether or not it is printed. I have been hoping for the time to come when the indifferent and ignorant class of people who pose as exhibitors will be driven out of the business. They have been thorns in the sides of the intelligent and legitimate exhibitors and are responsible for all the clashes that have taken place with the authorities. They are the people upon whom the handlers of uncensored films chiefly depend for an outlet for their goods and the whole trade is made to suffer for it."

* * *

Another exhibitor said that if any exhibitors needed schooling they were not members of any of the exhibitors' associations. If they were they would be educated. Any exhibitor who attended the recent international Exposition at the Grand Central Palace, New York, and listened to the addresses received a course of education sufficient for any man of ordinary sense. "I lost patience with such people some time ago. They will not co-operate, or try to learn. Scores of them graduated into the picture business from street stands and will follow the peanut business methods as long as they are in it. Take a trip along the East Side of the city, and along some of the streets on the West Side, and in Harlem, and the lower type of residential districts in Brooklyn and you will find what I am driving at. There is where you will find the houses from which the people continually attacking the motion picture business get their ammunition, although I will admit that many houses in better localities show inexperience on the part of the managements. The latter class of people do not need schools for education in their business. Experience, with the help of the trade papers, will set them right in time. There is but one school for the other fellows, and that is the Bureau of Licenses."

* * *

"The striking part of the situation is that the 'uneducated' exhibitors comply only with that which the law requires and volunteer absolutely nothing for the benefit of their patrons. This appears to me as conclusive that there are a certain number of people in the business who will respond only to force and would defy all attempts at education, although there is a possibility that many of them are under the ban because they leave the actual work of direction to some employes who succeed in impressing themselves upon the poor fellows as having managerial ability when, in fact, they know as little about the business as the boss does. But, conceding all this, I am opposed to a campaign of education when it is apparently to be directed chiefly to the benefit of a class of people whose sole qualification and principal aim is the possession and acquirement of money."

* * *

"I hear strange rumblings in the film market," said an out of town exhibitor to an exchange man he met on Broadway a few days ago. "How about it?"

"I guess you are right," was the answer. "There is every indication that the motion picture volcano will have an eruption before the snow flies. It would not surprise me if it happened much sooner. The market is glutted and something must give. While the feature game has done wonderful work towards attracting to the picture houses thousands of people of the better class who until a couple of years ago ignored the picture form of entertainment, the game itself has been overdone. There will be more high class picture houses in operation next fall than ever before. An immense amount of capital is being turned in that direction, but that will not relieve the situation as it is at present from the producers standpoint. Some of them will either pull out of the field, or be forced out of it. There are too many people in it."

"Where do you look for a break? Do you mean that the newcomers will go under?", asked the visitor.

"I am not inclined to say. It would not be fair to the trade. I am simply reflecting what every well informed man in the field feels. I will say, however, that whatever may happen will not injure the business from the exhibitor's standpoint. The standard of productions and the amount of patronage will meet the best of any period within the past three years?"

"Well, every day I read of some new corporation being organized with immense capital to make pictures. Does it seem logical that if conditions are as you state these great investments would be made"

"At first glance it does not. But the hundreds of thousands of dollars you speak of are not dumped into the business with a shovel. The backing is there, but the investments are made by installments, and when the investors feel that returns are not coming in to their liking the backing is withdrawn. The same thing has happened before. One of the most prominent and richest manufacturers in this city, whose name is known in almost every household, was induced to take a flier in the picture game a few years ago He put up $50,000. He knew nothing of the picture game. He knew only that big men in the business were receiving big returns when the pictures were marketed. He did not figure that big expenditures were necessary to get the goods ready for the market and time and expense was required to get customers. His $50,000 was fast dwindling when he found that returns were still a matter of future development. He realized that the picture game partook more of the theatrical than the ordinary commercial character. But he was game. 'Here', he said to those he was backing 'I'll give you $15,000 more to get the returns started, and if you do not make good I'll pull out.' Well, he pulled out—after he woke up he found that his $65,000 was a mere drop in the bucket for the venture he started. Mark my words, the greater the capital the heavier the fall, especially where the investors look for returns as they do in ordinary commercial pursuits. The men who have made big money in the business did not get it through quick returns. Every old manufacturer will tell you that. They got it by putting their money in the business with their labor. When the returns came in they reinvested them. Persistent labor and reinvestment eventually created a balance for profit sharing without impairing the operating capital. Now competition is growing sharper every day. Should a crisis in that respect come, which will be the best equipped to meet it—the company that has a surplus working capital, or the one backed by a group of hungry dividend seekers who balk on increasing investments if dividends are not forthcoming? Do you get me?"

Greetings at Dayton

Keen Interest in the Affairs of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League Presages Large Attendance.

THE affairs of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America has attracted wide attention among the exhibitors of the country, not only on account of the rivalry between the organization and the faction that bolted from it at New York a year ago, but because of the lively interest among its members on various questions that are certain to come up for discussion at the Dayton convention.

Uppermost among the toics for discussion will come that of Censorship. As is generally known the National League President, M. A. Neff, has been one of the foremost advocates of legally constituted censorship boards as exemplified by the Ohio law, of which he claims authorship. Supporting President Neff is a large and influential faction which will support him in his contentions.

On the other hand there is a strong opposition among the state branches of many states to censorship of any kind, and the opponents to the censorship idea will be there to make a fight against the adoption of any thing favorable to it. Altogether there is likely to be a lively time over censorship.

Another matter that is to come up for consideration is the question of taking back the bolters of a year ago. A committeee was appointed at the recent meeting of that faction in New York to present claims for recognition at the Dayton convention. Up to the present writing very little sympathy has been expressed in their behalf by members of the regular organization. It has been pointed out that the bolters have no organization that is entitled to consideration and that if they want to return to the fold they may do so by making application for admission to the existing League organization in the regular way. It is more than likely that such will be the answer given the delegation of the bolters at Dayton if they are given a hearing.

There is sure to be a discussion upon the question of revenues for the maintenance of the League. Up to the present writing the dues from members have not been sufficient to carry on the work of organization. To make up the deficit the exhibitors have been compelled to hold expositions and publish programs—a round-about-way of taxing the manufacturers of pictures and accessories to raise money. This plan is growing in disfavor. Many manufacturers have flatly refused to be taxed and others contribute unwillingly through fear that their business will suffer if they do not. All this should be changed and a sufficient annual due should be levied against each member to put the League on a strong financial basis.

Whether or not there will be a contest over the election of president for the ensuing year depends upon the attitude President Neff takes upon the censorship question. If he persists in pursuing his present course it is more than likely that he will meet considerable opposition and may face another split in the organization. On the other hand the recent campaign made against him by certain publications in the trade has had the effect of solidifying his support and he will go to Dayton with a strong party at his back. The issue will be full of interest.

The Moving Picture World will be well represented at Dayton and a complete report of the proceedings will be published in subsequent issues.

MARYLAND STATE CONVENTION.

The Maryland League held its annual convention at Baltimore on June 25. The sessions were held at Bayshore Park and were well attended. The election of officers for the coming year resulted as follows: Marion S. Pearce, of Baltimore, was unanimously re-elected president of the organization; William Kalb was re-elected vice-president; Second vice-president, Thomas J. Bohannon; secretary, Geo. P. Klein; treasurer, Guy Wonders, and sergeant-at-arms, T. J. Hovey; national vice-president, J. H. Bennett.

The delegates to the National Convention were elected by ballot. They are: Marion S. Pearce, Frank Durkee, George List, of Frederick; Harry Lewy, William Fait, Jr., and Harry B. Cook. There were also six alternates named. The delegates were uninstructed.

INDIANA LEAGUE ELECTION.

The members of the Indiana state branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America met in North Vernon at the Metropole Hotel June 3d. The following officers were elected: J. C. Lockwood, National vice-president, Frankport; president, O. G. Murry, Richmond; first vice-president, J. C. Trulock, Aurora; second vice-president, G. B. McClelland, Osgood; secretary, W. E. Phillips, North Vernon; treasurer, W. Curl, New Albany. Delegates to Dayton convention: O. G. Murry, Fred Verbarg, W. Curl, J. C. Trulock, G. B. McClelland. Alternates: W. W. Eggleston, J. M. McManus, J. C. White, W. E. Phillips and Roy Parks.

NEWMAN TO EXHIBIT AT DAYTON CONVENTION.

The Newman Mfg. Company, with factories in Cincinnati, New York and Chicago, will have quite an attractive and elaborate booth, occupying space No. 20 at the convention to be held in Dayton, July 6 to 11. They will have a complete line of the very latest and attractive brass poster frames, easels, railings, ticket choppers, etc., and a cordial invitation is extended to all exhibitors to visit their booth, where representatives of this firm will be glad to go into detail with reference to any equipment.

A neat good luck coin will be distributed, on which appears a catchy verse. It will be well worth while for every exhibitor attending the convention to make it his business to see the Newman display.

MANY PRIZES IN SCENARIO CONTEST.

Evening Sun-Vitagraph Competition Yields Three Hundred Scripts Acceptable to the Flatbush Studio.

According to the returns of the Evening Sun-Vitagraph prize photoplay contest, as published in the Evening Sun of June 30, about one in ten of the three thousand who submitted scripts turned out work that the Vitagraph Company desires to buy. The scenario department of the company is now in communication with the successful authors.

As previously announced, the winner of the thousand-dollar prize was Miss Elaine Sterne. The second prize of $250 was awarded to Harold Gilmore Calhoun, and the third prize of $100 to William Addison Lathrop. There are, in the long list of the supplementary winners, many names familiar to the film industry.

PHIL MINDIL RESIGNS FROM MUTUAL.

Phil Mindil, who for the past nine or ten months has been at the head of the publicity department of the Mutual Film Corporation, has resigned. Although when Mr. Mindil came to the Mutual he had had no previous experience in the film industry it took him a very short time to start things humming. He brought to bear all of the wide experience he had gained in the publicity line in twenty active years. He built up Reel Life, and achieved the unusual by making a house organ that sold freely on the news stands. W. H. Peckham, business manager of Reel Life, also has resigned. While Mr. Mindil has as yet formed no further alliance, his old friends and the many new ones he has made in film circles will be surprised if his tact, efficiency and experience are permitted to be removed from the line of endeavor in which he has been so successful.

It is understood that the Mutual Girl Weekly will be discontinued, and that the same course will be pursued with the Mutual Movie Fillers, a press sheet furnished to newspapers and exhibitors. Furthermore, it is said that Reel Life will be reduced in size, more to the proportions of a straight house organ, and that its public sale will be discontinued.

Arthur James, a well-known newspaper man, succeeds to the head of the Mutual's publicity department.

HOWE LOOKING FOR FEATURES.

Among the summer visitors to town is Lyman H. Howe, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., probably the best known moving picture exhibitor on either side of the Atlantic, and certainly one of the oldest on this side. Mr. Howe came to the city to make final arrangements for the departure of his representative for Europe, to pick up novelties for the programs for next season. It is quite natural that a question should arise as to whether Mr. Howe cannot get all the films he wants from the immense stock on hand in this country. The answer is that every year he sends a representative to the other side to see if he cannot dig up some novelty—if only one—that has not been sent to this country. Gem seeking, as it were. He has done that for years. He is one of the exhibitors who will spare no expense to get something good and "different." His line is chiefly of the educational character and his bookings keep five companies on the road from early fall to early summer. And listen! He is one of the few eldest of the exhibitors who has not been tempted to embark as a manufacturer of films, although for years he has been intimate with the foremost of present day producers.

Manufacturers' Advance Notes

"THE WINNING TRICK" (Vitagraph).

This pretty comedy-drama has the quality of entertaining that appeals to human appreciation, on account of its naturalness. Often have we heard persons say that riches are not essential to happiness and inherited wealth is apt to be demoralizing. The heroine of this story, Lillian Walker, becomes so imbued with this theory after reading several treatises on the subject, she comes to the conclusion she will never marry a rich man. The hero, Arthur Ashley, is very much in love with her and there is but one barrier to obtaining her consent to marrying him. He is very wealthy and she fears the consequences to her pet theory. He determines to win her and for that purpose arranges with her father to suddenly announce his transition from riches to poverty. The father, Charles Eldridge, enters into the scheme. They marry and the young man obliges her to live under very modest and self-denying circumstances. He secures a position as butler in a wealthy home. Lillian visits him and at once becomes dissatisfied with her own restricted way of living and goes back to her little flat very much dissatisfied. Finally her husband tells her he may secure a position for her in the home where he is employed. She calls on the owner of the mansion and is surprised to find her own husband occupying that position. He then tells her of his trick and she penitently confesses that theory and practice are entirely different. The dramatic quality of "The Winning Trick" is well sustained in the dual character by Mr. Ashley, as butler and as the gentleman of culture and aristocracy, lord of the mansion. Lillian Walker's portrayal of the girl of refinement and luxury suddenly being transformed to contrasting associations, is extremly clever and commendably well done. Charles Eldridge, as the father, the agreeable way he enters into the trick and the well simulated anger and opposition to his daughter's marriage to a poor man, is a bit of real comedy. The whole picture is so sustained in its lights and shadows, it cannot help but please and entertain.

Scene from "The Winning Trick" (Vitagraph).

"HIS STOLEN FORTUNE" (Essanay).

An unusually interesting comedy-drama adapted from the story of that title, which was run some time ago in the Munsey Magazines, will be presented in photoplay form, consisting of two very interesting reels, on Friday, July 17th.

Francis X. Bushman will play the leading role, that of a young American chap, who inherits a large fortune, only to discover that his deceased uncle had stolen it. Six months after his uncle's death, he finds a note which informs him that he must find the heir and return the money. Many humorous complications arise which will keep an audience laughing until their sides ache. The cast is a well selected one and the photography is beautiful.

"THE INCOMPETENT" (Lubin).

This drama is based on the eternal triangle—the man, the wife, and the friend, but contrary to the usual the friend is not a scoundrel, but a quite worthy. "The man" is the incompetent and the wife with every worthy intention poses as his sister, hence the friend is led into a false position and many mistakes are made on all sides. With a dramatic situation the skein is unravelled and the denouement promises a happy future. The script is written by Daniel Ellis and gives intensely dramatic roles to John E. Ince and Rosetta Brice, both of the Lubin home stock company.

Scene from "The Incompetent" (Lubin).

"OTHELLO" (Kleine-Cines).

The big George Kleine five-part "Othello" made at Venice, Italy, last winter, under Mr. Kleine's personal direction, is scheduled for release through the General Film Company the week of July 6th.

The picture is unusual in many ways. To expedite its making the city of Venice declared a half holiday and closed the Grand Canal to all traffic, leaving only the aged palaces, the gayly costumed players and the clicking cameras of the Photo Drama Company. The film version closely follows Shakespeare's story. The photography is clean-cut, the various parts well cast, and the scenic effects more than beautiful. This is probably the first Shakespearean story to be produced in the actual environment of the original.

Scene from "Othello" (Kleine-Cines).

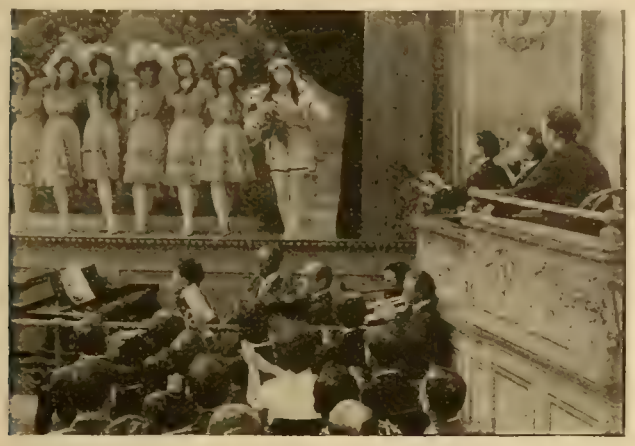
"THE OTHER TRAIN" (Beauty).

A "Beauty" subject produced under direction of Harry Pollard in which Margarita Fischer is the luminous star that rises to the highest pinnacle of success and falls to the lowest depths of poverty and at the end of her eventful career her soul ascends to celestial realms as in a flood of glory.



Scene from "The Other Train" (Beauty Film).

In her characterizations Margarita portrays the entire gamut of human emotions and gives an excellent exposition of her histrionic ability. Other players participate, but Margarita is naturally the center of attraction throughout the production.

Harry Pollard displays his thorough understanding of the art and has sucessfully produced his most remarkable one reel feature. The triple and double exposures show a thorough understanding of the camera and a complete knowledge of its possibilities. The subject is scheduled for release Tuesday, July 7th, and will undoubtedly score heavily both here and abroad.

"THE BONDAGE OF EVIL" (Kleine-Celio).

How a woman who thinks she has "lived down" her tainted past is, after many years, once more caught in the toils, enmeshed in the net of circumstances and returned to the depths from which she had been lifted by a noble love, is dramatically told in George Kleine's splendid psychological photoplay, "The Bondage of Evil," an extraordinary two-part subject made for Mr. Kleine by the Celio Company of Rome. The splendid acting of Francesca Bertini,

Scene from "The Bondage of Evil" (Kleine-Celio).

Albert Collins and Emilia Ghione, principals in the story, makes it one of the most attractive films yet turned out by that popular continental organization.

Louise, a cabaret singer, marries a young millionaire after her lover, Duval, has been sentenced to a five-year term in prison. Finally accepted by his family and friends, she becomes a society leader and has almost forgotten the old life. Then Duval is released and his subtle influence is exerted to bring her back to the degradation of the cabarets. Her struggle with the inevitable and final surrender makes a keenly interesting phychological study and teaches a fine moral lesson, abounding in compelling dramatic situations.

Technically, "The Bondage of Evil" compares favorably with the best of the Celio output. The photography is splendid, the settings beautiful and the appointments perfect in every detail. The subject will be releasd through the General Film Company Tuesday, June 30.

REAL PRISON SCENE IN EXCELSIOR PICTURE.

In one of the realistic scenes from "The Toll of Mammon," made by the Excelsior Feature Film Company of 110 West 40th Street, New York, it was necesary for the sake of atmosphere to get a scene in prison showing the convicts at their daily work. The warden of one of New York's largest prisons was approached and consented only after much weight had been brought to bear upon him. Director Harry Handworth brought his camera into the various parts of the prison, and soon had the necessary scenes. They were taken without any artificial lighting and are perfectly natural. Gordon De Maine, the leading man for the Excelsior Company became a real convict for the time being, and later laughingly said he made several friends among the regular "honest to goodness" inmates.

Scene from "The Toll of Mammon" (Excelsior).

"THE CONQUERORS" (Ramo).

The populace of Fort Lee, New Jersey, awoke one day recently to find a Franco-German village in their midst, and were unable to figure out the reason, until Will S. Davis, director for Ramo Films, swept his French and German troops with their horses and cannon through its streets, bombarding its houses and terrifying its citizens. The scenes enacted were for the wonderful five-reel Feature "The Conquerors," dramatized by Mr. Paul M. Potter and produced as a photo drama by Ramo.

Much time, care and money has been expended in making this production very elaborate and spectacular. The building of this miniature village alone cost over $3,000.00.

"The Conquerors" as a play was dramatized by Mr. Potter for Charles Frohman, who produced it several years ago with William Faversham in the leading role, and ran very successfully for one whole season at the Empire Theatre, New York City. This production will be presented to the public September 1st, and one each month thereafter, such as "The Victoria Cross," "The Destruction of St. Pierre," "The Mad Mullah" or "The Lovers of the Nile" and "The City Directory," all from Mr. Potter's pen.

KLEINE'S "VENDETTA" IS SPECTACULAR.

A man buried as dead, returning to consciousness in his coffin, knocking it by his struggles from its niche in the wall; thereby breaking open another coffin filled with jewels; returning to his estate only to find his wife and his dearest friend unfaithful to him; plotting a revenge that ends in the death of his friend and the killing of his wife in that selfsame tomb at midnight by an earthquake, are the essential elements of what is undoubtedly one of the most sensational novels ever filmed.

Marie Corelli wrote no work more powerful than her "Vendetta" and no producer made a film more faithful to detail or providing more thrills than the film version of that novel. The story is in five parts, anyone of which contains enough material to make two good stories. The subject is scheduled for release through the General Film Company, special feature department, July 27th.

SUCCESS OF "ATLANTIS."

The Great Northern Film Company's spectacular six-reel production of "Atlantis," the film dramatization of Gerhart Hauptmann's stirring novel, has scored a marked success in the film world. The thrilling shipwreck scenes have caused a sensation among state right buyers and exhibitors alike. The following territory has been contracted for to date: New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Delaware, District of Columbia, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kentucky, Maine, Maryland, Minnesota, New Hampshire, North Dakota, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Vermont, Virginia, West Virginia, Wisconsin and Canada.

Company Leaving Copenhagen for Ocean Scenes in "Atlantis."

The state right buyers who have secured this big production are obtaining choice bookings for it in many cases arranging to present the pictures in the leading legitimate theaters. "Atlantis" opened at the magnificent new Pitt Theater, Pittsburgh, on Monday, June 22, for an engagement of two or more weeks. It was presented at His Majesty's Theater, Montreal, Canada, the leading playhouse of that city, and is expected to be seen at other first-class houses.

"THE GREAT UNIVERSAL MYSTERY."

Something "Out of the Rut" in Filmdom That Is All Accomplished "Without a Make-up."

Take into consideration the fact that a motion picture has been produced in the negative and will be released July 10, with a star cast working (or playing) in it whose aggregate salaries amount to eight million four hundred and twenty-four thousand dollars a year—quite some round sum. The Universal Company is releasing this picture with the above caption, embracing a cast of over fifty-four leading stars and executives of the company; said executives who are earning their salaries in other departments have just discovered their abilities of pantomimic acting before the camera, and are not such bad actors after all.

This visualization has been taken by the various directors, not only throughout the United States, but in Europe as well. It contains every star, manager, studio manager, stage carpenter, "props" and wardrobe lady in the the employ of the Universal Corporation, and in addition such high-priced personages as Carl Laemmle, R. H. Cochrane, J. C. Graham, Joe Brandt and all members of the board of directors, as well as the principal members of the office force of the company.

In addition to these personages thirty-seven of the leading stars are shown in the unwinding of the film on the screen. The majority of the scenes were taken at Universal City, near Hollywood, California; the Imp studio, New York; Coytesville studio, New Jersey; the Imp factory, Bayonne, New Jersey; Victor studio, New Jersey, and the executive offices, 1600 Broadway.

The following film celebrities appear in this picture: King Baggot, Pauline Bush, Ford Sterling, William Clifford, Lois Weber, Lee Moran, Ella Hall, Hobart Henley, William Welch, Betty Schade, Leah Baird, Howard Crampton, Al. Christie, Carl Laemmle, Maurice Fleckles, Herman Fichtenberg, Allen Curtis, Florence Lawrence, Francis Ford, Bob Leonard, Cleo Madison, Victoria Forde, M. J. MacQuarrie, Ethel Grandin, Alexander Gaden, Rupert Julian, Edna Maison, Edmund Mortimer, Frank Crane, J. C. Graham, Wilfred Lucas, F. A. Van Husan, J. V. Bryson, Henry McRae, J. Warren Kerrigan, Grace Cunard, Herbert Rawlinson, Phillips Smalley, Eddie Lyons, William Shay, Irene Wallace, Matt Moore, Marie Walcamp, Frank Smith, William Dowlan, Herbert Brenon, Isidore Bernstein, Otis Turner, Bob Thornby, David Horsley, Fred Balshofer.

Mr. Laemmle played the leading part in a very unctuous manner. He seemed somewhat frightened at and suspicious of the camera, but he took a stage brace and that helped some; he accomplished all this without a make-up. Others in the cast acquitted themselves equally well. Wilfred Lucas seemed to be somewhat peeved and hid behind his manuscript.

Whatever is lacking in this picture—and that is the mystery—it is not novelty. Something new in pictures, as well as in everything else, that we mortals bump up against, is welcomed with glee. At the conclusion the mystery still remains; you can draw your own conclusions, which is some satisfaction, so keep on guessing. "Use the brains God gave you."

"UNIVERSAL BOY" SERIES BEGINNING.

Commencing Thursday, July 16th, the Universal Company will release every other week under the Imp brand, a "Universal Boy" film, featuring Matty Roubert, deliciously precocious and one of the cleverest youngsters on the screen, in the title role.

The series will treat of persons, important or otherwise, prominent in the public eye. However, the pictures are not intended simply as a sole means of exploiting such personages; in each photoplay release there will be a complete and highly amusing story woven around the little hero, Matty, and the particular person or personages he comes in contact with during the production of that film.

The first series, which have just been completed, will introduce John McGraw, famous manager of the New York Giants; mascot of the New York Giants, Jimmy Ford, and Miss Annette Kellerman, the world famed "Water Venus" and heroine of "Neptune's Daughter," the smashing seven-reel success, now showing at the Globe theater.

Master Roubert is a dark, curley-headed, brown-eyed boy of seven. His experience upon the screen dates from the time he was two and a half years old. Inheriting natural taste and ability for mimicry and make believe from his parents, who have spent their lives in the dramatic profession, Matty immediately proved himself a "child prodigy."

The comedies which gave Master Roubert the biggest reputation, were those produced upon the Pacific coast by the Universal and released under the Powers brand. Appearing in these juvenile comedies as the principal boy for something like two years, Matty endeared himself to thousands of fans throughout this country and Europe.

"SALOMY JANE" (California M. P. Co.).

Until recently, the larger half of those natural advantages which have made California celebrated throughout the world had fallen beyond the pale of the film producer. The higher Sierras, the mining camps of earlier days and the far-famed red wood forests all belonged to the upper end of the state, and had almost entirely escaped the motion picture camera's lens.

The California's Motion Picture Corporation's adaptation of "Salomy Jane," Bret Harte's story and Paul Armstrong's play, will abound in this Northern California scenery, in which respect it will give the public something quite different from the general run of back grounds found in motion pictures, this applying to pictures previously made in California as well as elsewhere. The story, as is known to the world at large, concerns itself with the days of gold in the Far West, its setting, a redwood forest, and its characters the hardy, rough and too often lawless pioneers, but withal generous, who made the early history of California a thing of thrilling romance.

The redwood forest, in which the production is being filmed, is the same in which Bret Harte watched the prospectors build their first rude cabins. The stage coach, which is serving the producer's purposes, is a relic of former days, and the grade that it rocks along is the same, but for subsequent repairs, by which the author wandered back and forth between the feverish gold camps and the young frontier metropolis, San Francisco, scarcely grown beyond a village.

QUEEN COMEDY COMPANY STARTS.

Another moving picture concern has started work in Los Angeles, Cal., the Queen Comedy Company. It is headed by A. D. Hann and A. G. Forry, who will produce comedies only. The company is said to be named after the president's sister, Miss Queenie Hann, who is playing leads opposite the Irish comedian, Jerry Ivers. They have their studio almost completed and expect to have their first release ready about July 10.

Notes of the Trade.

Arthur Ashley, of the Vitagraph Players, is a "Jack of all trades," but he reverses the old saying by being good at all of them. It is not so very long ago that he was known as Daredevil Ashley and thrilled thousands all over the country by his death-defying ride down a Shoot the Chutes on a bicycle, enveloped in flames, making a spectacular high dive at the finish.

* * *

H. A. Wolfgram, formerly salesman of the World Film Corporation's Kansas City office, has been transferred to the Denver office, and will take charge of the sub-office at Salt Lake City.

* * *

The cast of the Life Photo Film Corporation engaged in making "Northern Lights," in six parts, have returned from Canada, where they were engaged in the taking of exterior scenes in the production.

* * *

European rights for the international polo pictures have been granted to the McEnnery Syndicate of London by the World Film Corporation.

* * *

Joseph Bloom, special representative of the World Film Corporation, is now located at the Washington office, and has the distinction of being the World Film Corporation's best salesman.

* * *

The "Beauty" subject entitled 'The Other Train" is an exceptionally fine production and an everlasting testimonial of the versatility of Miss Margarita Fischer and the thoroughness of Harry Pollard as a director.

* * *

In the Selig zoo at Eastlake Park, Los Angeles, California, there has been an unprecedented increase in the original stock of wild animals imported by William N. Selig. Old circus men and those accustomed to the handling of wild beasts state that the peculiarly appropriate surroundings in which the animals live are responsible for this. There are acres of real jungle grown from shoots and roots brought from India, Africa and other countries, so that the animals find exactly the same jungle conditions as they have been accustomed to at home.

* * *

Miss Ethel Clayton, of the Lubin company, received notification from the Onyx Club, which has branches throughout the Southwest, that she had been awarded second prize in their photoplay favorite contest, having received twenty-five thousand votes. This makes the fourth club contest in which she received first or second prize.

* * *

"When the World Was Silent,' produced by Herbert Brenon and written by Harvey Gates, of the Universal, is to be a three-reel drama, instead of a two-reeler as originally announced. When Mr. Brenon took the script, it was his intention to put it on in two reels, but when the production got under way it was decided that the story was too big for two reels—that three reels would be necessary to properly unfold the plot. It will be released on July 13, as a three-reeler, while the Victor one-reel release of that date, "Out of the Valley," will be dropped until a future time.

* * *

It will be interesting for the many who have already become acquainted with the great "Protea' to know she has again made her appearance in a film called "Protea Second." The second part, like the first, is the property of the World Film Corporation. This daring young woman detective is probably one of the most versatile among the many actresses upon the moving picture stage. From the opinion of those who have had the lucky chance to see the advance print of "Protea Second" it is quite evident that the exhibitor will not regret his persistent request to get something as good as "Protea First."

* * *

Sawyer, Inc., have closed a contract to market a new Mexican picture made by the Canadian Bioscope Company, entitled "The Mexican Sniper's Revenge." It is in three parts, with the principal scenes laid in a small Mexican village, which is attacked by a band of Mexican rebels. There are some very thrilling battle scenes and a very strong love interest between a Mexican senorita and an American engineer.

* * *

Al. E. Christie and his Nestor Comedy Company have returned from a journey that took them from one end of California to the other and into Mexico. One of the pictures Christie made shows scenes of construction in the exposition, which will celebrate in 1915 the opening of the Panama Canal.

* * *

Through the courtesy of William H. Russell, millionaire, Anglewood Cliffs, the immense and beautiful estate on the Hudson belonging to Mr. Russell, was turned over to the Lawrence-Victor company to be used for the staging of a two-reel romantic melodrama. Under the direction of Harry Solter, and headed by Miss Florence Lawrence and Matt Moore, the Victor players are at present located on the estate, where they have already been for two weeks, working on the picture.

No, "In All Things Moderation" is not the name of a sermon; it's the title of a two-reel bouncing melodrama that is being produced by the Imp company under the direction of Frank Crane. Alexander Gaden and Dorothy Phillips are playing the leads.

* * *

The Shubert Feature Film Corporation, which lately combined with the World Film Corporation, has about completed what is to be one of the most up-to-date studios in the world. This formidable structure will have sufficient space to carry on six different productions at one time.

* * *

One of the visitors at the recent exposition in New York City was Bernard M. Corbett, of the Corbett Theater Equipment Company, 611 Washington street, Boston. Mr. Corbett seemed highly satisfied with business conditions in the New England states. His company has placed the equipment in all of the theaters in the vicinity of the "Hub" recently.

* * *

The Julian Rex Company is producing "The Dreamer," from the pen of Rupert Julian himself. This will be the first film of the new company in which Rupert Julian and his wife, known to the legitimate stage as Elsie Jane Wilson, are co-stars.

* * *

For the staging of "When the Heart Calls," a two-reel Imp drama, Herbert Brenon, director, needed certain styles of exterior settings. Informed that Stamford, Connecticut, or the country thereabouts, could furnish what was wanted, Herbert gathered his players and took them up there. Of course the atmosphere must have been cool and the fishing good—but "No!" says Herbert. "I worked every minute of the time." He and the company have just returned. Billy Shay and Violet Mersereau will be seen in the lead roles of the play.

* * *

H. C. Drum, district manager of the Pacific Coast for the World Film Corporation, is now on a tour to Seattle.

* * *

Sawyer, Inc., have received another 500 feet of interesting film from Sofia, Bulgaria. This film has been added to the 3,000 feet already in hand. The subject is to be released on the occasion of the visit to this country of the Queen of Bulgaria in October.

* * *

J. G. Wilson, until recently with the Syndicate Film Corporation, has been appointed manager of the Boston office of the World Film Corporation, in place of F. B. Murphy, resigned.

* * *

H. T. Oliver, vice-president and general manager of the Canadian Bioscope Company, Ltd., of Halifax, has been in New York City for the past few weeks arranging for an outlet in the United States for the productions of his company. They expect to release a number of three and five-reel features as well as one-reel and split-reel comedy and dramatic subjects.

* * *

Sol L. Lesser, of the Golden Gate Film Exchange, San Francisco, expects to land in New York early in July. He has several big negotiations on and expects to close up some very important deals. Mr. Lesser has started the big Vitagraph-Liebler film, "The Christian," on the highway to prosperity on the Coast.

* * *

Al Rosenthal, special road man of the World Film Corporation, was called to Chicago from Atlanta, on account of illness in his family. In the future Mr. Rosenthal will make his headquarters in Chicago.

* * *

"A Harmony of Souls" is the title of the latest picture by Bob Leonard and Lloyd Ingraham. Among the features of this one-reel drama is an orchestra of twenty-five artists. In the story Leonard himself had to direct the orchestra and his fine musical training stood him in good stead.

* * *

Herman Gertler, formerly with Warner's Features, Inc., is now one of the force of the World Film Corporation, in the capacity of film inspector and assembler.

* * *

Jack Blystone, new director of Joker comedies, with Bess Meredyth as leading woman, and Ernest Shields as leading man, is now producing a slap-stick entitled "The Third Party," at the West Coast studio.

BIASCOPE MOTION PICTURE CO.
507 Eighth Ave., New York
Manufacturers and Producers of
SPECIAL FEATURES
INDUSTRIAL, COMMERCIAL, EDUCATIONAL AND DRAMATIC.
Pictures Taken and Developed to Order. Expert Camera Men Furnished for All Occasions. Satisfaction Guaranteed

Moving Picture Theatre Mailing Lists For Sale

20,192, covering United States and Canada, price $40.00, or $3.50 per thousand for such states as you want.

670 Film Exchanges, U. S.	$3.50
70 Manufacturers and Studios, U. S.	1.00
34 Moving Picture Machine Mfrs. and Dealers	1.00
231 Film Exchanges, Foreign Countries	3.00
520 Moving Picture Theatres, Foreign Countries	3.00

Ask us for full particulars.

TRADE CIRCULAR ADDRESSING CO.
166 West Adams Street, Chicago
Established 1880

Music for the Picture

Conducted by CLARENCE E. SINN

Again, "Judith of Bethulia."

GEORGE P. MONTGOMERY, Musical Director, Rawlins' Theatre, Albany, Ga., contributes the following:

Have been reading your music department for a long time and find it very interesting. I am the leader (piano) of a five-piece orchestra and we play for pictures exclusively, changing daily. Have a repertoire of over 2,000 orchestra numbers, not counting medley two-steps and waltzes. When I read of people playing for pictures, and for pathetic scenes using "Hearts and Flowers," "Flower Song," "Melody in F," and such good old standbys, I wonder why they don't try and get some new numbers. I should be pleased to give you a list of other numbers to take the place of these if you would care to have it. Another thing—in reading music cues as given in your columns, too many times they go back to repeat numbers; this is entirely unnecessary if the leader has a large enough repertoire of music.

In your department (issue of week of June 13th) Miss Currier, of Barton, Vermont, states that she uses twenty numbers a week for her pictures, as I understand it. (Not exactly that; Miss Currier said she bought at least twenty numbers per week of popular music. This is in addition to her library of standard stuff.—Ed.).

I have used more than that number (20 numbers) for one day's pictures of three reels. I should like to get hold of music that I can use for battle scenes and struggles of various kinds, such as the cue music issued by Hawkes & Fischer, Nos. IX, X and XI. Must be at least a page in length; I have plenty of short ones. I notice the organist at the Trianon Theatre, Birmingham, Alabama, gave his synopsis of music for the first and third reels of "Judith of Bethulia." Below I will give you my synopsis for the second and fourth reels.

Judith of Bethulia.

Reel Second.

(1.) (Assyrians storm walls.) Storm scene and last Allegro from William Tell overture.
(2.) Hawkes' melodramatic music Nos 11 and 12, until "Yet Holorfernes Took Council."
(3.) "Rosamond Overture," (andante) until "Vision Came from the Lord."
(4.) "Melody of Peace" (by Carroll) until "She Put on Garments of Gladness."
(5.) "Romantic Overture" (allegro).

Fourth Reel.

(6.) "Vision of Salome" until "Let Me Be Thine Handmaid."
(7.) "Apache Waltz" (Offenbach). "Sunshine and Showers" overture. "King Mydas" overture until "Runs Out to Battle."
(8.) "Light Cavalry Overture" until prayer by inhabitants.
(9.) "Christmas Song" until joyfulness.
(10.) Priests March—"Athalia" until end of reel.

It has been some time since I saw this picture and some of the details have slipped my mind. For that reason I am not sure whether the stopping cues for Nos. 8 and 9 are titles or "business cues." I took it for granted that "prayer by inhabitants" and "joyfulness" referred to the action of the characters and not to the "leaders" (or titles), and am giving them in that form. Mr. Montgomery's writing is plain enough, but we lay out our programs a trifle differently. Many thanks for the program. We will be glad to hear from you again. As for the list of numbers for which you so kindly offer to send titles, I cannot include a catalog of music in my page, though I don't mind inserting a few once in a while. You might mention some more in the next program you send; I'm sure the constituents would be glad to know them.

"An Up-to-Date-Outfit."

You may call it an up-todate drummer's outfit or a drummer's up-to-date outfit, or both. This communication is from Charles C. Moore, whose sub-title is "The Progressive Drummer," at present located at the Stroud Theatre, Stroudsburg, Pennsylvania:

After reading the Moving Picture World for many years I have decided to say a word to my brother musicians. My outfit, illustrated on this page, is considered by expert critics to be one of the most complete line of effects in the moving picture field today.

One great effect in particular is the way I produce my whistle effect. It took me many months of hard thinking to accomplish this. An ordinary drum of compressed air, an air gauge, a few feet of quarter-inch pipe, and you will have the greatest effect for train or steamboat whistles of today. My electric bells, buzzers, telegraph, wireless and other electric effects are all worked direct from the current of the theatre. These are only a few of the many effects I have planned and made myself. I consider the effect business an art by itself, and if worked perfectly, the most interesting work in moving pictures.

Managers have asked me what make of bells I am using. Why, Deagan's Parsifal bells (resonator) the finest toned instrument on the market. I thank the Moving Picture World for this page devoted to music and effects for pictures, and hope other musicians will find this item of interest as I have found others on this page.

Mr. Moore is to be commended for his ingenuity. I don't understand how he charges his compressed air drum. Wm. E. King of the Orpheum Theatre, Chicago, has used compressed air in producing effects for six or eight years, but his apparatus is run by an electric motor which keeps the drum charged to a certain pressure, with automatic supply and shut-off. I can endorse the compressed air drum as a means for producing a large number of effects in addition to those mentioned by Mr. Moore, and believe our readers will agree he has earned his right to the title, "The Progressive Drummer."

An Expert Team.

One who signs himself "A Motion Picture Critic and Musician" writes enthusiastically about a pianist and drummer he heard in the Gem Theatre, Leominster, Mass. The letter is much too long for insertion, being a general though not detailed description of the manner in which the team in question accompanied a war picture (name of picture not mentioned). He says: "Being so interested in their remarkable work I would like to give them credit, and am forwarding their names for that reason. The pianist, Mr. Ernest Johnson, of Leominster, and the drummer, Mr. Elmer R. Wood, of Clinton, Mass., are experts in accompanying motion pictures, and if my travels should ever take me in that vicinity I hope to hear them again."

Exhibitors News

Interesting Information Concerning Moving Picture Men Gathered By Moving Picture World Correspondents Everywhere.

KENTUCKY.

LOUISVILLE exhibitors generally are complaining of slack business at this time, a condition attributed to the hot weather, which makes it difficult to keep the theaters comfortable. Last week a few cool days helped matters considerably but a return of sizzling temperatures has cut the attendance sharply. Afternoon business has been hurt the most, according to the managers of the leading houses, who say that though they are doing something they are not up to last season's record.

H. B. Strube, proprietor of the Empire theater, on East Market street, Louisville, took advantage of a quiet week and ran up to Cincinnati for a few days. A race meeting is on at Latonia, which is across the river from Cincinnati, and while Mr. Strube quit bookmaking several years ago, he still enjoys seeing a good race now and then.

R. S. Shrader, manager of the Central Film Company, Louisville, has returned from a short trip to Indianapolis, which was made for both business and pleasure.

The Switow Amusement Company, of Louisville, has disposed of its holdings in the Switow Dream theater, at French Lick Springs, Ind., to Sloan & Luckett, who owned the building. The new management will continue the show.

Straining a point because of a precedent set by his predecessor, W. J. O'Sullivan, City Building Inspector of Louisville, granted a permit for the building of the new Broadway theater at Shelby and Broadway, that city. Although in his opinion the court spaces provided in the plans for the new theater are not so long as they should be, certain concessions made by the builders, according to Mr. O'Sullivan, offset his objections to the plans. The theater is to be erected by the Broadway Theater Company on the site occupied by the old Broadway theater, but in addition will cover another lot. When the plans were first submitted to the inspector he refused to grant a building permit. The Broadway Theater Company took the matter into court, with a view to compelling the inspector to grant the permit, and this suit will now be dropped. Mr. O'Sullivan said that his predecessor in office had placed a different construction on the building law than he did and that the fact a precedent had been set influenced him to recede from his original position.

The Engineers and Architects' Club, of Louisville, at a recent monthly meeting held in its club rooms in the Starks building, used a motion picture machine to show the laying of a natural gas high pressure pipe line into Louisville from West Virginia. The film made the reading of the paper on the subject very interesting and the club members were enthusiastic over the pictures.

W. C. Collins, of the Lyric theater, of Lawrenceburg, Ky., has sold his interests in the theater to Mrs. Hardie B. Ripy, of Lawrenceburg, who will continue the theater.

The Colonial theater, of Winchester, Ky., recently put in a number of highly geared oscillating electric fans to keep the public from becoming restless during the present warm weather.

Carpenter & Johnson, Louisville cameramen, are very busy on finishing up the pictures of the Kentucky Military Institute, located near Louisville. These pictures deal with every form of cadet life, from dressing in thirteen seconds flat to performances on the athletic field. The pictures are titled "Glimpses of Cadet Life at the Kentucky Military Institute, the Only School with a Florida Winter Home." One of the partners in the Carpenter & Johnson firm will go South this coming winter to take pictures of the Florida end of the school.

Hurley Brothers, of Morganfield, Ky., are remodeling the "Theatorium" which they took over fro mManager Davis thirty days ago. The house will be enlarged so as to seat 400 persons. It now seats 300 by crowding. Hurley Brothers own houses at Princeton and Providence, Ky., and Carmi, Ill., also, and have some other houses in view.

John Reardon, who formerly owned the Palace theater, of Louisville, has an option on a house at Elizabethtown, Ky., which he will probably take over shortly. The Palace, of Louisville, is said to be the only theater in the country which has free street car service to and from its doors. The theater is located near the end of the Shelby street car line, and the Louisville Railway Company operates a belt line to a populous district near the end of the main line. This belt line is operated free of charge, supposedly for the benefit of through passengers into and out from town. However, people use it generously in coming down to the picture show. In this way the house draws trade from a great deal larger area than otherwise would be touched. If the public had to pay car fare to come down, it would either come on into town, or stay at home in the majority of cases.

Dr. Bailey, of Greenville, Ky., has opened the Queen motion picture theater. This house has a capacity of 350 and was built outright. Dr. Bailey is a dentist and is too busy to take active part in the management of the business, which is in charge of his father, M. R. Bailey.

Jack Johnson, formerly operator at the Novelty theater, is handling a machine in the booth of the new Crescent theater in Crescent Hill. This theater was recently opened by Mrs. H. R. Whiteside, of Louisville.

Although the Retail Merchants' Association, of Louisville, is trying to form an arrangement whereby all of the downtown stores would be closed on Sunday, there has not been a word said concerning the motion picture shows, and it is thought that this branch of industry will be left alone as far as Louisville is concerned. Out through the state, however, there is a good deal of talk concerning Sunday closing and in a number of places the theaters have been forced to close.

The Crown theater, of Louisville, which is located at Seventh and Oak streets, has been an unusually good proposition for a small house, and gets a steady run of business the whole season round. This theater recently showed "Judith of Bethulia" and the Kathlyn series.

H. W. Jennings, manager of the Bijou theater, of Paducah, Ky., has purchased a new Powers 6 A machine, which is now being operated by Charles B. Houston, said to be the best operator in Paducah.

E. K. Lyons, proprietor of the Grand and Columbia motion picture houses, of Frankfort, Ky., recently announced that he expected to make some decided improvements shortly. He recently had eighteen oscillating wall fans placed in the Columbia.

Fred Sheldon, of the Warner Feature Film Company, recently returned from a trip to the central part of the state, where he visited several towns. S. B. Kramer, the general manager from Indianapolis, was recently in to see Mr. Sheldon.

A. Maluf, manager of the Lion Opera House, of Glasgow, Ky., was in Louisville recently, buying supplies for the house.

Rowland Clark, who operates the Alamo, at Lebanon, Ky., and several small shows out in the state, was recently in Louisville, calling on the film men.

G. D. CRAIN, JR.

IOWA.

IOWA Y. M. C. A. officials have been asked to give their opinions on a federal board of censorship. J. H. Fellingham, secretary of the Des Moines association, does not believe that a hard and fast censorship will accomplish any more than the helpful criticisms of the present board of censorship.

Thomas Knutson has purchased the Royal theater at West Union from C. S. Dewey and assumed possession.

The Grand theater at Lake City is being enlarged, the improvements including a stage upon which vaudeville will be used to supplement the moving picture program.

The Pythian Building Company at Eldora has awarded the contract for the construction of its new building, the lower floor of which will be used as a moving picture theater.

D. E. Fycock has sold the World theater at Storm Lake to J. M. Russell, owner of the building in which it is located.

James Brown has sold the Majestic theater at Bloomfield to C. C. Cackler of Ottumwa, who has assumed possession. The house has been under lease to C. F. Leach for several months.

F. J. Hemminger, of Clinton, is now manager of the Parkside theater in that city, succeeding Henry Luhr of Chicago.

Brown & Anderson will continue to operate the Princess theater in Boone during the summer months, in addition to their new Airdome theater, which has been opened at Seventh and Keeler streets with vaudeville and pictures. The Airdome has been remodeled.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

ILLINOIS.

A MAID in charge of the ladies' waiting room, and the passing of ice water among the patrons are operating features that have been adopted by the Princess, the newest moving picture house in Springfield.

P. C. Hiser is contemplating the erection of a vaudeville and moving picture theater, seating 800, at Lexington. It will be of reinforced concrete and brick veneer, 60x135 feet. Two reels of pictures three or four vaudeville acts and a windup of one reel of pictures will be the program policy with prevailing prices of 10 and 15 cents. It is proposed to have removable seats and use the house for dances.

Two days at the Kozy theater in Galesburg were devoted to benefit performances for the street railway employees of the city.

William B. Jones of Mt. Vernon, Ind., has purchased the picture show of John Dietz on Main Street at Carmi. The new owner has made a number of changes in the physical appearance of the house.

The fixtures of the Barrison theater at Waukegan, including the motion picture equipment, were sold at sheriff's sale June 19. The house at one time was the leading theater in Waukegan and played many of the high-grade shows.

Mrs. Peter Lind has resigned her position as musical director at the Kimmell theater in Cairo, and accepted a similar position at the Bijou theater, which was purchased recently by her husband.

I. L. Rosenfeld has opened an airdome at Taylor Springs, near Hillsboro. In bad weather his moving picture theater will be used for the shows.

E. Berger has opened an airdome, showing moving pictures, at Fourth Avenue and Ninth Street in Moline. His place will seat 450 persons.

The Industrialogue Company of Chicago has been incorporated with a capital stock of $10,000 to deal in picture machines etc. The incorporators are Leo J. Doyles, Leroy Hackett and John T. Evans.

Phillip Buraker, of Havana, long connected with moving picture shows, and Mrs. Buraker, planned an automobile trip to Denver, Col. Buraker is said to be seeking a location for a photoplay house in the west.

Manager F. H. Gard of the Princess theater at Watseka recently introduced some vaudeville features into his moving picture house.

The Keystone Kops have become so well known that the Rock Island Argus protests the action of the city in buying a two-seated automobile for the police department on the ground that, when filled, the rig will look like the comedy moving picture officers.

A benefit night for the Boy Scout movement was given at the Bijou Theater in Waukegan.

Petitions, signed by a hundred residents of Cullom, asking that moving picture shows be permitted to operate on Sunday, have been presented to the village board there.

The Baker-Dodge Amusement Company of Keokuk, Ia., has taken a lease on the Auditorium, the largest theater in Galesburg and will make it a photoplay house. Dramatic and musical attractions will not be barred, but pictures will be the principal thing, at least until next fall. Walter West will be the local representative for the company.

Motion pictures of "Joliet Beautiful," recently made in the Prison City were shown at the Colonial theater (in Joliet), to good business.

Notice of foreclosure on the Ottawa theater at Ottawa, on a claim held by C. E. Hook, as trustee, has been filed in court.

The pictures taken of the Flag Day celebration in Joliet were shown at the Princess and Crystal Stairs theaters in that city. Manager Rubens of the Princess resurrected the films of the same event two years ago and showed them also.

The Monarch theater, Ninth street and North Grand avenue, East in Springfield has added an amateur night to its program.

Charles Purvis is giving his moving picture show at Odin in an airdome this summer.

Oliver Hurley, proprietor of the Main theatorium at Carmi, is having a new front placed in his house and is making a number of other important changes.

The Royal theater at Monmouth announces that Henry A. Jackson, the new musical director, will render a beautiful solo and a popular rag in the spotlight at each performance.

Special films were run at a benefit given at the Colonial Airdome, Fourteenth Street and Illinois Avenue, East St. Louis, for the Pure Milk and Ice Fund of East St. Louis under the auspices of the Womens' Civic Federation.

Peter Wales is now giving moving picture shows every Saturday night at Milledgeville.

"The War Bonnett Round Up," five reels, filmed some time ago at Idaho Falls, Idaho, was an attraction that brought good business to the Bell theater at Cuba.

The beginning of the photoplay era at the Haish Auditorium in DeKalb, was marked by a free performance, Manager Fox, taking this method of advertising the program which he intends to offer for five cents this summer.

A special showing of the film "A Boy and the Law" was given at the Evanston theater in Evanston, for the benefit of a number of persons who are interested in the problem of saving the boys. This story was written by Judge Willis Brown of the Parental Court of Salt Lake City, Utah, as a sort of answer to the challenge that the right kind of pictures for boys could not be produced and still interest the youngsters. It was filmed by the Youth company. The five reels tell an interesting story and also show the Boyville Farm at Salt Lake City. The Evanston spectators believe the film meritorious enough to recommend its wider circulation.

W. A. Forbes and B. W. Breese of Peoria are operating an airdome moving picture show in a tent at Princeville this summer. It will seat about 500 persons.

Manager Zinser has opened his airdome moving picture show at Roanoke.

Benefit performances for the baseball team were given at Dreamland theater in Kewanee, June 25 and 26.

The Airdome at Chillicothe has been leased by Paul W. Woodrow of the Peoria Theater Supply Company of Peoria.

When the Lyric theater at Greenville showed "Joseph in the Land of Egypt", the Christian Endeavor Society of the Christian church shared in the receipts.

Shortening the steps at the side exit for the benefit of the women with tight skirts was one of the improvements made to the Lyric at Winchester by Faul & Overton. The ventilation of the house has been improved and the seating capacity increased.

G. A. Palmer, who has opened the Airdome at Rochelle, has installed a new Powers 6 machine, and will use a good many moving pictures as well as stock companies and vaudeville.

Free moving pictures were on the program for the Fourth of July celebration at Winchester.

Bond & McClellen have sold the Gem moving picture theater at Grafton to Lewis & Osburn.

The Princess theater at Galia is conducting a baby show contest.

The Benton Republic has a new standard for rating villages. It remarks that evidently Hurst is going backward because "the movies have been cut down to Wednesday and Saturday of each week, instead of every night except Sunday."

The National Moving Picture Manufacturing Company of Chicago has amended its object and changed its name to the Telesign Company.

The Community Service and Film Bureau of Chicago has been incorporated with a capital stock of $2,500 to deal in films for moving pictures. The incorporators are Leo J. Doyle, Leory Hackett and John T. Evans.

Luman C. Mann was at his home town of Oak Park with his "Around the World in 90 Minutes" pictures. He apeared at the Oak Park theater.

Bernard Gooch has returned from Union City, Tenn., and has accepted a position at the Main Theatorium in Carmi.

Fred Krafft and Chris Streicher have purchased Curtt's moving picture theater on Main street in Savanna.

R. C. Schroeder, manager of the Colonials, at Galesburg, and his architect, recently were in Peoria getting ideas for the new moving picture theater to be erected for Schroeder.

Additional ground has been leased for the Scenic Theater at Bloomington and Manager Chris Jackson has made plans for an addition, made necessary by a demand for more seating capacity. MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

IN THE NORTHWEST.

OSSERBURG & Greenhow have re-opened the moving picture house in Lamar, Colo., which, prior to the departure of A. Zuercher, was operated as the Lyric. They have redecrated, with the following directors: J. Adam der the name of the Blue Mouse. The opening week was for the benefit of the Lamar band.

The moving pictures, "The Land of the Indian," taken at the Crow reservation in Montana, were of more than usual interest to the patrons of the Princess theater at Helena, Mont., and patronage was good.

The Beehive Film Company, which has filed articles of incorporation at Salt Lake City, Utah, plans to expend $15,000 in producing in moving pictures the story of the Book of Mormon. The capital stock is fixed at $15,000. The incorporators are Shirley Y. Clawson, vice-president; Charles R. Mabey, of Bountiful, treasurer, and Chester Y. Clawson, secretary. Additional directors are Rudger Clawson and Richard W. Young.

Manager Joseph George of the Dime theater, at Idaho Falls, Idaho, and others, promoted the taking of a series of pictures in Idaho Falls, Blackfoot, Pocatello and at American, Shoshone and Twin Falls. The pictures will be shown at the Dime some time in the future.

The Minnesota Development Association, which held a convention in Moorhead the latter part of June, has been contemplating the use of moving pictures for its development work. The first step was to arrange for taking pictures of the convention and some of the farms were visited by the members.

The new moving picture theater, which will open in the Slater building on Main street in Lewiston, Mont., sometime in September, under the management of John B. Ritch, will be known as the Myrtle. It will seat 500.

The Lyman H. Howe pictures were at the Tacoma theater in Tacoma, Wash., the week of June 21.

Sol Newberg has sold the Grand theater at Walker, Minn., to Hine & Naumann.

The management of the Lyric theater at Elendale, N. D., has let the contract for a new brick theater, seating 250, to be completed about the first of October.

Fred Pierre made arrangements for the removal of the Imperial theater to another building in Lewiston, Mont.

Everson, Wash., now has two moving picture shows. Charles Grell leased his opera house to a Seattle man and Ball's show, which had been operating in the Grell building, was moved to the Good Templars' hall.

William Strange has sold the Topic theater at Sandstone, Minn., to John Ingram.

Improvements aggregating $5,000 are being made to the Arcade theater on Washington street, between Sixth street and Broadway, in Portland, Ore.

Fred Whittier has opened a moving picture show at Farmington, Minn.

Charles S. Bovee is erecting a new building at Elk Point, S. D., to be used as a moving picture theater.

The Grand theater, at Pueblo, Colo., secured an attraction of much local interest in the films made of the business men of Pueblo and Colorado Springs on a sociability run to Galveston, Tex., and return.

The Star theater, at Hailey, Idaho, has secured the contract to furnish the moving picture shows for the Fourth of July celebration on July 4 and July 6, renting the theater to the committee for a dance and sharing in the profits of the picture shows to be given before the dances start.

The Olympia (Wash.) Chamber of Commerce has decided to have some films made of "The Olympian Oyster Industry" and Secretary H. L. Whiting has been negotiating with industrial companies.

"You Can't Help Laughing and You May Cry" is the way the Clemmer theater at Seattle, Wash., introduces a well-balanced comedy and dramatic bill.

The Baker theater, at Portland, Ore., has ended its stock season and gone over to pictures. "Samson" was the opening feature.

H. E. Briggs will erect a new moving picture theater at Perham, Minn.

E. H. Phillips will open a moving picture theater in Fallon, Mont.

The new Majestic theater, which has been opened in Pueblo, Colo., by Shepard Cutshaw, will be a standard five-cent house.

The Lyric and Odeum theaters, in Duluth, Minn., will be dismantled by the Brunswick Amusement Company and replaced by a modern moving picture theater, 50 by 125, with a seating capacity of 1,100. The structure, which will be fireproof, will cost about $25,000.

The Colonial Amusement Company, A. K. Pay, manager, has opened the new Colonial moving picture theater on Tenth street, between Phillips and Main avenues, in Sioux Falls, S. D. Nothing in the way of seating, exits, panic-proof locks, ventilation and decoration has been omitted, and the house, seating 650 on the main floor and 350 in the balcony, is distinctive in the Northwest. Four reels of pictures will be run daily. W. L. Telft is in charge of the projection and Miss Tensie Nelson will direct the music.

The Idle Hour theater, at Aberdeen, S. D., showed the Memorial Day films, which pictured nearly all the patriotic and fraternal societies of the city. This house is anxious to be known as "The Theater of Doors and Windows."

The fairy tale moving picture matinee at the Dale theater in St. Paul, Minn., was the last of the special shows given in that city for the children, under the auspices of the women's clubs. The plan will be taken up again with the return of cooler weather.

The Empress and the American theaters, at Butte, Mont., had special programs June 13, in observance of Miners' Union day.

W. M. Duke secured his license to operate an airdome at Tenth street and Hawthorne avenue in Minneapolis, Minn., subject to the approval of the aldermen of the ward.

O. W. Holden, of the Twin Cities, was recently at Grand Forks, N. D., where he made arrangements to make between 1,500 and 2,000 feet of film showing the advantages of living in Grand Forks.

E. A. Lippert, of Mankato, Minn., has sold the Pastime theater, at Le Sueur, Minn., to Mrs. Starky, of Northfield, Minn., who, with her son, an experienced operator, will conduct the house.

The Socialist Opera House at Virginia, Minn., has been leased by Frank Peterson, of International Falls, Minn., who operates the Unique and Viking theaters in that city. Although he will run stock in the Virginia house this summer, moving pictures will be used in connection.

O. D. Bloom, president of the Antler's Theater Company, of Roseburg, Ore., filed a petition in bankruptcy in the federal court at Portland. The company operated a theater in Roseburg, which was owned by the Elks.

Souvenirs of mirrors and coin purses were given to women patrons at the Gem theater, in Billings, Mont.

Pennants of various states were given to women patrons of the Bijou theater at Missoula, Mont., as an advertising stunt.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

MICHIGAN.

WILLIAM OHLS has purchased the Rex theater at Nashville, which he has been operating for William Wright of Charlotte.

Henry Kane, proprietor of the moving picture theater at Middleville, the next day after opening his house gave a free matinee for teachers and pupils of the public schools.

Paul R. Schlossman, moving picture exhibitor of Muskegon, recently furnished a five-reel performance at a fete on the lawn of the Muskegon Country Club.

The present Bijou Theater in Jackson will have a policy of vaudeville and pictures at ten cents, when the new Bijou is opened some time in August to start upon a career of tabloid musical comedies and vaudeville. Col. W. S. Butterfield recently was in Jackson looking over his properties.

S. Fraser has purchased the interest of his partner, Herbert Pickell, in the opera house at Durand.

The Majestic theater, at Belding, has been sold to F. H. and A. A. Northquist.

Announcement has been made by Manager J. B. Hunter of the Grand theater, of Jackson, that hereafter a three-reel show will be given for five cents.

"The Lineup at Police Headquarters" was the feature picture at the Majestic theater, in Grand Rapids, when the National Association of Police Chiefs was in convention there.

The Hamline Amusement Company of Hamline, Minn., and Grand Rapids, Mich., has been incorporated in Michigan with capital stock of $8,000.

The films showing the Reo automobile factory, the Knights Templar parade and other Lansing scenes, ran an entire week at the Orpheum theater in Lansing.

John Peterson has opened his new moving picture theater at Sheridan street and Columbus avenue in Bay City.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

WISCONSIN.

THE city council at Evansville turned down a proposition to charge a license fee for moving picture theaters and bowling alleys. The mayor's vote decided in favor of the photoplay men.

Free moving picture shows are being conducted this summer at Ravenna Park, at Milwaukee.

An agitation for a board of censorship for moving pictures has been begun in La Crosse.

Andrew Haben has sold the Rex theater, in Main street, in Oshkosh, to the New Peoples Theater Company. The new owners will enlarge the house, increasing the seating capacity, and will operate it as a high-class moving picture theater. It is probable that the name of the house will be changed. The plan for erecting a new photoplay theater on State street, by the company, probably will be held in abeyance, as the result of the acquisition of the Rex.

It is announced that the press agent of the Davidson got 11,250 words into the Milwaukee papers during the run of "Traffic in Souls."

Mrs. Florence Jones, lessee of the Colonial theater at Waukesha for the last year, has taken over the New theater, a photoplay house on Broadway, in that city, which has been under lease to John Hurley, of Milwaukee, for the last year. She has assumed charge and installed people from her own organization.

Jacob Schlicht has been made manager of the Sheboygan Opera House, at Sheboygan, and Frank Jenks assistant manager.

The Firemen's Opera House Company, at Ellsworth, has purchased from Dixon Condon the moving picture show in the Temple Opera House.

A theater is included in the plans for a new building for which Julius Simon has purchased a site at Wells and Fourth streets, in Milwaukee..

The Colonial Amusement Company, of Milwaukee, has been incorporated with a capital stock of $35,000. The incorporators are W. F. Maertz, E. Lungemack and Ferdinand Schwalbe.

When the Women's Federated Clubs of Grand Rapids wanted to interest the residents of the city in the proposition of building a new river wall and wanted the best method of getting out a crowd to listen to their plan, they rented the Ideal theater, together with the film service, for a night and preceded the talks with a moving picture show.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

IN THE SOUTHWEST.

INTEREST in the exhibition of "Strongheart" at the Jueen theater in Dallas, Tex., was increased by a prize contest conducted by the management, in which $15 in gold was given for the two best papers on the question, "Should the Girl Marry Strongheart?" This house, which has been featuring its ticket books, puts a new twist into the summer advertising with: "$5 Worth of Keep-Cool Tickets for $4."

J. A. Lemke's new Airdome, in Waco, Tex., will be in the rear of the Crystal, his Austin street moving picture house, and one of the entrances will be through the theater, using the illuminations of that house for advertising purposes. The new airdome, which will seat 2,500, will cost about $10,000. In the winter time it will be used as a skating rink.

Terrell & Kirksey opened the Cozy theater at Alpine, Tex., the middle of June, and will give nightly picture shows.

H. A. Cartwright, who purchased the Happy Hour theater at Uvalde, Tex., has consolidated it with the Dreamland theater.

The Chamber of Commerce of Beaumont, Tex., has postponed the filming of that city, which was to have been done for advertising purposes.

The Shearer Amusement Company will erect an airdome on Commerce street in Lockhart, Tex.

The new Kansas law compelling the censorship of moving pictures will be tested in the United States Supreme Court. The suit brought by the Mutual Film Corporation against the state to test the act, the Mutual declaring it is unconstitutional, has been appealed by the consent of both parties to it and Judge Pollock.

Uncle Sam's soldiers on the border are partial to comedy films. A talented cavalryman made for the Crystal theater at Texas City, Tex., a cartoon slide, "Comedy Tomorrow—Tell the Army." It is said by the writer who saw it that the army was always told.

"The Air Can't Loiter" is a clever phrase used by Manager Wharton of the Lyric theater at Ottawa, Kan., to advertise his ventilation system.

G. A. Hunsaker has opened a new moving picture theater at Tonkawa, Okla.

Major Thomas J. Dickson, chaplain of the Sixth Field Artillery, took moving pictures of the Fourth Brigade of the United States Army, near Texas City, Tex.

Every Monday night is now "Gift Night" at the Airdome at St. Joseph, Mo.

Charles Dome has sold his moving picture show at Edmond Okla., to W. D. Thompson.

Alfred Gerlach has opened a moving picture theater at Cordell, Okla.

The Co-Operative Film & Supply Company, of Oklahoma City, Okla., has been incorporated with a capital stock of $25,000. The incorporators are W. T. Yoder, T. H. Dolph and O. McLane of Oklahoma City.

The Joyland Amusement Company of Little Rock, Ark., has been incorporated, with a capital stock of $25,000. The incorporators are J. W. Lippincott, president and treasurer; H. H. Newman, vice-president, and Carrie A. Lippincott, secretary.

Free tickets to the moving picture show at the Park theater in Hannibal, Mo., are given persons inserting want ads in the Courier Post.

Moving pictures will be used at the summer encampment schools of the Agricultural and Mechanical College of Oklahoma for educational, as well as for entertainment purposes. One of these encampments will be held in each supreme court judicial district.

J. G. Holland, until recently of De Land, Fla., who has taken a lease on the new photoplay theater being erected by O. D. Barnes at 118 East Douglas avenue, in Wichita, Kan., expects to have the house open by the middle of July. The theater will be 23 by 130 feet and will seat 550 persons. The front will be of stucco with mission effect.

Manager C. I. Howel of the Kansas Motion Picture Company took some good pictures at Wichita, Kan., securing timely views of the heavy influx of men for the harvest fields.

The receiver appointed by the court at Oklahoma City, Okla., for the Jennings Film Company was dismissed. Al J. Jennings, who secured the receivership in an endeavor to bring about the dissolution of the company, indicated that he would take an appeal of the case and depositions in the matter were taken.

The Colcord Airdome at Oklahoma City, Okla., has added another instrument to its orchestra and is featuring it as the Favorite Sextette.

The Crystal theater at Ottawa, Kan., gave a benefit for the local U. C. T., showing the Ottawa delegation and its band in moving pictures, which were taken at a state convention of the U. C. T. in Salina.

John Collins and J. F. Harrison have opened the Princess theater at Jonesboro, Ark. Daily matinees will be a feature. Vaudeville will be given the last three days of each week.

The Elite theater on South Main street in Trenton, Mo., has been re-opened by Mrs. Josie Brown, who formerly was connected with the management of the Gem theater.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

CINCINNATI.

THE way business is running in this part of the woods, largely, perhaps, as a result of the very pleasant weather which has prevailed lately, may be gathered from the fact that the feature department of the General Film Company at Cincinnati has business booked for the period between now and early September amounting to over $17,000. Manager Clinton of this department is rather proud of such an unusually fine showing, and is keeping hard at work in the hope of piling up an even larger total. In the meantime the office as a whole has been too busy to complete its proposed move into new quarters, which have been ready for it for several days. The move will be accomplished as soon as a lull comes.

J. M. Kaufman, secretary of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Gassipolis, Ohio, and C. J. Gross and Leon Berg, well-known exhibitors of Dayton, were among the visitors last week to the Cincinnati office of the Mutual Film Company, which is one of the general headquarters of motion picture men visiting in the city. Manager Hite reports a continuation of the excellent business which has been the rule with his branch for a long time, and is looking forward to one of the best summer seasons he has ever had. Assistant Manager Haynes went out on the road early last week in quest of bookings, his itinerary comprising numerous points in Kentucky and Indiana as well as in Ohio.

The Feature Film Amusement Company, as the enterprising exhibitors who have for some weeks been utilizing the Cincinnati National League park as an airdome, call themselves, has been drawing increasingly large audiences lately, with the increasing warmth of the weather, Mary Pickford in "Tess of the Storm Country," one of her best roles, bringing a record-breaking crowd on several nights last week. The grandstand, of course, is well covered, and the screen on which the pictures are shown is also provided with shelter, so that rain cannot interfere with the exhibitions. So far, however, there has been no trouble with rain, the principal trouble with exhibitors for the most part being a lack of rain, which has tended toward hot weather; and the way of the ball park exhibitors, therefore, has been as smooth as they could wish.

Another step in the progress of the motion picture as an educational medium of high order was indicated recently in Cincinnati, when President Charles W. Dabney, of the University of Cincinnati, ordered a combined lantern, reflectiscope and projecting machine for use in the instruction of classes in the university. The machine will be used, it is announced, for the dissemination of industrial and vocational information by the graphc method, which has been recommended by leading educators. Dr. Dabney, moreover, has been instrumental in getting a number of colleges and schools in the Middle West interested in the formation of a bureau for the exchange of educational and scientific films and slides, which will guarantee the use of a large number of such subjects, and will at the same time be able to provide something like continuous service through the school year. A number of large industrial concerns, such as the Standard Oil Company, the National Lead Company, and others, will co-operate in the work, furnishing films showing their operations without charge. The lectures which will accompany the pictures will be free to the public and will start with the opening of the fall term of the university.

The city authorities of Cincinnati, recognizing the popularity of moving pictures as an entertainment medum, and following out their policy of doing all in their power for the amusement and instruction of the poorer classes, especially during the summer months, recently inaugurated a plan of showing a six-reel show in one of the parks free of charge, under the auspices of the board of park commissioners. The films shown, of course, were not of the latest, but the large crowd which took advantage of the free outdoor exhibition was not inclined to be critical, and apparently enjoyed things to the utmost. Free motion-picture exhibits will be given by the board at the various parks at intervals during the entire summer, it is announced.

Interest in the latest thing in serials, the Thanhouser production of "The Million-Dollar Mystery," stimulated to a high point by the clever advertising in the daily papers and other mediums used by the company, reached a climax last week, when the Monday Cincinnati Enquirer, issued on the day of the first exhibition of the first installment, contained a full page advertisement, announcing the starting of the serial, with an outline of the various startling features which it contains, the offer of a cash prize of $10,000 for the best solution of the mystery, and a list of the theaters in and around Cincinnati which will show the series. These are as follows: The Dolly Varden, the Mermaid, the Americus, the Nordland Plaza, the Orpheum, the Queen Anne, the Avenue, the Alhambra, the Glenway, the Twin City, the Pleasem, the Arcade, the Temple (Newport) and the Lyric (Covington). With the interest certain to follow the prize offer, the stars who will be featured in the series and the number of theaters running the installments, "The Million-Dollar Mystery" bids fair to break records in this latest department of film production.

In its campaign to bring the next convention of the International Association of Rotary Clubs to Cincinnati, motion picture films depicting the city's chief industries and points of interest will be an important part of the ammunition of the Cincinnati delegation, which attended the gathering of the Rotarians at Houston. The Cincinnati Club is the largest in the world, and with this distinction and the aid of the most graphic means possible of showing the attractions of the Queen City, the local delegation is hopeful of landing the prize.

The Colonial theater, of Dayton, Ohio, has just completed new decorations which are peculiarly appropriate for the summer months, the lobby representing an ice cave, whose very appearance makes one cool. Drops representing snow and ice are hung from the ceiling and sides of the entrance, while the floor inside is similarly decorated, the floors being covered with white cloth, in imitation of snow. An excellent ventilation system, and the liberal use of electric fans, will aid in making the temperature of the house all that its appearance indicates, and the large audiences which are attending its offerings of vaudeville and moving pictures attest to the success of the device.

The Ohio Motion Picture Company, recently incorporated with a capital stock of $10,000 by W. S. Paxson, Charles Long and Bert H. Long, of Cincinnati, the first of whom is president, the second vice-president and the last named secretary and treasurer, is making preparations for the execution of an ambitious program of production and feature-handling, to begin in the fall. The company has already made arrangements for complete and exclusive rights to a pair of six-reel productions, one American and the other foreign, according to Julius G. Reeder, the active manager of the business. Mr. Reeder, after a stay of some weeks in Kentucky, where he was handling the booking of the Rainey African hunt pictures on behalf of the company, has come to Cincinnati, where its headquarters will be located, and will hereafter travel out of this city. He will shortly make a trip covering the larger cities of the state, for the purpose of investigating conditions preliminary to the company's campaign for business later on.

The Orpheum theater, of Hillsboro, Ohio, presented to its patrons last week one of the best and largest productions seen in that town recently, Helen Gardner's "A Princess of Bagdad," featuring that beautiful picture star, being the offering. The prices were placed at ten and fifteen cents for the occasion, but the attractiveness of this six-reel production was such that the attendance was unusually heavy, instead of falling off.

The Royal theater, owned at Marion, Ohio, by J. A. Braden, was recently completely remodeled and redecorated, and a new front put in, the first hot spell of the summer season odering an opportunity for this work, and giving Mr. Braden a chance to fit his theater for an active summer campaign. A new ticket booth was built in the center of the front, and a new exit added to those in the front, being cut in the east side of the building. The interior was repainted and papered and a new ventilating system installed, which, with the liberal use of electric fans, make the house one of the most comfortable in the city. A pair of new Edison projecting machines are a part of the new equipment added to the theater, the use of which will enable shows to proceed without interruption by the changing of reels.

The Arena airdome is one of the newest of the houses opened in Marion, Ohio, being recently completed for the summer season, and starting off with fair-sized audiences. Vaudeville is to be a feature of the performances, combined with a new daily program of motion pictures. The place is up-to-date in every respect, being well lighted by electricity and offering a cool place for an evening's entertainment. Soft drinks are served, making an additional attraction.

The management of La Max theater, at Wilmington, Ohio, has adopted the plan of advertising its coming attractions for ten days in advance, giving the date and name of each feature to be shown, and featuring the names of popular stars. The plan has been found to work admirably, as patrons are in this way enabled to make a note of productions which they wish to see, and to make their arrangements to attend accordingly. The "Lucille Love" series is one of the regular attractions at this house, and is reported to be drawing nicely.

Gene Gauntier in "A Fight for a Birthright," was the feature last week at the Gem, at Sandusky, Ohio, where large audiences have been the rule. The location of the city is such that hot weather is rare, and the exhibitors, therefore, find that business is quite as good in summer as in the winter, if not better, the large number of summer visitors giving an additional element to draw upon for audiences.

CASEY.

(Continued on page 320.)

Calendar of Licensed Releases

Current Releases

MONDAY, JULY 5th, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—Eva the Cigarette Girl (Comedy)
—The Boiler Maker's Day of Rest (Comedy)
EDISON—Her Spanish Cousins (Comedy)
KALEM—The Weakling (Third of the Alice Joyce Series—Special—Two parts—Drama)
PATHE—The Heart and the Circulation of the Blood (Biology)
—Modes of Travel in Japan (Manners and Customs)
SELIG—Reporter Jimmie Intervenes (Special—Two parts—Drama)
SELIG—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 37 (News)
VITAGRAPH—The False and the True (Drama)

TUESDAY, JULY 7th, 1914.

CINES—Heirloom (Special—Two parts—Drama)
EDISON—Face to Face (Seventh of "The Man Who Disappeared" Series—Drama)
ESSANAY—A Night with a Million (Comedy-Drama)
KALEM—Kaintucky Bill (Drama)
LUBIN—Fooling Fanny's Father (Comedy)
—While Auntie Bounced (Comedy)
MELIES—A Discolored Romance (Comedy)
PATHE—A Tiger Hunt (Indo-China—Scenic)
—The Ice and Snow (Drama)
SELIG—Algie's Sister (Comedy)
VITAGRAPH—The Moonstone of Fez (Special—Two parts—Drama)

WEDNESDAY, JULY 8th, 1914.

EDISON—Andy Has a Toothache (Eighth of the "Andy" Series—Comedy)
ESSANAY—A Boarding House Scramble (Comedy)
KALEM—A String of Pearls (Special—Two parts—Drama)
LUBIN—The Incompetent (Special—Two parts—Drama)
MELIES—The Hole in the Wall (Drama)
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly No. 44, 1914 (News)
SELIG—Caryl of the Mountains (Drama)
VITAGRAPH—Doctor Smith's Baby (Comedy)

THURSDAY, JULY 9th, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—A Romance of Pueblo (Comedy-Drama)
ESSANAY—Slippery Slim, Diplomat (Comedy)
LUBIN—The Debt (Special—Two parts—Drama)
MELIES—Good Fortune's Tardy Smile (Comedy)
—A Royal Survivor (Special—Two parts—Drama)
SELIG—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 38 (News)
VITAGRAPH—Prosecution (Drama)

FRIDAY, JULY 10th, 1914.

EDISON—In the Shadow of Disgrace (Special—Two parts—Drama)
ESSANAY—Night Hawks (Special—Two parts—Drama)
KALEM—Rube the Interloper (Comedy)
—In Old England (Topical)
LUBIN—The Tribunal of Conscience (Drama)
SELIG—Did She Cure Him? (Comedy)
VITAGRAPH—The Vases of Hymen (Comedy)

SATURDAY, JULY 11th, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—Primitive Model (Drama)
EDISON—Dolly at the Helm (Eleventh of "The Active Life of Dolly of the Dailies"—Drama)
ESSANAY—Broncho Billy and the Sheriff (Drama)
KALEM—Lame Dog's Treachery (Drama)
LUBIN—How He Lost his Trousers (Comedy)
—Mandy's Chicken Dinner (Comedy)
MELIES—A Friend's Forgiveness (Special—Two parts—Drama)
SELIG—His Fight (Drama)
VITAGRAPH—Lillians' Dilemma (Special—Two parts—(Comedy)

Advance Releases

MONDAY, JULY 13th, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—That Boy from the Poor House (Drama)
EDISON—Qualifying for Lena (Comedy)
ESSANAY—Sweedie the Swatter (Comedy)
KALEM—A Diamond in the Rough (Special—2 parts—Drama)
PATHE—A Russian Boer Hunt (Hunting)
—The Wine Industry, Marsala (Travel)
SELIG—The Wilderness Mail (Special—Two parts—Drama)
SELIG—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 39 (News)
VITAGRAPH—The Soul of Luigi (Drama)

TUESDAY, JULY 14th, 1914.

CINES—Rival Actresses (Special—Two parts—Drama)
EDISON—The Two Doctors (Drama)
ESSANAY—At the Foot of the Hill (Drama)
KALEM—Accused (Drama)
LUBIN—He Was Bad (Comedy)
—Tough Luck (Comedy)
MELIES—Rags and Patriotism (Comedy)
PATHE—(Title Not Reported)
SELIG—An Egyptian Princess (Comedy)
VITAGRAPH—Fogg's Millions (Special—Two parts—Drama)

WEDNESDAY, JULY 15th, 1914.

EDISON—The Ever-Gallant Marquis (Comedy)
—An Up-to-Date Courtship (Comedy)
ESSANAY—The Fable of "Napoleon and the Bumps" (Comedy)
KALEM—The Express Messenger (Special—Two parts—Drama)
LUBIN—Codes of Honor (Special—Two parts—Drama)
MELIES—Justly Punished (Drama)
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly, No. 45, 1914 (News)
SELIG—His Last Appeal (Special—Two parts—Drama)
VITAGRAPH—The Arrival of Josie (Comedy)

THURSDAY, JULY 16th, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—The Prospectives (Drama)
ESSANAY—Snakeville's New Waitress (Comedy)
LUBIN—The Cross of Crime (Special—Two parts—Drama)
MELIES—(Title Not Reported)
SELIG—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 40 (News)
VITAGRAPH—The Little Captain (Drama)

FRIDAY, JULY 17th, 1914.

EDISON—Meg O' the Mountains (Special—Two parts—Drama)
ESSANAY—His Stolen Fortune (Special—Two parts—Drama)
KALEM—Wanted an Heir (Comedy)
LUBIN—The Lie (Drama)
SELIG—Wggs Takes the Rest Cure (Drama)
VITAGRAPH—Pigs Is Pigs (Comedy)

SATURDAY, JULY 18th, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—It Was Some Party (Comedy)
—Some Decorations (Comedy)
EDISON—Across the Burning Trestle (Drama)
ESSANAY—Broncho Billy Puts One Over (Drama)
KALEM—The Fate of a Squaw (Drama)
LUBIN—She Wanted to Know (Comedy)
—All for Love (Comedy)
MELIES—(Title Not Reported)
SELIG—The Squatters (Drama)
VITAGRAPH—The Song of the Ghetto (Special—Two parts Drama)

INEXPENSIVE AND ATTRACTIVE!
Beautiful and durable. ornamental as well as useful. POSTER FRAMES. Write for illustrations and special prices.
AMERICAN SLIDE & POSTER CO., First National Bank Bldg., Chicago

KLAW & ERLANGER

PRESENTING

Well-known Plays in MOTION PICTURES

PRODUCED IN

BIOGRAPH STUDIOS

Proclaimed by Exhibitors

PROGRAM HEADLINERS

THE FATAL WEDDING
IN THREE PARTS

STRONGHEART
IN THREE PARTS

CLASSMATES
IN FOUR PARTS

LORD CHUMLEY
IN FOUR PARTS

THE BILLIONAIRE
IN THREE PARTS

SEVEN DAYS
IN THREE PARTS

WOMAN AGAINST WOMAN
IN THREE PARTS

BOOKED THROUGH GENERAL FILM COMPANY EXCLUSIVELY

Special Photographs and two styles of one and three sheet posters and three styles of eight sheet posters available

Calendar of Independent Releases

Universal Film Mfg. Co.

SUNDAY, JULY 5, 1914.

ECLAIR—The Greatest of These (Drama)
FRONTIER—The Broken Barriers (Drama)
REX—On the Rio Grande (Western—Drama)

MONDAY, JULY 6, 1914.

IMP—The Lady of the Island (Two parts—Drama)
STERLING—Billy's Vacation (Comedy)
VICTOR—At Mexico's Mercy (Western—Drama)

TUESDAY, JULY 7, 1914.

CRYSTAL—Nearly a Stepmother (Comedy)
GOLD SEAL—Lucille Love, the Girl of Mystery, Series No. 13 (Two Parts—Drama)
UNIVERSAL IKE—The Triangle Marriage (Comedy)

WEDNESDAY, JULY 8, 1914.

ECLAIR—Duty (Two parts—Drama)
JOKER—Bess the Detectress, or, The Dog Watch (Comedy)
NESTOR—A Ranch Romance (Western—Drama)
UNIVERSAL—Animated Weekly, No. 122 (News

THURSDAY, JULY 9, 1914.

IMP—The Old Rag Doll (Drama)
REX—When Fate Disposes (Two parts—Drama)
STERLING—Snookee's Flirtation (Comedy)

FRIDAY, JULY 10, 1914.

NESTOR—The Great Universal Mystery (Comedy)
POWERS—Passing the Love of Womeln (Drama)
VICTOR—A Beggar Prince of India (Three parts—Drama)

SATURDAY, JULY 11, 1914.

"101" BISON—Prowlers of the Wild (Two parts—Drama)
JOKER—Love, Roses and Trousers (Comedy)

SUNDAY, JULY 12, 1914.

ECLAIR—Willy Walrus and the Parisians (Comedy)
—Lily as Little Mother (Comedy)
FRONTIER—The Fight in Lonely Gulch (Drama)

MONDAY, JULY 13, 1914.

IMP—When the World Was Silent (Two parts—Drama)
STERLING—Almost Married (Comedy)
VICTOR—Out of the Valley (Western Drama)

TUESDAY, JULY 14, 1914.

CRYSTAL—Vivian's Four Beaus (Comedy)
—What Pearl's Pearls Did (Comedy)
GOLD SEAL—Lucille Love, the Girl of Mystery (Series No. 14) (Two parts—Drama)
UNIVERSAL IKE—The New Cook (Comedy)

WEDNESDAY, JULY 15, 1914.

ECLAIR—Renunciation (Two parts—Western Drama)
JOKER—Willy Walrus and the Awful Confession (Comedy)
NESTOR—Her Grave Mistake (Western Drama)
UNIVERSAL—Animated Weekly, No. 123 (News)

THURSDAY, JULY 16, 1914.

IMP—Universal Boy (Series No. 1—Comedy)
REX—The Sob Sister (Two parts—Drama)
STERLING—Love and Lunch (Comedy)

FRIDAY, JULY 17, 1914.

NESTOR—When Eddie Went to the Front (Comedy)
POWERS—The Severed Hand (Three parts—Drama)
VICTOR—The Panama-Pacific Exposition Up-to-Date (Top. and Edu.)

SATURDAY, JUJLY 18, 1914.

"101" BISON—A Mexican Spy in America (Two Parts—Drama)
JOKER—His Wife's Family (Comedy)

Mutual Film Corporation

SUNDAY, JULY 5, 1914.

KOMIC—"Bill," No. 1 (Comedy)
MAJESTIC—The Angel of Contention (Two parts—Drama)
THANHOUSER—The Cooked Goose (Comedy)

MONDAY, JULY 6, 1914.

AMERICAN—Cameo of the Yellowstone (Two parts—Drama)
KEYSTONE—(Title not yet announced)
RELIANCE—Our Mutual Girl, No. 25 (News)

TUESDAY, JULY 7, 1914.

BEAUTY—The Other Train (Drama)
MAJESTIC—The Only Clue (Drama
THANHOUSER—Bevorah (Two parts—Drama)

WEDNESDAY, JULY 8, 1914.

AMERICAN—Feast and Famine (Drama)
BRONCHO—The Final Reckoning (Two parts—Drama)
RELIANCE—How Izzy Was Saved (Comedy)

THURSDAY, JULY 9, 1914.

DOMINO—The Curse of Humanity (Two Parts—Drama)
KEYSTONE—(Title not yet announced)
MUTUAL WEEKLY—Number 79 (News)

FRIDAY, JULY 10, 1914.

KAY BEE—The Feud of Beaver Creek (Two parts—Drama)
PRINCESS—The Girl of the Seasons (Comedy)

SATURDAY, JULY 11, 1914.

KEYSTONE—(Title not yet announced)
RELIANCE—Blue Pete's Escape (Two Parts—Drama)
ROYAL—Mistakes Will Happen (Comedy)

SUNDAY, JULY 12, 1914.

KOMIC—Wrong All Around (Comedy)
MAJESTIC—A City Beautiful (2 parts—Drama)
THANHOUSER—The Leaven of Good (Drama)

MONDAY, JULY 13, 1914.

AMERICAN—The Lure of the Sawdust (2 parts—Drama)
KEYSTONE—(Title Not Given)
RELIANCE—Our Mutual Girl No. 26 (News)

TUESDAY, JULY 14, 1914.

BEAUTY—The Joke on Jane (Comedy)
MAJESTIC—The Old Derelict (Drama)
THANHOUSER—The Substitute (2 parts—Drama)

WEDNESDAY, JULY 15, 1914.

AMERICAN—Youth and Art (Drama)
BRONCHO—Shorty Turns Judge (2 parts—Drama)
RELIANCE—How Izzy Stuck to His Post (Comedy-drama)

THURSDAY, JULY 16, 1914.

DOMINO—Star of the North (2 parts—Drama)
KEYSTONE—(Title Not Given)
MUTUAL WEEKLY—Number 81 (News)

FRIDAY, JULY 17, 1914.

KAY-BEE—The City (2 parts—Drama)
PRINCESS—(Title Not Given)
THANHOUSER—A Gentleman for a Day (Comedy)

SATURDAY, JULY 18, 1914.

KEYSTONE—(Title Not Given)
RELIANCE—The Vengeance of Gold (2 parts—Drama)
ROYAL—The New Housekeeper (Comedy)

Simplex Projectors

Recognized by 90% of the film manufacturers as the

ACME OF { MECHANICAL PERFECTION
PERFECT PROJECTION

Good photoplays deserve and are perfectly projected wherever Simplex machines are used

PROMINENT OHIO INSTALLATIONS

National Cash Register Co.
Ohio State Penitentiary
Ohio State University
Ohio Board of Censors

In the City of Columbus, there are

32 Simplex Projectors
16 .....
7 .....
3 .....
8 .....

Competition Reveals Simplex Superiority

See the Simplex at the Dayton Convention, Space 29, Memorial Hall, Week of July 6th.

Our Representatives will take pleasure in showing you its salient features.

If you cannot attend, send for our new Catalogue A

MADE AND GUARANTEED BY

THE PRECISION MACHINE CO. INC.

317 East 34th St. New York

The Box Office Attraction Company

WILLIAM FOX, President

BIGGEST FEATURE HOUSE IN AMERICA

Department of State Rights

The Box Office Attraction Company now controls the continental rights—North and South America and all islands adjacent thereto—of five great manufacturers of motion pictures. Sixteen productions, embracing twelve all-American three reel features, a variety of one and split-reel comedies, and four European masterpieces, have already been disposed of on the state rights basis in Washington, Oregon, California, Idaho, Nevada, Utah, Arizona, Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Indian Territory, Texas, Arkansas, Louisiana and Canada.

We Keep Everything East of the Mississippi

The entire territory east of the Mississippi will be reserved for The Box Office Attraction Company and exchanges will be opened at once in all cities recognized as distributing points where offices are not now maintained. Among these important centers of population will be Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Washington, Atlanta, Detroit, St. Louis, Kansas City, Des Moines, Minneapolis, Dallas and Chicago.

Buyers of State Rights in all territories not disposed of are requested to communicate with us at once. Special terms to those in a position to handle all the film we control.

The Box Office Attraction Company

BIGGEST FEATURE HOUSE IN AMERICA

130 WEST FORTY-SIXTH ST., NEW YORK

The Box Office Attraction Company

WILLIAM FOX, President

BIGGEST FEATURE HOUSE IN AMERICA

Exchange Department

One Hundred Great Crowd-Drawing, Money-Making Features Now Being Booked. All three and four reelers, with the exception of "Fantomas," "The False Magistrate," "St. Elmo" and "East Lynne," which run from five to six reels.

Exclusive neighborhood rights go with each feature.

Special rates during the summer on entire seven-day-a-week programs for indoor and open air exhibitors.

Prompt and Efficient Service Guaranteed

We handle New York State, Northern New Jersey and Connecticut from the home office and our Syracuse branch. The remainder of New England is booked from our Boston Exchange at 10 and 12 Piedmont Street.

Important Announcement to Exhibitors East of the Mississippi

The Box Office Attraction Company will open exchanges at once in Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Washington, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Detroit, Indianapolis, Atlanta, Chicago, St. Louis, Des Moines, Kansas City and Minneapolis, and all exhibitors in territories contiguous to those cities will be supplied with the superlative features that have made this company a predominant factor in the motion picture business.

The Box Office Attraction Company

BIGGEST FEATURE HOUSE IN AMERICA

130 WEST FORTY-SIXTH ST., NEW YORK

ANNOUNCEMENT!

After considerable expense and
Much preparation we offer
Exhibitors American Comedies as our Regular Tuesday single reel release
If this venture meets with approval
Certain other releases will be of American Production in the Near future.

Commence with the June 30th release
ONE SUIT OF CLOTHES and
Make your exchange furnish you with
Each of our new AMERICAN COMEDIES
Don't allow them to put you off
If you can use our films and your Exchange does not supply you
Send us word.

RELEASES AS USUAL

Singles	Multiples
TUESDAY, COMEDY	THURSDAY, DRAMA
WEDNESDAY, DRAMA	SATURDAY
THURSDAY, COMEDY	COMEDY OR DRAMA

MELIES G FILMS

MR. EXHIBITOR

You Can't Go Wrong If In Need of Good Features Which Will Positively

BOOST BUSINESS

Don't Overlook These

THREE BIG ONES

THE CURSE OF GREED
IN
5 PARTS
ABOUNDING
IN TRYING ORDEALS

THE THUMB PRINT
IN
4 PARTS
A THRILLING
DETECTIVE DRAMA

'NEATH THE LION'S PAW
IN
3 PARTS
THE
GREATEST ANIMAL
DRAMA EVER ATTEMPTED
FOR FILM PORTRAYAL

Released Through The General Film Co.

MELIES G FILMS

Paramount Pictures

Get in touch with our distributor in your territory and

PARAMOUNT PICTU

For the Un

6 CASINO FEATURE FILM CO., Dime Bank Bldg., Detroit, Mich.—Michigan.

7 KANSAS CITY FEATURE FILM CO., Gaiety Theatre Bldg., Kansas City, Mo.—Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska and Iowa.

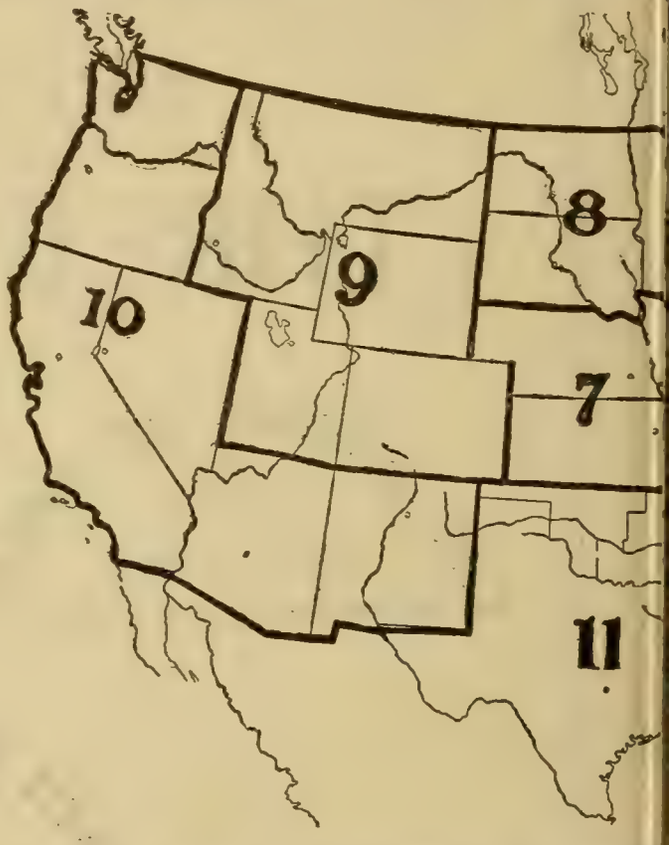
8 FAMOUS PLAYERS STAR FEATURE FILM SERVICE, Temple Court Building, Minneapolis, Minn.—North and South Dakota, Minnesota and Wisconsin.

9 NOTABLE FEATURE FILM CO., Boston Bldg., Salt Lake City, Utah, and Denver, Col.—Utah, Colorado, Montana, Wyoming and Idaho.

10 PROGRESSIVE MOTION PICTURE CO., three offices—Head office: 642 Pacific Bldg., San Francisco, Cal. Central Bldg., Seattle, Wash. Marsh-Strong Bldg., Los Angeles, Cal.—California, Oregon, Washington, Nevada, Arizona and New Mexico.

11 For the present communicate direct with New York office.

Our next announcement ductions for the quarter



PARAMOUNT PICTU

Paramount Pictures

110 West 40th Street

Telephone

Distributors of the Famous Players Film Co. Jesse L. Lasky

Paramount Pictures

And the cream of the world's market cure the finest motion pictures the world has ever seen

RES DISTRIBUTORS
ted States

ll give a list of pro-ginning September 1st

1 FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM CO. OF NEW ENGLAND, 31 Beach Street, Boston, Mass.—New England States: Massachusetts, Connecticut, Maine, Rhode Island, New Hampshire and Vermont.

2 WM. L. SHERRY FEATURE FILM CO., Inc., 126 West 46th Street, New York City—Greater New York and New York State.

3 FAMOUS PLAYERS EXCHANGE, 1331 Vine Street, Philadelphia, Pa., and 71 West 23rd Street, New York City—New Jersey, and Eastern Pennsylvania.

4 FAMOUS PLAYERS FEATURE CO., 28 West Lexington Street, Baltimore, Md.—Delaware, Maryland, Washington, D. C. and Virginia.

5 FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM SERVICE, 404 Ferry St., Pittsburgh, Pa., and 37 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.—Western Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Kentucky.

ES CORPORATION
w York City
ant 8463
oductions of eature Play Co.

Paramount PICTURES IN EXCELSIS

Bosworth, Inc.

addition to the above manufacturers

Paramount PICTURES

Griffith's Latest Masterpiece

A feature that has played a Return Engagement on Broadway —first at the Strand—then at the Cort.

Home Sweet Home

IN SIX REELS

The cast embraces the following well known players:

James Kirkwood	John Dillon	Blanche Sweet	Mary Alden
Henry Walthall	Earle Foxe	Mae Marsh	Fay Tincher
Robert Harron	Courtenay Foote	Lillian Gish	Teddy Sampson
Donald Crisp	Jack Pickford	Dorothy Gish	Mrs. Crowell
Ralph Lewis	Spottiswoode Aitken	Irene Hunt	W. E. Lawrence
Owen Moore	George Seigmann	Miriam Cooper	F. A. Turner
Edward Dillon			W. H. Long

now being released by the Continental Feature Film Corp.

29 UNION SQUARE, NEW YORK AND ALL MUTUAL EXCHANGES

Other Pulling Continental Features Are:

"The Battle of Gettysburg" 5 Reels
"Joseph in the Land of Egypt" 4 Reels
"The Great Leap" 4 Reels
"Gangsters" 4 Reels
"Frou Frou" 4 Reels
"Moths" 4 Reels
"Ruy Blas" 3 Reels
"Legend of Provence" 4 Reels
"Sapho" 6 Reels
"Seeing South America with Colonel Roosevelt" 3 Reels
"Robin Hood" 4 Reels
"Zu, Zu, The Band Leader" 2 Reels
"The Floor Above" 4 Reels
"The Battle of the Sexes" 5 Reels
"The Dishonored Medal" 4 Reels
"The Mountain Rat" 4 Reels
"Dope" 6 Reels
"Cardinal Richelieu's Ward" 4 Reels

Cosmofotofilm Co

Will present at an early date

"She Stoops to Conquer"

in four parts

THE LONDON FILM COMPANY'S great production of

OLIVER GOLDSMITH'S FAMOUS PLAY

Produced by George Loane Tucker

Chas. Rock — Lewis Gilbert

Jane Gail — Henry Ainley

The finest comedy yet produced.

A feast of setting and situation.

Every member of the cast a Star

Something New

Something Better

A change from the morbid and sensational.

"The Sparkling Comedy which has become a Classic."

PERFECT STAGING PERFECT ACTING WONDERFUL PHOTOGRAPHY

Every showman will want to book it.

"'She Stoops to Conquer' is a classic in celluloid; the film will be a great favorite at the cinemas."—London Evening Standard.

For further particulars communicate with

Cosmofotofilm Co

World's Tower Bldg., 110 West 40th St., New York. Phone Bryant 8126
Sole American Distributors for THE LONDON FILM CO., LTD.
M. P. SALES AGENCY, Ltd., London

THE

Golden Gate Film Exchange, Inc.

LARGEST BUYERS OF FEATURE PRODUCTIONS IN THE

WESTERN STATES

We Buy Only Upon Screen Examination
MANUFACTURERS AND PRODUCERS
Are Invited to Submit Their Propositions
To Our New York Office, 614 Candler Bldg.

EXHIBITORS

Are assured the cream of the market, and only subjects that embrace the highest products of the moving picture realm. Careful attention is given to Posters, Lobby Display and all Publicity matter.

WE RELEASE WEEKLY

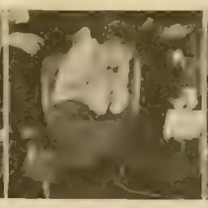
3 STATE RIGHT FEATURE PRODUCTIONS
SINGLE REEL FILLERS

We can also supply a Weekly Service of 28 Reels.

GolgateFeatureService

SAN FRANCISCO	LOS ANGELES	SEATTLE	PORTLAND	DENVER	SALT LAKE CITY
234 Eddy Street	514 West 8th St.	1216 Third Ave.	329 Oak	Nassau Bldg.	Judge Bldg.

THE LEADING FILM EXCHANGE OF THE WEST



ETHEL GRANDIN

"THE QUEEN OF THE SCREEN"

Miss Grandin will send a personally autographed photograph to any of her exhibitor friends writing and requesting one.

These Advertising Helps for Exhibitors can be had from Hennegan & Co., Cincinnati, O.

Ethel Grandin One-Sheet Posters, 10c. ea.
Ethel Grandin Fans (Exhibitor's advertisement on back), $16.00 per thousand.
Ethel Grandin Post Cards, $3.00 per thous.
Ethel Grandin Advertising Stamps, $1.50 per thousand.
Ethel Grandin Program Covers, three-color offset—four pages, $6.50 per thous.
Ethel Grandin Pillow Tops, 50c. each.
Ethel Grandin Viva Photos, 11 x 14 in., $6.50 per hundred.

Miss Ethel Grandin

Ray C. Smallwood,
Directing Ethel Grandin pictures.

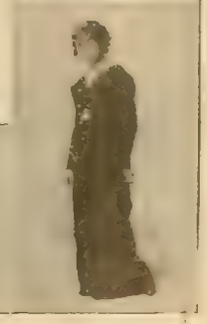
CURRENT RELEASES:

Papa's Darling—Imp Comedy.
The Girl Reporter—Two-Reel Imp Feature.

SCENARIOS WANTED

Fifty dollars a reel and upward will be paid for suitable vehicles for Miss Grandin. One, three and four reel subjects wanted. Comedy dramas or heart interest stories with melodramatic touch preferred. Will consider the purchase of "picture rights" for works of recognized authors and playwrights. Correspondence with successful photo-playwrights solicited.

Address: 1303 FLATIRON BLDG., NEW YORK.



COUDERC, direct from the Follies Bergere, Paris, as "SCRAPS"
IN "THE PATCHWORK GIRL OF OZ"

The new Plant of the Oz Film Company, conceded to be the most completely equipped and best appointed in California, if not in America.
It is here we are producing L. FRANK BAUM'S Wonderful Fairy Tale

"The Patchwork Girl of Oz"

FIVE REELS NOW MAKING

RELEASE DATE WILL SOON BE ANNOUNCED

The Oz Film Manufacturing Company
STUDIO AND LABORATORIES
Santa Monica Boulevard, from Gower to Lodi Streets
Los Angeles, California

OZ FILMS

SEE AMERICANS FIRST

FLYING "A" and AMERICAN BEAUTY FEATURE FILMS

"The Lure of the Sawdust"

Under direction of Thos. Ricketts.

A Two Part Feature Story Finding Its Inception Under the Big White Tops. Comedy and Tragedy—Three Rings, Elephants, Camels and all the big features of a gala day. Release Monday, July 13th, 1914.

AMERICAN BEAUTY

"THE JOKE ON JANE"

Featuring MARGARITA FISCHER and HARRY POLLARD

It's a Dandy.

Release Tuesday, July 14th, 1914.

"YOUTH AND ART"

Featuring WINIFRED GREENWOOD and ED COXEN under direction of Thos. Ricketts. Love, Genius, Success, Linked with Heart-Throbs.

Release Wednesday, July 15th, 1914.

AMERICAN FILM MFG. CO.

Chicago

AMERICAN BEAUTY
Productions
Featuring
MARGARITA FISCHER
and
HARRY POLLARD
Supported by an All Star Cast of World Famous
Photoplay Artists.
Produced by
AMERICAN FILM MFG. CO.
CHICAGO

SENSATIONAL SUCCESS!!!

THE SIX-PART

MASSIVE MOTION MELODRAMA

"ATLANTIS"

Adapted from Gerhart Hauptmann's World-Renowned Novel.

GRAPHICALLY PORTRAYING THE TRAGEDY AT SEA, SHOWING THE ACTUAL SINKING OF A GREAT LINER AND MANY OTHER WONDERFUL SCENES OF EQUAL MAGNITUDE

UNANIMOUSLY PRAISED BY THE PRESS

The Following Territory Has Been Contracted For:

New York, Pennsylvania, Connecticut, Delaware, District of Columbia, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kentucky, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Minnesota, New Hampshire, New Jersey, North Dakota, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Vermont, Virginia, West Virginia, Wisconsin and Canada.

Enterprising State Right Buyers in Any Territory Not Mentioned Above Should Secure This Great Feature at Once.

DO IT NOW! BEFORE IT'S TOO LATE! DON'T DELAY!

EXHIBITORS wishing to book this unusual attraction, may ascertain who controls the feature in their territory by writing us.

THIS COSTLY FILM PRODUCTION IS A MONEY-MAKER FOR BOTH STATE RIGHT BUYERS AND EXHIBITORS.

IT IS A MOST TIMELY OFFERING, OWING TO THE MANY RECENT MARINE DISASTERS.

EXCEPTIONALLY STRIKING LITHOGRAPHS THAT WILL COMMAND ATTENTION IN ONE THREE, SIX AND NINE SHEET SIZES.

COMING
The International Favorite

BETTY NANSEN

in

COMING
A Dramatic Gem in 4 Parts

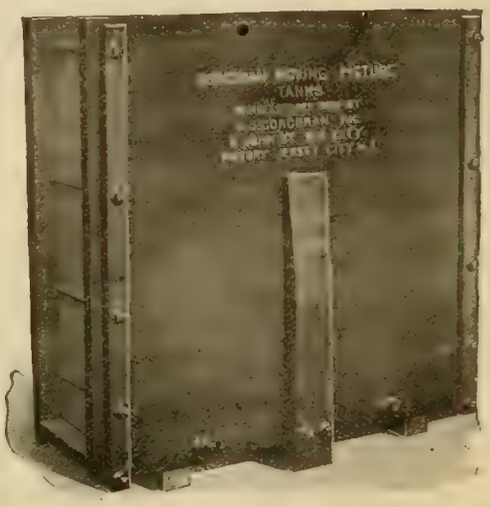
"STORMS OF THE HEART"

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO. 110 W. 40th St. NEW YORK

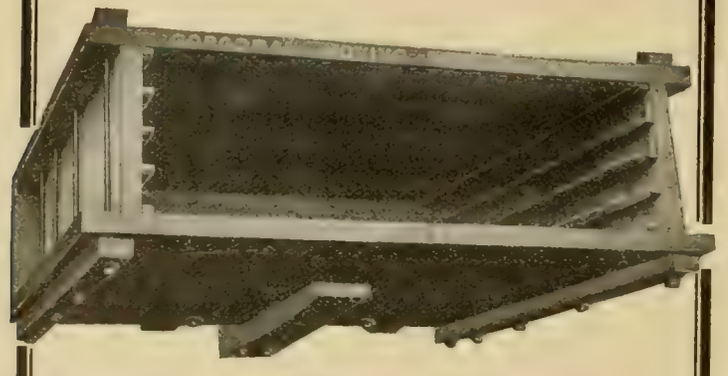
Corcoran Tanks

For Moving Picture Film Development

PRICE LIST No. 6, JANUARY 1, 1914



Constructed of selected gulf coast cypress 2 inches, dressed. Made and put together at the CORCORAN FACTORY and so delivered f. o. b. cars or boat in Manhattan, New York City, including buttons, plugs and bed-pieces, but no racks. Racks extra, $5.00 each, capacity 200 feet.



STANDARD SIZES

No. of Racks	INSIDE DIMENSIONS Length	Width	Depth	1 Tank	Capacities	Discounts
1 Rack	48 Ins.	4⅜ Ins.	50 Ins.	$30.00	45 Gals.	Subject to same when ordered in quantities.
2 Rack	48 ins.	7¾ ins.	50 Ins.	32.00	80 Gals.
3 Rack	48 Ins.	11⅛ Ins.	50 Ins.	34.00	115 Gals.
4 Rack	48 Ins.	14½ Ins.	50 Ins.	36.00	150 Gals.
5 Rack	48 Ins.	17⅞ Ins.	50 Ins.	38.00	185 Gals.
6 Rack	48 Ins.	21¾ Ins.	50 Ins.	40.00	220 Gals.
7 Rack	48 Ins.	24⅝ Ins.	50 Ins.	42.00	255 Gals.
8 Rack	48 Ins.	28 Ins.	50 Ins.	44.00	290 Gals.

A. J. CORCORAN, Inc.

Patentees and Manufacturers

New York Office:
No. 11a JOHN STREET
Telephone, 3947 Cortlandt

Factory: Jersey City, N. J.
JERSEY AVE. & 13TH ST.
Telephone, 238 Jersey

CASAVANT BROS.

Organ Builders

South Haven Michigan

Canadian Factory
St. Hyacinthe, Quebec

Builders of many of the largest and most important organs in America.

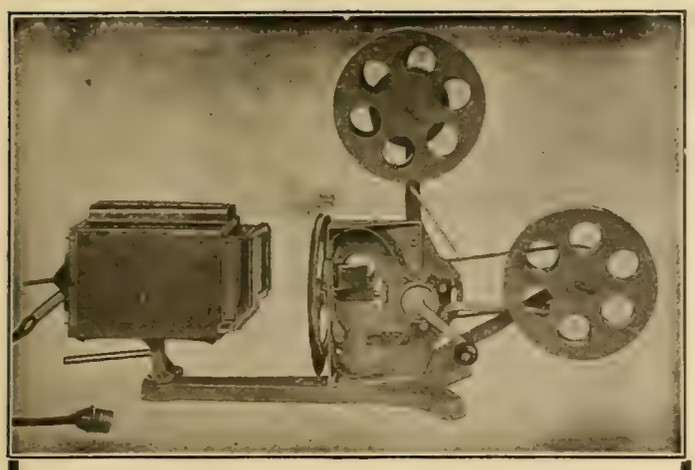
Artistic orchestral instruments for theatres. Only the better class of work taken, and we promise you the last word in organ construction.

Owners desiring good organs artistically voiced and tone regulated and which will work at all times and not give mechanical troubles should write us. These organs are designed and voiced as theatre or concert instruments and not for church purposes. They are brilliant in tone character like an orchestra, with more volume and much more tonal variety.

A sweeping guarantee with all instruments. Reference to any leading organist of the U. S. and Canada.

CASAVANT BROS.

SOUTH HAVEN MICHIGAN



THE PHANTOSCOPE

Motion pictures for demonstration and instruction.

They buy it for the service it gives them.

American Tobacco Co.
American Coal Products Co.
Al Bartlett Film Mfg. Co.
Atlantic Screw Works.
Barber Asphalt Paving Co.
Barret Mfg. Co., N. Y.
Barret Mfg. Co., Ala.
Barret Mfg. Co., Chicago.
C. R. Baird Co.
The Battle Creek Sanitarium.
Columbian Optical Co.
Cincinnati Motion Picture Co.
Cellulose Planchon, Inc.
Comet Film Co.
The C. R. Film Co.
C. & I. Film Mfg. Co.
The Coburn Trolley Track Mfg. Co.
Columbus Theatre Equipment Co.
The Claric's Shop.
The Columbia Feature Film Co.
Daines & Nickels.
Eyton Kinetograph Co.
Educational Film Co.
Farish Art Store.
General Film Co.
Grand Trunk Pacific Ry.
The Holt Feature Film Co.
Harold Ives Co., Inc.
Industrial & Domestic Film Co.
Industrial & Educational Film Co.
Knickerbocker Film Mfg. Co.
Laemmle Film Service.
Larkin Co., Buffalo.
Lehigh Portland Cement Co.
Magnet Film Mfg. Co.
Mutual Film Corporation, N. Y.
Mutual Film Corporation, Canada.
Advertisers' Motion Picture Weekly.
Oshkosh Feature Film Co.
The Pastime Amusement Co.
Pacific Film Mfg. Co.
Papier Brothers.
Pennsylvania Ry. Co.
National Lead Co.
Phelps Can Co.
Progressive Film Co.
Royal Photo Film Co.
Runyan Advertising & Sales Co.
Raths & Seavolt.
Repass, Harries & Co.
Superior Film Mfg. Co.
St. Louis Motion Picture Co.
The Social Service League of Mont.
Smallwood Film Corporation.
Theatre Supply Co.
U. S. Film Co.
United Shoe Machinery Co.
Washington Film Exchange.
Washington Railway & Electric Co.
Young's Studio.
Alabama Polytechnic Institute.
Agricultural & Mech. College, of Texas.
Culver Military Academy.
Georgia State College of Agriculture.
Howard University.
Iowa State College Mech. Arts.
International Health Commission.
Kansas State Agricultural College.
Lewiston State Normal School.
Louisiana State University.
Michigan State University.
North Dakota Agricultural Col.
Ohio State University.
N. Y. State College of Agriculture.
Oregon Agricultural College.
Purdue University.
Pennsylvania State College.
State University of W. Va.
South Carolina State College.
University of Oregon.
Utah Agricultural College.
University of Alabama.
University of Nebraska.
University of Wyoming.
Agricultural Experiment Stations.
Virginia Agricultural Exp. Sta.

Phantoscope Mfg. Co.

Bond Building, Washington, D. C.

The Light Which Does Not Interfere With Projection

The day of the dark theatre has passed. This is due primarily to the perfection of the EYE COMFORT LIGHTING System. This system is neither an imitation nor a substitute. It is based on fundamental principles discovered by us and proven by long practice to be absolutely correct. It is the original indirect lighting.

Indirect Light does not interfere with the clearness of the picture on the screen. It has no glare and does not distract attention from the pictures or cause headaches.

It lights the house evenly so that every one can locate a seat and reach it without any confusion or noise. It relieves eyestrain when one looks away from the pictures because it greatly lessens the harsh contrast between the brightly lighted screen and the otherwise dark house.

The Eye Comfort Lighting System is so good and so successful that it is imitated. But these imitations, which are offered you because they are "cheap," lack the powerful one-piece silvered mirror X-RAY EYE COMFORT reflectors which control and direct the light by their scientific design and evenly light the house. These are the most powerful reflectors made and require less current than any others.

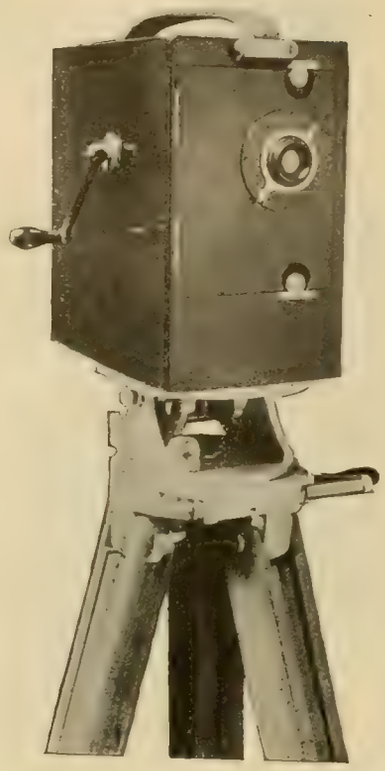
Fill in the blank below and allow our engineers to lay out a plan for lighting your theatre. This won't cost you a cent and does not obligate you in any way. But it will tell you exactly how much EYE COMFORT LIGHTING for your theatre would cost.

Distance Screen to Rear of Auditorium .....
Ceiling Height .....
Width of House.....
Height Under Balcony .....
Distance Rear Auditorium to Front of Balcony.....
Name .....

NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO.

CHICAGO
235 W. Jackson Blvd.

NEW YORK
6 East 39th St.



SEE IT IN ACTION AND BE CONVINCED

The Vista Motion Picture Camera

An American Product

A high class, practical and reliable instrument, simple in construction, and easy to operate.

Uses Standard Motion Picture Film
(Eastman or any other)

Can be used as a projector, with special projecting attachment

Indispensable to up-to-date exhibitors for taking special event, topical or advertising films.

Capacity of magazines 150 feet. Instrument fully guaranteed.

Price of camera, with F 6. lens and two magazines, complete $39

With any of the following well known, anastigmatic lenses
Speed-F 3.5, Bausch & Lomb Zeiss Tessar, Steinheil, Carl Zeiss, Voigtlander $65

Special projecting attachment.....$14.00

SEND FOR CATALOGUE NO. 14

MOTION PICTURE CAMERA COMPANY, INC. 5 West 14th St., New York

ANNOUNCEMENT

Phone Randolph 1943

SERVICE TO YOU

State Right Features A Specialty

CONSUMERS FEATURE FILM SERVICE

INCORPORATED

General Offices and Picture Display
Suite 1504-1505 Michigan Boulevard Building
30 North Michigan Boulevard
CHICAGO

Company Officers
Morton D. Harris, President
Reuben Levine, Vice-President
Dave Rosin, Secretary
William P. Cooper, Treasurer
R. Wilson More, General Counsel

MILWAUKEE BRANCH
407 Manhattan Bldg.
133 Second Street.
Phone Grand 734.

It will pay you to book these FEATURES 2—3—4 Reel Subjects
Call, wire or write at once for dates. Special rates on weekly bookings

Title	Reels	Title	Reels
A Cry in the Night	4	By Power of Attorney or Mystery of Jack Hilton	3
The Flames of Justice	4	The $1,000,000 Pearl Mystery	3
Treachery	4	U. S. Army and Navy	3
Prisoner of the Owl's Gang	4	Sheridan's Ride	3
Victory or Death	4	The Wheels of Destiny	3
Woe to the Conqueror	4	Two Destinies	3
Gambler's Revenge	4	Land of Darkness	2
The Valley of Death	3	The Massacre	2
The Outlaw's Remorse	3	In the Days of War	2

Unlimited quantity of single reels and comedy

BIG LOBBY DISPLAY AND PHOTOS 1-3-6-9 Sheets and Slides

OUR MOTTO—SERVICE TO YOU

ECLIPSE-URBAN FILM COMPANY

PRESENTS

A TWO PART DRAMA OF THE FOOTLIGHTS

THE JOKE THAT KILLS

AN INSIDE STORY OF EVERYDAY LIFE BACK OF THE FOOTLIGHTS PORTRAYING LOVE AND JEALOUSY WITH ITS USUAL RESULTS FOLLOWED BY AN UNUSUAL AND AWE-INSPIRING CLIMAX.

A TWO REEL DETECTIVE PHOTOPLAY

THE MYSTERY OF GREEN PARK

AFTER THE FAMOUS NOVEL BY ARNOLD GALOPIN
THE FIRST OF THE BARNET-PARKER SERIES OF DETECTIVE DRAMAS

SPLIT REELS

BUTTERFLY AND HIS DOG
COMEDY

MAGIC MATCHES
TRICK COMEDY

ECLIPSE-URBAN FILM COMPANY

110-112 West 40th St. Telephone 3095 Bryant NEW YORK CITY

REAL FEATURES

NEPTUNE'S DAUGHTER
THE THREE MUSKETEERS
THE BANKER'S DAUGHTER
THE BATTLE OF WATERLOO
THE VICAR OF WAKEFIELD
FATALITY AND MYSTERY
RAINEY'S HUNT
A PARADISE LOST
HARRY LAUDER
SEALED ORDERS

SERVITIUM HONESTUM
THE SIGN OF REAL FEATURES
CELEBRATED PLAYERS FILM COMPANY

BREWSTER'S MILLIONS
A MESSAGE FROM MARS
MYSTERY OF THE FATAL PEARL
LIFE OF RICHARD WAGNER VICTORY
THE SQUAW MAN
LOVE EVERLASTING
EAST LYNNE
THE DIVINE APPEAL

AND WE DO MORE THAN RENT YOU FILMS

Not all for all states—but some for each state.

CELEBRATED PLAYERS FILM COMPANY

Leaders in Filmdom's Progress

Schiller Building 64 West Randolph Street, Chicago

THEATRE SEATING

We Maintain

50,000

Chairs in Stock

Finished in Standard Colors and in White

Extraordinary Values and Service

We can ship stock colors IMMEDIATELY. Special colors in five to ten days.

American Seating Company

New York
15 E. 32d Street

Chicago
14 E. Jackson Blvd.

Demonstration Offices and Installation Service at 9 W. 4th St., Cincinnati, O.

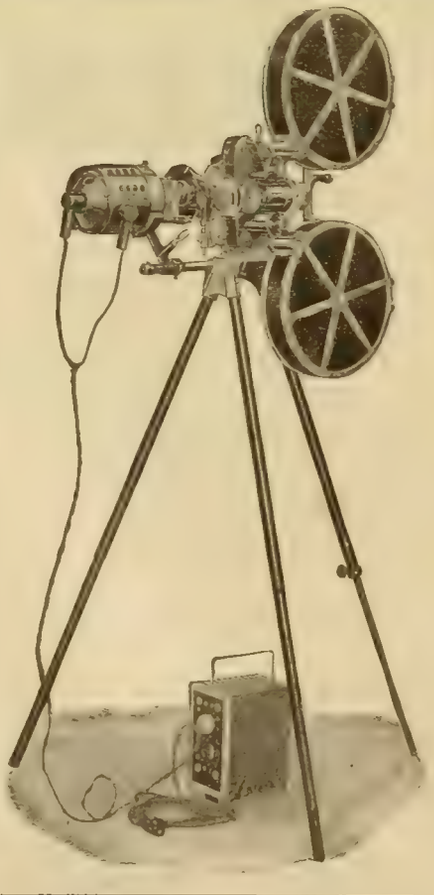
402 Bessemer Bldg., Pittsburgh, Pa.
505-507 Audubon Bldg., New Orleans, La.
15 E. 32nd St., New York, N. Y.
58 Douglas Bldg., Columbus, O.
526 Syndicate Trust Bldg., St. Louis, Mo.
285 W. Tenth St., Fort Worth, Texas.
813 Prospect Ave., Cleveland, O.
1009-1011 Walnut St., Kansas City, Mo.
1622 Arapahoe St., Denver, Colo.
14 E. Jackson Blvd., Chicago, Ill.

And in Forty Other Cities.



The VICTOR ANIMATOGRAPH

THE FIRST PROFESSIONAL PORTABLE
MOTION PICTURE PROJECTOR

Standard 1000-foot reels.
Brilliant 10-foot image.
Attaches to any light socket.
Ready for work anywhere.

Price complete in carrying cases, $125.

Quick sales at good profits for exchanges and supply houses.

Write for the new catalog and the best projector proposition ever offered.

Victor Animatograph Company, Inc.
162 Victor Bldg., Davenport, Iowa.

New York
1472 Broadway.

Chicago
38 So. Dearborn

Atlantis Atlantis

Now Accepting Bookings on

ATLANTIS

In Six Parts

for the States of

Illinois, Indiana, Iowa and Kentucky

(1 sheets, 2 styles; 3 sheets, 2 styles; 6 sheets, 9 sheets

PEERLESS FILM EXCHANGE

Phone Randolph 2345 201 Delaware Building

36 W. Randolph St., Chicago

Atlantis Atlantis

"AGFA" DEVELOPERS

Give Perfect Photographic QUALITY

The chemicals should be the purest, to give perfect results.

"AGFA" BRAND

is the STANDARD OF THE WORLD

"AGFA" METOL "AGFA" ORTOL
"AGFA" HYDROKINONE "AGFA" GLYCIN

Correspondence Solicited from Producers

M. P. FORMULAES GRATIS

BERLIN ANILINE WORKS

213-215 Water Street, NEW YORK

Ask the Man Who Owns One

The Automatic Ticket Seller and Cash Register

perfected over two years ago, has met a long-felt want and is used daily by 21 leading circuits and thousands of theatres and amusement places throughout the country.

POPULAR

The cozy little house and magnificent Strand Theatre, New York, considered the finest Moving Picture Theatre in the world, find it of equal value in giving them a strong box office system.

OPERATION AND FEATURES

For 1 ticket depress foot lever only. For 2, 3, 4 or 5 tickets first press proper button.

Register under lock and key—read your receipts at a glance.

Tickets are re-loaded instantly. No complicated machinery, and you are always in business.

Can be operated by a child, owing to its simplicity.

Issues various colors of roll tickets directly into purchaser's hands and public don't have to be educated.

No chance for a re-sale—tickets must come from the machine.

On Display at Dayton Convention

The Automatic Ticket Selling and Cash Register Co.

1476 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

Type D (for 2 prices) installed in Box Office.
Guaranteed against breakage or getting out of order and also that it will do the work for which it is purchased.

MR. MANAGER AND OPERATOR

An important factor in GOOD PROJECTION is due a great deal to the Condensing Lenses in your projection machine.

A cheap Condenser will produce a poor light, is subject to frosting, and has many other defects.

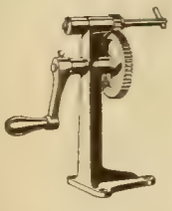
For a GOOD LIGHT and satisfaction we recommend the well known "FV" Condensers.

Try a pair and be convinced that they are the best. Price per pair, $1.50.

We Handle Supplies of the Better Kind.

Write About Our Profit Sharing Coupons.

The N. & T. SUPPLY CO. 714 Paul-Gale-Greenwood Bldg., P.O. Box 978, Norfolk, Va.



The Bell & Howell Rewind

A Better Rewind at a Less Price. Ask your Exchange or Write the Makers.

The Bell & Howell Company, 1803 Larchmont Ave., Chicago, Ill.

FINAL WARNING TO BUYERS

"Where Life's Cross-Roads Meet," three reels made by Dadmun of Boston, is finished. Perfect photography, beautiful scenic effects, stirring action, intensely interesting. A screen visualization artistically created. For particulars address

DADMUN CO.

1 Washington St. Boston, Mass.

MAKE 'EM YOURSELF SLIDES

Make them yourself. Written with pen and ink or typewriter. Three minutes to make a slide. Used for advertising slides, to announce future or feature programmes, for chorus slides when chorus slide is missing. We send four colors of gelatin. The slides look well and anyone can make them. They are handy also for announcing vaudeville acts. In fact, they may be readily used for anything you may wish to say to your audience.

For the sum of $3.50 we will send, by parcel post, prepaid and insured, the following:

24 cover glass, 1 package binder strips, 1 dozen mats, 1 instruction sheet, 1 form sheet and 50 strips assorted colors gelatin—enough for from 300 to 400 slides. Order now. Address:

UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.

1733 West 9th Street Brooklyn, N. Y.

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES OF ALL MAKES

ACCESSORIES AND SUPPLIES

Sellings agents for

FOTOLIGHT

A Superior Projection Screen

Information on request
Let us figure on your equipment.

PHOTOPLAY COMPANY, INC.

30 W. Lake St., CHICAGO

6 Parts The Reign of Terror 6 Parts

Queen Marie Antoinette is Condemned to Die

A true to history dramatization of the great world famous novel by Dumas. It shows the terrors and trials of the French Aristocracy at the time of the great revolution. It shows the prison scenes, the mock trials, and the prisoners hurried in batches to execution. It is a wonderful film.

Don't Fail to Get "A Pearl of the Punjab"

Pathé Made in 3 Parts—Carrying the Action to the Fullest Limit of Perfection

ECLECTIC FEATURE FILM EXCHANGES FOR YOUR USE

ATLANTA Rhodes Bldg.	BOSTON 3 Tremont Row	CHICAGO 5 So. Wabash Ave.	DALLAS Andrews Bldg.	LOS ANGELES 114 E. 7th St.	MINNEAPOLIS 4th & Hennepin Sts.
NEW YORK 115 E. 23rd St.	PITTSBURGH 715 Liberty Ave.	SAN FRANCISCO 67 Turk St.	ST. LOUIS 3210 Locust St.	SYRACUSE 214 E. Fayette St.	CINCINNATI 217 E. 5th St.
CLEVELAND 622 Prospect Av., S.E.	PORTLAND 392 Burnside Ave.	PHILADELPHIA 1235 Vine St.	WASHINGTON 7th & E Sts., N. W.	NEW ORLEANS 910 Gravier St.
SEATTLE 810 Third Ave.	OMAHA 1312 Farnam St.		DENVER Nassau Bldg.	KANSAS CITY 928 Main St.

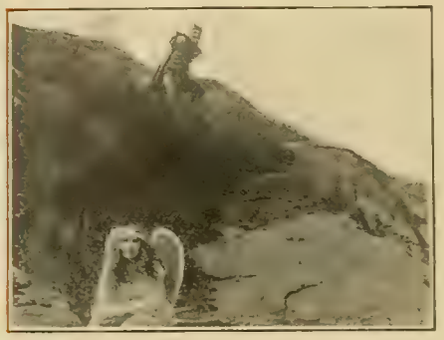
SALT LAKE CITY: 68 South Main St.

THE ECLECTIC FILM COMPANY

110 West 40th Street — New York City

"The Cream or American and European Studios"

The Serial Film That Has Broken All Records For Bookings and Patron Pulling Power



The Perils of Pauline

Pauline is without doubt the most popular character in motion pictures. She is known and liked from coast to coast, as the most daredevil—chance taking actress before the camera. As she said the other day, "One of these days something will happen and poor Pauline will be a real angel." She is backed up by the most extraordinary cast ever gathered together.

Pauline Pulls People—She's a Gold Mine

A Pathé Made—Lightning Action—Human Interest Drama

Detective Craig's Coup

(5 Parts)

A drama so full of intense action and contagious interest that your patrons will find their nerves tense as piano strings which will not relax till the last foot of film has passed before them. Then they will thank you for the opportunity you have given them.

ECLECTIC FEATURE FILM EXCHANGES FOR YOUR USE

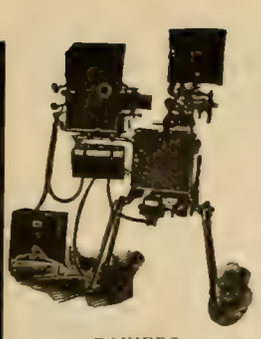
ATLANTA Rhodes Bldg.	BOSTON 3 Tremont Row	CHICAGO 5 So. Wabash Ave.	DALLAS Andrews Bldg.	LOS ANGELES 114 E. 7th St.	MINNEAPOLIS 4th & Hennepin Sts.
NEW YORK 115 E. 23rd St.	PITTSBURGH 715 Liberty Ave.	SAN FRANCISCO 67 Turk St.	ST. LOUIS 3210 Locust St.	SYRACUSE 214 E. Fayette St.	CINCINNATI 217 E. 5th St.
CLEVELAND 622 Prospect Av., S. E.	PORTLAND 392 Burnside Ave.	PHILADELPHIA 1235 Vine St.	WASHINGTON 7th and E Sts., N.W.	NEW ORLEANS 910 Gravier St.
SEATTLE 810 Third Ave.	OMAHA 1312 Farnam St.		DENVER Nassau Bldg.	KANSAS CITY 928 Main St.

SALT LAKE CITY: 68 South Main St.

THE ECLECTIC FILM COMPANY

110 West 40th Street — New York City

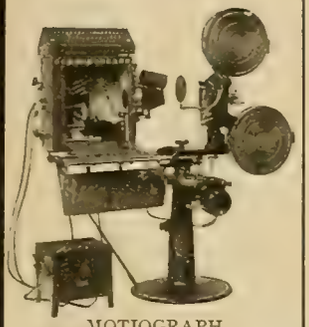
"The Cream of American and European Studios"



POWERS

Everything for the Theatre but Films and Posters

Mail Orders Our Specialty



MOTIOGRAPH

STOP THIEF!

Procrastination, that thief of time, makes you put off for to-morrow that which you should do to-day; namely, to order your new machine.

Call in, Write or Wire for the

Power's 6A
Simplex Projector
Motiograph 1914
Edison's New Model "D"

Don't Let the Old Robber Tempt You

DO IT NOW

See them all Make Your Selection

Picture Theatre Equipment Co.

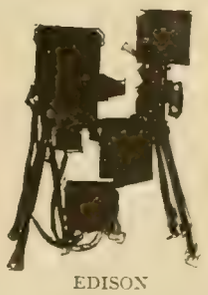
21 East 14th Street New York City

The Largest Motion Picture Supply House in America

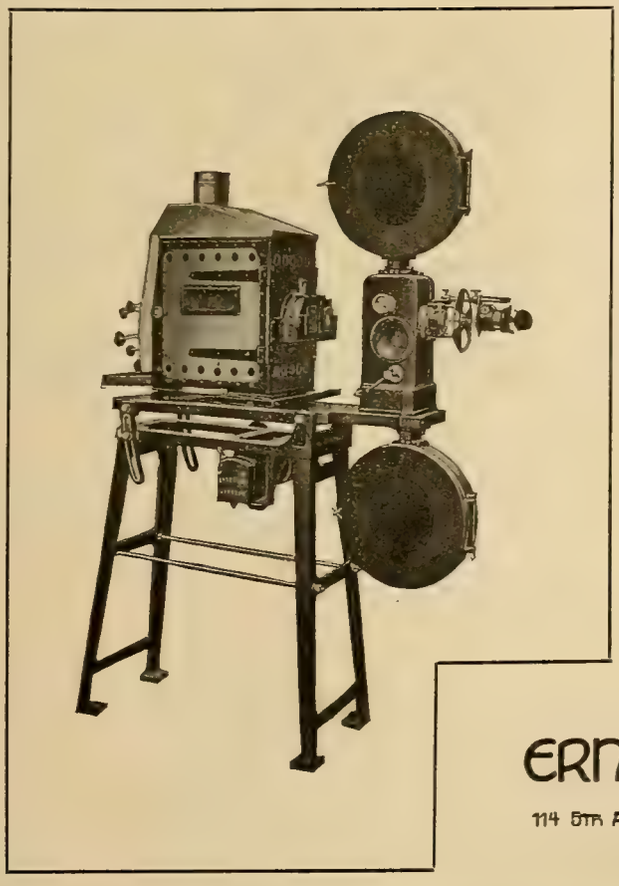
HAVE YOU VISITED OUR SALESROOMS?

SIMPLEX

We Equip Motion Picture Theatres Completely



EDISON



Increase your bank account by pleasing your audience. You can do so by using THE KING of all Projecting Machines,

The Ernemann All-Steel Projector "IMPERATOR"

The only machine that shows an ABSOLUTE GUARANTEED FLICKERLESS PICTURE. Don't be behind time.

Write for descriptive literature.

ERNEMANN-PHOTO-KINO-WORKS

114 5TH AVENUE NEW-YORK 114 5TH AVENUE

CORRESPONDENCE.

(Continued from page 294.)

SAN FRANCISCO.

JOHN J. McARTHUR has secured a permit from the Board of Police Commissioners to conduct moving picture exhibitions at 2465 Mission street, succeeding I. C. Ackerman.

Joseph Abrams has been granted a permit by the Board of Police Commissioners to show moving pictures at Van Ness avenue and Sutter streets.

Emil Kehrline, who conducts the Kinema theater at Fresno, Cal., was a recent visitor in San Francisco and announced that he was looking for a local house of large capacity where big productions might be shown at prices up to 50 cents. In case a desirable theater can be secured it is his plan to install a magnificent organ and to feature motion pictures on a scale new to the Coast.

Adolph Mayer, well known in local moving picture circles, has left for Portland and the Northwest with the feature production, "Neptune's Daughter," featuring Annette Kellerman, where it will be shown for seven or eight weeks. A very successful run of two weeks was recently experienced at the Columbia theater here, and for ten days the pictures drew large crowds to the Mason theater at Los Angeles.

The Gaiety theater is again listed in the ranks of local moving picture houses, but manager Thomas O'Day advises that this may be but temporarily. However, musical comedy is at an end there for the time being, at least, and no definite plans have been made for venturing into this field again. The picture program opened with the Pathe photoplay, "Sport in Central Africa," at ten cents and twenty cents, and this will be followed by Spartacus and other notable features.

The California Motion Picture Corporation announces that its first release will be Salome Jane, from the story by Bret Harte and the drama by Paul Armstrong. The company has been working on this during the past week, some of the principal scenes being made at Camp Taylor in the redwood belt. An old stage coach in use more than forty years ago has been secured for this production, the vehicle having the added distinction of being one in which Robert Louis Stevenson had often been a passenger. The services of an old stage driver, Joe Downey, have also been secured, this pioneer having driven a stage in California more than fifty years ago. The leading parts in this production are being taken by Beatriz Michelena and House Peters. William Pike, formerly of Los Angeles, is also working in Salome Jane.

History has been made this week at the Portola theater, where the great Selig production, "The Spoilers," has been shown. Manager Eugene Roth of this theater says: " 'The Spoilers' is not merely the greatest attraction we have ever booked, but it has been creating a furore here. The house was packed each day we showed the picture, and each night hundreds of persons were turned away. We have secured the film for a second week's run and this promises to be as good as the first."

The management of the Portola theater has arranged a program for the summer that is the strongest list of attractions, taken as a whole, that it has ever secured. In addition to "The Spoilers," the list includes "Home, Sweet Home," "The Life of Villa," "The Jungle," "The Escape," "The Christian," and a production by Augustus Thomas in which Ethel Barrymore takes the leading role.

Owing to the fact that he is no longer an active exhibitor, Charles Rothschild has resigned as national vice-president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America and W. H. Hilts, first vice-president of the California state organization, has been appointed in his place and will act as delegate at the Dayton convention. Mr. Rothschild has also resigned as director of the San Francisco local and George R. Knowles of the Vicksburg theater has been elected to fill this position.

M. E. Cory, of Cory Brothers, has left for the East, accompanied by his wife and son, planning to visit Chicago, Niagara Falls and New York before attending the Dayton convention.

The Golden State Film Company has completed its first production and the film was run off recently at the Star theater at San Rafael for the inspection of the stockholders of the company.

R. D. Wharton, formerly an exhibitor of Eureka, Cal., was in San Francisco recently on a short visit. He has been spending part of his vacation at Fresno and states that the airdomes in that city have been doing a splendid business, owing to ideal weather conditions.

The General Film Company has closed the exclusive service department that has been maintained at 948 Market street, and this is now conducted at the enlarged headquarters of the firm at 138 Eddy street.

The Panama-Aero Film Company has been organized to place upon the market the pictures taken in the Panama Canal Zone by Raymond A. Duhem, who covered this territory with Robert Fowler in an aeroplane. Offices have been opened in the Pacific building, with M. B. Dudley as general manager.

Fred Voigt, of Fresno, Cal., was in San Francisco this week arranging for features for the Theater Fresno that is to be reopened in September, after extensive remodeling work is completed.

A special feature of great interest was recently secured for Grauman's Imperial in the form of moving pictures of Mount Lassen, showing the volcanic eruption that is now attracting such widespread attention, these being shown at this theater for the first time. The pictures were secured by Milton A. Ayers, who was outfitted for the trip by Raymond A. Duhem, the local representative of the Gaumont Company, and were taken at great risk within one thousand feet of the crater. This volcano, the only one in the United States, is still in action and is attracting great crowds of tourists to Northern California.

The Duhem Motion Picture Manufacturing Company has moved to new quarters at 700 Hayes street, where a large plant for developing and printing motion picture films has been installed. A large projection room is being fitted up on an upper floor.

B. J. Kahn, who recently disposed of the Glen Odeon theater in the Glen Park district, has also sold his Grandview theater at Daly City, this having been purchased by a Mr. Haddock, a new man in the moving picture field.

The Wigwam theater in the Mission district is to be devoted in the future to moving pictures and musical comedy, the picture features to be handled by Ralph Pincus of the Portola theater.

The Independent Film Exchange of San Francisco is preparing to establish a branch at Los Angeles, this to be in charge of Harry Hunter, formerly of Seattle, Wash. Mr. Hunter is now in the Southern city and the selection of a location will shortly be announced.

B. Mulvaney, formerly located at 948 Market street, is now at the Independent Film Exchange, 116 Golden Gate avenue, where he is devoting his attention to handling features.

The Elite Theater on Market street, opposite Seventh, is advertising that it is the only house on Market showing Mutual movies at five cents and is getting a good business.

W. W. Clark, who recently purchased the Pastime theater at South Berkeley, has made a number of improvements since taking over the place. A new screen has just been installed, as well as a new Power's Cameragraph No. 6 A. Plans are being made to enlarge the house in the near future.

The Elite theater on Shattuck avenue, near Vine street, Berkeley, has been reopened after having been dark for several months. This house is now being conducted by B. F. Hall.

H. von Emmel has disposed of the Majestic theater at Willitts, Cal., to T. Weaver, and will locate at Fort Bragg.

The cold weather experienced during June caused the airdomes at Chico and a number of other California towns to close for several evenings and seek shelter.

Manuel Burrows has secured a permit to open a moving picture house and dance hall at Colusa, Cal.

The new Modesto theater, Modesto, Cal., opened on June 24, and it is devoted to moving pictures and road attractions.

Frank Burgi has closed the Princess theater at Willows, Cal., but will continue to conduct the Fairyland in the same city. His assistant manager, George Rankin is preparing to take a number of features out on the road.

The Broadway theater, Oakland, which is now devoted to moving pictures, has booked "The Old Curiosity Shop" and "Pierre of the Plains" for the immediate future.

When the steamer Matsonia arrived in San Francisco harbor recently with Henry McRae's "101 Bison" Company aboard quite a sensation was created, both on the vessel and on the docks, when someone was seen to leap overboard. Boats were lowered and a rescue effected before it was found that the entire scene had been filmed and that Marie Walcamp was the center of interest.

Sol Lesser, president and general manager of the Golden Gate Film Exchange, Inc., will leave for New York early in June to make purchases of big feature attractions. About the same time M. B. Dudley, general manager of the Pacific-Aero Film Company; James Keane, of the Keanograph Company, and George F. Cosby, who is interested in the Golden State Film Company, will leave for the metropolis.

J. M. French, of Sisson, Cal., recently visited Portola with the idea of opening a moving picture house there but the plan was given up for the time being.

The Wigwam Theater, at Fresno, Cal., has made arrangements whereby a boycott of two years' duration on the part of the labor council has been raised.

John W. Considine, formerly leading owner of the Sullivan and Considine vaudeville circuit, is making a visit to California from his home in Seattle.

CHURCH.

MISSOURI.

THE "Million-Dollar Mystery" made its initial appearance in Kansas City on June 22. Contrary to original plans, the first installment of the picture was shown at the Tenth Street theater instead of the Royal. Frank L. Newman, manager of the latter, decided to abandon his plans because of the fact that the picture was run at a house in the outlying district simultaneously. The serial story of the "Million-Dollar Mystery" is running in the Kansas City Journal, aiding in stimulating interest in the presentation of the film.

The new board of appeals to act on questions regarding the fitness of pictures shown in Kansas City houses was organized recently with the election of Judge H. C. McDougal as president and Trigg A. Long as secretary. The board established a rule that whenever the censor disapproves of a film he is to recommend its withdrawal and seek immediate judgment from the board. Under no circumstances may the censor order a picture withdrawn without the consent of the board of appeals.

Judge F. M. McCoy, a well-known exhibitor of West Plains, Mo., abandoned single life in St. Louis recently, when he wed Mrs. Georgia Collins, of Chicago. Judge McCoy, who has been active in politics for many years, is associated with Norton Henry in the management of the Famous theater at West Plains, where the couple will make their home.

A new exhaust fan and ventilating system has been installed in the Elite theater, at Gas, Kansas.

One premium plan on which the authorities failed to frown was that handled by E. H. Hill, owner of the Rex theater, of Arkansas City, Kan., recently. Mr. Hill advertised that every boy or girl bringing 1,000 dead flies to the house would be admitted free. Twenty-five of the youngsters spent the day in swatting the fly and earned passes to the evening peerformance. It was suggested following the success of this plan that it lies within the power of exhibitors to rid the entire country of flies.

Devotees of the film at Hutchinson, Kan., have made an aggressive effort to secure Sunday performances at Riverside park. The constitutionality of the Kansas initiative and referendum is involved. The same question has caused much trouble in other Kansas cities and has never been definitely decided. Hutchinson has an ordinance prohibiting Sunday theaters. A petition signed by more than 25 per cent of the voters was filed with the city commission calling for a referendum of an ordinance which would permit Sunday exhibitions in the park. The commission refused to call the election and mandamus proceedings were instituted. The court withheld decision in the case.

Some Missouri exhibitors recently have attracted attention by manufacturing serial pictures to please themselves. A moving picture man at Jefferson City, Mo., recently divided a three-reel feature into as many parts, running one reel each night. The plan is a bit costly, but the success of some of the better known serials has been so marked that some members of the industry are willing to go to almost any length to secure them, or, as indicated, make them by dividing a subject.

H. G. Montgomery, manager of the Iris theater, of Sopeka, Kan., will shortly enter the ranks of Benedicts. Mr. Montgomery's engagement to Miss Rose Hite, of Topeka, has been announced. The nuptials will be celebrated in October. Mr. Montgomery is among the more aggressive exhibitors of the Kansas capital. He has created comment by advertising liberally, the copy being of an unusual nature at times.

Mrs. Josie Brown has re-entered exhibitors' ranks at Trenton, Mo. Mr. Brown formerly operated the Elite, and has re-opened that theater after remodeling it. While the theater was undergoing alterations, the woman exhibitor assisted in the management of the Gem theater.

J. W. Concannon has opened the Elite theater at Emporia, Kan., and closed the Electric theater, which he also operates, for improvements. Mr. Concannon expects to spend about $5,000 on the Electric, one of the most popular houses in Emporia. The theater is to be reversed, the audience facing the entrances. A new concrete booth will be erected and 425 new opera chairs installed. A new gold aluminum screen is to be purchased and other changes made. The Electric will open in the early fall.

Whether a plan to give envelopes containing money to patrons was a violation of the lottery laws was discussed at Topeka, Kan., recently, when Lew Nathanson, of the Best theater, announced he would attempt it. L. L. Kiene, county sheriff, warned the exhibitor that the plan was a lottery. Mr. Nathanson announced he would continue with his arrangements as no blank envelopes would be distributed.

The suit of the Mutual Film Corporation, which seeks to prevent Kansas official from administering the moving picture censorship law passed by the Kansas legislature more than a year ago, will be carried to the United States Supreme Court without an opinion from Judge Pollock, of the Kansas State Supreme

SAFETY FIRST!

All Those Who Take Moving Pictures for Commercial or Private Use should have their developing and printing done where modern and complete factory facilities, efficient and sufficient organization, honest service, are ably combined to Secure Film Quality Plus Guaranteed Protection Against Duping

We Put At Your Disposal The Largest and Finest Factory in the World

Devoted Exclusively to Developing and Printing Commercial Moving Pictures

Prices and Factory Description Sent at Request

INDUSTRIAL MOVING PICTURE COMPANY

WATTERSON R. ROTHACKER, General Manager

222-233 WEST ERIE STREET - - - CHICAGO

PUBLIC OPINION

ALL OVER THE WORLD

Endorses the

UNDERWOOD

Because

- It has proved itself by winning all world's awards for merit
- It holds all records for SPEED—ACCURACY—STABILITY
- It holds the Elliott-Cresson medal awarded by the Franklin Institute of Pennsylvania—the highest mechanical award

These are Features no other Writing Machine can offer

UNDERWOOD

"THE MACHINE YOU WILL EVENTUALLY BUY"

court at Leavenworth, Kan. The court, at a recent hearing at Leavenworth, gave its consent to this action, stating that the chief question involved is one of constitutionality which would in any case be finally passed on by the highest court. Representatives of the State and of the Mutual met at Leavenworth and signed an agreement waiving trial in the lower court. The Kansas censorship law provides that no film may be shown in the State without a prior inspection by the State school superintendent. An inspection fee of $2 per film also is provided. If the superintendent does not approve of a picture, the exhibitor may appeal to a court composed of the Governor, the Secretary of State and the Attorney General. The State officials themselves are not enthusiastic over the bill and would not weep at its defeat, it is said.

The Holt Feature Film Company, of Manhattan, Kan., recently exhibited the film made during Memorial week. While the production's chief interest was because of the local sights, a love affair staged by two students of Washburn College formel the theme. The pictures were shown at the Auditorium.

Perry Rhine, of Pittsburg, Kan., has purchased the equipment of the Broadway theater in that city and will remove it to the Mystic, which he controls. The Mystic, which is undergoing renovations, will have a seating capacity of 1,250 with the additional facilities. The Broadway will be closed.

J. Miloslowsky, operating the Palace and Family theaters at Des Moines, Ia., recently raised his admission prices from five to ten cents. The kiddies who had constituted the exhibitor's most faithful patrons were unable to stand the additional strain on their finances and were forced to forego the animated drama. Mr. Miloslowsky has reduced to five cents. "There is more money in ten-cent admissions," confessed the exhibitor, "but not so much happiness."

The Cassin airdome at Lawton, Okla., has been converted into a church for the time being, the congregations of the city holding joint services on Sundays. The house was the only one of the kind in Lawton. It will be closed on Sundays, but will reopen on other days.

MURRAY.

IN THE MIDDLE WEST.

AN ordinance, providing that no more moving picture theaters be established in Omaha, Neb., was ordered drawn by the city council, but a fight on the measure when it came before the council as a whole was assured. The Hanscom Park Improvement Club presented to the commissioners a petition signed by 200 residents, protesting against the operation of a moving picture theater at 2506 South Thirty-second avenue, for which the excavation was being made. The objectors were told there was no existing law to prevent it and one was ordered prepared.

The Lebanon Milk Condensary, at Lebanon, Ind., was not getting all the milk its factory needed. In order to reach the farmers quickly, the Lebanon Business Men's Association secured the Olympic theater for three moving picture shows, prepared refreshments and entertained the men who had milk to sell or who ought to go into the business.

F. S. Frazier, who has purchased the Mecca theater, on Main street in Ashtabula, Ohio, from John Freeman, has renamed it the Princess.

The Eclectic Film Company has opened an exchange at 1312 Farnam street, in Omaha, Neb., making the fourth film exchange for that city. E. R. Pearson, who was at the head of the General Film Company's office in Omaha, is the manager. He is succeeded by C. L. McVey. Henry Kauffman and J. E. Kirk, who were with the General Film Company, also have gone over to the Eclectic.

The American theater, at 118 South Michigan street, in South Bend, Ind., announced a prize contest for a new name, following the re-opening after remodeling.

The Wonderland Airdome, playing pictures, has been opened at Vinton and Seventeenth streets, in Omaha, Neb.

The Star theater, 1814 North Twenty-fourth street, Omaha, Neb., was closed for a week during remodeling under the new management.

The Empire theater, at Aurora, Ind., is operating its picture show in an airdome on all but stormy nights.

When the circus came to Huntington, Ind., the Princess and Lyric theaters opened at 9 o'clock. The people found a place to sit down and rest and see a show for a small price. The films were stopped in plenty of time to allow the patrons to get out and see the parade and they were given pass-out checks.

The Airdome at Huntington, Ind., got the booking of the films of the Huntington Booster Day celebration.

Manager P. L. Pennock, of the Luna, at Girard, Ohio, closed the house June 24 for three weeks to put in a new front, new ventilating system and to make it a thoroughly modern picture theater.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

DETROIT.

THE Detroit Motion Picture Exhibitors' League held a meeting Tuesday, June 23, and elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, Peter M. Jeup (re-elected); vice-president, August Kleist, of Pontiac; secretary, C. M. Orth (re-elected); treasurer, J. A. Ritter. The members prevailed upon Jake Stocker to accept the re-election of treasurer, but owing to business reasons Mr. Stocker begged to be excused, saying he would continue to give his best efforts to the success of the association. On account of the prolonged siege of warm weather, general conditions in the motion picture field were reported to be very quiet.

George Trendle and John Kunsky of the Casino Amusement Company, also A. J. Gillingham of the General Film Company, participated in the annual lake cruise of the Detroit Board of Commerce. This year's trip was made through the Soo locks to Duluth, Minn., returning the same route. The boat, with 600 prominent Detroiters aboard, left here on June 18 and returned June 22. The Hearst-Selig Company had a cameraman on board who took motion pictures of interesting happenings along the way. These pictures were shown as a special feature on the Temple Theater program during the week of June 27.

Starting July 5 "The Eagle's Mate," with Mary Pickford, starts an extended run at the Liberty Theater. Manager Howard O. Pierce plans to make it the greatest event in the history of the moving picture industry, as far as Detroit is concerned. He is arranging special music and will have special souvenirs, in addition to a number of other advertising features. Mr. Pierce states that for the past four weeks he has received at least a dozen queries daily asking "When will Mary Pickford be back?"

"Her Only Son," a Lasky production, enjoyed good business at the Liberty the week of June 22 despite the intense heat. In the past few weeks the Liberty has been termed "the garden spot of Detroit" for the reason that Manager Pierce has not less than $300 worth of palms, flowers and potted trees around the outside of the building, both on Farmer street as well as on Bates street. These have been placed at no expense to the theatre through the great friendship existing between Manager Pierce and the proprietor of the Bemb Floral Company, which adjoins the theatre on Bates street. The effect is one of beauty and adds very materially to the general appearance of the Liberty.

Foundations are well under way for the new Alhambra Theater, at Woodward and Kenilworth avenues, for John H. Kunsky.

After two weeks of motion pictures, the Washington Theater abandoned the project and will remain closed the balance of the summer, opening early in the fall with high-class stock productions. "We found that we were out of the district for motion pictures," said General Manager A. E. Whitebeck. "We believe, however, that next summer we shall be in a better position to handle pictures, as by that time our particular part of the city will have been considerably improved with many new buildings which are now in the course of erection there. The new Statler Hotel, adjoining us, is going to help a great deal to bring a lot of people to that section of the town."

The Bijou Theater, on Monroe avenue, which was formerly situated on the second floor and which was put out of business by the State Fire Marshal, has reopened. The theater is now located on the first floor, which was formerly given over to a penny arcade. Five cents will be the general admission price, and ten cents on special occasions. The building has undergone a complete change at an expense of $15,000, and the theater is a very comfortable one; the general scheme of decoration is green; the seating capacity is 350, all on the main floor. B. C. Burdick is manager, and his offices will be on the second floor front. The entire front has been altered and repainted. The pictures are shown on a plaster screen, said to be the only one in Detroit. The mechanical equipment consists of two Powers Six A machines, both motor driven. The Bijou is controlled by the Detroit Theatres, Inc., of which Wiliam F. Klatt is president and general manager.

Architects Feldman & Seeley are taking figures on a brick theater to be erected on Fort street West, near Campau avenue.

Architect F. Swirsky, 59 University building, has plans in progress for a small theater, 35 by 110 in size.

The Gladwin Park theatre at 2084 Jefferson avenue east, which is incorporated for $35,000, opened its doors for the first time on Saturday night, to a crowd that jammed every inch of the playhouse. The building has a frontage of 71 feet on Jefferson avenue and runs back 158 feet. It is fireproof, walls are of concrete, brick and hard tile with heavy piers laid all the way up with cement mortar to the baring plates of the hugh steel trusses that span the auditorium. Plastering is on expanded lath which is absolutely fireproof. There are over a thousand electric lights used to illuminate and decorate the building. The stage and border lights are handled with dimmers and operated from the stage. The stage is fitted for all kinds of attractions, although at present it is the plan of the company to play only pictures. Frank Langlois is manager. There will be two performances in the afternoon and two at night. Admission price is ten cents, with 15 for the box seats. The latter run along each side of the theatre and altogether there are 144 of them. A beauty of the theatre is that it is built in such a way as to give an absolutely clear vision from every part of the aduditorium. Instead of the seats being arranged in a straight row across, they are on the semi-circle order. The throw from the operating booth to the screen is 106 feet, said to be the longest in the city. An air washing machine keeps the theatre at 65 degrees during the hot weather, while in the cold weather the theatre will be heated by indirect system of radiation. There are ten 36-inch ventilators in the ceiling; the floors have a covering of concrete so that in every way the theatre is sanitary, dustproof and airy. There is a duplication of everything in the operating room, such as two Powers machines, two rectifiers, etc. There are eight aisle lights so that patrons can see just where they are stepping. Pictures are changed daily. A $5,000 Wurlitzer organ has been installed. E. H. Rogers, one of the stockholders, designed the theatre. Mr. Rogers is an expert mechanic, and had charge of the Lyceum, Detroit Opera and Temple playhouses in their last stages of construction.

C. Howard Crane, architect, will take figures about the last of June for a theatre and store building to be erected at a cost of $50,000 for Arthur Caille.

Moving pictures showing the production of steel tubes from the ore to the finished product were shown at the annual convention of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers at the Hotel Pontchartrain on June 23.

The Royal, Monroe and Farmer streets, now has a verty attractive front. The box office has been placed to one side, a brass railing extended along the entrance and another along the exit which keeps each crowd separate. A new gold fibre screen has just been installed.

SMITH.

ST. LOUIS.

JOSEPH WAGENR, the well known showman and moving picture promoter, formerly connected with the Alps Amusement Company, has returned to the exhibitors ranks after an absence of four years. Mr. Wagner is manager of the Liberty theatre and airdome, formerly operated by Fred Huke.

The historical pageant and masque pictures have closed at the Columbia after a successful run and will now be booked at the neighborhood houses. There is a strong demand for the film and it is reported that the Kings Theatre at 818 N. Kingshighway will open with the feature first.

Geo. C. Rose, manager of the Orpheum Theatre at 5965 Easton avenue, is taking a vacation for the summer, and W. B. Laumann, an executive for the Orpheum Co., has added a manager's work to his other duties. The company has built a handsome airdome on the north side of the theatre, which is raised five feet from the street level, and catches all the breezes that blow.

At the Alps Theatre on Easton avenue they are giving away silver certificates every Tuesday and Thursday, four of which entitles the holder to a piece of silverware.

Wm. H. Young, manager of the Easton-Taylor Theatre, is taking a vacation, and his place is being ably filled by H. Williams. An exhaust fan and air cooling device has just been installed in the Easton-Taylor.

J. E. Merick has been put in charge of the inspection and booking departments of the World Feature Corporation in the Navarre Building.

The Times Movie Review, the animated edition of the St. Louis Times, has made four thousand feet of film showing points of interest of Washington, Mo., a town forty miles from St. Louis on the Missouri River. Washington is noted, among other things, as being the original home of the corncob pipe, and the location of the only zither factory in the United States.

An example of how the moving picture industry has developed certain parts of this city may be had by visiting the Welleston district. This section is almost an hour's street car ride from downtown and would be almost unknown to most of the residents of the city if it were not for the many theatres and airdomes that it supports. As it is, it is one of the best known amusement centers of the city, and thousands of people come to the brilliantly lighted street every night. There are five theatres and airdomes in Welleston almost within a stone's throw of one another. The monster Hamilton airdome, with its four thousand seats and myriads of colored lights, the Orpheum theatre and airdome, the beautiful Japanese patterned Mikado Theatre, the Universal airdome and the Fairy Theatre. The combined seating capacity of these amusement places totals more than ten thousand, and many visitors are drawn from every section of the city.

GIEBLER.

THE MYSTERIOUS
MR WU CHUNG FOO
IN FOUR PARTS

A FEATURE THAT WILL APPEAL
TO ALL MOVIE FANS

A FEW CHOICE TERRITORIES STILL OPEN

THE HUMAN WOLVES
IN 5 PARTS

THE KING OF THE BEGGARS
IN 4 PARTS

THE DELAWARE WHIPPING POST
IN 3 REELS

ADVERTISING MATTER
ON ALL OF THE ABOVE SUBJECTS
1-3-6-9 SHEETS
HERALDS · PHOTOS · SLIDES · ETC.
FOR PARTICULARS WRITE—
YOU'LL BE PLEASED—SO WILL WE.

220 W. 42ND ST.
CANDLER BLDG.
FEATURE PHOTOPLAY CO
NEW YORK CITY

OHIO.

THE East Ninth Street Cleveland Realty Company has filed a petition in the Cuyahoga common pleas court asking that a receiver be appointed for the Grand Theatre, East 9th street and Bolivar road, Cleveland, in an effort to find out who is responsible for a debt of $12,000, which the plaintiff says is due it for twelve months rent.

Although a number of suspects have been arrested none have been directly accused and no definite evidence placed against them in connection with the murder of Leo G. Goldman, manager of the Monarch Theatre, Cleveland, who was recently murdered and robbed. The reward of $1,000 offered for information leading to the conviction of the slayers is expected by police to be of material assistance in solving the crime. Two suspects were arraigned in the criminal branch of municipal court and held in $2,000 bail for a further examination. Several witnesses of the murder which occurred on the night of May 29, almost in front of the Goldman home in East 96th street, were at police headquarters in an effort to identify the men, but failed to do so.

The contract has been awarded to William Kolb, of Columbus, to build a $20,000 brick semi-fireproof theatre on East Main street for Carl G. Ludwig, 115 South High street.

Cleveland was selected for the launching of the new Burton Holmes Travelettes and opened Sunday, June 28, at the Miles Theatre. They will run for five weeks with a new Travelette each week.

George Lighton, of New York, and W. Kulp, of New Orleans, have joined the World Film Corporation branch in Cleveland as assistants to E. H. Painter, manager. They have had long connection with the film producing and distributing branches.

The contract has been awarded to C. J. Phelps, East Center street, Marion, to build a brick, semi-fireproof theatre for the Marion Photoplay Company at a cost of $20,000.

Plans will be ready soon for erecting a two-story brick, steel and frame motion picture theater for O. H. Sebring at Sebring, O. The building will measure 40 x 70 feet, and was designed by Architects Clepper & Owen, Youngstown.

George B. Hicks secured the contract to build a one-story hollow tile and stucco theater building for Foster Houston at South Charleston, the work to cost $8,000.

Moving pictures of methods to be used in resuscitating the drowned are shown in the city parks at Dayton by the welfare department of the city. Life savers at Island Park posed for the pictures, which were taken by the National Cash Register Company's cameramen.

Architect Elaird, of Cleveland, and Isadore Weber, of Canal Dover, are taking bids on a brick and reinforced concrete theater to cost $18,000, to be located at Canal Dover.

J. Turnbull will build a theatre at Bellaire. Architect George H. Dieringer, of that place, drew the plans and the building will be of brick fireproof construction and cost $20,000.

The management of the Sebring Opera House, Sebring, is preparing to add many improvements to that popular amusement house and when completed it will be one of the best picture houses in that part of Ohio. An entire new floor of cement will be installed, new chairs, a new arch front and a new ticket booth are in the plans. The house will be open through July 4 and then closed for two weeks for repairs.

Manager Lambrigger has installed an exhaust fan that displaces 10,000 square feet of air every minute at the Grand Theatre, Orrville. F. C. Welty, the electrician, installed the system, which gives the house a complete change of air every ten minutes.

Quimby's Theatre at Zanesville has had unusual sucess of late in displaying films of current events.

The Hippodrome at Lancaster is running programs of high class features and the management is booking all the big specialties in the market.

Special matinees were arranged for the Star Theatre at Upper Sandusky for the lectures of Miss Annette Shaw in connection with several films.

O. L. Elsler has again leased the Grand Theater at Akron from Crouse & Houser, the new owners, and photoplays are new running there.

Akron theaters have an average daily attendance of fifteen thousand, according to M. C. Winters, manager of the Summit Amusement Company. This gives approximately an average attendance of six hundred to each house. The big majority of the houses charge five cents admission, although some, including the Bank, Waldorf and Grotto, are ten cent theaters. The total number will reach almost thirty and all are open the entire day. The equipment alone has an average valuation of $5,000 a theater, totalling at least $150,000. Aside from this a few, including the Bank, Dreamland, Majestic and Dome, own their own buildings. The importance of this is in the fact that Akron has more theaters than any other city its size in the country and probably more money invested in the enterprise.

The Grade Teachers' Club members of Cleveland were the guests of the management of the Metropolitan, Cleveland, showing "The Rise and Fall of Napoleon."

The Skydome at Chillicothe has inaugurated a band concert every Sunday evening. An orchestra is present each evening.

RARIDAN.

INDIANA.

THE airdomes seem to be the only houses not complaining of the heat and poor business. Indiana has been in the midst of a torrid wave for the past two or three weeks that is unusual, and has had a depressing effect on business.

The Progressive Club, whose home is the Hume-Mansur building roof garden, is planning some summer shows which will include motion pictures.

Robert E. Chatten, receiver of the Jefferson Theater Company, Goshen, filed an appraisement of the property at $35,442.15. The property will be sold at receiver's sale July 3. The theater was erected in 1907.

The New Palace Theater, North Judson, has been opened, and is enjoying a good patronage.

Free ice water, extra fans, and ladies with escorts free, is the Princess Theatre idea of the way to fill up the house in Rensselaer while the weather is hot.

Manager Geary, of the Star Theater, Montpelier, raised the price to ten cents for the Mexican war pictures and had big crowds.

The Coliseum Airdome management, Muncie, obtained expressions of opinion from about twenty of the city's best known citzens on "Samson" and run them in an advertisement of the film. Inasmuch as every expression was enthusiastic, it made a fine bit of publicity.

The Magnet Film Company is putting on a film of the Elks state convention and silver jubilee at Evansvile in a number of houses over the state.

George Senger, owner of the Century Theater, Mishawaka, has contracted to run all the Blache and Solax features.

Ross and Dale Loomis, Amboy, who recently opened, are doing a nice business.

"Give us a moving picture machine" is the request of the Indiana Union to the Indiana University trustees, "and we shall be happy." The Indiana Union is the men's organization at the state university. They would have the apparatus put in use in the Student building and give frequent shows.

The Crystal Theater, Columbus, is filling the seats with a baby contest.

J. C. Kolsem, Terre Haute, will erect a moving picture house at 1237 Wabash avenue, to cost $8,000.

M. L. Fleetwood is to open a house in Ellettsville. He will use the Universal service, and vaudeville attractions will be given on Monday and Tuesday. "Admission will be by ticket, costing one dime," says Fleetwood.

Manager Sullivan, of the Princess, Vincennes, gives away money each night, and it keeps the house full. Of course there's a big $1 for somebody, and a lot of pennies for others.

Frank Fletcher has traded the Union Grand Opera House, Union City, for 552 acres of Wabash River bottom land. The new theater owners are Salathiel Boone and his three sons, James, Jessie and Robert, who will take the management September 1.

The building at Montgomery and Calhoun streets, Ft. Wayne, is to be the largest moving picture theater in Ft. Wayne. It is to be built of hollow tile and presed brick on a frame work of steel beams. It is to be three stories high.

Charles Holden, manager of the Wallace Theater, Peru, has sold out to Allard Brothers, of South Bend, owners of a string of about twenty theaters in Northern Indiana, Michigan and Illinois. Allard Brothers contemplate spending about $1,000 on improvements, including a tile floor, a canopy and marble fixtures and ornaments.

Joe Moore and O. Stone will open a new house in Clinton about July 15. Mr. Moore has been operating the Rome Theater in Clinton, but as the building is to be dismantled he was forced to look for new quarters.

The Elks of South Bend went to Berrien Springs, Mich., by auto and there put on a motion picture scenario for a Chicago film company entitled "Big Brothers." Two waifs are rescued from a mean constable, given a bath at the town pump, an auto ride, a feast of good things to appeal the stomach of a Goliath, fitted out with new suits, and then tucked into bed by the big brothers.

Cecil Burton and Harold Johnson have bought the Universal Theater on South Fourteenth street, Newcastle.

The Pearl Theatre at Bass Lake has been opened for the summer. Henry Vergin, manager, has just finished a cement approach to the theater.

Michawaka industries will have a place in the International Harvester Company Service Bureau industrilogs. "The Dawn of Power" and "The Dawn of Commerce." E. B. Lockwood of the I. H. C. is superintending the work.

Fred Skinner, manager of the Electric Theater, Rome City, is advertising moral and educational films. Rome City is a favorite resort for church organizations.

The Alice Theater, Vincennes, is getting a new plaster front that is attractive.

"The Hour of Reckoning" was one of the films being advertised in the lobby of the Orpheum Theater, Terre Haute, the night Elroy B. Smith, its wealthy owner, was shot by Mrs. Myrtle Gibbons. Smith died instantly. The woman charged Smith with being the cause of the divorce being granted her husband. Mrs. Gibbons is in custody, having confessed.

WILLIAM.

NORTHWESTERN NEW YORK.

HAROLD Edel, manager of the Strand theatre, Buffalo, has closed a deal to erect in the exclusive residential section of Rochester, N. Y., a moving picture theater, with a seating capacity of 1500. Mr. Edel will not give out the location until the deal for the site is closed. There will be a large organ and a complete orchestra. The house will be known as the Regent. Two other large theaters, one in Buffalo and another in Syracuse, promoted by Mr. Edel, bears the same name. He has taken an option on a piece of property in Ithaca, N. Y., and may build there a moving picture theater, seating 1200.

Dr. P. C. Cornell, manager of the Star theater, Buffalo, and Miss Jessie Bonstelle recently awarded a prize to Dr. and Mrs. W. W. Quinton of that city. The winners wrote a play, "The Finger of Fate", which was accepted by those in charge of the contest.

Jean Ceugneux, a prominent moving picture cameraman, was a recent caller on George W. Erdmann, manager of the Elmwood theater, Buffalo. The local newspapers devoted considerable space to a write-up of the visitor, who, with a camera, will follow General Villa in Mexico.

The Allendale Theater Co., which leased the Allendale theater, Buffalo, has been incorporated, with the followiwng directors: J. Adam Weiss, Frederic Ullman, George W. Erdmann, Reginald Medlicott and Michael A. Crage.

Carnival Court, a Buffalo summer resort, is using moving pictures with other features to attract the crowds. Edward Tranter, sporting editor of The Buffalo Enquirer, is press agent for this popular amusement place.

Traveling at full speed in an automobile so that they could be taken by Oscar Simon, a cameraman, Roy C. Bauer, operating the car, and Robert Maxwell Smith, a newspaper man, were seriously injured. The accident occurred recently near Buffalo, when the machine was going at the rate of ninetv-five miles an hour. Both men live in that city. The automobile skidded and overturned in a ditch. As a result of the accident, Bauer and Smith will be in a Buffalo hospital for some time. The Buffalo newspapers strongly featured the moving picture end of the story.

A theater will be built on Liberty street, Batavia, N. Y. The house will be managed by Constantine & Rheinhart.

Moving pictures of a municipal day celebration were taken recently in Syracuse. The pictures will be shown at the Panama-Pacific Exposition next year.

Louis Green has been appointed Buffalo representative of the Box Office Attraction Company. He was recently assistant manager of the Academy theater, Buffalo. He formerly lived in Boston and was with the Mark-Brock theatrical enterprises for four years. At present Mr. Green is making a special feature of booking "East Lynne."

Paul B. Ellicott, representing the Empress Film Company of Indianapolis, spent his vacation in Buffalo. He was formerly connected with the General Film Company in the latter city.

The Colonial theater, Elmira, has arranged to exhibit the film showing the Knights Templar centennial conclave parade held recently in Rochester, N. Y. About 120 Elmira men appeared in the procession.

The Gayety theater, Buffalo, which features burlesque, and occasionally moving pictures, has closed for the summer.

Harold Edel, manager of the Strand theater, Buffalo, is spending his spare time at Wanakah, N. Y., on Lake Erie, where his summer home is located. During his absence the Strand is ably looked after by his assistant, E. L. Hyman.

The new Maxine moving picture theater at Seneca and Cazenovia streets, Buffalo, was opened recently. The prices are ten cents for adults and five cents for children. The house seats 800 and is absolutely fireproof. It has a perfect indirect lighting system. The ventilation and other features are up-to-date. The Cazenovia district is ideal for a theater of this kind and a heavy patronage is promised.

BILLY BISON.

When Writing to Advertisers
Kindly Mention
MOVING PICTURE WORLD

I Have Bought the Exclusive Rights for the States of

Ohio Indiana Michigan Wisconsin and Illinois

(Except Cook Co.)

FOR

SELIG'S Wonderful Production

OF

REX BEACH'S Masterpiece

THE SPOILERS

Featuring William Farnum and Kathlyn Williams.

The greatest picture ever produced in America.

Broke all records at the Strand Theatre, New York, and the Studebaker Theatre, Chicago.

Elaborate lithographs, heralds, lobby displays and other advertising matter.

Write or wire for bookings.

F. O. NIELSEN

720 Schiller Building CHICAGO, ILL.

LICENSED FILM STORIES

EDISON.

QUALIFYING FOR LENA (July 13).—Hans was head over heels in love with the charming Lena Bimbleback, domestic engineer of the Brownson family. Lena liked Hans, but she was not the kind to allow a little thing like liking to blind her to her obvious course. So she spoke to Hans firmly but kindly as follows: "I don't marry no man only what has a automobile, some property and a Van Dyke whiskers."

Hans, crushed by this unexpected blow, crept away. On the sidewalk he picked up a diamond ring. Hurrying to a pawnbroker, he bashfully slipped the ring across the counter. The pawnbroker gave him all he asked on the ring and Hans nearly fainted. With an energy Napoleon might have envied, Hans started his campaign for his beloved. His first step was to buy an automobile for twenty-five dollars. The man who owned it assured him that it was cheap at that price.

Hans next bought a plot of land in the heart of the select residential part of Webb City. It is true that Webb City existed for the most part in the ingenious brain of the real estate dealer, but that did not bother Hans. Then Hans trimmed his whiskers into some semblance of the style affected by the Dutch painter, and went to call on Lena. After her first shock of startled surprise, Lena willingly consented to take an automobile ride out to their new property. Before the ride was ended, Hans found himself secretly wishing that he had spent as much as $35.00 and had bought a really modern car. When he discovered that a small boy was catching sunfish in his Webb City plot, he found it very hard to explain things quite satisfactorily to Lena.

The diamond ring had been lost by Mrs. Brownson, Lena's mistress. She informed the police that it was missing. Through the pawnbroker, they traced it to Hans. So it happened that when Hans returned from his ride, he was incontinently thrown into a dark and gloomy cell to weep and wonder mournfully whether Lena would ever be his.

THE TWO DOCTORS (July 14).—Henry Martin and Bob Westerly studied together at the same medical college, or better, they were both at the same medical college, for whereas Martin threw himself into his work with a devotion that brought upon him the opprobrious nickname of "grind"; Westerly was entirely too fond of a good time ever to let his studies interfere with having one. As a result, it occasionally happened that Westerly found it difficult to keep his work up to the level of that of the rest of the class. On one such occasion, he entered Martin's room and attempted to steal Martin's laboriously-prepared notes on an important thesis. Martin came in while he was at work, and caught him. Instead of reporting Westerly to the Dean, as he should have done, however, he contented himself with ordering Westerly contemptuously from the room.

Years later, Martin had a modest little practice in the heart of the country. Westerly had settled in the city. Through methods which were as unscrupulous as they were unprofessional, he had become successful and rich. Alice, a poor shop girl, nervously broken down as a result of hard work, was given a fair example of Westerly's methods when she went to him for treatment. Westerly quite coldly and simply refused to see her unless she paid in advance, and when her money was all gone, told her that he was not in business for love. Through the generosity of her friends, Alice was sent into the country. As luck would have it, she came to the village in which Dr. Martin lived. The doctor immediately took the girl under his care. Thanks to his treatment, and to the kindness of the people of the countryside, she was soon completely cured.

When Dr. Westerly's health broke down, he went on a shooting trip to recuperate. While hunting in the woods, he accidentally shot himself in the arm. His guide helped him to Dr. Martin's. Martin's first and natural impulse was to refuse to treat his old enemy, but the man's pitiful condition left him no alternative. But when he called in Alice to act as a nurse, and she recognized Westerly as the man who had taken all her money, and then brutally dismissed her, it was almost too much for the doctor's forbearance. However, the two repaid Westerly good for evil by nursing him back to health and strength. But when the grateful and remorseful patient offered to set Martin up in a lucrative city practice, Martin refused with thanks—and Alice kissed him.

THE EVER-GALLANT MARQUIS (July 15).—The Marquis was the pest of the hotel. His impulsive, romantic disposition, coupled with an entirely un-American manner of expression, made every man in the hotel extremely anxious to show the Marquis the interesting possibilities of a coach whip. For the Marquis lavished his attentions upon every woman in the hotel. It made not the slightest difference to him if she were single, married or engaged. For each he was a devoted slave, filled with oily smirks and sleek insinuations. One day the Marquis disappeared for a time, and returned—honi soit qui mal y pense—with a garter. This article of apparel, he proudly informed the men, he intended to give to one of the ladies in their party as a slight token of his esteem. Henry promptly wagered the Marquis that none of the ladies would accept his present. It was agreed that the attempted act of presentation should take place on the evening of a large masquerade ball at the hotel.

On the evening of the dance the Marquis pursued Alice to a quiet corner, and begged her to accept the garter. Alice modestly retired behind a curtain, and told the Marquis that if she decided to accept his present she would let him know. The Marquis waited in an ecstacy of suspense. While he waited, the guests in the plot crept up behind him. In a few moments a remarkably well-shaped limb appeared through the curtains. Upon it the Marquis fastened the garter. Immediately afterward the groom upon whose leg the present had been fastened stepped out. Immediately after that Henry challenged the Marquis to a duel to the death.

The Marquis did not want to fight at all, and it required considerable effort on the part of his somewhat unsympathetic second to get him to the duelling ground. When the sword was placed in his hand he closed his eyes and thrust wildly in the general direction of his opponent. A groan of horror greeted his effort. When the Marquis opened his eyes he discovered Henry stretched on the ground before him. The horrified seconds warned the Marquis that his only chance of escaping the electric chair was to fly from the country at once. So, while the Marquis fled wildly on an unsaddled horse, Henry arose and went back to the hotel with his friends.

AN UP-TO-DATE COURTSHIP (July 15).—Abe Perkins and Si Prime were ardent rivals for the hand of the charming widow Gray. The widow rather liked both of them, but with typical feminine perversity, refused to express any decided preference for either. Si's feelings may be imagined when, calling on the widow one day, he discovered that she was going out riding in Abe's buggy. Si had rather hoped that she would go walking with him. While Si was sulking after his rival's triumphant exit, a man on a motorcycle arrived on the scene. There was a seat on the motorcycle whereon a passenger might be carried. A sudden brilliant scheme flashed into Si's placid rural mind. Hastily diving into his jeans, he brought out a large wad of money, and bought the motorcycle. A few hasty directions from the man convinced Si that running a motorcycle was ridiculously easy. Mounting his newly-acquired property, he set off in pursuit of the buggy.

As luck would have it, Abe had been obliged to stop in order to mend one of the reins. The widow, impatient of the delay, and filled with astonished awe at Si's motorcycle, readily accepted his invitation to take a ride. Abe finished mending his trace, and rode despondently back to town. When he drew up in front of the village garage, his eyes fell on an automobile for sale at an almost unbelievably reasonable price. If Abe had known anything about automobiles the price might well have given him pause. But he didn't. So he bought it and set out after the motorcycle.

Long since, Si had discovered that the motorcycle had not quite the same docile nature he had at first fondly supposed. After ten minutes of riding the widow was reduced to a state of incoherent terror. Finally they hit a rock—and stopped. Just at this moment Abe arrived in his machine, picked up the bruised and indignant widow, grinned at his rival, and speeded down the road at a spanking gait of six miles per hour. The discomfited Si followed on his wounded but yet unconquered motorcycle. When Abe and the widow arrived at her home the machine gracefully and unostentatiously blew up. While Si was laughing at Abe, the ruffled widow swept into the house, vowing she would never speak to either of them again.

ACROSS THE BURNING TRESTLE (July 18).—Tom was an expert telegrapher when he married Doris. During the course of their courtship he had taught her how to send and receive, and as a result, at the time of their marriage, she was almost as proficient as her husband. Six months afterward Tom became very ill. The doctor ordered him to go to the mountains to recuperate. To raise the money which was so badly needed to restore Tom to health, Doris began to look about for some means of livelihood. An advertisement in a newspaper, offering a position to an unmarried telegraph operator seemed to offer the best chance. So Doris presented herself at the office of the division superintendent. When he askel her if she were married she replied defiantly in the nefative. The superintendent engaged her, and assigned her to a wild station on the mountain division of the railroad.

Jake Mills, the operator Doris relieved at the station, was very indignant at his summary dismissal to make room for the girl. He left the station sullenly, muttering vague threats. A few weeks later Tom was allowed to leave the sanitarium. He came directly to the station and Doris took him to the little home she had prepared in the woods. Jake Mills saw them together. Knowing that Doris must have been unmarried to get her position, he jumped at the obvious conclusion. On the morning after Tom's arrival Jake came to the station and attempted to kiss Doris. Her furious resistance angered him beyond measure, and when he discovered from a dispatch that the division superintendent was coming to the station that afternoon, his mind was in exactly the right condition to prompt him to attempt a terrible revenge upon the man who had discharged him.

Accordingly, he set fire to the trestle across which the train must pass. Doris discovered the fire, and while Tom held Jake at the point of a revolver, rushed down the track and made her way over the blazing timbers on the trestle. Arrived at the other side, she staggered up the track, and flagged the train just in time. The rescued party reached the station just in time to rescue the weakened Tom from Jake's clutches. The grateful superintendent readily forgave Doris for her deception, and appointed her husband and herself to a far more important position, carrying with it a very comfortable salary.

MEG O' THE MOUNTAINS (Special—Two Parts—July 17).—Meg lived down in Carolina in the shadow of the great Blue Ridge. When she had been a little younger she had been winsomely and strangely beautiful—a gypsy-like elf of the woods and forests. Now, she is mad..... The neighbors said cruel things about Meg, and turned their faces aside when she passed. And from her little son, they shrank, and turned away as from a thing accursed.

When Hugh Gregory opened a store in the little mountain town and fell in love with the widowed Darthea Westerly, he incurred the bitter hatred of Simon Grant, who had long courted Darthea. When Meg's little son ran away, and Gregory found him, and gave him back to his mother, the crazed woman thought she recognized in him the father of her boy. When she returned home she told her brother that she had found her child's father. The brother, infuriated, confronted Gregory, and demanded that he marry his sister. Gregory, naturally, refused indignantly. Simon Grant met Jake, Meg's brother, while he was still half insane with rage over Gregory's refusal, and found him in a willing mood to listen to Simon's scheme.

The next day, as Gregory and the colonel were riding together, Jake, egged on by Simon, fired at them from a barn. Gregory proved himself a good samaritan by saving Jake from the infuriated mob which thirsted for his life. Meanwhile, Darthea, who had fallen in love with Gregory, learned of Meg's terrible accusation against him. The story naturally changed her feelings toward the man, particularly when Gregory, realizing the futility of argument, refused to say a word in his own defense. Then suddenly Meg came upon Simon Grant, and with a miraculous flash of understanding, remembered that he, not Gregory, was the man. But with the passing of her madness, Meg's life fluttered and went out like a candle in the wind, but not before she had told Gregory and Darthea the truth.

VITAGRAPH.

"THE SOUL OF LUIGI" (July 13).—In the poor Italian quarter of New York lives Luigi, an Italian peasant and inventor, who is so absorbed in his work that he greatly neglects his wife, Nedda. She is younger than he and fond of pleasure. Not understanding his neglect, she strongly resents it. Tonio, a dissipated young Italian, makes love to her, but she repulses him. Luigi interests John Graham, a millionaire, in his invention. One night Graham sends for him in a hurry, just as he is about to take Nedda to the theatre. She is hurt and disgusted and Tonio sees his opportunity. Having received a small legacy from Italy, he persuades Nedda to elope with him. Luigi's proposition is taken up by Graham, and he returns flushed with triumph to tell Nedda, only to find a note saying she has gone with Tonio. He curses her and vows to henceforth devote himself, body and soul, to money-getting. His invention is a success and he moves to a wealthier neighborhood. Tonio, after a short time, deserts Nedda, leaving her with a little girl, Beata. Nedda worked day and night to give the child an education. Years pass and riches pour in on Luigi, but they bring him no pleasure, as he has become a man without a soul; a miser. One day, Nedda is ill and Beata out of work, when she sees Luigi's advertisement for a stenographer. After some difficulty, Beata secures the position. Luigi, without knowing why, takes an interest in the girl, and his heart is softened. Chance brings him and Nedda together. Dying, she begs his forgiveness, which he readily grants, acknowledges his own mistakes and before she passes away, promises to bring up Beata as his own child. His love for the girl brings back to him the soul he had lost in his love for gold.

3

The Author

The Heroine

The Hero

3

THE TREY O' HEARTS

THE GREAT MODERN PROBLEM STORY

BY

LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

Author of "THE BRASS BOWL," "LONE WOLF," "THE BLACK BAG,"
"FORTUNE HUNTER," ETC.

THE STORY

IT COST $15,000.00

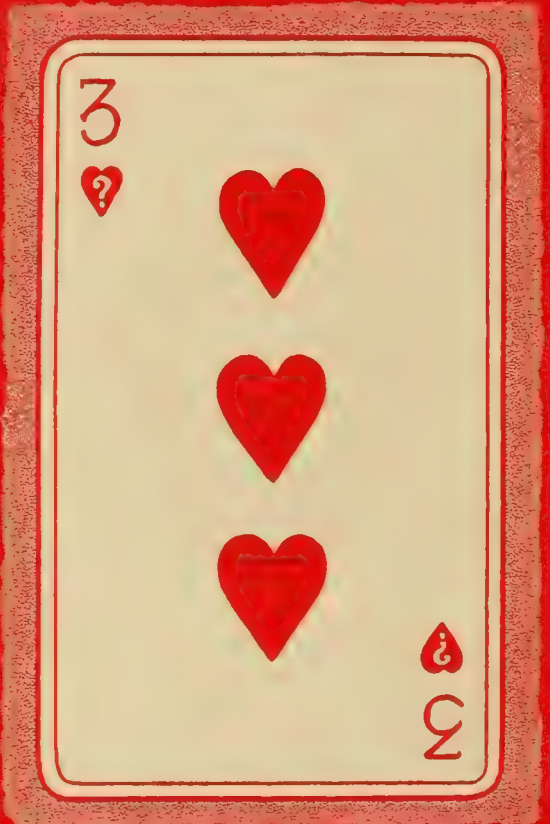
EXCLUSIVELY UNIVERSAL

VANCE'S MASTERPIECE

A THRILL IN EVERY PARAGRAPH

WILL APPEAR SERIALLY FOR 15 WEEKS IN EVERY LEADING NEWSPAPER IN THE UNITED STATES

STARTS WEEK JULY 28th



THE PICTURE

WILL COST A FORTUNE

SURPASSES "LUCILLE LOVE"

A GOLD SEAL DE LUXE

A TREMOR IN EVERY SCENE

TWO REELS WILL BE RELEASED EVERY WEEK FOR 15 WEEKS—3 REELS THE FIRST WEEK

STARTS WEEK JULY 28th

THE TREY O' HEARTS

Written by LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE Produced by WILFRED LUCAS

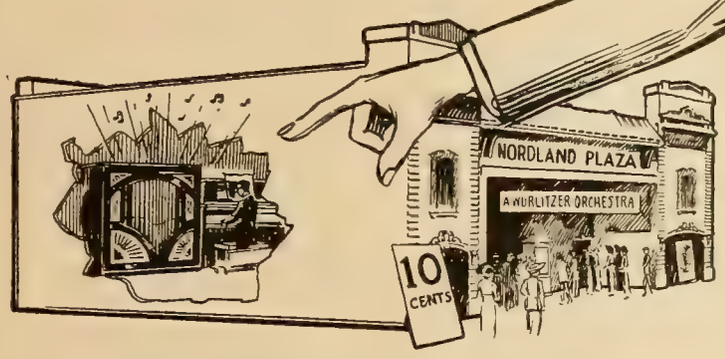
AN EXCEPTIONALLY STRONG COMPANY CAST
FOR THIS SENSATIONAL LITERARY MASTERPIECE

CAN BE SEEN ONLY IN

MOVING PICTURES
UNIVERSAL

"There Is the Reason Why Mine Is the Only Straight Picture House in Cincinnati Getting 10c.—and Packing Them in 3,500 a Night"



So spoke popular "Billy" Brown (the man in the picture) owner of the Palatial Nordland Plaza Theatre, Cincinnati; and Brown speaks after having had the instrument over a year. Wurlitzer Music in "This NORDLAND PLAZA theatre is an equal feature with the pictures."

Other high-class houses running the same Film Service, but WITHOUT Wurlitzer Music, can get but 5 cents.

IT'S THE WONDERFUL NEW

WURLITZER

REG U S PAT OFF

ONE MAN ORCHESTRA

HE'S POINTING TO, THAT TURNED THE TRICK

Times have changed. Expenses are greater. Moving Picture Men realize that they've simply got to either "wake up" or close up; got to get out of the rut; got to offer something EXTRA to get the "crowd." Here's that "something extra"—The Wurlitzer One Man Orchestra.

One Man Plays the Entire Orchestra

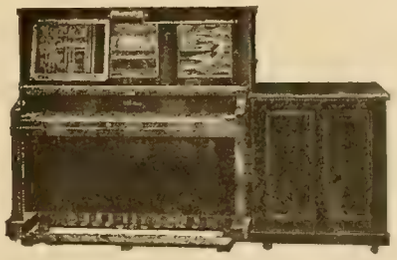
A Wurlitzer One Man Orchestra is entirely controlled by the fingers and feet; subject to lightning change and perfectly timed to all the rapidly shifting scenes of the picture. Plays every kind of Music and every kind of effect. Full Orchestra and Full Brass Band—Bass Drum, Snare Drum, Church Organ, Cornet, Violin, Bass Viol, Piano, Castanets, Xylophone, Fife, Cymbals, Flute, Chimes, Orchestra Bells, Tambourine, Bag Pipe, Kettle Drum, Cello, Triangle, Ocean's Roar, Choir, Quartet, Telephone or Door Bell, Storm, Thunder and Lightning; Moaning of Wind; Cat's Yowl, Rooster Crowing, Dog Barking, Rifle Shot, Clatter, Cuckoo, Train Effect, Glass Crashing, Sleigh Bells, Cannon's Roar, Bird Song, Fire Department, Horse Trot, Calf's Cry, Pig's Cry, Lion's Roar, Automobile Horn, Baby's Cry, Door Creak, Indian Tom Tom, Steamboat Whistle, etc., etc.

Write for Interesting Illustrated Catalogue and Get Posted.

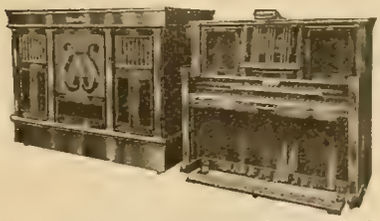
WURLITZER

121 East Fourth Street, Cincinnati, Ohio

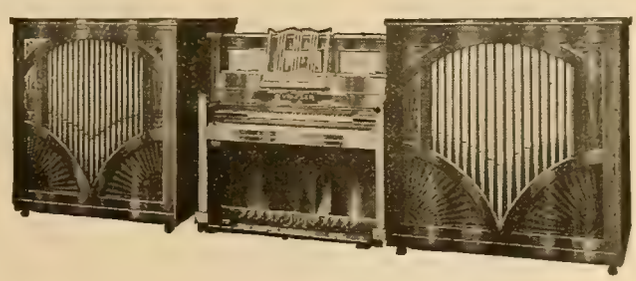
New York City Store: 113-119 West 40th St.
Chicago Store: 329-331 So. Wabash Ave.
San Francisco Store 985 Market St.



Wurlitzer Motion Picture Orchestra—Style F
SMALL PAYMENTS. WRITE.



Wurlitzer Motion Picture Orchestra—Style R
SMALL PAYMENTS. WRITE.



Wurlitzer Motion Picture Orchestra—Style H
SMALL PAYMENTS. WRITE.

"FOGG'S MILLIONS" (Special—Two Parts—July 14).—Old Peter Fogg, uncle to William Fogg, has a stroke of paralysis and is ordered to the seaside by Dr. Jack Manly, who is in love with Milly, William Fogg's daughter. Milly, however, is in love with Loring, an adventurer, whom Jim Marvin, William Fogg's gardener, believes to be the man that eloped with his (Jim's) wife. The gardener tells Manly of his suspicions and swears vengeance should they prove to be true. Milly, horrified, overhears the conversation. Grace Marvin, an adventuress, hears of Peter Fogg's millions, and scheming to get possession of them, scrapes up an acquaintance with the old man.

Grace's pretended kindness and affection win old Peter's love and he marries her. Loring, hearing his old friend and sweetheart, Grace, has married the Fogg millions, at once ceases his attentions to Milly and hastens to the seaside to renew his acquaintance with Grace. Old Fogg finds Loring and Grace in each other's arms, has an apoplectic stroke and drops dead, leaving Grace his sole heir. She and Loring return to town and announce their coming marriage. Meanwhile, Jim Marvin's suspicions concerning Loring are confirmed and he visits the Fogg home, with the intention of shooting his enemy. There he finds Grace is his former wife. He has Grace arrested for bigamy and frightens Loring so that he leaves the place forever. Milly marries Jack Manly and the Fogg Millions revert to the rightful heir.

"THE ARRIVAL OF JOSIE" (July 15).—An orphan and the drudge of the household, Josie lives with her ill-tempered aunt, Frau Rheinhart, who keeps a small boarding house in Germany. Life would be unbearable for Josie, were it not for the fact that Miss Blake, one of the boarders, an American girl, studying music, has taken quite a fancy to Josie. When Miss Blake finishes her course and leaves for America, she gives Josie her address, saying if she ever visits America, she must come and see her. Josie is very sad at Miss Blake's going, and things becoming unendurable, Josie decides to go to America. She packs up, leaves the room topsy-turvy and a note informing her Aunt of her destination. Coming over on the steamer, a drunken emigrant insults Josie and she is protected by a young man, who, with his bride, are on their honeymoon. Shortly after recovering from an attack of seasickness, Josie gets her first view of New York's tall buildings. After some amusing incidents, due to her lack of knowledge of American life, she finds to her sorrow, the Blakes have gone West. She becomes acquainted with Hank, a grocery boy, and through him, secures a job as a servant with the young bride and groom, she met on the steamer. Several weeks later, while Hank holds her in loving embrace, Josie has a vision of her Aunt's consternation at finding her niece has fled, and thinks to herself, "If Aunty could see me now!" at the same time thinking of the appointed day when she and Hank will be man and wife.

"THE LITTLE CAPTAIN" (July 16).—While visiting General Forbes, a friend of his Daddy, Sonny Jim imitates the soldiers at the garrison and feels certain that he was cut out for one of them. The General tells him always to help a comrade in distress. Later, a convict escapes from prison and coming upon Sonny Jim playing sentinel, asks help and says he is a comrade in distress. Sonny Jim, remembers the General's command, secures one of his father's suits, a large chicken and an apple pie, and finds the convict a hiding place in the cellar. The loss of the suit is discovered and Sonny Jim being questioned, confesses. The General gravely tells him he and Shep have aided and abetted a criminal and that they will have to be court-martialled. The next day, while being "sentenced" in the little court, Daddy, Jim and Mother Dear interrupt the scene, displaying a note from the escaped convict who writes that he returns the suit with thanks, and that after having seen his dying wife, had given himself up to the authorities. Sonny is forgiven, amid loud cheers. Some weeks later, through the General's influence, a pardon is secured for the convict's release. Sonny passes the official-looking document to the warden, who tells the prisoner, the little boy has secured his pardon. The convict breaks down, and with tears of gratitude, gravely salutes Sonny, then, shaking hands with him, bids all goodbye. Sonny Jim and his parents leave for home, after receiving three rousing cheers from the soldiers, and a cordial invitation to come again.

"PIGS IS PIGS" (July 17).—After a strenuous argument with Flannery, the local Express Agent, Mr. Morehouse refuses to pay the 30c charges on each of the two guinea pigs shipped him, claiming they are pets and subject to the 25c rate. Flannery replies, "Pigs is pigs and I'm blame sure them animals is pigs, not pets, and the rules says, 30c each'." Mr. Morehouse writes many times to the Express Company, claiming guinea-pigs are not common pigs, and each time is referred to a different Department. Flannery receives a note from the Tariff Department inquiring as to condition of consignment, to which he replies, "There are eight now! All good eaters. Paid out two dollars for cabbage so far." The matter finally reaches the President, who writes a friend, a Zoological Professor. Unfortunately that gentleman is in South Africa, causing a delay of many months, during which time the pigs increase to 160. At last word is received from the learned man proving that guinea pigs are not common pigs. Flannery is then ordered to collect 25c each for two guinea-pigs and deliver the entire lot to consignee. There are now 800 and Flannery is horrified to find Morehouse has moved to parts unknown. He is about to give up in despair when the Company orders him to forward the entire collection to the Main Office, to be disposed of as unclaimed property, in accordance with the general rule.

"THE SONG OF THE GHETTO" (Special—Two Parts—July 18).—Ernesto and Marius are two struggling musicians in Milan. Rosa, their landlady's daughter, worships Ernesto, who returns her affection in a casual way. Ernesto secures an engagement in America, and Rosa pleads to go with him, but he will not hear of it. Two years later, Mario tries his fortune in America. Ernesto, now a popular tenor, cuts Mario dead when they meet. Ernesto is in love with Yvette, a soprano in the same opera company, but she takes his love lightly. Doubting the wonders of her own voice, Yvette sings in the streets of the Ghetto where Mario recognizes the unusual qualities of her voice, secures her permission to try it out and she is hailed as a wonder.

Discovering where Ernesto is playing, Rosa waits for him at the stage door. Ernesto scornfully refuses to recognize Rosa and she swears to be revenged. Mario and Yvette fall in love with each other. Later he discovers her real identity, and angrily goes to her home. He arrives in time to save her from the forced embraces of Ernesto, for which she is grateful and gains recognition for Mario by singing his composition, 'The Song of the Ghetto." In the midst of their success, Rosa, attempts to stab Ernesto, but instead strikes Mario when he rushes between them. The wound fortunately proves slight, Ernesto and Rosa beg his forgiveness, which is granted, and Yvette acknowledges her love for Mario, as he entwines her in his arms."

"Hallberg"

TALK NO. 33

Projection Efficiency

You must not trust the selection of your new motion picture machine and equipment or changes and improvements in your present equipment to any Tom, Dick or Harry. Be sure the man from whom you get advice is qualified. I am an expert and an engineer. Sometimes I can improve conditions even after all experts available have been consulted. Why? Because I know the tricks of all makes of machines. I know all about motion picture arc lighting, and I know all about the different makes and styles of screens. Shutters for machines and lenses are specialties with me. Even the selection of a condensing lens alone makes a big difference in your picture. Leave the selection of the equipment to me and ask me for advice. I will help you out.

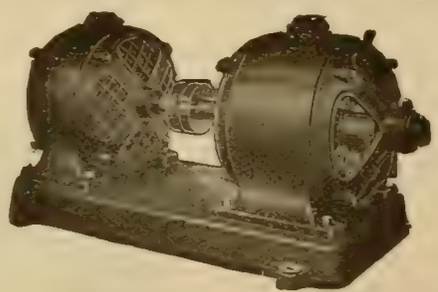
I manufacture motor generators and deal in all makes of rotary converters and rectifiers for changing A.C. to D.C. Get my prices. They are not higher than those of any one else and you may as well deal with the HOUSE OF QUALITY as not.

I take old machines in trade as part payment for new ones, and I also make liberal allowance on your old rheostats, A. C. Economizers, A. C. to D. C. Converters and Rectifiers in trade for the celebrated "HALLBERG" A. C. to D.C. Economizers, which give the BEST LIGHT with the LEAST CURRENT.

Distributor of the Celebrated Mirror Glass Screen and "Mirroroide" Curtain

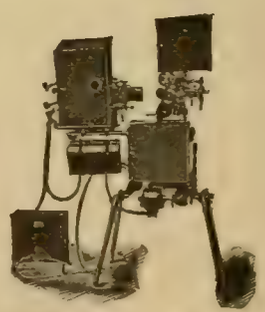
SIMPLEX

Distributor Simplex Machines



HALLBERG A. C. to D. C. ECONOMIZER FOR ONE OR TWO LAMPS

Distributor Power's 6-A Machines



POWER'S 6A

Factory Selling Headquarters for POWER'S, SIMPLEX, MOTIOGRAPH and EDISON MACHINES, "HALLBERG" STANDARD A. C. ECONOMIZERS, "HALLBERG" D. C. ECONOMIZERS, MERCURY ARC RECTIFIERS, MOVING PICTURE MACHINES and FLAME ARC CARBONS

I EQUIP THEATRES COMPLETELY

Free Circulars on all makes of M. P. Machines, but Hallberg's Big Catalogue, 100 pages, costs you 25c. by mail.

J. H. HALLBERG "THE HOUSE OF QUALITY" 36 East 23rd Street, New York

"Agfa"

standard throughout the world for uniformity and superior photographic qualities

AGFA NEGATIVE

has speed, fine gradation, and the emulsion being exceptionally free in silver, gives the greatest possible latitude in exposure and development.

AGFA POSITIVE

has the standard printing speed, is absolutely uniform in quality, perforates perfectly, is practically non-static and gives an exceptionally fine deposit which assures perfect gradation. The base is tough yet flexible and carries our guarantee of the greatest possible wearing qualities.

AGFA NON-FLAM

has been approved by municipal, state and government authorities. The emulsion is the standard AGFA, the base is made under a new formula and will give the best possible service.

Samples, prices and other particulars furnished gratis upon request

---

Attention is directed to the fact that the Goodwin Film & Camera Co. have granted us the right and license to import, use and sell to others, to be sold or used by them, both AGFA and GEVAERT cinematograph or motion picture films.

This action on our part has been prompted mainly by our desire to relieve our customers of any concern that may have been caused by any claims made in the past or that may be made in the future, to the effect that film purchased from us infringed upon such patent.

RAW FILM SUPPLY CO.

Sole American Agents

AGFA and GEVAERT Raw Stock

15 EAST 26TH STREET NEW YORK CITY

KALEM.

"A DIAMOND IN THE ROUGH" (Special—Two Parts—July 13).—Grim meets Valeria, an heiress, at Mrs. Masterly's home, Hume, a fortune hunter who aspires to Valeria's hand, becomes intensely jealous when he learns that Grim has fallen in love with her. Perceiving this, Valeria who cares nothing for Grim, flirts with him out of sheer mischief.

A bank failure wipes out Valeria's fortune. The girl discovers Hume's real character when the fortune hunter hears of her misfortune. Grim, however, begs Valeria to marry him. Piqued by Hume's action, the girl consents. A revulsion of feeling overcomes the girl immediately after the ceremony and she tells Grim she hates him.

Too proud to plead with his wife, Grim departs for the West on business. During his absence Hume endeavors to see Valeria. Heavily in debt, the ne'er-do-well steals a purse dropped by his friend Travis. The latter learns of Hume's contemptible act after the money has been spent. He gives the man twenty-four hours in which to return the money.

Desperate, Hume calls up Valeria late that night. The girl reluctantly consents to see him. The wretch informs her of Travis' threat and begs her for money. Amazed, Valeria shrinks from him just as Grim returns home. Filled with cold fury, the husband drives Hume from the house. The following morning, Valeria is informed that her husband has instituted proceedings for divorce.

Grim leaves on a hunting trip in an effort to forget what has happened. Valeria, who has discovered that she loves her husband, ascertains his destination and follows him. While pursuing a bear, the husband steps into a bear trap. His agonized cries are heard by Valeria who comes to his rescue. Later comes the knowledge of his wife's love for him. His heart filled with joy. Grim takes her in his arms.

"ACCUSED" (July 14).—Slocum receives a sum of money in payment of a mortgage, in the presence of his employer and life-long friend, Kent. The man carelessly places the money under a book. When Slocum searches for the money an hour later, it has disappeared. Despite his protests of innocence, Kent believes Slocum has stolen the money and discharges him.

Bert, Kent's son, loves Dora, daughter of the accused man. Filled with bitterness, Slocum forbids his daughter to have anything to do with the son of the man who has called him a thief. Dora, however, promises to marry Bert when her father's innocence has been established. Shortly afterwards, the Slocums leave for the mountains where they make their home.

Several months later, Bert and a chum leave on a hunting trip. While chasing a deer, the boy loses his way. He finally succumbs of cold and exhaustion. As fate would have it, Slocum, who lives close by, comes upon the boy. Remembering the wrong he has suffered, he determines to let the son of his accuser perish, but the thought that his daughter loves the boy, causes him to pick up Bert, who is unconscious, and carry him home.

At the same moment, carpenters making repairs in Kent's offices, discover the missing bills in a rat hole. Kent is overcome with remorse when he learns of how he had wronged his old friend. He immediately telegraphs to his son in the mountains requesting him to inform Slocum of what has occurred.

The telegram reaches Bert's chum just as he is about to start out with a searching party. The men finally arrive at Slocum's home where the missing boy is found. Bert reads the telegram and then hands it to Slocum. While the man reads the message, Bert, turning to his sweetheart, reminds her of her promise.

"THE EXPRESS MESSENGER" (Special—Two Parts—July 15).—Billy, an express messenger, loves Ruth. The girl is Brent's stenographer. The boy is ordered to take charge of a valuable consignment of jewels, which is being sent to a distant city. Rand, Flint and Burton, crooks, plan to steal the gems.

Holding up a telegrapher at one of the stations, the thieves strip him of his uniform, after which they bind the man. Clad in the telegrapher's uniform, Flint later hands Billy a forged order, bidding him to turn the consignment over to Flint and return to the city. Suspecting nothing wrong, the express messenger obeys. The crook succeeds in stealing the package and jumping off the train while it is under way, he returns to the city.

Billy sees the man walking with Rand and Burton. Puzzled, the boy follows and sees the men enter a saloon. Meanwhile, the telegraph operator succeeds in tearing the insulation off the wires with his teeth, and although bound, manages to send his story to the office. Billy learns of how he had been victimized when he enters Brent's office. In his rage, the manager discharges the boy.

Remembering he had just seen the thief, Billy, accompanied by a detective, hastens to the saloon. They are seen by Rand and Burton. The Crooks flee, with Billy and the detective close behind. Policemen join in the chase, which leads over housetops.

DEVELOPING AND PRINTING
Film Titles

Manufacturers of COMMERCIAL DOMESTIC OR EDUCATIONAL

Moving Pictures

All Work Guaranteed
Expert Workmanship
Prompt Deliveries
Prices Right

Expert Camera Men Furnished
For All Occasions

Standard Motion Picture Co.

1620 Mallers Building

Telephone, Central 2853

5 So. Wabash Avenue
CHICAGO, ILL.

The two thieves head for their rendezvous. Billy seizes hold of Rand. In the fight which ensues, the two fall through a skylight, landing on top of Flint, who has been sorting the stolen gems. The crooks are captured after a hard battle. In recognition of Billy's work in recovering the jewels, Brent reinstates the boy.

"WANTED AN HEIR" (July 17).—Desiring to ascertain which of his poor relations is worthy of inheriting his fortune. Miller invites them to spend a week with him. Tilly, a country girl, receives one of the invitations. Kissing her sweetheart Tom, a young farmer, good bye, the girl leaves for the city.

Just before his relatives arrive, Miller exchanges places with his butler. It is his idea that as a servant he can better size up the prospective heirs. The latter arrive and promptly commence quarreling.

When Tilly appears, her simplicity and unaffectedness appeal to Miller. Ignorant of caste barriers, the girl strikes up a friendship with the "butler." The other relatives regard her with contempt. The following day, according to a prearranged scheme, the "butler" announces that "Miller" has been stricken with a contagious disease. All promptly flee with the exception of Tilly, who announces her intention of remaining to take care of her uncle.

Later, Tilly sees the "butler," apparently burglarizing the safe. In her attempt to capture the man, she discovers his true identity. Delighted with the success of his experiment, Miller declares that Tilly is to inherit his fortune.

Just at this moment, however, Tilly receives a package containing a stick of candy and a letter from Tom. The boy tells her how much he misses her. Tilly declares that she would rather go back to her sweetheart in the country than be an heiress. Miller, unable to see why she cannot do both, bundles her into his auto and goes back to the country with Tilly.

"THE FATE OF A SQUAW" (July 18).—Larkin meets Ethel, the daughter of a miner. The two fall in love. While setting his traps shortly afterwards, Larkin is set upon by a band of Indians. A blow on the head robs the man of his reason.

Wahnura, an Indian maid, comes upon the trapper and takes him to her people. The girl nurses him tenderly. Despite his affliction, Wahnura loses her heart to the white man. Ethel wonders at her sweetheart's absence. Believing he no longer loves her, the girl is heartbroken.

Brown Bear, a Hopi Indian, falls in love with Wahnura and decides to make her his squaw. The maid repulses his advances. That day, the girl goes to the settlement to dispose of some beadwork. There she meets Dr. Watts. Learning that he is a "medicine man," Wahnura brings Larkin to him. The surgeon sees that a slight operation will restore the trapper to health and bids Wahnura to return in a week.

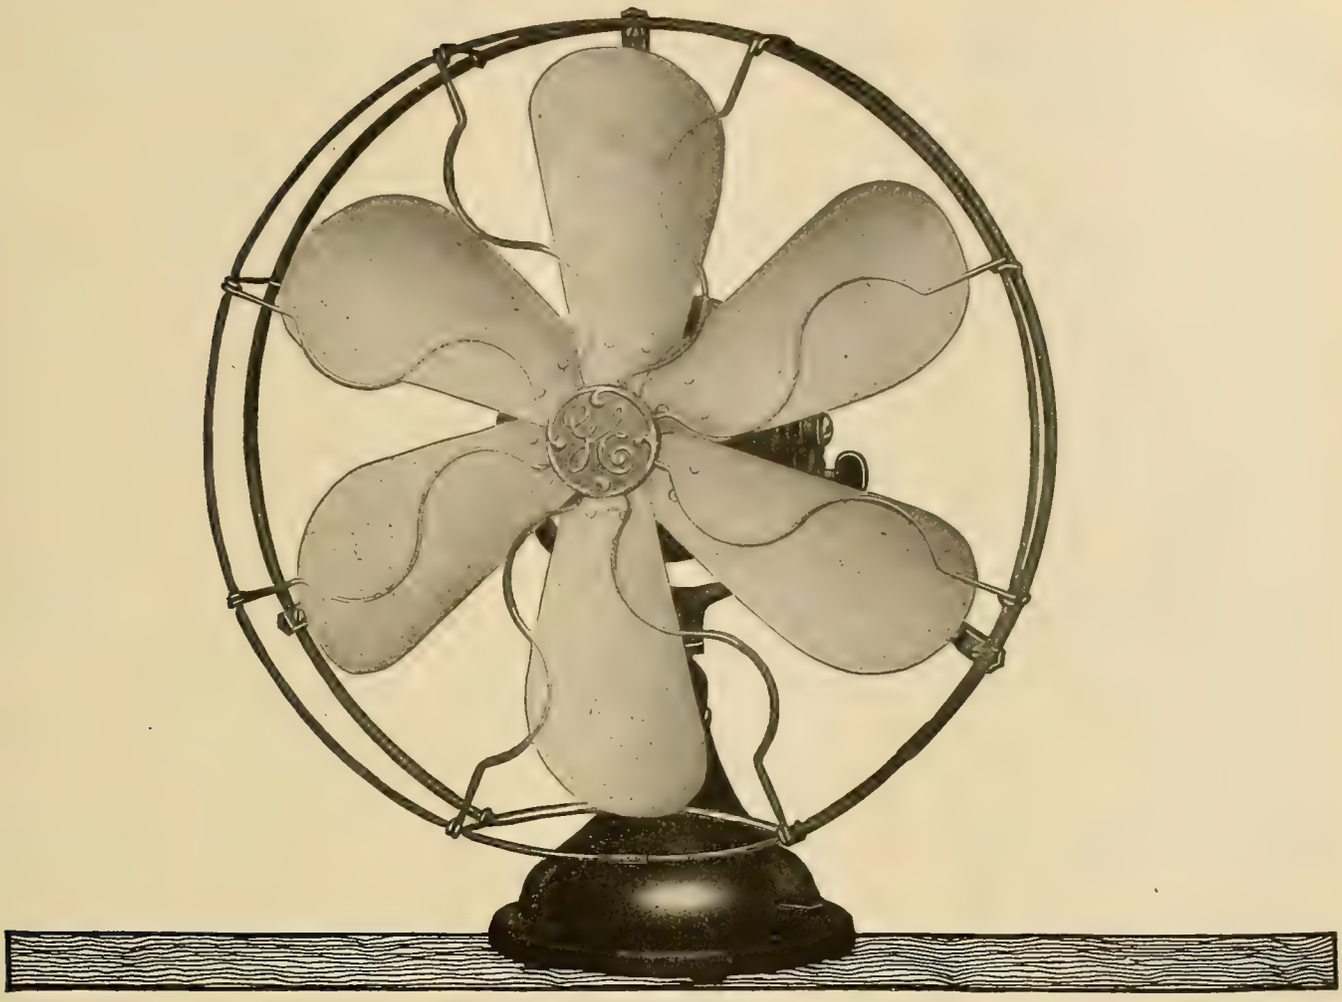
At the end of seven days, the Indian girl hastens to the settlement. At the same time, Brown Bear arrives at the encampment of Wahnura's people, where he secures the chief's permission to marry Wahnura by presenting him with gifts. When the Indian maid appears before Larkin, the trapper, who has recovered, fails to recognize her. The man hastens to Ethel's home.

Wahnura stares after Larkin in mute grief. Slowly turning, she wends her way home. She arrives just as Brown Bear and the chief have concluded their bargain. The Hopi roughly orders her to return with him to his people. Her heart torn, Wahnura trudges toward the Hopi village.

LUBIN.

TOUGH LUCK (July 14).—Boggs had a bad breakfast because the cook is sick and he starts to the office with a full-sized grouch. He kicked a cripple beggar, who asks for alms, and gets knocked down in retaliation, and when he fired a book agent from his office the man shoots a book at him. In the afternoon the typist throws a fit. He is trying to hold her down and keep her from kicking a hole in the floor or the ceiling, when he gets a telephone call to come home at once. He hears over the telephone the voices of many women crying and is so excited that he runs all the way home. He finds that the cook has the smallpox and the entire membership is quarantined along with the family. He tries to beat it but meantime the police have been posted, and not even the fact that the back door guard is a member of his lodge helps him any. Worse still, poor Boggs has to cook for the entire outfit, and he is not a bit cheered when the trained nurse tells him it will only last three weeks longer. He counts the pages of the calendar, is overcome, and realizes that he is sitting in the dough that should be the breakfast biscuit.

CODES OF HONOR (Special—two parts—July 15).—Marie Bowditch, criminal by environment and shoplifter, is taken in a raid in which her husband (and father of her boy) is killed. Marie's baby is taken to a foundling home, and later adopted by the Mortons, a most estimable couple. Marie is given a five-year prison sentence. Coincident with her entrance into prison is the notification of a legacy of $5,000 which



Cooling Comfort for Patrons

Extend the good service to your patrons during the sweltering summer days and hot, oppressive nights by having your theatre cool and fresh inside.

Make a welcome change from the sultry, heat-laden air of the streets to the cooling comfort inside your house.

Ventilate thoroughly with

G-E Six Blade Oscillating Fans

These fans are especially constructed for motion picture theatres; the air is freely circulated as these fans swing silently to and fro bringing a cool current of air as from the hills.

Be sure you install G-E fans—then you can be certain that your fans will run inexpensively, without trouble or attention except oiling once a year. G-E fans will last for years; there are no complicated parts to get out of order, there's just quality of the highest, plus twenty years' knowledge and experience in every G-E fan; that is why a G-E fan is as good five, ten years hence as it is today.

Write today; send dimensions and particulars of your theatre; our engineers will be glad to lay out a "fresh-air" plan that will soon prove a good investment for you.

General Electric Company

General Office: Schenectady, N. Y.

Sales Offices in All Large Cities

4923

she will receive upon her release. Through the ministrations of Chaplain Allway of the prison Marie leaves that institution a reformed and devout woman. She seeks out the Mortons and begs for the return of her little son, Robert. Chaplain Allway urges Morton to release the child, declaring its possession by Marie means her soul's redemption. Morton gives back the boy and Marie, cutting loose from all association of the past, makes a home in the West. Here she marries Banker Harrison, a widower with a little son, James, about the age of Robert.

Fifteen years go by. Robert and James grow to manhood. Robert becomes the cashier of his step-father's bank and James is elected district attorney. Both Robert and James are suitors for the hand of Mildred, the daughter of Judge Early. Mildred gives her heart to Robert. James, through his jealousy, hates his fortunate step-brother. Kidd Hogg, a pal of Marie's criminal days, turns up. He demands as the price of silence the sum of $2,000. A like sum belonging to Judge Early is given Harrison to keep over night. Marie is tempted to steal the $2,000 and rid herself of Kidd, but rises above the temptation. That night Kidd enters the Harrison home and steals the money. Marie, thinking she had heard an unusual sound, steals down to the room, but finds nothing suspicious. She accidentally drops a jeweled ornament. Robert, returning late from a social affair, enters the room and finds the jewel. He is seen in this room by James. Robert, finding his mother not yet retired, enters her room to restore her jewel. Marie, overcome by the events of the day and night, falls in a faint and from her bosom flutters the blackmailing letter of Kid Hogg, which Robert reads.

The next morning when Judge Early and Mildred arrive to get their money the theft is discovered. James accuses Robert of the crime, dclaring he had seen him in the room at 3 o'clock in the morning. Robert, overwhelmed by the conviction that his own mother is the culprit, refuses to even deny the theft. Even Mildred's wrath fails to move him. She casts her engagement ring at his feet and James now feels certain he will win her hand. Robert is cast off by Harrison and the event is kept secret from Marie. Kid Hogg, celebrating his sudden wealth, gets drunk and in a quarrel is shot and fatally wounded. At the hospital he asks for the district attorney. James comes to his bedside and receives as his antemortem confession the statement that he (Kid) robbed the Harrison home. James is now confronted by the problem of clearing Robert and losing Mildred, or keeping silent with every probability of winning her hand. James emerges from the struggle a man of honor. He places the confession in Mildred's hands and thus gains a mighty victory.

HE WAS BAD (July 14).—Sam Johnson was never regarded with great respect and usually got the worst of it. George Spratt cut him out with Mattie Washington. Henry Jefferson knocked him down when he demanded the return of a loan of four bits and a bunch of crapshooters cleaned him out. Then John Baxter gave him a job sharpening razors. George was the first to see Sam laboring with a hone and enough razors to cut up the town. He spread the word that Sam had suddenly gone "bad" and the excitement ran high. The crap players returned the money Sam had lost, and more, too, before he asked for it. Henry paid back the four bits and refused to take the change for a dollar, and Mattie ran all the way to the Baxter yard to ask him to take her to the ball. Then Baxter gave him a dollar and an old dress suit for the job and Sam, with his easily won reputation for badness put it all over the others.

THE CROSS OF CRIME (Special—two parts —July 16).—Ernest Halstead, his wife, and their baby, Emily, are almost destitute in an Eastern city. The man tries in vain to find work. Desperate at the thought of his starving wife and child, Halstead steals a sealed package of banknotes from an express office. He eludes the pursuit of the police for a few minutes and hides the money. Later, however, he is captured and taken to the police station. He manages to slip a note to Leo Croft, a friend, telling Croft to find the hidden money and give it to Halstead's wife and also to tell her that he has hurriedly left for Alaska. Halstead gives the police the name of John Jones, determined that his wife and child shall never know of his crime. Croft, false, keeps the greater part of the money himself and also saves Halstead's note. Halstead is sent up and serves five years of a ten-year sentence in the penitentiary. The convicts revolt. Halstead saves the warden's life and as a result he is pardoned. Returning to his cottage, Halstead finds his wife dying and hears of Croft's action. With his motherless little daughter, Halstead goes West and starts anew in one of the cities of the Pacific Coast.

Fifteen years pass. Halstead is now wealthy and retired, living at a handsome seaside home. His daughter is engaged to marry Gordon St. John, member of a proud and distinguished family. Then Croft, the only man who knows the connection between Halstead and Jones, the latter a jail bird, blows town as a tramp. Croft recognizes Halstead and proceeds to blackmail him. The strain is too much for Halstead's broken system. He dies, his last word being a solemn charge to Jenkins, his faithful old servant, to protect Emily from the blackmailer. Jenkins carries out his trust at the sacrifice of his own life, dragging Croft to death with him. The girl never knows that her father was a convict. St. John discovers the truth, but reveals the strength of his character in a convincing way.

THE LIE (July 17).—Tom Phillips and son, Bobbie, live in a cabin in the woods. Phillips is a hunter and trapper. While he is away Bobbie does a little hunting and trapping of his own and his father, finding some of his traps wrong and gun dirty, asks Bobbie about it. Bobbie lies and his father says nothing further. Later he catches Bobbie red-handed and Bobbie confesses all. Phillips gets a heavy switch and takes Bobbie indoors. When he comes out with the boy in his arms there is evidence that Bobbie has had a severe licking. Bobby has learned his lesson "never to lie" pretty well. A millionaire buys up most of Phillips' hunting ground for a private preserve and establishes game wardens. Also signs not to trespass. It angers Phillips, who poaches despite the warning. The head warden is suspicious of Phillips and trails him. There is a fight at a distance and Phillips, wounded in the arm, gets home. He hides, telling Bobbie not to tell where he is. Bobbie is perplexed and when the wardens arrive Bobbie is in a quandary. He finally tells the truth, remembering the lesson his father taught him, and his father is taken in hand. His father is dragged out by the under warden while the head warden tells Bobbie in answer to his question that his father will go to jail. Bobbie gives a cry and rushes out, followed by the warden. Outside he sobs out his heart in his father's arms and his father forgives him, telling him he did right. The warden inquires the reason when Bobbie pleads with him and, learning about the lie, thinks that both have learned a lesson. He tells Phillips he will release him if he gets away and, for the boy's sake, he promises. At dawn we see them passing down the trail to a new life.

SHE WANTED TO KNOW (July 18).—Bob Hulburt is detained at the office and comes home in the small hours of the morning. Ida, his wife, has been sitting up waiting for him. When he shows up she drives him from the room, and he is obliged to sleep on the settee in the hall. Next morning things are so cold about the house that the coffee fairly freezes in the cups. Ida complains to her mother; so does Bob. Mrs. Maynard reminds Bob that Ida is very inquisitive. He takes the hint, and when at dinner he receives a letter, he does the heavy tragedy and runs from the house showing the letter to everybody he meets. Ida follows aflame with curiosity. At last Bob gets home again and shows Ida the letter. It is a bill for five tons of coal. Ida starts in to break the dinner china over his head but her mother appears on the scene and squares things all around.

ALL FOR LOVE (July 18).—Eileen Spinach, the belle of Dutch Gulch, meets Fritz Schultz, the Beau Brummel of the rockies. Fritz squints; Eileen smiles; Fritz falls. Then Roaring Bob, a cowpuncher from Red Eye, arrives and strolls out with his sweetheart, Eileen. He leaves her for a moment to secure some cigars. Beau Brummel Schultz, with oily mien, slides up to little Eileen and speaks his mouth out. The terror of Red Eye returns and with guns ablaze and starts to write his name in lead upon the anatomy of the masher.

Shirtless Homes, the detective, comes into town, calls upon Chief Small, introduces himself and creates a sensation. The chief, whose trouble over a gunman badly wanted, has caused him to sleep badly, then produces a photo for the peerless gaze of Homes. Shirtless swears to bring in the man and while snooping he observes Fritzie and Bobbie and starts after them.

There is a riot call, turned in via phone, which stops an interesting crap game. The officer arrives in time to save Fritzie's life from the spurting guns of Bob. As the cloud of smoke clears away Shirtless, upon his steed, rushes madly away. Bob is "pinched." Fritz is absorbed by other members of the police force and together, Bob and Fritz, behind the bars of justice, cry out their lament.

B. Franklin:

He's Squizzled at Tele-Photo-Phone

MARVELOUS DEVICE PROVES ENTIRELY TOO MUCH FOR THE OLD GENTLEMAN.

Veracious Ben III. is pilot

LEAVES CONVINCED THAT HIS KITE AND KEY CERTAINLY "STARTED" SOMETHING.

By Benjamin Franklin III.

Last night I went down to the offices of the Chariot Film Corporation, 110 W. 40th Street, New York City, and ran across the shade of my illustrious ancestor, Benjamin Franklin I., rubbering at the seeing telephone machine. I bowed profoundly, and wished him good evening.

"Why, hello, Ben," he said, sticking out his hand with the lace cuff on it. "You 'rapped' me the first thing, didn't you? I didn't suppose anybody would be on."

"Oh, I was on the very minute I saw you come down through the skylight," I replied. "This is a hot show, grand pop, and no show like this would be complete without you."

"Well, judging from results, I did turn a rather clever trick the day I got my kite out and unlocked the lightning with my key," he said, sort of swelling up. "Many a man has got his kite out since that day who couldn't find his key, and who couldn't unlock anything with it if he had it," he added, looking wise.

"This is some picture, grand pop," I said.

"Where's Tom Edison, Nick Tesla, Marconi, Alex Bell and that bunch?" he asked.

"Marked absent," I replied. "We've got so many new electrical wizzes now that we don't need them. Come on, let's watch the show."

"Sure," said my illustrious forbear, sitting down beside me in the projecting room.

"What's that skiddddus there?" he asked, as the screen showed the photographic apparatus of the tele-photo-phone.

"That," I replied, with an air of superior knowledge, "is the machine that attaches to the telephone, and through which you can see the person you are speaking to."

"And what in the name of George Washington and the Revolutionary Fathers is a tele-photo-phone?" he snorted.

"Why, grand pop, is it possible that you don't know what a tele-photo-phone is? Why, a tele-photo-phone is —but wait, look, look at the picture—there it is."

And there was then unfolded to him the working of the tele-photo-phone, how it was possible to see through it, and be actually did see thrown on the screen, the picture of a convict trying to get into the inventor's home, the wife telephoning her husband, and then the whole scene enacted in two rooms, miles apart, all seen through the tele-photo-phone.

"Boy," he demanded, "art joshing me?"

"Nary a josh," I declared. "This show is strictly on the level." He staggered a bit and grasped me on the arm.

"Boy," he said, feebly, "break these things to me gently. The old man's mind isn't as strong as it used to be, I fear."

My illustrious ancestor just gazed and gazed, pressed his hand to his forehead and sat back in his chair, he was so astonished.

He then saw the throwing on of the current for the working of the tele-photo-phone, and the different workings, all portrayed in the picture.

"Hold on, Ben," he shouted, as the mysteries were unraveled before his eyes, one by one, "you've got me hanging on the ropes; I'll go down for the count in a minute."

Then I explained to him all the wonderful advances of electricity, such as flatirons run by electricity, biscuits and pies being cooked by electricity, coffee brewed by the same means, a sewing-machine run the same way, clocks regulated by it, electric grates burned by electricity, a fan run by the same power, milk churned by electricity, and a moving picture machine operated by electricity.

Then we saw the photo-gelea box thrown on the screen, the box that holds the photographic apparatus. "What sort of an ornithorinethus is that?" he asked, sorely puzzled.

I told him and he wobbled perceptibly.

Then he saw the tele-photo-phone save the blind wife of the inventor, saw the despicable villain hurled from the telegraph pole by a streak of lightning, where he was trying to cut the wires for the demonstration that would revolutionize the telephone; saw the skunk of a convict who tried to injure the blind wife get killed by an electrical bolt from the sky; and last, the marvelous invention operating successfully.

"Well, jumping-gee-whillikens!" he exclaimed. "Now, wouldn't that run a clothespin through your medulla oblongata?"

When I tried to explain to him the workings of the moving picture machine and how the pictures were made and projected he just threw up his hands.

"Can't wait to see it," he said. "Can't stand it any more; all too wonderful. I'll call again. I must blow now. Goodbye."

And the shade of my illustrious ancestor disappeared through the skylight, humming

"This is the life
This is the life for me."

STATE RIGHTS FOR SALE.

Written and conceived by Alex Yokel, General Manager

CHARIOT FILM CORPORATION
110 West 40th Street NEW YORK CITY

MELIES.

A DISCOLORED ROMANCE (July 7).—Joe and Dave, who room together, are both madly in love with Marion, the daughter of a wealthy gentleman. She leads them both on, thereby having a glorious time. Before calling on Marion, one evening, Joe falls asleep. Dave, thinking to kill Joe's chances, blackens his face with shoe polish. Having finished the job Dave takes a nap, and Joe decided to do the same to Dave, not knowing it has been done to himself. They both call on Marion at different hours that evening and get anything but a cordial welcome, being kicked out and landing in a heap on the front steps. Upon returning to their rooms, each discovers the cause of their treatment, also

Optigraph Optigraph

The Optigraph Six

A Perfect, Portable Projector for Educational, Industrial, Home, Etc.

Optigraph Optigraph

PRICE
$100.00
COMPLETE

USING

Standard Films
" Lenses
" Reels
" Condensers
" Carbons
" Stereoptiocon Slides

WEIGHS 20 POUNDS
COMPLETE

Optigraph Optigraph

The Optigraph is not an experiment and there have been actually more Optigraphs sold than any other machine made.

Dealers apply to

First National Bank Building Chicago, Illinois

Optigraph TRADE MARK Mfg. Co.

the announcement of Marion's engagement to Sir George Rawlins, her father's choice.

THE HOLE IN THE WALL (July 8).—Walter Atkin visits his fiancee, Isabel Olney, bringing her a precious jewel. This excites the cupidity of the butler who determines to steal it. Something upsets Walter's usual calm nature and he brutally attacks a colored servant and Isabel's favorite dog. He is ordered from the house, but, being madly in love with Isabel, he determines to see her once more. He cuts a panel from the door of her room and is about to unlatch the door when Isabel, believing it is someone trying to steal the jewel, rushes to grab the arm. It instantly seizes her throat, but she manages to wrench herself free and buries her teeth in it. She collapses, and upon her recovery tells of her frightful experience. Walter has the butler arrested. Reconciliation takes place and later Walter admits it was he who was trying to force an entrance just to see her once again.

GOOD FORTUNATE'S TARDY SMILE (July 9).—Thos Rolland & Co do a very large business due to the cleverness of Mr Rolland's young assistant, George Jennings. Jennings is in love with Rolland's daughter and has the old man's consent until he becomes jealous of Jenning's business ability. He informs Jennings that the man his daughter marries must have at least $20,000, a fifth part of the dowry he intends to give his daughter Jennings, knowing it will be a long time before he gets this amount, becomes despondent and tries suicide by lying on a railroad track. Just as he is about to be crushed by the oncoming train he is saved by Rolland, who proved to be a hero, realized how important the young man is to his business and gladly consents to the young people's marriage.

A ROYAL SURVIVOR (Special—Two Parts—July 9).—A stranger was wrecked and thrown up unconscious on the coast of Finisterre. When consciousness returned his memory had fled. He was taken in and adopted by a kindly Breton fisherman. He grew to love the daughter, Annie, and she returned his affection. One day a newspaper fell into his hands. There was an announcement that the Court of Gailistre had gone into mourning. Month before, Prince Otto Christian had gone upon a voyage and the ship had been lost. The words Otto Christian was the key the stranger had vainly sought. He communicated with his people and a few days later court officials came and he left for home. Away amid the rejoicing of his home circle he missed the little maid who had become so dear to him. He finally reached a decision which brought joy to him and to the little girl sitting disconsolate in the house by the sea. Renouncing his right to the succession, Otto became "Prince Charming" in real life and married Annie.

A FRIEND'S FORGIVENESS (Special—Two Parts—July 11).—Mr. Gamber, though fond of his wife, was one of those men who do not believe in showing affection; he was willing to do anything for her and to make any sacrifice, but he would not make those protestations of love that, to some women, are almost more dear than love itself. He trusted her so implicitly that he could not imagine any wrong in her, and so he unintentionally threw her in the way of Jack Sands. She allowed Jack to pay her attention and soon began to traverse the downward path that ends in shame. One day the news came that Jack had been killed by a motor car. Jennie Gamber was in despair. She had written letters to Jack which, if discovered, would mean her ruin. The letters were found by Jack's widow, who, though heartbroken at her husband's deception, generously forgave Mrs. Gamber and handed her back the letters. It, however, was a lesson which Jennie never forgot.

GEORGE KLEINE.

"OTHELLO" (Cines—Five Parts).—Desdemona, a beautiful and high-born Venetian lady, is wooed and won by Othello, a Moorish general whose dusky skin cannot conceal a chivalrous and adventurous spirit such as women love. Desdemona's father, Brabantic, learning of their secret marriage, is much incensed and goes before the Duke of Venice and complains that his daughter has been stolen from him. It so happens that Othello's warlike qualities are in demand upon the very night in which these affairs culminate. He has been in the service of the Venetian government and the state now requires his presence in Cyprus to oppose a Turkish fleet. He is, therefore, suffered to depart in peace with his wife, Desdemona, especially since she in the Council Chamber declares her love and confidence in him.

Iago, Othello's ancient or ensign, has sworn secret enmity against his master because the Moor raised Cassio instead of himself to the chief lieutenancy. His enmity has taken the form of carefully laid plots, which began the very nuptial night of Othello. In Cyprus, where Othello and his train repairs, the plots have abundant time for ripening. A storm has wrecked the Turkish fleet and Othello remains in command of land amid a general revelry authorized by him to celebrate the destruction of the enemy and in honor of his own nuptials. During the feast, Iago makes Cassio drunk and involves him in a street brawl. Othello arrives on the scene and deprives the officer of his lieutenancy. Iago advises Cassio to sue for favor and restoration of his rank through Desdemona, since Othello will deny her nothing.

Cassio, unsuspicious of treachery, obtains an interview with Desdemona. Iago lures Othello to the scene, innocent enough, but greeted with an ominous shake of the head by Iago. Othello, seeing the gesture, questions his ensign, whereupon the latter instills the poison of jealousy into his master's ears, making him to doubt Desdemona's relations with Cassio; the doubt intensified when the lady, in the kindness of her heart, intervenes for Cassio. Henceforward, Iago loses no opportunity to do his best to add to his master's jealousy. He procures by stealth a handkerchief given by Othello to Desdemona, and causes it to be found in Cassio's possession.

Othello becomes convinced that his wife has been untrue to him. He determines upon her death and charges his supposed friend, Iago, with the task of dispatching Cassio. Nothing loathe, Iago embroils Cassio in a night combat with Roderigo, a former suitor of Desdemona, entangled in the meshes of Iago. Cassio wounds Roderigo. Iago desire the death of both, and so unseen, stabs Cassio. Meanwhile Othello goes to the bedchamber of Desdemona and smothers her to death. Emilia, wife of Iago and the devoted servant of Desdemona, proves to Othello that his wife that he has just murdered, is innocent. Iago kills Emilia. Othello wounds Iago, then kills himself. Cassio, who still lives, is advanced to the government of Cyprus and Iago is reserved for a lingering torture.

ESSANAY.

"SWEEDIE THE SWATTER" (July 13).—Mrs. Highstrung's maid leaves her at a very inopportune time, as she has just received a telegram from some friends that they will arrive in the city in time for luncheon. Jim, the hired man, tells her of a good Swedish cook and Mrs. Highstrung sends him post haste after her. The new maid absolutely cannot cook, and the meal she prepares arouses the ire of Mrs. Highstrung, who attempts to discharge her. The antics of the cook trying to evade the mistress and her guests are screamingly funny.

"AT THE FOOT OF THE HILL" (July 14).—Great-grandfather Huxley, an old soldier, is neglected by his grandson and wife. He feels he is in the way and seriously contemplates suicide. One night while the grandson's wife is giving a party, the house catches fire and the old man rescues their children from the burning building. The grandson and his wife realize just how much the old man is to them and they do all in their power to make his last days happy.

THE FABLE OF "NAPOLEON AND THE BUMPS" (July 15).—He was too big for this world when a Phrenologist told him he was a modern Napoleon. He tried to stop the traffic and the crossing policeman raised a beautiful billiard ball on his ivory dome. His wife tested the new china, she got with coffee certificates, on his head, and it was a whipped Napoleon that begged for mercy. He certainly had met his waterloo. The situations are screamingly funny.

"SNAKESVILLE'S NEW WAITRESS" (July 16).—Sophie Clutts secures a position at the Snakeville Hotel as waitress. The men forget their food for Sophie's soothing talk and winning manner, until she finally puts the hotel on the blink. The way the men try to win her is delightfully comical.

"BRONCHO BILLY PUTS ONE OVER (July 18).—Broncho Billy is a foreman on Roger Newman's hanch and is in love with his daughter, Mae. Newman finds this out, discharges Broncho Billy and sends Mae to visit her brother in the East. Broncho Billy kidnaps Mae from the stage coach and they marry, squatting on Newman's land. Newman finds this out—not that Broncho has married Mae, but that he has squatted on his land. He intends to get even, so takes Mae's pony and puts it in Broncho Billy's corral. He then accuses Broncho Billy of horse stealing, but is nonplussed when he finds that Mae and Broncho Billy are married, Mae saying: "And, besides, father, a man wouldn't steal his own wife's horse." Newman forgives them and the story ends happily.

"HIS STOLEN FORTUNE" (Special—Two Parts—July 17).—Frank Wentworth, a young adventure-seeking American, is left a vast fortune by a deceased uncle. After enjoying it for six months and engaging himself to a charming society belle, he discovers a letter from his uncle, confessing that the fortune was stolen from a poor Pole, named Max Illuski, and charging Frank with the responsibility of returning it to Illuski or his heirs. Frank inserts an ad in two or three of the city's leading dailies, explaining the situation. Mrs. Holcombe, Frank's prospective mother-in-law, denounces him publicly and the newspapers expose the will and letter left by his uncle. Illuskies seem to bloom in every street and every corner of the hotel, each one emphasizing for Professional Film Work, for the Manufacturer, Traveler, Explorer, Scientist and Private. The well-known fool-proof Junior Camera, 200 feet capacity; Tripods, Tilts, Printers, Developing Outfits, Projectors, Lenses, Polishers, Measurers, Menders, Winders. Special Film Work. Quick, reliable repair.

FILM MAKING OUTFITS

Establ. 20 years. Largest Inst. in U. S.

EBERHARD SCHNEIDER

219 Second Ave. New York

WE BUY, SELL and RENT

Moving Picture Machines, Films and Chairs

THEATRE BROKERAGE EXCHANGE

440 S. Dearborn Chicago, Ill.

HAWKINS LIBRARY OF ELECTRICITY

In 6 Leather Volume Pocket Books Price per $1

Here is a set of books that no man in the ELECTRICAL FIELD should do without. This is the ELECTRICAL AGE in which we live; ELECTRICITY now controls more trades, directs more men, offers more opportunities than any other power that man has yet discovered. Do you wish to know the underlying principles of MODERN ELECTRICAL PRACTICE?

If so, HAWKINS ELECTRICAL GUIDES will give you the information. In reality they are a school within themselves, containing a complete study course with QUESTIONS, ANSWERS AND ILLUSTRATIONS, written in plain everyday language so that a practical man can understand the "HOW, WHEN AND WHY" OF ELECTRICITY.

"THAT'S JUST WHAT I NEED"

They are handsomely bound in flexible black leather with gold edges and will readily go in the pocket. THEY ARE NOT ONLY THE BEST, BUT THE CHEAPEST WORKS PUBLISHED ON ELECTRICITY.

Each book is complete in itself and will be supplied $1.00 per copy, but we believe that the complete set is the best bargain.

The books can speak for themselves and a careful examination, page by page, and illustration by illustration, will convince you of their big value.

If you will fill out the following coupon giving all the information requested, WE WILL SUBMIT THE SIX VOLUMES FOR EXAMINATION ON CONDITIONS NAMED

FREE EXAMINATION OFFER

Theo. Audel & Co., 72 5th Ave., New York

Please submit me for examination HAWKINS ELECTRICAL GUIDES (Price $1 each.)

Ship at once, prepaid the 6 numbers; if satisfactory I agree to send you $1 within seven days and to further mail you $1 each month until paid.

Signature .....

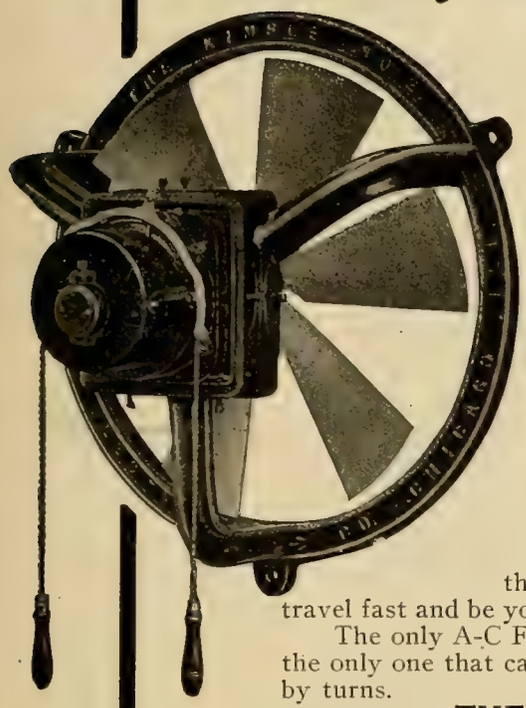
Occupation .....

Business Address .....

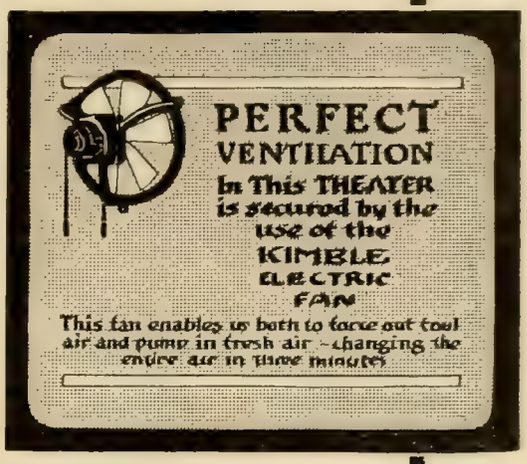
Residence .....

Reference .....

Make Yours the Fresh Air THEATER of your Community and yours will be both the praise and the profit



KIMBLE MOTORS



PERFECT
VENTILATION
In This THEATER is secured by the use of the KIMBLE
ELECTRIC FAN
This fan enables us both to force out foul air and pump in fresh air - changing the entire air in three minutes

With every installation we furnish a slide telling the story of perfect ventilation and the good news will travel fast and be your best advertisement.

The only A-C Fan that gives perfect control of ventilation, because the only one that can be operated either as intake or exhaust at will or by turns.

THE CHEAPEST VENTILATION

because the Kimble is the only fan in which every cut in speed means a corresponding cut in current consumed.

It is so easy on the line that you may operate it with safety from your lighting circuit. The electric light company will recommend it for this reason in spite of the fact that it consumes so little electricity.

For instance a 36-in. Kimble Fan moving 17,300 cu. ft. of air per minute and operated with a 1½ h. p. Kimble A-C reversible motor starts on 3 amperes, runs full speed on 8 amperes, and may be reversed by a pull of the chain from full speed in one direction to full speed in the other on 9 amperes. Show this paragraph to your Central Station man.

Prices Low—Immediate Delivery

H.P.	Size	Cycles	Volts	R.P.M.	Cubic Feet of Air Per Minute	Code	Price
1/6	18″	60	110	100 to 800	2500	Sugar	$65.00
1/6	18″	60	220	100 to 800	2500	Flour	65.00
½	24″	60	110	100 to 750	6000	Coffee	90.00
½	24″	60	220	100 to 750	6000	Salt	90.00
1	30″	60	110	100 to 700	12800	Tea	150.00
1	30″	60	220	100 to 700	12800	Pepper	150.00
1½	36″	60	110	100 to 650	17300	Cream	210.00
1½	36″	60	220	100 to 650	17300	Butter	210.00
2	42″	60	110	100 to 550	22000	Spice	275.00
2	42″	60	220	100 to 550	22000	Milk	275.00

KIMBLE MOVING PICTURE MACHINE MOTOR

Is a God-send to your operator because it does away with the drudgery of sweating at the crank. Its speed varies by imperceptible graduations, not by steps or jerks—allowing the finest possible shading of effects. Reverse it for winding back your reels—and do the job in half the hand-power time.

Send for Our Catalogue

KIMBLE ELECTRIC CO.

633 North Western Ave., Chicago, Illinois

the fact that he is the real Illuski and heir to the fortune. Frank's experience in attempting to return the fortune to the proper heir is the foundation for a most thrilling twenty-four hour experience, and when he is exhausted and finally eludes everybody, he is captured by an attorney for the estate, who tells him that the letter was merely a test of his honesty, and that he is rightfully the sole heir to the fortune. All ends happily as Frank claims his sweetheart for his wife, and mother forgives.

BIOGRAPH.

THE BOILER-MAKER'S DAY OF REST (July 6).—Tom Hammer, the boiler-maker, goes off the night shift to go home for his day's sleep. On arriving at his home he finds a note from his wife, telling him she will be away for the day. Tom is left to the mercy of the installment man, the iceman, the gas inspector, etc., until, in distraction, he seeks the boiler factory, where he sleeps soundly to the accompaniment of familiar noises.

EVA, THE CIGARETTE GIRL (July6).—Clarence Chical tries to lure Eva's love with an apple. She scorns the gift and him with it. Eva and two girl chums steal away to a secluded place to smoke a cigarette. A villain of the deepest dye is lurking near. He steals Eva and carries her away to his mountain shack, there to torture her with snakes. Clarence is informed of the dastardly deed and rushes to the rescue. He saves the proud beauty who repays him with her true love.

A ROMANCE OF THE PUEBLO (July 9).—Many are the tales, both legendary and romantic, told of the dwellers of the ancient pueblo of Laguna, New Mexico, and this story of the love of a Pueblo brave for the daughter of an Apache chief is not only one of absorbing interest but extremely poetic, having been made among the old adobe huts, many of which were erected over three hundred years ago.

HER PRIMITIVE MODEL (July 11).—In the beginning man's equality was an ethical doctrine, but we seem to have grown out of that as time has progressed. In truth, the same feeling exists today that did when the world began, and illustrations in a light vein of the brute's mastery over the weak, to be in turn mastered by the weak, where the rod of rule is love.

PATHE'S WEEKLY, NO. 43, 1914 (July 1).—New London, Conn.—Yale-Harvard Varsity Boat Race on the Thames River.

Amsterdam, Holland.—The Danish Sovereign accompanied by Queen Wilhelmina visit the city and pass in review the Guard of Honor, and are conducted to the Royal Palace.

Portland, Oregon.—Rose Festival.

Wendover, Utah.—Completing the last "Gap" of the first long distance telephone line between New York and San Francisco.

Madrid, Spain.—Theodore Roosevelt arrives to attend the wedding of his son, Kermit, to Miss Belle Willard.

Fall River, Mass.—Fourth annual open air Horse Show.

Portland, Oregon.—Auto races, Portland Automobile Club, Rose City Speedway.

Valencia, Spain.—Monsignor Guisasola, Bishop of Valencia, who has just been ordained Cardinal.

Hammondsport, N. Y.—Launching of Rodman Wanamaker's trans-Atlantic flyer "America."

New York Polo Grounds.—Giants-Cincinnati Game, Saturday, June 20, 1914. Attendance, 35,000.

Picture Theaters Projected.

FRESNO, CALF.—T. C. White is planning to build a two-story theater building, 95 by 150 feet, to cost $10,000.

WILMINGTON, DEL.—Wallace E. Hance, 204 West 24th street, is preparing plans for a one-story moving picture theater, 35 by 120 feet, to cost $20,000.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Palace Amusement Company are having plans prepared for a two-story moving picture theater, 50 by 147 feet, to cost $20,000.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Joseph Donicale is having plans prepared for a one-story moving picture theater, 24 by 45 feet, to cost $4,000.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Thomas P. Moore, 10th and D streets, N. W., contemplates building a one-story moving picture theatre, to cost $12,000.

ALTON, ILL.—Paul Armstrong is having plans prepared for a modern moving picture theater. Work will probably begin early in July.

AUGUSTA, ILL.—Charles Heslip contemplates the erection of a new moving picture theater here.

BLOOMINGTON, ILL.—The Bloomington Amusement Company is having plans prepared for the erection of a new moving picture theater.

CHICAGO, ILL.—Anton Charvai, 1801 South Ashland avenue, is preparing plans for a one-story moving picture theater, 25 by 120 feet, to cost $12,000.

CHICAGO, ILL.—Edward Kounousky is having plans prepared for a one-story theater and store building, 97 by 125 feet, to cost, $45,000.

CARROLLTON, ILL.—Augustus Hoermann is having plans prepared for a moving picture theater.

MURPHYSBORO, ILL.—Walter Tilford is having alterations made to his theater building. The improvements will cost about $20,000.

SULLIVAN, ILL.—F. O. Schloeser and Walter Warren of Mt. Vernon, Ill., are having plans prepared for a modern moving picture theater.

FT. WAYNE, IND.—Wile Brothers, East Columbia avenue, have awarded the contract to Henry Kaiser, 1728 Sky Run avenue, for the erection of a two-story theater, store and office building, 75 by 130 feet, to cost $50,000.

NEW HAMPTON, IA.—Plans are now under way by local interest for the erection of a new opera house to cost $30,000. Moving pictures are to be exhibited in connection with high-class vaudeville.

SHEFFIELD, IA.—The commercial building occupied by Hunter & Wartnably has been purchased by C. C. Carhart. As soon as the necessary alterations are completed, the house will be operated as a high-class moving picture theater.

EMPORIA, KANS.—P. J. Concannon is planning to remodel his moving picture theater. The improvements will cost about $4,000.

OTTAWA, KANS.—George P. Washburn & Son have prepared plans to convert store building into a modern moving picture theater to cost $5,000. Lessee, Dawson Gilly.

NEWPORT, KY.—The Colonial Theater at 9th and Monmouth streets, will build an addition to their building and make extensive alterations, costing $10,000.

PADUCAH, KY.—Rodney C. Davis and Rankin Kirkland are planning to build a new theater on the site now occupied by the Kozy Theater. The new structure will measure 26 by 150 feet, and have seating capacity of 500. A Wurlitzer pipe organ will be among the equipments of the theater.

BALTIMORE, MD.—Jarden Theater Company, C. E. Whitehurst, president, 210 East Lexington street, are having plans prepared for a $300,000 theater building.

BALTIMORE, MD.—Daly Amusement Company are planning the erection of a $25,000 theater structure.

BOSTON, MASS.—Olympia Theater Company are having plans prepared for a two-story theater building, to cost $200,000.

DETROIT, MICH.—Bigelow Estate will erect a one-story theater, 98 by 39 feet.

DETROIT, MICH.—William F. Klatt, 1106 Union Trust building, is planning to build a two-story theater and office building, 90 by 200 feet.

ST. PAUL, MINN.—St. Paul Amusement Company are having plans and specifications prepared for a modern moving picture theater to be erected in the near future.

SPRINGFIELD, MO.—George Olendorf expects to open an airdome early in July.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—Middle West Amusement and Construction Company, Chemical building, are having sketches prepared for a three-story theater building, to cost $25,000.

LEWISTOWN, MONT.—Slater Brothers will shortly commence work on their new three-story theatre building, 50 by 90 feet, to cost $35,000.

FREMONT, NEB.—N. J. Johnson, Ames, Neb., will build an addition to his theater to cost $6,000.

OMAHA, NEB.—Frank L. Barnes and others are interested in a project to erect an airdome here.

BAYONNE, N. J.—Alfred Voss, Tompkinsville, S. I., N. Y., will erect a two-story amusement building, 50 by 75 feet.

JERSEY CITY, N. J.—Frederick Hensell, 809 Savage street, contemplates, in the fall, building a two-story moving picture theater, to cost $50,000.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—A. T. McKegney, 2468 Devoe street, has awarded the contract to the Acme Metal Ceiling Co., 512 East 11th street, for alterations to his moving picture theater, to cost $6,000.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—Marcus Building Company, 1770 Park place, will expend about $10,000 for alterations and an addition to their moving picture theater.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—Westland Amusement Corporation, 601 Broadway, New York city, are planning the erection of a one-story moving picture theater, 103 by 107 feet, to cost $25,000.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—David Meyer, 564 44th street, is having plans prepared for a one-story moving picture theater, 50 by 100 feet, to cost $10,000.

BROOKLYN, N Y.—Morris Horowitz, 1644 Eastern Parkway, contemplates the erection in the fall of a modern moving picture theater.

LONG ISLAND CITY, L. I., N. Y.—W. E. Paynter, Bridge Plaza, will erect a three-story theater building, 118 by 120 feet, to cost $200,000.

OGDENSBURG, N. Y.—W. H. Daniels, Postoffice Building, is having plans prepared for a one-story theater and store building, 75 by 165 feet.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.—Emil Wentzel, 1 Ocean street, will erect a two-story moving picture theater, dance hall and bowling alley, 48 by 68 feet.

CLEVELAND, O.—Isadore Weber, Front street, is having plans prepared for a two-story moving picture theater and apartment house, 29 by 144 feet, to cost $14,000.

CINCINNATI, O.—Clifton Amusement Company has awarded the contract to the Ohio Building and Construction Company, 1434 Main street, for the erection of a one-story theater building, 50 by 125 feet, to cost $30,000.

COSHOCTON, O.—F. D. Jacobs is having plans prepared for the erection of a modern theater structure to be known as the New Cinderella Theater.

NORMAN, OKLA.—Patrick Barry has leased a part of the postoffice building, which he is having fitted up for the purpose of exhibiting moving pictures.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—The hall building, 2023-25 North 17th street, southeast corner of Fontain street, lot 40 by 89 feet, has been sold by Harry Weinreich to Elizabeth P. George, subject to a mortgage of $7,500. The building has been used as a moving picture theater and is known as the Star Theater. Its assessed valuation is $15,000.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—The Central Moving Picture Theater, Nos. 412-414 Market street, has been conveyed by the East Market Street Realty Company to Morris Ritch for $15,000, subject to a mortgage of $112,500. It is on a lot 30 by 113.3 feet and is assessed for $90,000. The property was conveyed several months ago by Oscar J. Bamberger to the East Market Street Realty Company for a nominal consideration, recorded subject to mortgages amounting to $85,000.

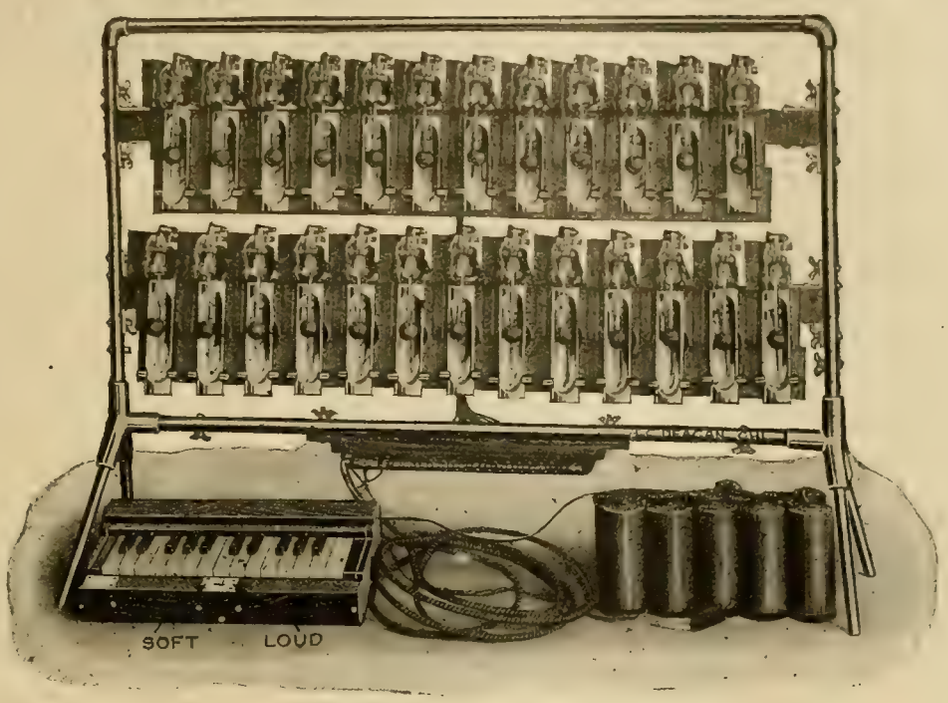
PHILADELPHIA, PA.—The Baltimore Theater, located at 5026 and 5028 Baltimore avenue, has been sold by Barrist & Co. for Nucom Kenin, representing Charles Segall to John Bright, for an undisclosed consideration, subject to mortgages of $24,500.

POTTSTOWN, PA.—H. D. Saylor is planning the erection of a one-story theater building, 60 by 90 feet, to cost $10,000.

READING, PA.—Mrs. Mary A. Ernst, 701 North 8th street, has let the contract to George A. Koch, 1024 Robeson street, for the erection of a one-story moving picture theatre, 40 by 70 feet, to cost $4,000.

THE BIOSCOPE
Oldest Moving Picture Paper in Great Britain and the Best Advertising Medium, Bar None.
Yearly Subscription, $3.50. Single copies, 10 cents, Post free
85 Shaftesbury Avenue, LONDON, W., ENGLAND

Deagan Unaphone



Front View of Deagan Unaphone No. 2306
(Size 47 x 34 x 14 inches.)

A Most Fascinating Instrument for the Moving Picture Theatre

A real novelty that will bring your audience to sit up and take notice. A business getter to liven up things for the summer months. Better than any vaudeville act. Played from keyboard like a piano. Any piano player or drummer can play it. Wonderfully soft and mellow in tone. No harsh bell sound. Easy to install. Your operator can set it up in 20 minutes. Cheap to maintain. Runs on ordinary dry cells. Very moderate in cost. Better write today for Catalogue F.

J. C. DEAGAN

Deagan Bldg., 1776 Berteau Ave.

CHICAGO, U. S. A.

INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES

UNIVERSAL

UNIVERSAL IKE.

A CASE ON THE DOCTOR (June 23).—A young lady doctor causes all the trouble in Alkali flats. Up to this time the town had never awakened. Then Louise arrived. There was just two hitels in town, one owned by a widow and the other by the mother of Universal Ike, Jr. Louise set out for the widow's hotel. But before she arrived her coming was heralded and every cowboy in the town had engaged a room there. When she went to register every room in the place was taken. So she went to Ike's hotel, engaged a room and hung out her shingle.

Young Ike was the first who became ill. Louise was called. But no sooner did Ike become ill than every other man in the town was overtaken with one kind of sickness or another. Louise did her best to tenderly care for each of them.

Then the village housewife began to scent something wrong. They went to the hotel in a body. They called in a horse doctor. No horse doctor ever ruined so much romance in so short a time. Louise and the veterinary eloped together.

UNIVERSAL IKE, JR., AND THE VAMPIRE (June 30).—After a long spell of quietude at Alkali Flat things began to brighten up. Horse-thieves drove a number of stock away. The men folks organized a posse. Although Ike was not married he, like the others, found the business of chasing horse-thieves rather restful.

While the posse was camped in an old river bed, Zingara, a beautiful gypsy girl, and her father drove their wagon into the camp and were invited to put up there for the night. Zingara made a hit with the cowboys. They forgot all about the horse-thieves. They gave her all the little personal trinkets they carried, yet neither of them could aver that he was the fortunate man. Ike alone remained untouched—at least he thought he was untouched.

Finally Zingara's father ruled that the man who gave him the most money would get the girl. Ike was made custodian of the spoils. Then young Ike did a grevious thing. He fell in love with Zingara, listened to her sweet voice and eloped with her and her father, and the goods which were left already in his trust. Then Zingara did a grevious thing. One morning at about three o'clock she and her father backed up and left Ike asleep on the desert with only his burro to carry him to the nearest water-hole.

UNIVERSAL IKE, JR., BEARLY WON HER (June 16).—Dad goes to get some money; but the beehives are empty. There is a great confusion until Ma finds some hair in the hive. The sheriff, meanwhile, is searching for criminals. He meets Ma and Pa, sees the hair, decides the thieves and his prey are the same and seeks aid.

Ike asks for Louise's hand. Dad says his son-in-law must have a reputation. Ike decides that he will find the thieves and cover himself with glory. The sheriff and his deputy are mistaken by Ike for the robbers and great is the confusion that ensues. Meanwhile, three lively bears have returned to the scene of their depredations, the hives. Finding no more sweets they climb through a window in Louise's house. Trouble ensues. Finally Ike bravely ties up the beasts with a sheet and then threatens to turn them loose on the community again unless Dad consents to the wedding. Needless to say, Dad can't back out.

POWERS.

THE PEARL OF THE SEA (July 2).—Myra Benson has two lovers, Pat Dalton, a hard-working young fisherman, and Captain Dyson, of the Fish Patrol. An order issued forbidding the fishermen from using seines. Myra's father, being poor, breaks the law and is fined $100. His boat is confiscated. Capt. Dyson offers to pay the fine if Myra will marry him. She refuses. She loves Pat. Pat buys a new boat, secures a permit for "Myra Benson," pays old Benson's fine, and gives him the new craft and license. A month later the lovers are married and sail away on a pale pink sea as the picture fdes.

THE SEVERED HAND (Three Parts—July 17).—The Severed Hand, a society of Italian criminals and blackmailers, swear to kill Danny Dawson, who has turned traitor. Dawson has a daughter, Nan, whom he mistreats. One day while he is beating her, he is overtaken by the rector and his nephew, Dick Ralston. Ralston punishes Dawson. Nan is taken in as a member of the rector's household. At intervals, every time Dawson catches his daughter alone, he beats her until Nan makes the threat that if he returns again she will kill him.

One night while Dawson is looking for his daughter he is followed by Guinio and Pietro, members of the Severed Hand Society. From a distance Nan sees the Italians kill him. The murderers escape. She runs to her dead parent. A moment afterwards Dick Ralston and the rector arrive on the scene. In view of her recent oath, they believe she is guilty. Although Ralston loves her, she cannot convince him of her innocence. To save herself from suñering for a crime, her innocence of which she cannot prove, Nan escapes with Guinio and Pietro. After a lapse of ten years, Nan is known as the Countess Messina. She is a secret agent in the employ of the Severed Hand Society. She maintains herself in splendor and has cultivated the bad habits of a certain class of European aristocracy.

Dick Ralston is now chief of a division of the secret service assigned to round up the members of the Severed Hand Society. There is to be a ball at a foreign embassy. Nan attends for the purpose of stealing certain valuable documents from Captain Korsloff of the Russian embassy. Ralston's men are already on the trail. Nan lures Korsloff to her apartments and there drugs him and steals the papers. For additional security she then goes in hiding in a foreign quarter of the city. Ralston and his men come to the apartments to arrest her and find her gone. A woman whom, however, can render the most cleverly laid plans useless. Cooped up with Guinio and Pietro, she runs out of cigarettes. The ordinary brands of cigarettes do not suit her taste and she sends her maid to her apartment for a stock of her own material. Ralston and his men follow the maid back.

The secret service men force their way into the hiding place. As a last resort, Guinio releases a cask of deadly fumes in the room. Ralston and Nan recognize each other simultaneously. All are being overcome by the fumes when Nan drags Ralston to the open window and compels him to inhale the fresh air. Guino is overcome, but his last effort is an attempt to shoot Ralston. Nan anticipates his move and kills him at a single shot. In return for saving Ralston's life Nan goes free and her old life is wiped out and forgotten when she marries Ralston.

GOLD SEAL.

LUCILLE LOVE, THE GIRL OF MYSTERY (No. 11—June 23).—When Lucille escapes from Hugo Loubeque's Mexican ranch, where she was held prisoner, she falls into a veritable hotbed of revolutionary activity. While hiding from a troop of rebel soldiers she overhears a number of Mexicans ploting against an American ranchman. Out of sympathy for her countrymen she hurries to them and tells them of the danger which threatens. Instantly the cowboys fly to arms and meet the advancing soldiers. In the height of a fierce battle, with schrapnel and bombs bursting about her, Lucille is grabbed from her horse by a Mexican and carried away from the scene of battle to a strange hacienda, which is used as a base of operations by the Mexican troops in the vicinity.

An instant after Lucille is locked in a prison room she looks out of the window and sees an automobile approaching. In that automobile is Hugo Loubeque, and with a sinking heart she realizes that it was through his activity that she is again in his power. In a spirit of hopeless desperation which lends her the strength of a man, the girl wields a heavy bottle in the air and strikes her Mexican guard senseless. In order to perfect her plan of escape, which she so suddenly conceived, she dresses herself in the Mexican clothes. Before she can leave the room, however, a second soldier enters and it is not until she disables him that she makes her escape from the house. Once outside she jumps into Loubeque's automobile and dashes away.

In the meantime the Mexican position has been atacked by Federals. With soldiers moving in two directions during the progress of battle, Lucille glides the machine toward the American border. She is hotly pursued by a detachment of cavalry, but she outdistances the horsemen and arrives at the American military headquarters in safety. The officers listen to her story and aid her with money and clothes. Now that she has thrown off Loubeque's power Lucille's first thought is of the papers which she hid in the spy's San Francisco home, and she sets out to get possession of them. While en route to San Francisco by train she is recognized by Thompson, one of Loubeque's principal confederates. Thompson telegraphs Loubeque of the girl's movements, and is instructed by Loubeque to allow Lucille to enter his home without interference, but that when she is once inside to hold her prisoner. Little suspecting that the spy knows of her movements, Lucille disguises herself and enters Loubeque's house to get the papers. She finds the papers, but a moment before she leaves, the room in which she is in hiding sinks to the celar, and she finds herself trapped and Hugo Loubeque awaiting her with a sinister smile.

VICTOR.

HER RAGGED KNIGHT (Two Parts—July 3).—Bob Warburton, much against his will, is made the guardian of a young girl, whom he has never seen. His lawyer saves him considerable embarrassment and responsibility by giving the girl over to the keeping of an elderly spinster. This spinster is narrow-minded and unbearable. Flo proceeds to make life unendurable to her, and she finally decides to take her to her guardian, Eliza, the spinster, writes to Bob, informing him of her coming. However, before they arrive, Bob flees to the country, instructing his lawyer to tell his ward that he has gone to Europe. Flo and Eliza return home. Flo disapointed and the spinster angry. Eventualy, Bob turns up in the neighborhood, amusing himself with fishing, but unaware that his ward lives so close.

Bob decides that the creek is better for swimming purposes than fishing, and so takes a dip. His clothes are stolen by a tramp. He, in turn, steals the clothes from a scarecrow. Flo meets him, and, in pity, secures him a job on the farm. Bob soon finds himself in love with the girl. When he discovers his relationship to her there is considerable surprise; but love makes all the difference in the world.

OUT OF THE VALLEY (July 13).—Bud Osborne, sheriff, is brutal by nature and as a result of his associations with criminals his outlook is sordid; he has no ideals or faith in man. The only thing good that he owns is a wife and baby. Jack Lacy is wanted for the killing of a gambler at Cripple Creek. He shot the man in self-defense and escaped because the case against him looked bad. Lacy is now waiting for the arrival of his wife, who is coming West with an emigrant train. Osborne is offered a reward of $1,000 if he wil capture Lacy. He needs the money and so arrests Lacy.

While the sheriff and his prisoner are returning to town they are attacked by Indians. Osborne is wounded. Lacy saves him. The Indian uprising is general and the emigrant train in which Mrs. Lacy is traveling is likewise attacked. However, the emigrants successfully repel the Indians. While Lacy is helping the wounded Osborne along he meets the emigrant train. Lacy's first thought is of his wife and he leaves the sheriff to find her. When Osborne recovers his strength he thinks of his prisoner and of the handsome reward for his capture. He inquires after Lacy and goes to arrest him. Pushing back the flap of the wagon Osborne looks inside. He sees a young woman on a straw mattress with a baby on her breast and over the woman and baby is bending Lacy, the outlaw. Osborne mounts his horse and rides home to his own family.

FRONTIER.

"THE RANGER'S REWARD" (July 19).—Arthur is ordered by the head ranger to proceed to the Hole in the Wall country, and not to return from there until he has captured Smiling Joe, apparently an insane bandit. Joe, however, is a normal being, when he is captured by Arthur. He schemes for his liberty. Joe sees Arthur looking at a portrait of a young girl in his watch case. He tells Arthur that the girl whose photo he is carrying is his daughter. He elaborates and tells of his once owning a small ranch in this region, how his home was destroyed and he was driven out by the cattlemen. At the conclusion of the tale, Arthur decides to set him free again, but on further thought takes him back to headquarters. He then goes to Dolly's home and tells her of his having arrested her father. Joe makes a getaway from the ranger's office. Pursued he takes refuge in Dolly's home. But the rangers trace him and once again he is captured. Joe sees Dolly and Arthur together and gives Arthur the laugh for having fallen for his untrue story. And as it happens Dolly's real father returns unexpectedly from the East.

IMP.

THE UNIVERSAL BOY (Series No. 1—July 16).—In this piece, Matty Roubert is introduced to us while he is still in bed of a morning. After going through his usual morning exercises, eating his breakfast and receiving his lessons from the private tutor, he departs for the Imp studio. For Matty is an actor. At the studio he is greeted by all the famous Imp stars, King Baggot, William Shay and Frank Crane. Then Matty makes up in one of his familiar characters for us and we see him rehearsing a scene.

Finished at the studio, Matty telephones his father, asking to be taken to the ball game? Father consents. Matty climbs into a big auto and later joined by his father, finds his way to the first row in a box at the Polo grounds. Here the Giants are 'warming up." Matty,

EVERY EXHIBITOR AT DAYTON CONVENTION
Should Book Bosworth's New Thrilling Release

The Lad Himself—Aged Seven—DRUNK!
Strongest Plea for TEMPERANCE Ever Pictured.
The Story That Will Touch the Heart of Every Spectator.

For Bookings or Other Information in Western Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Kentucky, communicate at once with FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM SERVICE, Inc.

404 Ferry St., Pittsburgh, Pa., or 37 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

AMERICAN FEATURE FILM CO., 162 Tremont Street, Boston.—New England States: Massachusetts, Connecticut, Maine, Rhode Island, New Hampshire and Vermont.

WM. L. SHERRY FEATURE FILM CO., Inc., 126 West 46th Street, New York City.—Greater New York and New York State.

FAMOUS PLAYERS' EXCHANGE, 1331 Vine Street, Philadelphia, Pa., and 71 West 23rd Street, New York City.—New Jersey and Eastern Pennsylvania.

FAMOUS PLAYERS FEATURE CO., 28 West Lexington Street, Baltimore, Md.—Delaware, Maryland, Washington, D. C., and Virginia.

CASINO FEATURE FILM CO., Detroit, Mich.—Michigan.

KANSAS CITY FEATURE FILM CO., Kansas City, Mo.—Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska and Iowa.

BOSWORTH
INCORPORATED
648 S. Olive St., Los Angeles, Calif.

FAMOUS PLAYERS STAR FEATURE FILM SERVICE, Temple Court Building, Minneapolis, Minn.—North and South Dakota, Minnesota and Wisconsin.

NOTABLE FEATURE FILM CO., Salt Lake City, Utah.—Utah, Colorado, Montana, Wyoming and Idaho.

PROGRESSIVE MOTION PICTURE CO., three offices: Head office, 642 Pacific Bldg., San Francisco, Cal.; Seattle, Wash., Central Bldg.; Los Angeles, Cal., Marsh-Strong Bldg.—California, Oregon, Washington, Nevada, Arizona and New Mexico.

WILLIAM W. HODKINSON, Distributor,
110 W. 40th Street, New York City

Everybody Should See This Picture—Endorsed by Prominent W. C. T. U., Temperance Organizations and the Moral Element Everywhere.

FOR SALE CHEAP Film manufacturers, here is a snap. New stone fireproof building, Edgewater, N. J., 27 minutes from Times Square, directly opposite Grant's Tomb, Riverside Drive, view of Hudson for miles, 15 minutes nearer New York than any Jersey movie plant.

Windows every 2 feet, skylights second story, 300 running foot frontage (6 lots), unrestricted, isolated from everybody, two streets, the ferry, postoffice, express, freight, two banks, 18 stores, all 3 minutes' walk; gas, electricity, water, sewer, telephone all in. Lots of land to enlarge plant, enough rock now cut for another story. Easy payments. See McLEAN, Care Limbach Realty Co., Palisade Junction, Palisade, N. J., phone Cliffside 700.

always anxious to be on the inside, climbs over the box into the field and presents himself before the renowned John McGraw, the Giant's manager. In a close up scene we see Matty talking with the famous manager and asking him all sorts of boyish questions. Then Matty makes friends with Jimmy Ford, mascot of the New York Giants and plays ball with him.

Leaving the ball grounds, Matty visits the N. Y. Globe Theatre and is introduced to Annette Kellermann, heroine of "Neptune's Daughter." The picture finishes with Matty and his father in a theatre where Matty is to see himself upon the screen.

ECLAIR.

THE RENUNCIATION (Two Parts—July 15).—John, a young prospector, is dying in the desert having lost his way and run out of water. He is rescued by Father Francisco, who takes him to the Mission where he is cared for and nursed back to health. Later, John leaves the Mission and after a month's searching, strikes gold. Deeply grateful to the monks for their kindness, he desires to become one of them himself; he makes over all his property to the Mission. The monks try to shake this determination, but John, having suffered at the hands of Rita, a mean flirt, is steadfast.

Alice Martens, discouregad at her supposed father's cruelty, goes through her dead mother's trunk and comes upon an old packet of letters. From one of them she learns that Martense is only her foster father and that the monks at the Xavier Mission had frequently befriended her dead father. Alice packs her few belongings, slips past her foster father, and starts out for the Mission to learn more, if possible, about her dead parents. Unaware of the hardship of the trip, she failed to provide herself with sufficient water and when she arrives she is in a critical condition. She is housed in old Maria's hut and here she makes an impassioned appeal to the Monks. They decided to keep her father, Father Francisco having recognized in Alice the image of her mother to whom he was devoted.

When sickness breaks out among the Indians Alice nurses them. In turn she is stricken. John and old Maria nurse her back to health. Later, Alice and John grow to be fast friends. In a moment of passion John declares his love for her. Throwing off his robe he takes the girl to the mission and implores Father Francisco to marry them. Taking the bag of gold which John had given the Mission, the Father returns it and, amid the bowed heads of his former brother monks, John is married.

TANGO VS. POKER (July 19).—Jones' wife is tango mad and when she decides to give a tango party he figures he is entitled to have a little poker game with his friends. After she leaves, Jones' friends arrive. It being a dry town, Jones takes a baby carriage in which to get beer.

Mr. Smith's maid takes the baby for an airing and, meeting a policeman, leaves the carriage alone. While Jones is in a store, a mischievous kid charges the carriages and Jones wheels home what he supposes to be a dozen bottles of beer. Arriving home Mrs. Smith's maid discovers instead of the baby, twelve cold bottles. Jones and his friends are amazed when they lift the carriage hood to find a crying infant. For a minute they are non-plussed. Then Jones, seizing the baby, rushes with it to Mrs. Smith's house where his wife is tangoing, and thrusting the child in the distracted mother's arms, tells Mrs. Smith that this should be a lesson to her to be more careful of her child while he returns to enjoy the poker party with his friends.

Newman Brass Frames and Rails

Read what C. A. Morrison of the Princess Theatre, Hartford, Conn., says about Newman Quality—

Gentlemen:

We have purchased quite a number of Brass Frames and Easels, together with Brass Ticket Rail and Three-sheet Brass Poster Frames of your Company.

All of these goods reached us in perfect condition and the quality was the best. I have told several other managers in the city of your goods and in several instances orders have been sent you—all of which goes to show that your best advertiser is a satisfied customer. Yours truly,

PRINCESS THEATRE CO., INC.,
C. A. Morrison, Mgr. Hartford, Conn.

Insist on the name "Newman" when buying frames

Write for New 1914 Catalog

THE NEWMAN MFG. CO.

NEW YORK 101 Fourth Ave. | CINCINNATI 717 Sycamore St. | CHICAGO 108 W. Lake St.

Established 1882

"FOTOPLAYER"

the instrument that supplies
MUSIC FOR THE PICTURES
The American Photo Player Co.
Berkeley, California.

CAROLINE B. NICHOLS and her Orchestra
THE FADETTES OF BOSTON

Desire engagement in high-class Picture House. WE OFFER thoroughly experienced players, very extensive library and artistic competent synchronizing of music to feature films.

Write or wire CAROLINE B. NICHOLS, Edelweiss Cafe, Detroit, until July 13th

BISON.

"THE HOPES OF BLIND ALLEY" (Three Parts—July 4).—Old Jean Basse makes a meager living for himself and granddaughter, Pauline, by peddling his miniature statuary. Pauline is in love with an unsuccessful artist who lives on the floor above. Every character who lives in the alley is shown, with his or her troubles and joys. Above everything else, it has been old Jean's ambition to possess a high silk hat. One day he receives a letter from an attorney advising him that he has fallen heir to the estate of a distant relative. It creates a commotion in the alley because all think that they are going to lose Jean. But in his heart the good old man decides that he will divide his wealth with his friends. On the strength of the legacy Jean buys a handsome silk stovepipe hat. It is a proud day for him when he strolls into blind alley thus spruced up.

The attorney calls to see him the next day and leads him to his inheritance, the contents of a small cottage. But everything has been attached by creditors, save a few worthless odds and ends in the attic. The only thing he considered worth taking home is a dust-covered painting.

Jean, feeling that he cannot now afford the silk hat, sadly sells it back to the haberdasher. Jean's home-coming is not as sad as might be supposed, for his friends rejoice that their little colony will not lose him. However the old man's legacy is worth more than he at first realized. The artist, Pauline's lover, no sooner sets eyes on the old painting than he declares it to be an original Van Dyke. Jean takes the painting to a successful artist, who attempts to buy it for two dollars. Jean, however, refuses it. The famous artist then tries to steal the masterpiece. Failing in this attempt he tries to mislead Jean by admiring Pauline. But all his schemes are defeated.

Pauline's sweetheart begins selling his pictures, and on the day they are married, the couple present Jean with a swell silk hat. But for the old man the end has come; he lies sick unto death. As a wedding gift he gives Pauline the painting, and as his life flickers away he insists on wearing the silk hat.

"A MEXICAN SPY IN AMERICA" (Two Parts—July 18).—Paul Sampson, son of Colonel Sampson, commander of a United States military post on the Mexican border, returns from Mexico accompanied by Captain Huraz of the Federal army. Colonel Sampson's daughter, Marie, is affianced to Captain Clifford of the United States signal corps. Huraz makes a favorable impression on Marie. Clifford watches their friendly relations grow with disfavor. Not only does he dislike Huraz, but he does not trust him. Clifford finally denounces Huraz to Marie. She believes his only motive is jealousy.

Madame Golez, a crafty old woman who is well-versed in intrigue, is intrusted with a message to Huraz. After a number of narrow escapes from rebel pickets she penetrated the American lines and delivers the message commanding him to obtain a copy of the United States signal corps cipher. Huraz uses Marie as his tool in surveying the camp of the signal corps. Then one night Huraz enters Marie's apartments and steals a complete outfit of her clothes. Madame Solez disguises herself as Marie and with Huraz steals into the camp of the signal corps.

Clifford is awake, thinking of the turn his love affair has taken, when Huraz and Madame Golez creep into his tent. In the fight which ensues Clifford observes a woman whom he mistakes for Marie, steal a copy of the code. The woman makes her escape. Huraz, however, is mortally wounded by Clifford. Clifford gives the alarm and begins the pursuit in an automobile. After a hard chase he overtakes her and regains possession of the code. He returns to the camp and accuses Marie of aiding Huraz in his plot by furnishing a disguise. Vindi-

Manufacturers of the Wonderful
REMBUSCH PATENTED GLASS MIRROR SCREEN

And all other kinds of Curtains for Moving Picture Projection, White Opaque, Glass Transparent Screens for Rear Projection, Goldcloth Fibre Screens, Mirrorcloth Fibre Screens, Seamless with Stretchers or Rollers.

Phone Seven-Eleven F. J. REMBUSCH, Pres.

MIRROR SCREEN COMPANY, INC.
SHELBYVILLE, INDIANA

And the Journal of the American Medical Association says regarding eye strain from the Movie habit:

"The Mirror Screen, consisting of a Mirror-Glass, seems to be the most desirable."

Nine different finishes. For wide or narrow houses.

Get the Rights in Your State for the MEXICAN WAR PICTURES

To the Victor Belongs the Spoils

AND if you want to share in the fruits of Villa's conquests get control of the exclusive right to exhibit in your state War pictures made by the Mutual Film Corporation under special contract with General "Pancho" Villa himself!

We have taken the "Big Chance"—which we are sure is really a Dead Certainty—and have paid the Mutual Film Corporation an enormous sum for the rights to these pictures for the entire United States.

THE IRON IS HOT! Villa is getting more famous every day! There is three times more about him in the newspapers than about any other man alive.

Prints are all ready for delivery—if you want the rights for your state, telegraph without delay or write by special delivery. Every moment counts in the strategem of the FILM business, just as well as in the strategem of war.

This material has never been shown except at the

Lyric Theatre

in NEW YORK where it drew record breaking houses of enthusiastic patrons

Remember These Facts:

The Mexican War Pictures—the only authentic ones actually taken under fire—are in seven full reels, filled with thrilling, throbbing excitement from start to finish.

The picture includes hundreds of scenes taken during the Battles of Torreon, Chihuahua and other famous conflicts and other scenes showing the tragic early life and adventure of this wonderful warrior, the greatest military genius since Napoleon!

NOW IS THE TIME TO "GET BUSY" AND TURN THE USUALLY DULL SUMMER MONTHS INTO THE MOST PROFITABLE PERIOD OF YOUR CAREER!

MEXICAN WAR FILM CORPORATION

Room 1205 71 WEST 23rd STREET NEW YORK

cation, however, comes from an unexpected source. A few moments before he expires Huraz confesses that he stole the clothes from Marie's room. Clifford is touched by Marie's sincere repentance.

REX.

"THE HOUSE DISCORDANT" (July 2).—John Brunton, a rich broker, middle-aged and a widower, falls in love with Hazel, a young society girl. She returns his love. They are married. He takes his young wife home and there she makes the acquaintance of Alan Brunton, the broker's son. The acquaintance ripens into a fast friendship. The father, conscious of his son's youth and fine looks, becomes jealous. It grows upon him and he suffers in silence.

One night the son, through no fault of his own, is drawn into a cafe brawl. The affair gets into the papers. The result of this is that his father, already a victim of jealousy, forbids him the house. The boy convinces his step-mother of his innocence in the affair, but his father's ears are closed against him. Mary, Alan's sweetheart, reads of the affair and is convinced that Alan is blameless. Her father, however, insists that she break with him.

Alan, with apartments down town, writes his stepmother, appealing for her good offices to the end of inducing Mary to elope with him. His stepmother consents and arranges for the elopement. Her husband, however, finds a portion of Alan's note. The fragment of the original note makes it appear that his son intends eloping with his stepmother. His jealousy is confirmed. He goes to Alan's apartments and demands his wife. Alan leads her from her hiding place, and then, to his father's astonishment, produces Mary, his wife by not more than ten minutes. The house of discord becomes a house of harmony.

"OUT OF THE DARKNESS" (July 19).—A wealthy couple who have lost their only child, decide to adopt an orphan. At the asylum they see many children, but one little fourteen-year-old, Ella, wins an immediate way to their hearts. A few days after her adoption, a thief decides to raid the house. Leaving his pals, a woman and a dope fiend, to watch outside, he enters the house. The child in her room above, hears a sound and creeps down. She finds no one and goes back to her room again. But the thief has seen her—she is his daughter. When his wife died, leaving him alone with the girl, he could not care for her and put her in the asylum. The father's heart is torn but he realizes that she will be happier in the new home. And out of the darkness there comes to him a determination to be a better man.

UNIVERSAL.

ANIMATED WEEKLY NO. 121 (July 1).—Transatlantic Flier Launched.—Rodman Wanamaker's gigantic aeroplane is christened "America" after five attempts are made to smash bottle of champagne over its prow—Hammondsport, N. Y. Sub-title—Lieut. John C. Porte of Royal Navy, who was chosen to pilot the "America" to England; Glen H. Curtisss, who built the "America."

New York's Prize Babies.—Mayor Mitchel awards grand prize to winner in the one hundred per cent. perfect baby contest—New York City.

Columbia Boys' League—Seventy-five boys of the Good Citizenship League go on sight-seeing expedition to Philadelphia, Pa.

Sports in Mid-Pacific.—Pillow fight one of many games indulged in by Universal actors on return from China.

Military Encampment.—Company of the Seventh Regiment National Guards, composed of New York's millionaires, spend week-end in camp—Van Cortlandt Park, New York City.

Monster Rose Pageant.—Bedecked in numberless garlands of sweet-smelling flowers vehicles parade through Portland, Ore.

Imposing Religious Ceremony.—Catholic churches throughout the civilized world celebrate the feast of Corpus Christi—Cincinnati, Ohio.

American Volcano Active.—Mount Lassen inactive for many years, boils over in most spectacular eruption—California.

Fire Heroes Rewarded.—Fire fighters who distinguished themselves by acts of bravery and valor are presented with medals by Mayor Mitchel, City Hall, New York City.

Worst Fire in Years.—Salem, Massachusetts, devastated as flames sweep greater part of city, rendering over 10,000 people homeless and causing tremendous loss of lives and property.

Intercollegiate Rowing Championship.—Columbia's crew beats those of Pennsylvania, Cornell, Syracuse, Washington and Wisconsin Universities in greatest rowing regatta ever held on the historic Hudson—Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

Cartoons by Hy Mayer, world famous cartoonist of Puck.

NESTOR.

HER GRAVE MISTAKE (July 15).—Roger Grant, foreman of the "Circle S" ranch, is engaged to Isabel Norris, the old ranchowner's daughter. Previous to a dance one evening, Grant receives the following letter from an official of the National Guard: "Anticipating an attack upon pumping station, Silver Lake reservoir, by the Federals. I request that you arm your cowboys and protect it until our troops arrive."

Nunez, a Mexican spy, learns of the existence of the letter and that night enters the ranch house to steal it. Grant and Isable return from the dance. She tells Grant to wait for her signal and then return. Shortly after his departure Isabel makes the appointed signal. An instant later Nunez comes from his hiding place, chokes the girl into insensibility and steals the letter.

When Grant returns, he finds Isabel upon the floor, unconscious. Blame for the assault is laid upon him. He barely escapes with his life. The cowboys take after him. In the meantime Isabel finds a piece of lace from Nunez' hat. This, together with the fact of the theft of the letter, convinces her that Nunez is the culprit. She sets out to call the cowboys. In the meantime the Mexicans have attacked the reservoir. Grant battles with them single-handed and holds the great pumps until the arrival of Isabel and reinforcements. Nunez is captured and Grant vindicated.

WHEN EDDIE WENT TO THE FRONT (July 17).—Eddie, the cub society reporter, is assigned to go to the front as war correspondent for his paper. He journeys to sunny Southern California, and is duly established in the United States military headquarters. Senorita Cascara is a simple Mexican maid who lives with her father a short distance from the border on the Mexican side. She is betrothed to Senor San Pedro, as violent a love-making-stab-in-the-back Mexican brigand as ever lived. The senorita's father sends his pretty daughter into the American camp to sell fake relics. There she meets Eddie and a violent equatorial love springs up between them. Eddie buys all her wares and follows her across the border into a hot-bed of rebels. Senor San Pedro swears terrible vengeance against Eddie. The cub reporter escapes barely with his life. However he again listens to the senorita's sweet voice and is again enticed into Mexican territory. San Pedro and his band of brigands pursue him and after a most terrific chase Eddie finds protection in the American camp. The fickle Senorita Cascara transfers her affections to San Pedro and Eddie takes the first train for his home town. The society column is good enough for him.

STERLING.

THE CRASH (July 2).—This comedy picture has, in addition to several other big features in the story, a terrific explosion when a house and barn are destroyed. Another main feature will be an automobile dashing over a cliff, tumbling headlong down the mountainside and crashing to pieces at the bottom. Immediately after this, a motorcycle, which is madly pursuing this automobile, follows in its wake, landing in the middle of the wreckage at the bottom.

JOKER.

WILLIE WALRUS AND THE AWFUL CONFESSION (July 15).—Willie accidentally gets on the trail of a terrible mystery. In his path he finds a paper on which is written, "Harold Harbrave, you have blighted my young life. I will have your villain's heart, though I wade through blood to get it."

Willie goes on the trail. A negro woman coming from a butcher shop with a carelessly wrapped piece of meat leaves a gruesome trail; at least Willie thinks it grewsome and follows.

The trouble all started when Bessie Bumpkins, amateur novelist, wrote a denouncement of Harold Harbrave as one page in her forthcoming novel. The paper blew away. Bessie, too, went on the trail—of her wonderful writing, assisted by her hero. In the end Willie gets the worst of it, and the lady is at liberty to continue her literary work.

HIS WIFE'S FAMILY (July 18).—Willie loves Sallie, the maid, but his mother objects, threatening to disinherit him. The young people are married quietly and decide to keep the matter a secret.

A year passes and a baby comes to be another secret. They place it in charge of a caretaker. Willie has come to live with his newly married sister, Stella, and has secured employment in the house for Sallie as maid.

The mother at last "hooks" a desirable widower and comes to visit her son and daughter and the son-in-law, Jack Gay. The mother-in-law decides she doesn't approve of Jack and believes him unfaithful to Stella. This suspicion is aroused by a letter from the caretaker to Sallie, saying that the baby must be taken away as she can no longer look after it.

Hubby, learning of mother-in-law's hatred of pianos, decides to buy one, give it to his wife as a present and so drive the woman out. Complications pile upon complications until at last the whole family is gathered in the shed, where both piano and baby have been hid. The baby finally reconciles all the warring members of the family.

CRYSTAL.

VIVIAN'S FOUR BEAUS (July 14).—Vivian has three admirers. Don proposes to her. She tells him that she would never marry a bald man. He decides to get a toupee. Charlie and Joe each have toupees but Vivian's kid brother manages to expose them in all their baldness when they propose. She informs them, individually that she would never marry a bald man. She gives up all hope of ever getting a fellow who has some hair. Charlie and Joe go out in the woods and decide to kill themselves. A fight results. They finally come back to Vivian equipped with toupees, thinking that they would get away with it, but find Vivian has already transferred her affections to a man whose head is covered.

WHAT PEARL'S PEARLS DID (July 14).—Pearl's husband comes home ill. She calls Dr. Cross and sends the maid for more. Pearl leaves the empty box on the table. She accidentally breaks her pearl necklace and puts the pearls into the box. Her husband feels worse. She telephones the doctor to call again. Hubby sees the box of supposed pills and swallows them. Then trouble starts. The doctor calls with two other doctors and upon examination learns that the patient has various diseases. Finally he discovers that he must be operated on at once. Pearl suddenly discovers that he has swallowed her pearls and upon explaining, her hubby is saved from being operated on.

Northern Feature Film Exchange
Suite 405, Schiller Building, Chicago
Phone Central 6229

Good Power's No. 5 Machine, complete, $70.00
Edison, Exhibition Model, all complete, $90.00
200 reels of film, new lot, $4.00 to $5.00
ECONOMY FILM CO.
105 FOURTH AVE. PITTSBURGH, PA.

GO INTO THE MOVING PICTURE BUSINESS

MAKE MONEY FAST! BE YOUR OWN BOSS!
$30 TO $50 PER NIGHT CLEAR
No Experience Needed
We furnish you with machine, film, curtain and complete outfit ready to go to work with ON OUR EASY PAYMENT PLAN.
Write Now for Our Large FREE Catalogue.
NATIONAL MOVING PICTURE CO.
Dept. M. P., Ellsworth Bldg., Chicago

THEATRE FOR SALE
To settle an estate
The Auditorium Theatre
BURLINGTON, NEW JERSEY
Will be offered at
Public Sale at Two O'clock P. M. on the Premises
Thursday, July 9th, 1914.

POSTER MOUNTING CLOTH
HEADQUARTERS
Our 42-inch poster cloth is recognized as the standard fabric for poster mounting. It is used by the LEADERS.
TURNER-HALSEY COMPANY 62 LEONARD STREET, NEW YORK

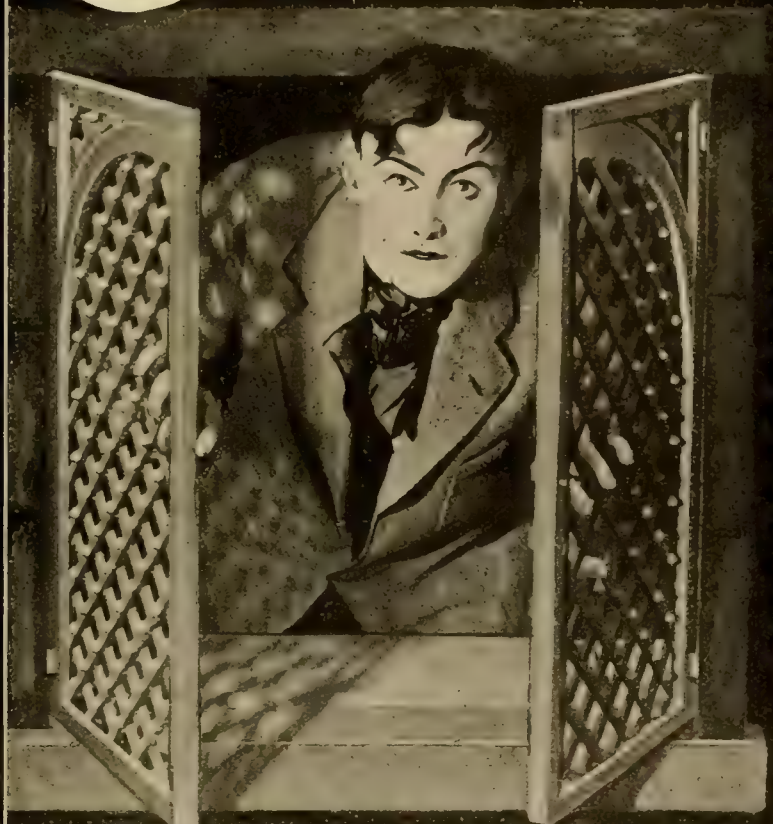
THE DARE-DEVIL DETECTIVE



IN FOUR PARTS

Again we have a world beater in which Hayes, the king of motion picture sleuths, sets a terrific pace for a set of equally keen malefactors. It is a picture of action from A to Z. A real hit.

THE DEVIL'S EYE—The Superlative Mystery Tale—4 Parts
THE SECRET SEVEN—The Classy Detective Story—4 Parts
AN ALPINE TRAGEDY—A Drama of the Snows—5 Parts
THE MIDNIGHT MARRIAGE—Walter Howard's Hit—4 Parts
BROTHER AGAINST BROTHER—Russian Romance—4 Parts

APEX FILM CO.

145 W. 45th ST., NEW YORK. P. P. CRAFT, MGR.
EUROPEAN OFFICE: H. WINIK, 35 LITTLE NEWPORT STREET, LONDON

HUGH HOFFMAN

MUTUAL FILM CORP.

AMERICAN.

THE LURE OF THE SAWDUST (two parts—July 13).—Annette, a bare-back rider in a circus, is the object of the attentions of Henri Dupree, a ring master. His attentions so arouse the jealousy of Marie, another performer, that she plans to cripple her rival. Placing a wire across the hoops, through which Annette leaps, while in performance on horseback, suggests itself and Annette is seriously injured. Annette is taken to the hospital and the circus moves on, leaving her behind. Dupree loses interest in Annette as soon as she becomes a cripple.

William Ward, a young farmer, witnesses the accident and becomes interested in Annette, and he and his mother call on her while she is at the hospital. Mrs. Ward, a metherly old soul, offers her a home. The young people fall in love and are married. Annette, although happily married, still feels the call of the circus, and is caught on one occasion by her husband dressed in her performing costume.

A year later the circus returns and Dupree encounters Annette in the village. She is fully restored to health, and he tries to persuade her to return to the circus by making her fine promises. She is tempted, but resists. He locates her home and continues persuasion and she decides to return for just one performance. She leaves a note to this effect. Her old friends greet her warmly at her performance, and the audience go wild over her riding. Flushed with the excitement and gratification, she listens to Dupree's importunities to continue in circus life. She remembers her baby and returns home to her husband, who has worried over her disappearance. She shows that she has put the life definitely behind her by making a dress for her baby out of her ballet suit, and her husband, finding her so employed, is relieved of any further uneasiness.

YOUTH AND ART (July 15).—Lord Golden wishes a portrait of his wife by the eminent artist. He introduces the young artist to his wife and discovers that they had known each other before. As the picture progresses the young people feel their love revive. They part in honor and dignity, but their hearts again re-live the past when they shared their crusts in bohemia and plighted vows that were to be broken by ambition plus jealousy. So she passed from his life to become a great lady, while he gave himself over to ambition and became a great painter, but—

"Each life's unfulfilled, you see;
It hangs still patchy and scrappy,
We have not sighed deep, laughed free,
Starved, Feasted, Despaired—Been happy,
This could but have happened once
And we missed it, lost it forever."
—Robert Browning.

PRINCESS.

THE DECOY (July 3).—John Henderson and his wife are noted "card sharps" who prey upon traveling men, who believe that they are adepts at poker and other games of chance. Mrs. Henderson has a distant relative who lives in a small country town, a widow with one daughter, Muriel. The girl is pretty and longs for the city so her mother, believing the Hendersons to be the respectable people they profess themselves, sends her daughter to the city on a visit, in their care. The girl's beauty makes a deep impression upon the unscrupulous pair, and to Muriel's surprise and delight she is soon provided with beautiful clothes.

The Henderson's plan to use Muriel's beauty to lure victims to the card table. Men of means gladly call at the Henderson's suite at the hotel, and always depart heavy losers in the game of chance. A millionaire finally becomes suspicious and consults the police, so the Hendersons flee the city, but the girl is kept in ignorance of the life they are leading.

Boyd, a young business man, meets the Hendersons at a summer resort and falls in love with Muriel and into the clutches of her dishonest relatives. Love comes to Muriel at the moment she discovers that the relatives for whom she cherished so much regard are merely unscrupulous gamblers. She threatens to expose them but hesitates to do so when they convince her that it will be impossible to prove her innocence. Finally, however, she braves their anger, and denounces them as a detective is about to place them all under arrest. The Hendersons are led away to punishment, while Muriel weds the man of her choice.

THANHOUSER.

"THE HARLOW HANDICAP (Two Parts—June 30).—Harry Allen upon the death of his father, finds himself the owner of a racing stable, but with very little money to maintain it. One of the horses proves to be an exceptionally fast racer, and Harry believes that he stands an excellent chance of winning the Harlow Handicap and retrieving his family's fortunes. George Carnes, an old trainer of Harry's father, and who is also very fond of Harry, with whose daughter Harry is in love, carefully looks after the horse. A bookmaker, Arthur Mower, pays attention to Mignon, Carnes' daughter, and when she repulses him he plans to prevent Harry's horse from winning the race, and thus at one stroke revenge himself upon Harry, Mignon and old Carnes.

Two men in the pay of Mower try to dispose of the valuable horse, but are discovered by Carnes and Harry, who overpower them. The barn takes fire, but Harry and his trainer fight their way through the flames and bring out two horses, but neither is the favorite. The two men are so exhausted that they are incapable of further effort. Mignon arrives, rushes into the barn and brings the favorite out. The Harlow Handicap is held, and Harry's horse wins. Mower's confederates confess, and the bookmaker is arrested and sent to prison. Harry, his financial troubles ended, marries Mignon.

A COOKED GOOSE (Two Parts—July 5).—Tired Tompkins and his pal, Dusty Ways, suffer much persecutions at the hands of Dan McCarty, a self-sufficient and tyrant policeman. One day the two hobos steal a goose. They are about to cook it over a fire in a vacant lot when the policeman descends upon them. He has them locked up. Meanwhile he takes the goose home to have it cooked for his own family dinner.

The hobos escape from the lockup and, in wandering and begging in backyards, see the policeman's wife put the cooked goose out on the window ledge to cool, the kitchen being in the third story flat where the policeman resides. She does this because the hobos have called the policeman on the telephone from his dinner with a begged nickel, as they have made up their minds to steal the cooked goose. Seeing it put out to cool, they resolve to climb up by a rope that is hanging from a clothes line pulley near the kitchen window of the policeman's flat.

After many futile efforts, and funny acrobatic stunts, one hobo pulls the other man up on the rope, and, just as he has seized the cooked goose, the policeman returns. His efforts to capture the nimble hobos result in many funny incidents, but finally the hobos get to the ground with the goose and tie the policeman up in the air. Here his wife discovers him and his roundsman catches him at home when he should be on his beat.

Meanwhile the happy hobos have a feast on the cooked goose, and afterwards visit outside the lockup and torment the policeman, who is incarcerated in the cell they lately occupied, for fighting with his roundsman who detected him "roped in and strung up."

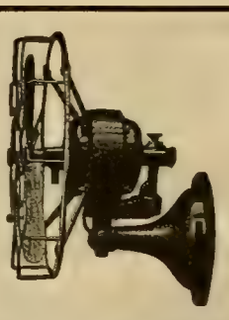
BEAUTY.

THE OTHER TRAIN (July 7).—In a dingy little attic, in one of the cheapest tenements in New York, a little old lady is huddled up in a chair by the side of a table. In her withered and trembling fingers is a letter, which informs her that she will be admitted to the poor house. She goes to the railway station and asks the agent to inform her when the train arrives. He answers in the affirmative. She sinks into a bench and falls asleep. The agent under stress of business fails to wake her when the train arrives. She wakes up. The agent approaches and tells her the train has come and gone but that there will be another at 12 o'clock. The old lady again falls asleep. On the opposite wall dissolves of scenes from her life appear. She sees herself a maid again, pretty Mary Baxter. She sees again the young minister, John Gordon; she sees the wealth of love that beams from his eyes and tells his heart's story. She is his sweetheart. She hears again his plea for her love. Ah! had she but listened. Why did the beckoning figure of "Fame" entice her away. She refused the shelter of his love and left her home. The vision fades. The little old woman truns restlessly on the bench.

Again a vision. Now she sees herself the leading lady of a burlesque show. Her beauty at its zenith, her popularity at its height. She has attained her ambition. The vision slowly fades. The little woman, as though troubled by restless dreams, turns again in her sleep. Then a vision appears. The exterior of a theatre. At the entrance door is a large poster featuring a beautiful woman in tights. "Babe Baxter, the Queen of Burlesque." John Gordon comes along. He sees the picture and stops. He does not see the gaudy poster—the woman in tights, those big red letters; he sees the little New England maid, his little sweetheart, Mary Baxter, who left home to seek her fortune. He thinks of her innocence, her youth, her ambition. Then he thinks of the lines he so often read:

"There were Ninety and Nine that safely lay
In the shelter of the Fold;
But one was out on the hills away,
Far off from the Hills of Gold."

As he thinks of these lines, the poster dissolves into a vision of the blue hills of Bethlehem. He sees the shepherds tending their flocks. They count their sheep and one is miss-



Your patrons shun the warm theatres in summer. Make your theatre cool and they will return soon again.

The sign

"Cooler Inside"

will invite them in. Make good by using

Westinghouse Electric Fans

because they give the most breeze with the least expense for current. They need no attention except lubrication once a season.

Send for Folder 4268 showing styles.

Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co.
DEPT. BR EAST PITTSBURGH, PA.
Sales Offices in 45 American Cities.

U. S. Army & Navy Goods

Complete Stock
Correct Regulations
Nothing Faked

CONFEDERATE UNIFORMS, U. S. A. UNIFORMS (any period), RIFLES, SADDLES, CARBINES, REVOLVERS, TENTS, HATS, CAPS, FLAGS, AMMUNITION, COWBOY CHAPS, BELTS, HOLSTERS, QUIRTS, ETC., All Ready for Immediate Delivery.

FOR SALE OR HIRE

Send for Catalogue.
ARMY & NAVY STORE CO., INC.
245 West 42nd St., New York
Between B'way and 8th Ave.

NOTICE!

We buy, sell and rent second-hand moving picture machines, chairs and films.

Chicago Theatre Wrecking House
37 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

THE OIL THAT STOOD THE TEST
Latchaw's Motion Picture Machine Oil

Gallons .....$4.00 Quarts $1.25
Pints ..... .75 Half Pints.. .50

Postpaid upon receipt of price.
E. R. LATCHAW & CO., Marietta, O.

The Capture.

PASQUALI AMERICAN

110 W 40th St. Co. NEW YORK-

The Conspiracy.

NOW READY FOR DELIVERY

"A MEXICAN MINE FRAUD"

or "THE GAME THAT FAILED"

(IN FIVE PARTS)

Stupendous dramatic production in five active reels from Rome to Mexico, tango dances, raging lions, great fire scene. Wild action every moment, featuring the great international actor, Capozzi.

New England States, New York, Eastern and Western Pennsylvania, Ohio and Canada have all been sold. Western and Southern Buyers should act quickly.

RELEASED JUNE 29TH.

"THE CHIMNEY SWEEPS OF THE VALLEY OF AOSTA"

(IN FIVE PARTS)

One of Pasquali's best productions, entirely new, a thrilling drama in five parts, feverish action, more exciting romance, than has ever before appeared. The beautiful actress, Laura Darville, here featured as heroine, will command your admiration.

Buying Chimney-Sweeps.

ALL EASTERN STATES SOLD IN ONE WEEK.

Artistic two-color heralds unusual sepia photos and attractive one, three and six sheet posters in four colors will be of great assistance to you in booking these plays.

A Mother's Anguish.

NOW SELLING STATE RIGHTS ON BOTH PICTURES.

W

ing. One shepherd looks about. He would look for the lost sheep. The other shepherd tells him to leave it. He shakes his head. "I love that sheep better than the rest." He leaves to seek it. John Gordon sees the bleakness of the wilderness. He sees the little lost sheep straying, stumbling along blindly. He sees the shepherd come on and gently take it up and place it on his shoulder and return with it to the fold. The vision fades and John Gordon is standing before the poster of Babe Baxter. He enters the theatre. His appearance is greeted with jeers. He heeds them not. His little New England sweetheart is before him on the stage. He goes to her dressing-room. Two gentlemen are with her. They retire with a smile of derision. Mary Batxer and John Gordon are alone. The modesty of former days returns and she hides her thinly clad limbs from his sight. He begs her to leave that life and to come back to her old New England home. She refuses gently but firmly. The vision slowly fades and the little old woman is cuddled in the corner of the waiting room.

Again a vision appears. She sees herself, some years later, still an actress, but what a difference. Her beauty that won all hearts is faded. The form that commanded the price of a leading lady is devoid of grace. She is forced to accept minor parts. She sinks lower and lower in her profession until even the meanest parts are denied her. She totters from the stage entrance, old, poor, feeble and gray. She totters across the threshold of her poor, dingy attic. She reads again the letter from the poor house. The vision fades. The little old woman sits back in the corner. The station door opens and John Gordon, the young minister, comes in and approaches the bent form, gently touches her and beckons her to follow. The head of the little old woman falls back against the wall. The form is still but from that form comes the spirit of Mary Baxter, pure, sweet and young. She is clothed in white garments and a smile rests on her face. She slowly follows John Gordon. Together they slowly approach to the foot of the Golden Stairs. Together they slowly mount to the throne of God. An angel with golden trumpet announces the coming of another soul. The agent in the waiting room approaches and touches the little old lady on the shoulder. People ask kindly if she is going to take this train. He lifts his hat. "She has taken the other train."

MUTUAL WEEKLY.

MUTUAL WEEKLY No 78 (June 25).—Britain wins international Polo match. 50,000 spectators see the deciding game at the fashionable Meadow Brook Club.

Old "Grads" have their annual frolic at Princeton University. Hon. Woodwrow Wilson, President of the United States, becomes "Tommy" Wilson and joins in the fun with his class of '79.

"John Gund," ridden by Jockey Andy Neylon, won Latonia Derby. Eccentric motorcycle race contest at Vernon, France, produces considerable excitement.

A big fire destrops "The Little Theater" at Moscow, Russia. Loss, $500,000.

Beautiful mounts are exhibited at Erfurth Horse Show.

Mrs. M. McGowan, New Jersey's first and only policewoman.

Scenes on a California ostrich farm.

"Smoke Eaters" test a new breathing helmet in Breslau, Germany.

U. S. Post Department observes Flag Day at Washington, D. C. Secretary of State Bryan delivers an address.

St. Louis Flag Day features largest banner in the world. Carried by 150 men. Weight, 600 pounds.

B. P. O. Elks observe Flag Day in Omaha. Gen. Jno C. Cowin delivers address.

MUTUAL WEEKLY NO 79 (July 2).—Trans-Atlantic Airship has First Trials at Hammondsport, N. Y.—Lieut. John Cyril Porte wil make an early attempt to cross the Otlantic Ocean by air route.

A Carabao wallow in the Philippine Islands.

Mt. Lassen Volcano in Eruption—The only active crater in the U. S. belches forth smoke, ash and rock, endangering many lives.

PORTLAND, OREGON, Entertains Many Visitors with Unique Carnival. Parade and Balloon Races.—Arrival of King and Queen of Portland's Rose Festival. A few of the many beautiful floats.

Yale Wins Famous Boat Race from Harvard by One-Fifth Second.—The most heartbreaking contest ever rowed over the Thames course.

Harvard University Holds Class Day Exercises.—Battle of confetti. Beautiful women hurl paper missles at the happy Harvard men.

Royal Aero Club of Santander, Spain, is Entertained by native bull fighters.

Perilous motor boating in the Snake River, Idaho.

Louis of Baviere and Royal Princess Review Troops at Munich, Germany.—The famous "goose-step" done as mark of respect to royalty.

WHY

are we equipping some of the finest new theatres today?

BECAUSE

T. S. M. QUALITY

Lobby Displays have the individuality they want.

No. 30 Frame.

IF YOU

investigate our goods Mr. Exhibitor (who has not placed his order for that new or remodeled theatre) we feel certain the merits of our Brass Display will get your ORDER,

you surely will

GET THE BEST.

The Theatre Specialty Mfg. Co.

1232 East 3rd Street, CLEVELAND, OHIO.

See our Exhibit Booth 27, Dayton Convention.

FILMS FOR SALE

40 Three-Reel Features
20 Two-Reel Features
250 Single Reels
Machines and Supplies

ISIDOR WENIZ FILMS CO., 133 N. Gay St., BALTIMORE, MD

We Buy and Sell Second Hand Films and Moving Picture Machines

WESTERN FILM BROKERS

37 So. Wabash Avenue - Chicago, Ill.

BEST OF CAMERA MEN

Furnished for all Occasions

CHICAGO FEATURE FILM CO.

4108-22 Lincoln Ave., Chicago, Ill.

KAY BEE.

"THE FEUD AT BEAVER CREEK" (Two Parts—July 10).—In the mountains of Tennessee two factions have been carrying on a feud for generations—the Hatfield clan and the Cole clan. Jim Hurd, a member of the Hatfield clan was mysteriously shot. The balance of the Hatfield clan planned vengeance. Jeff Hurd, nephew of Jim Hurd, neutral in the feud, is called to take care of the Jim Hurd's ranch. He meets Almirey Cole, falls in love with her and determines to see her again, although he was informed that crossing creek would mean death to him. Almirey and Jeff are married, and it is through their little daughter, Blossom, that the feud is brought to an end.

DOMINO.

"STAR OF THE NORTH" (Two Parts—July 16).—Star of the North, daughter of Iron Heart, a Sioux War Chief, is in love with Owahtonah. Black Kettle, a Cheyenne chief, hearing of her beauty, comes to her father's village to pay court to her. Iron Heart accepts the presents of Black Kettle, and betrothes his daughter to the visiting chief. Star of the North and Black Kettle leave for the Cheyenne Chief's Village. The first night they camp their horses are frightened by a bear. While Black Kettle is away looking after the horses, Star of the North escapes and takes refuge in a deserted cabin. Black Kettle, unable to trail Star of the North in the darkness, gives up the pursuit until dawn. The Indian girl, tired out, goes to sleep in the cabin, but is rudely awakened by Jim Holt, renegade trapper, who returns to his cabin after a night's debauch at the saloon. After a struggle with him, she escapes, takes his horses and goes to her lover, Owahtonah. Fearing punishment by her father for her broken engagement, Star of the North and her lover leave the village and seek refuge with another tribe.

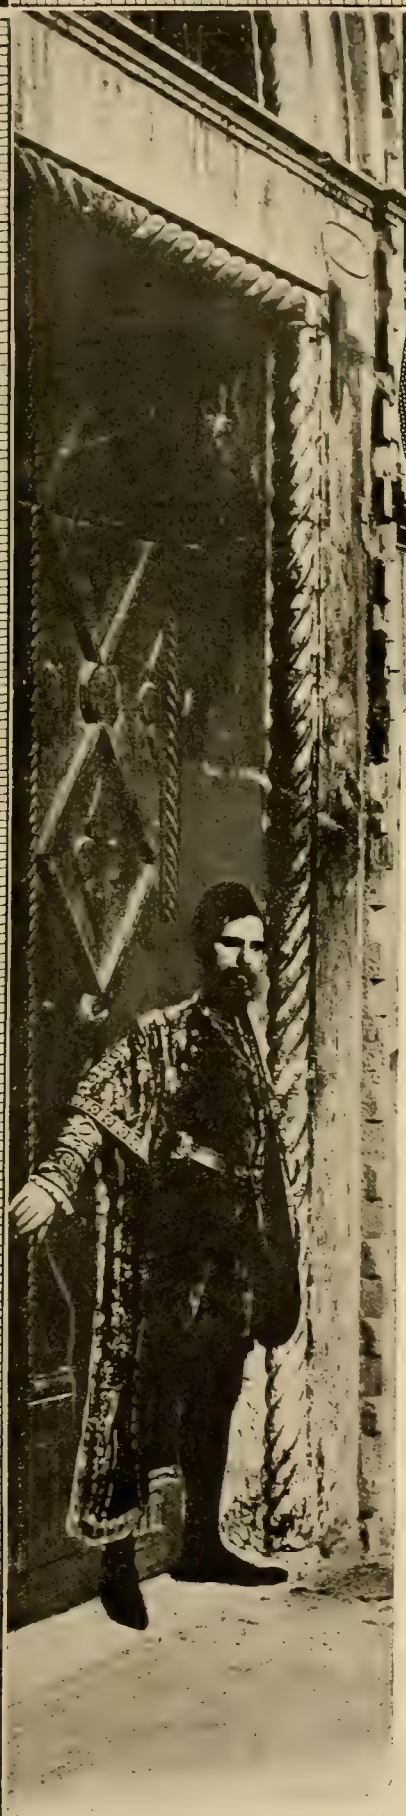
BRONCHO.

"SHORTY TURNS JUDGE" (Two Parts—July 15).—Jim Walls, a ne'er-do-well, deserts his wife in the East and drifts West. His wife disguises herself as a boy, and follows him. She obtains a position as piano player in the concert hall and saloon where Jim makes his headquarters. She finds him one evening making love to Nell Bond, Shorty's sweetheart, and shoots him from ambush. Shorty, who has been looking for Nell rushes to the dead man, just as the men from the concert hall come to find out the cause of the shot. Shorty is accused of the crime, but makes a getaway and lives with an Indian. He finds Judge Folsom suffering from a rattlesnake bite; he takes the judge to his dugout where the Indian nurses him back to health. Shorty to play a joke on the boys, disguises himself as the judge, presents his letter of introduction to the sheriff, who has been having trouble with some of the cowboys, and puts them in jail. Shorty takes his place on the bench and finds that the sheriff is guilty instead of the boys. He sentences him to six months on the rock pile. The boys elect Shorty as sheriff.

FEATURE FILM STORIES

ECLIPSE—URBAN.

THE JOKE THAT KILLS (Two Parts).—Andrew, a young actor, lives with his mother. He is deeply in love with Stella, the leading lady of his company, and who is to be his partner in the next play. Unfortunately, his talent is poor and during the rehearsal his part is taken away from him and given to another, as he fails to come up to the mark. The day of the opening of the show comes and Stella makes a great success. Wishing to congratulate her, Andrew brings her a few cheap flowers. All his comrades laugh at this ridiculous present, and after the dinner given to Stella in honor of her success, they suggest that a play be given in which Andrew is to take the leading part. A theater is hired by Stella's rich admirer and Andrew, confident of his success, falls into the trap set for him by taking the leading part in Roy Blas. The day of the representation of the play has come at last, but in the second act, at the moment when the great love scene takes place, and Andrew thinks that he has stormed a great success, the whole audience arise, yelling and throwing all things at him. In despair he leaves the stage, writing a short note to Stella telling her that she has killed all his ambitions, and that now he has nothing at all to live for. When Stella comes to Andrews' dressing room, she finds the note and begins to see the meanness of her silly joke. She rushes to him home, only in time to see him brought in by a policeman, with a bullet in his chest. Realizing the wickedness of her act, Stella helps the poor old mother to nurse Andrew back to his health.



"Look to Your Daughter," cries Iago

Othello

RELEASED
THROUGH SPECIAL FEATURE DEPARTMENT

or, THE MOOR OF VENICE

FIVE PARTS

THE DIVINE SHAKESPEAREAN DRAMA

Made at Venice, Italy!!!

By the Photo Drama Company. THE SUPER FILM—By All Odds the Most Pretentious, Beautiful and Accurately-Screened Version of Shakespearean Stories!

MADE AT VENICE, ITALY. That's a Tremendous advertising Feature in itself! VENICE, rendezvous of the modern tourist—A very fountain-head of Romance and Adventure! The waterways of Historic Venice with its tales, ten centuries old, of Passionate Loves and Fierce Vendettas—the indolent, dreamy sweep of these Gondola-ridden highways are scenes of the quaintest stories in any language!

FOR THE MAKING OF OTHELLO the City Fathers declared a half-holiday—canals were closed to modern commerce, leaving only the aged palaces, the gayly-costumed players and the clicking cameras of the Photo Drama Company.

In OTHELLO, we offer a real masterpiece. It is the first of Shakespeare's stories filmed in its proper environment, as the Master would have wished.

For Release Through

SPECIAL FEATURE DEPARTMENT

General Film Company

WEEK OF JULY 6th

Complete Line of Lithographs, Press Stories, etc.

GEORGE KLEINE

166 N. State St., Chicago

HEPWORTH—AMERICAN.

THE TRAGEDY OF BASIL GRIEVE (Three Parts).—Basil Grieve, a rising young novelist, meets Vera Duncan and is strangely attracted to her. Vera's admirer, Roland Nashley, is an inventor and is at work on a machine which will net him a fortune if he can perfect it. Vera, knowing that Grieve has become wealthy through the success of his stories, decided to marry him and so informs Nashley. The latter has just been assured of the success of his invention, but upon receipt of a note from Vera, announcing her intention to marry Grieve, he attempts to smash the machine, only being prevented from carrying out his threat by an assistant inventor.

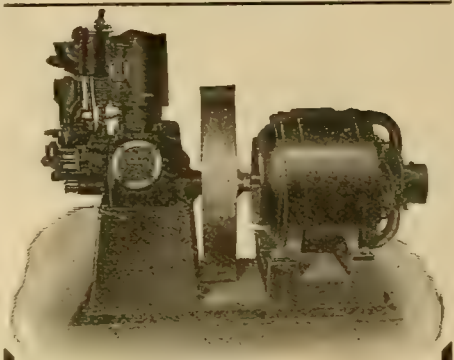
Vera and Basil Grieve are married and as time passes Vera's extravagances become an unbearable burden upon Grieve. Vera again meets the now rich and successful Nashley and the old love returns. Hard pressed for money because of her losses at card parties, Vera coaxes her husband to pay her bill. He consents, and she makes out the check for the desired amount. Suddenly her attention is attracted to a paper on Grieve's desk, which is a part of his latest novel. It is a note to the coroner and states that although he is not insane, he is taking his life for reasons known to himself. Vera conceives a plan by which Grieve places his signature on the note thinking he is signing the check.

Grieve, finding the note to the coroner missing, rewrites it and forwards his manuscript to the publishers. Vera and Nashley plot to get Grieve out of the way and with the note to make it appear that Grieve took his own life. Vera plans poison in Grieve's food. The publisher reads of Grieve's death and is surprised at the similarity between the note found by the coroner and the one Grieve used in his novel. He accordingly sets a detective on the case and he soon discovers that the signature was obtained by a misrepresentation.

Vera's guilt is established but Nashley aids her to escape in his motor car. The police set out in another machine and a thrilling pursuit takes place. Suddenly the fugitive's machine becomes unmanageable and plunges off the road and blows up. Vera is taken, dying, from the wreck and Nashley, uninjured, is made to answer for his part in the plot.

ECLECTIC.

THE PEARL OF THE PUNJAB (Three Parts).—While on a hunting trip in North India, George Hamilton and his daughter Sarah find a native hut in which a woman has just died. Her little daughter, crying beside her mother's body, touches the heart of the man and he takes her to his home in Calcutta. She grows up into a most beautiful young girl, but is used as a servant by Sarah Hamilton. Captain Carruthers, a doctor in the British army, is engaged to Sarah and on his calls at her house is very kind to the little orphan, Aissa. This is so different to the theatment she is used to, that she expresses a deep devotion that will last as long as she lives. Sarah is of a very cold disposition and, though engaged to Carruthers, does not seem to care very much for him. She strikes Aissa in a fit of temper and the doctor reproves her for it. To makes him jealous she flirts with one of the officers of the regiment. She discovers that this officer is very rich and throws Carruthers over to try to win him. Carruthers, suffering from a fever, sees Sarah flirting and in a fit of temper strikes his superior officer, badly wounding him. Some of the soldiers see the scene and report to the commander, who orders Carruthers' arrest. Aissa trys to persuade Carruthers to escape, but he refuses. She puts one of the native drugs in a glass of water he has asked for, and as he becomes unconscious has him carried off by some of his native servants to whom she has explained his predicament. They take him to the mountains where he regains his strength, but is afraid to return on account of his action. Sarah achieves her purpose and marries the rich officer, Colonel Allen. On a hunting trip later, the Colonel is seized by an attack of appendicitis. The party do not know what to do, as they are very far from medical aid. A native beater tells them of a wonderful man who lives in the next valley, who has been healing all the natives who have been sick. They decide to take the Colenel to him as a last resort. They ride off without waiting for Mrs. Allen. On their arrival at Carruthers' hut none of the party recognize him and Carruthers does not recognize the Colonel, as he has grown a beard to hide the scar given him in the fight. Carruthers consents to perform the operation. Just after he has started Mrs. Allen (Sarah) rushes in. She recognizes Carruthers and he finds out for the first time on whom he is operating. He is very much tempted to let the Colonel die, but Aissa brings him to his senses. He finishes the operation and pronounces it successful. The Colonel regains consciousness and, recognizing Carruthers, starts to sit up. The movement causes a bleeding in the wound and his death, not, however, before he begs Carruthers forgiveness. Sarah does not seem to mind the death of her husband and asks Carruthers to return to civilization with her and be as he was before. Carruthers spurns her request, and turning to Aissa proclaims that he will make her his bride as she has shown that she is a much better woman that any other he has ever met.



2 k. w. Direct-connected Outfit

The above shows our k. w. Direct-connected

Brush Electric Lighting Set

For many users our 4 k. w. Lighting Set is larger, and perhaps more expensive than necessary. The 2 k. w. outfit is just as good in its way as the other.

Send for catalogue

The Chas. A. Strelinger Company

Box MP-2

Detroit, Michigan, U. S. A.

APEX.

THE DEVIL'S EYE (Four Parts).—Among the guests at the Countess Rita's Masquerade Ball are her lover, Count Hugo, and the Barrys, two brothers, whose fame as diamond dealers has penetrated to every quarter of the globe. They prevail upon the Countes to show them her remarkable diamond, "The Devil's Eye," which is, without doubt, the largest uncut diamond extant. She sends her lady companion to the strong room to fetch it, and in the meantime the party break up and mingle with the merry throng. Suddenly a servant appears to announce the fact that the door of the strong room is closed and the lady companion is a prisoner. When the strong room is opened again the lady is found to be dead, and "The Devil's Eye" has disappeared. The police are summoned, and the servant accuses Count Hugo whom he observed near the safe.

Ere the police can find him, the Countess has warned him of his danger, and promising to return when he has established his innocence, he starts towards the Border, knowing that once it is crossed he is safe from the bloodhounds of the law. The actions of the Countess and Hugo, who, in the excitement of the moment, have acted very foolishly, intensify the police's suspicion, and they follow hotly on his trail. It is imposible to describe in a brief synopsis, the manner in which the Count reaches the Border. With consummate skill the producer of this drama has made full use of the talent and unparalleled daring of an actor, who is never more happy than when flaunting death in the face. Three times three does he risk his life jumping from high bridges, climbing perilous heights, riding on horseback down steep precipices, and, in fact, defying death in every possible form. The chase is one succession of thrills and daredevil feat, until at last the Border is reached.

The Count's next step is to go to Amsterdam, which, being the diamond market of the world, is the place in which the thieves will seek to dispose of their booty. After a trying time, in which he finds himself staring death in the face time out of number, he is surprised to find that the Barry brothers stole the diamond, and have it in their possession. In order to prove his case against them he taps the telephone wires and records all their telephone conversations on the Dictaphone, thus obtaining valuable evidence. He then communicates with the Countess, and she avails herself of an invitation to spend a week end at the Barry's house, and is thus enabled to smuggle Hugo into their house, where he learns that the diamond is hidden in a basket which is suspended on a wire stretched from one tall chimney to another in the factory where the Barrys are conducting an illegal process for improving the lustre of diamonds.

The Count makes a bold bid to obtain the diamond. He climbs out along the wire, until he reaches the basket in which it is hidden. His dangers are manifold, for the basket is suspended at a great height, and while he is laboriously working his way towards it, a storm arises. In order to prevent the Barrys interfeing with Hugo, whilst performing this dangerous operation, Countess Rita steals up into their secret laboratory, and handcuffs one of the brothers. Finding that the game is played, he makes his way to a switch, which has been prepared to destroy the factory in the event of such a discovery taking place. A few moments later a terrific explosion rends the air; and two immense chimneys totter to the ground, and the factory is blown to atoms. This brings the Count hurtling from his perileus perch to the ground, but, fortunately, his fall is broken, and his life saved. Hugo has now established his innocence, recovered "The Devil's Eye," and brought the thieves to justice. No obstacle remains between him and the Countess, who welcomes him to the kingdom of love with smiles of joy and happiness.

When Your Picture Machine Needs Repairing

WHY DON'T YOU SEND IT TO US?

We have the best equipped machine shop in the country and can repair any make of machine. Write us and get acquainted.

WE BUY SECOND-HAND MACHINES.

GEO. M. HOKE SUPPLY CO.

76 N. State St. (bet. Lake and Randolph) Chicago, Ill

FLA. GA. ALA. MISS. LA.

APEX FEATURE SERVICE

315 RHODES BUILDING

ATLANTA, GA.

TENN. N. C. S. C. VA.

Presenting Theatrical Plays with Stars in Motion Pictures

THE FIRST THREE OF A NOTABLE ARRAY

"MICHAEL STROGOFF"

In Five Reels With

JACOB P. ADLER

Unanimously endorsed by the critics and the trade press as a great production

(Now Ready)

"THE RAGGED EARL"

With ANDREW MACK

A thrilling, romantic melodrama with plenty of action and heart interest

(In Preparation)

"THE GREAT DIVIDE"

Henry Miller's and Margaret Anglin's Recent Spectacular Stage Success

(Coming)

Plenty of striking paper with each production; also heralds, photos, slides, etc.

Popular Plays and Players, Inc.

HARRY J. COHEN, General Manager

1600 Broadway NEW YORK CITY Mecca Building

Phone Bryant 4016

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS

Classified Advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted :: :: :: ::

SITUATIONS WANTED.

MUSICAL DIRECTOR.—(Pianist) Experienced and reliable, union man, with best of reference and large library of orchestral music, wishes to make a change. Address N. E. S., c/o M. P. World, N. Y. City.

LABORATORY MAN.—Three years' experience, desires permanent position as tinter and toner; expert color mixer. J. Jackowitz, 96 Union Ave., New Rochelle, N. Y.

WANTED.—Change of position by expert lady picture pianist and singer; best of references. A. F. of M. Address Eva Maude White, 366½ Selby Ave., St. Paul, Minn., Flat 7-Dacotah.

HELP WANTED.

AGENTS WANTED—For atlas work, map work and Mexican War map; unusual opportunities for intelligent men with ability to sell. Write for particulars, Rand McNally & Co., Dept. B, Chicago, Ill.

CAMERAMAN.—Everywhere (except N. Y. City) owning outfit, can learn of valuable service now being established for weekly news pictures. Ray 326 5th Ave., New York.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES.

FEATURES WANTED.—Will handle on percentage and get the money for you. Established business, capable and experienced management. If you have the goods we will do the rest. Write or wire what you have. Lewis Film Co., Inc., Kalamazoo, Mich.

FOR SALE.—498 shares of a total capitalization of 1500 in the largest moving picture house in Denver. Have too many interests and must let loose of some. Address F. O. Browne, 25 Larimer St., Denver, Colo.

FOR SALE.—At Ft. Lee, New Jersey, desirable site for film manufacturing plant. 4 acres on Main St. Improvements, for particulars address Muirhead, 104 Fifth Ave., New York City.

THEATRES WANTED.

PICTURE THEATRES WANTED.—In any section of the center west. If you have one for sale write the Photoplay Investment Co., Muscatine, Iowa.

THEATRES FOR SALE OR RENT.

THE VERNON THEATRE.—Corner 4th St. and Vernon Ave., Long Island City, is for sale. New Steinway tunnel next door opens soon, factory and apartment houses erected daily. Big boom expected. Property fireproof brick 55x100. Fully equipped, 2 machines, Gold Fibre Curtain, Wurlitzer Orchestra, will seat 600. Everything the latest. License new, business good all year. One hundred per cent investment. Ten cents, stage attached fully equipped. $10,000 cash required. Call if you mean business.

FOR SALE.—Open air picture theatre on one of the principal streets and in a thickly populated section. Seating capacity over 500. Must sell at once account dissension of partners. Price reasonable. Jas. J. Keating, Jr., 120 So. Park St., Elizabeth, N. J.

FOR SALE.—A motion picture theater in a live Conn. City of 25,000, 411 seats, long lease, only two other houses in the city. Good reason for selling, big chance for a live wire. At a low price. R. V. Meehan, Danbury, Conn.

THEATER.—For rent or lease. On the East side of New York, a 300 seat spacious house. No competition. Now being altered. A gold mine. Can be open for business from 10 A. M. to 11 P. M. Reasonable terms. Write to Bell Improvement Co., 853 Southern Boulevard, Bronx.

FOR SALE.—My finely equipped open air Photoplay and Vaudeville theater, large stage, well lighted in suburban Jersey town. No opposition, no trollies and excellent drawing field. Address F. A. W., c/o M. P. World, N. Y. City.

PICTURE SHOW.—300 seats Maryville, Mo. Live city of 6000; good show town, manager ill; $1200 for quick sale. Box 333, Davenport, Ia.

MOVING PICTURE THEATER.—Seating 630 on main street in New Jersey; city of 30,000; clearing $75 weekly; six years lease; price reasonable. Address G. C., c/o M. P. World, N. Y. City.

EQUIPMENT WANTED.

WANTED 200 to 400 opera chairs second hand, also booth. Gem Theater, Peterborough Amusement Co., Peterborough, N. H.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

BRAND NEW.—Phantoscope complete, $50 C. O. D. Frank A. Holmes, Brewster, N. Y.

FOR SALE.—Model A. Williamson Perforator. Shipped for examination. Charge guaranteed one way. Charles Simons, 405 11th St. N. W., Washington, D. C.

BRASS POSTER FRAMES.—For one, three and six sheets. Also brass easels, brass railings. Write for complete catalog. The Newman Mfg. Co., Cincinnati, O. 101 4th Ave., N. Y.

ARC LAMPS.—13-10 Amp. Westinghouse, 1-10 Amp. Excello, 1-3 Amp. Daylight, D. C. Flaming Arc Lamps, 2-10 Amp. Westinghouse, 3-5 Amp. Stilvan and 1-10 Amp. Siemens-Shuckert, A. C. Flaming Arc Lamps $10 each F. O. B. Milwaukee, Wisc., Commonwealth Power Co.

FOR SALE.—Any part of my moving picture theatre; opera chairs 65c each, Simplex machines $125, Power's 6A $100. All goods used three months, have many other bargains in other fixtures. A. Glen, Room 200, Houser Bldg., St. Louis, Mo.

FOR THEATER EQUIPMENTS.—Such as seats, picture machines, etc., see Lears Theatre Supply Co., 509 Chestnut St., St. Louis, Mo.

FOR SALE.—Bargain Schneider tripod for studio work panorams, tilts. Almost new $30. Charles Simon, 405 11th St. N. W., Washington, D. C.

POWERS 6A.—With large lamp house, loop setter, 14 inch magazines, 3-14 inch reels, Powers Rewinder, motor for machine, A. C. 110 V. 60 cycles, Sterling economizer, all for $200 cash. Used two weeks. 4-16 inch oscillating fans $15 each. Regulaion booth $40, lot chairs 20c each. T. K. Thrasher, Confluence, Pa.

FOR SALE.—Complete electric light plant or any part. Fairbanks Morse 4 H. P. special electric gasoline engine. 3 K. W. 110 volt D. C. Dynamo, Rheostat, Meter and belt. Good as new. Manager Lyric Theatre, Neoga, Ill.

FOR SALE.—Motion picture theater equipment, Powers No. 5 machine, Ft. Wayne Compensarc (220 volt) 140 chairs. New Bailey Piano. Exhaust fan, booth, screen & supplies; a bargain, $425 cash; everything in A1 condition. Lenox Family Theater, Lenox, Mich.

EDISON EXHIBITION MODEL.—And Powers No. 5 picture machines complete with upper and lower magazines, new 110 volt Rheostat and Bauch & Lomb lenses, also rewind, everything ready to operate. Used only a few months. Guaranteed first class condition. Will take $75 for either machine, will ship subject to inspection. Howard, 204 Houser Bldg., St. Louis, Mo.

MOVING PICTURE THEATER CHAIRS.—2000 at $1.00 each will sell in small lots. Atlas Seating Co., 501 5th Ave., N. Y.

FILMS WANTED.

WANTED.—Single reel also 3 and four reel features with posters. Federal F. F. Co., 220 West 42nd St., N. Y. City.

FILMS FOR SALE OR RENT.

FOR SALE.—100 single reels, also 2 reel features with posters. Federal F. F. Co., 220 West 42nd St., N. Y. City.

CAMERAS FOR SALE.

PROFESSIONAL MOVING PICTURE CAMERAS.—Two sizes. Tripods, Zeiss-Tessar 50 m lenses, $150, $225. Special cameras to order. Repairing all makes. R. W. Pittman, 50 West St., N. Y. City.

AMERICAN CINEMATOGRAPH. — Camera, 200 ft. capacity, fine magazines, carrying case. Tripod and tilting top. All like new. Sell cheap, F. E. Slocum, 406 Main St., Peoria, Ill.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS FOR SALE.

ELECTRIC PIANOS.—With keyboards $140. Orchestrian pianos with pipes $250 all guaranteed. Closing out electric piano business. Every picture show has use for one. Send for circular. J. F. Herman 1420 Pa. Ave., Washington, D. C.

MISCELLANEOUS.

PIANIST.—Send 25c for 20 pieces of descriptive music or 50c for 75 pages. Also how to obtain music for 2c a copy. E. A. Ahern, Twin Falls, Ida.

PHOTOPLAY WRITING.—Evening course of three months' instruction in the theory and practice of scenario writing. American Photoplay School, 243 West 125th St., N. Y. City.

ORCHESTRA LEADERS—PIANISTS. — $1 money order brings you eight numbers, piano, violin, drums or $1 for 25 assorted copies popular vocal and instrumental sheet music. Gordon Music, 207 West 34th St., N. Y. City.

PACK YOUR THEATER.—Your dullest day I can make your capacity day. I am doing it. No souvenirs. Write for particulars. M. Graver, Mgr., Colonial Amus. Co., Jackson, Mich.

INSTRUCTION.—In moving picture camera work by expert. New or 2nd hand cameras for sale. Ray, 326 5th Ave., New York.

LET THE TRUTH BE KNOWN!

Refer to our ad in last week's issue of The Moving Picture World. Let us show you why over 7,500 exhibitors the world over installed

THE WORLD'S BEST SCREEN

MIRROROIDE

Then why pay three or four times as much for an inferior product? We invite a real demonstrative test against any screen on earth.

Make others show you with the eyes that God gave you, as we are ready at all times to do.

Get our large free samples. Test any way you desire. Compare with any screen on earth.

REALIZE !

MIRROROIDE

is canvas, and sold under a real 5-year guarantee, made in five tints or colors, and in the rough or matte finish. As you desire—gold, silver, flesh or silver white, at 33 1-3 to 36 1-9 a square foot. $3.00 to $3.25 a square yard.

Of course you see a price difference, but realize we have the factory. Output, a screen, regardless of size, every 20 minutes. Resources, capital and facilities

THE REASON

Get our samples at once—now—test against any screen on earth. Surely seeing is believing.

Agencies All Principal Cities.

THE J. H. GENTER CO., Inc.

NEWBURGH, KY.

Life Photo Film Corporation

"The House of Broadway Features"

EXECUTIVE OFFICES
220 West 42d Street

STUDIOS AND LABORATORY
Grantwood, N. J.

"The Greyhound"

By Paul Armstrong and Wilson Mizner

....IN FIVE PARTS....

Booked at the Strand Theatre the week commencing June 20th. A house with a seating capacity of 3500, packed to the doors at every performance of "THE GREYHOUND."

A master production with a master cast.

Scenically superb and real. Photographically perfect. Lithographs, lobby displays, photographs, slides and other advertising matter that befit the high character of the production.

Advise us of your territory and we will wire our terms.

IN PREPARATION

The Overpowering Western Psychological Drama

"Northern Lights"

A Six Part Photo Play that will be Epoch Making

WE PRODUCE FEATURES ADAPTED FROM PLAYS THAT HAVE ALREADY CREATED A NATIONAL REPUTATION ON THE LEGITIMATE STAGE.

OUR POLICY TO ASSIST OUR STATE RIGHT BUYERS IN THE BUSINESS

State Rights For Sale

Large Territory — Low Prices

CAPT. F. E. KLEINSCHMIDT'S

Arctic Hunt

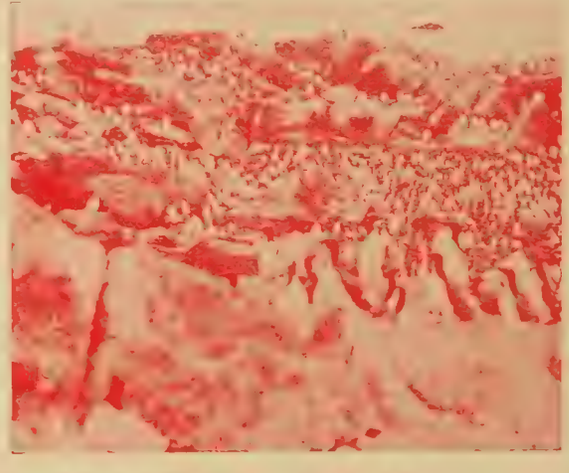
IN SIX REELS

Native and Animal Life in the North

Salmon Fishing off Alaska Coast, Polar Bear, Seal, Walrus, Reindeer, Caribou, Brown Bear, Millions of Birds—Icebergs, the Size of Twenty-story Buildings, Precipitated Headlong Into the Sea.

Chance to secure the bargain of a lifetime in Exclusive State Rights

1-3-6-24 Sheet Lithographs. Large Photos for lobby display. Heralds, Electros and publicity matter. Set of 40 beautifully colored stereopticon slides and typewritten lecture if desired for high class show.



A GREAT BIG MONEY MAKING FILM

Of surpassing interest everywhere to every class of audience, old and young, rich and poor, learned and unlearned. WIRE TODAY FOR PRICES AND OPEN TERRITORY.

EXCELSIOR
FEATURE FILM CO., INC.

You Pay These Film Experts

IF YOU BUY THEIR PAPER, YOU PAY FOR THEIR JUDGMENT—

THEY REPRESENT YOU, MR. BUYER

"THE TOLL OF MAMMON"

AN ALL AMERICAN FOUR REEL MASTERPIECE

WAS ENDORSED BY THE SIX LEADING TRADE PAPERS

George Blaisdell, Moving Picture World:

"The story is one of power and is always interesting. . . . There is a steady pull on the interest, that will hold a house in silence."

A. Danson Michell, Motion Picture News:

"The picture has an absorbing plot. It teaches a valuable moral lesson and combines splendid photography with ingenious acting; it is a masterpiece."

Peter Schmidt, The Billboard:

"The story is well drawn. Dramatic punches are liberally scattered. Staged in a masterly manner. Photography of high quality."

Charles Condon, Motography:

"Full of action. . . Realistic scenes . . . Beautiful exteriors, appropriate interiors and excellent photography."

E. H. Lynde Denig, Dramatic Mirror:

"A photoplay of the most commendable type. Excellent motion picture drama. Presents a warning that cannot be repeated too often. Photography is perfectly clear. Plot construction logical."

Elizabeth Lonergan, New York Star:

"The picture rings true to life . . . Sensation after sensation follow" . . .

Territory Still Open The Best Paper Obtainable Attractive Prices

EXECUTIVE OFFICE
110 WEST 40TH STREET - NEW YORK
SUITE 1002 - PHONE. BRYANT 8059
ARTHUR ROSENBACH sales, mgr.

STUDIO
LAKE PLACID
N.Y.

INDEX

TO CONTENTS.

ABRAMS, CHARLES, FEATURE..... 271
ACCOMPLISHMENTS OF THE FEATURE. 214
ADVANCEMENT IN PROJECTION, THE.. 218
ADVERTISING FOR EXHIBITORS..... 246
ADVERTISING FOR THE EXHIBITOR.... 187
AMERICAN PRODUCT IN BRITAIN, THE. 192
AMERICAN STUDIOS AT SANTA BARBARA 240
AUGUSTUS THOMAS RETROSPECTIVE.. 282

BETZWOOD, THE GREAT..... 274
BOX OFFICE ATTRACTIONS CO..... 260
BRITISH NOTES..... 245

CALENDAR OF LICENSED RELEASES... 296
CALENDAR OF INDEPENDENT RELEASES 298
CATHEDRAL CHIMES FOR MOTION PICTURES 279
CHAT WITH THOMAS A. EDISON, A..... 189
CHICAGO LETTER ....
CINES-KLEINE PLAYERS..... 237
COMMERCIAL USE OF MOTION PICTURES 215
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Licensed)... 255
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Independent) 256
CONDITIONS AND FEATURES..... 224
CONCERNING ECLAIR ENTERPRISES... 207

DAVID W. GRIFFITH, MOTION PICTURE DIRECTOR 184
DAY WITH SIEGMUND LUBIN..... 209
DEVELOPMENT OF THE MOTION PICTURE, THE 197
DOOM OF LONG FEATURES PREDICTED. 185
DOINGS AT LOS ANGELES..... 243

EGGLESTON, MISS KATHARINE..... 259
EVOLUTION OF THE MOTION PICTURE. 206
ESSANAY'S NEW STUDIOS..... 266
EXCLUSIVE SUPPLY CORPORATION..... 261
EXHIBITORS' NEWS 293
EXPEDITING SERVICE 284

FACTS AND COMMENTS..... 228
FAMOUS PLAYERS IN FAMOUS PLAYS.. 186
FANTOMAS, FIFTH FEATURE READY... 271
FATHER OF THE FEATURE, THE..... 272
FEATURE FILMS STORIES..... 346
FRENCH CONDITIONS UNFAVORABLE.. 193

"GERMANIA" (Leading Players)..... 275
GORDON, JULIA SWAYNE..... 236
GREETINGS AT DAYTON..... 287

IDEALISTIC MOTOGRAPHY 183
INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES..... 338
INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES..... 354

KINEMATOGRAPHY IN THE UNITED STATES 175
KLEINE OPTICAL CO., THE..... 270

LEADING AMERICAN PLAYERS..... 240
LEARNED BUSINESS FROM BOTTOM UP. 285
LICENSED FILM STORIES..... 326
LICENSED RELEASE DATES..... 356
LIFE OF A PHOTODRAMA, THE..... 196
LITTLE MARY AND HER CORRESPONDENTS 280
LITERARY SIDE OF PICTURES, THE.... 190
LOST IN LUBIN FIRE..... 267
"LURE OF THE SAWDUST, THE" (American) 231

MAGAZINES AND MOTION PICTURES.... 194
MAPES, MISS AGNES..... 259
MARKETING A PROJECTION MACHINE. 278
MAURICE COSTELLO ....
MIND IN DRAMA..... 208
MOTION PICTURE TRADE IN EUROPE, THE 192
MOTION PICTURES UNDER THE OPEN MARKET 212
MOTION PICTURES AS EDUCATIONAL FORCE 220
MOVING PICTURE EDUCATOR..... 244
MUSIC FOR THE PICTURE..... 292
MUSICAL ACCESSORIES TO MOTION PICTURES 203
NICHOLAS POWER URGES STANDARDIZATION 222

NORMAND, MABEL 239

OBSERVATIONS BY MAN ABOUT TOWN.. 286
OPERATIC STAR IN PICTURES..... 281
OUT OF QUANTITY-QUALITY..... 211

PARAMOUNT PICTURES CORPORATION. 264
PEACOCKE, CAPT. LESLIE T..... 238
PHOTOPLAY ACTING IS MENTAL RADIATION 227
PLAYS OF PURPOSE..... 229
PRESENT DAY TREND IN FILM LENGTHS 181
PUBLICITY FOR THE PICTURES..... 217

QUESTION OF DEMAND AND SUPPLY, A. 230

READ, J. PARKER..... 193
"REBELLION OF KITTY BELLE, THE" (Majestic) 232
REMARKABLE GROWTH OF MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY 191
RUTH ROLAND 263

SAWYER, INC., QUARTERS SUPERB..... 258
"SHANNON OF THE SIXTH" (Kalem)... 233
SOME PROMINENT ESSANAY PHOTOPLAYERS 234
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Licensed).... 326
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Independent). 338
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Features)..... 346
"STUFF THAT DREAMS ARE MADE OF, THE" (Edison) 265

TAKING PICTURES UNDER WATER..... 226
TOM INCE AND "INCEVILLE"..... 182
TORONTO EXPOSITION CLOSES..... 268

UNIVERSITY INTEREST IN MOTION PICTURES 188
UNIVERSAL'S "HANDY" JOE BRANDT, THE 273
"URIEL ACOSTA" (Great Players) 284

WARNER'S FEATURES, INC..... 262
WOMAN'S PLACE IN PHOTOPLAY PRODUCTION 195
WORLD FILM CORPORATION..... 264
WORK OF THE ONTARIO CENSORS..... 269

TO ADVERTISERS.

CARBON IMPORTERS.
KIEWERT, CHARLES L., CO..... 360
REISINGER, HUGO..... 355

ELECTRICAL & MECHANICAL EQUIPMENT.
AMUSEMENT SUPPLY CO..... 363
BELL & HOWELL, THE CO..... 318
CALEHUFF SUPPLY CO..... 360
DETROIT MOTOR CAR CO..... 361
FOOS GAS ENGINE CO..... 364
FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC WORKS..... 364
FULTON, E. E. CO..... 361
GENERAL ELECTRIC CO..... 331
HALLBERG, J. H..... 328
HOKE, GEORGE M. SUPPLY CO..... 361
KIMBLE ELECTRIC CO..... 335
PICTURE THEATRE EQUIPMENT CO.... 319
SMITH, L. C., & CO..... 358
STRELINGER, CHARLES A., & CO..... 348
TYPHOON FAN CO..... 352
WESTINGHOUSE ELECTRIC AND M'F'G CO. 344

MISCELLANEOUS FEATURE FILMS.
ARCTIC FILM CO.....Insert
ALL STAR FEATURE CORPORATION.... 147
APEX FILM CO..... 343
BOSWORTH, INC.....339
BOX OFFICE ATTRACTIONS CO.....300-301
CALIFORNIA MOVING PICTURE CORPORATION 164
CELEBRATED PLAYERS FILM CO..... 315
CHARIOT FILM CO..... 332
CHICAGO FEATURE FILM CO..... 346
CONTINENTAL FEATURE FILM CORPORATION 306
COSMOFOTOFILM CO. 307
ELECTIC FILM CO.....Insert

COOLING VENTILATION HEATING

"TYPHOON BLOW-IN SYSTEM" has revolutionized the ventilating problem. You get in front of a desk fan to keep cool, not in back. Apply this common sense and blow the air in.

Don't waste money experimenting with exhaust fans.

The TYPHOON MULTIBLADE BLOWER will force air right through ordinary exhaust fans. Reversed, the air can be exhausted as well.

Our Catalogue W tells how to keep cool in summer and warm in winter.

TYPHOON FAN CO. NEW YORK CITY 1544 BROADWAY

ECLIPSE-URBAN FILm CO..... 315
EXCELSIOR FEATURE FILM CO..... 351
FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM CO.....150-51
FEATURE PHOTOPLAY CO..... 323
FEATURES IDEAL 162
GENERAL FEATURE FILM CO..... 362
GOLGATE FEATURE SERVICE..... 308
GRANDIN, ETHEL..... 309
GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO..... 311
HEPWORTH-AMERICAN FILM CO..... 160
LASKY, JESSE L., FEATURE PLAY CO..148-49
LEADING PLAYERS FILM CO..... 163
LIFE PHOTO FILM CORPORATION.....Insert
MEXICAN WAR FILM CORP..... 341
NASH MOTION PICTURE CO..... 365
NEILSON, F. O..... 325
OZ FILM MANUFACTURING CO..... 310
PARAMOUNT PICTURE CORPORATION..304-5
PASQUALI AMERICAN CO..... 345
POPULAR PLAYS & PLAYERS INC..... 349
RAMO FILMS, INC.....161
SAWYER, A. H., INC.....152-53-54-55
WARNER'S FEATURES, INC.....158-59
WORLD FILM CORPORATION.....166-67

FILM BROKERS.
WESTERN FILM BROKERS..... 346

FILM EXCHANGES.
APEX FEATURE SERVICE..... 348
BRADENBURGH, GEORGE. W..... 358
CONSUMERS FEATURE FILM SERVICE.. 314
ECONOMY FILM CO..... 342
GREATER NEW YORK FILM RENTAL CO..... 356
LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE..... 361
N. & T. SUPPLY CO..... 318
NORTHERN FEATURE FILM EXCHANGE 342
PEERLESS FILM EXCHANGE..... 317
STANDARD FILM CO..... 330
STANDARD MOTION PICTURE CO..... 361
WENIZ, ISADORE 346

INDEPENDENT FILM MANUFACTURERS
AMERICAN FILM MANUFACTURING CO., Insert
GAUMONT CO. 146
MAJESTIC MOTION PICTURE CO..... 366
NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CORPORATION 156-57
THANHOUSER FILM CORPORATION..... 142
UNIVERSAL FILM MANUFACTURING CO. .....144-45, Insert

LENS MANUFACTURERS.
GUNDLACH-MANHATTAN CO. 362

LICENSED FILM MANUFACTURERS.
BIOGRAPH COMPANY..... 297
EDISON, THOMAS A..... 169
ESSANAY FILM MANUFACTURING CO., 143, Insert
KALEM CO.....165-74
KLEINE, GEORGE 347
LUBIN MANUFACTURING CO.....170-71
MELIES FILMS 302-03
PATHE FRERES 168
SELIG POLYSCOPE CO.....367, Insert
VITAGRAPH CO. OF AMERICA.....172-73

MISCELLANEOUS.
AUDEL, THEODORE & CO..... 334
ARMY & NAVY STORE CO..... 344
AUDITORIUM THEATRE 342
AUTOMATIC TICKET SELLING & CASH REGISTER CO. 318
BERLIN ANILINE WORKS..... 317
BING BROTHERS 358
BIASCOPE MOVING PICTURE CO..... 291
BIOSCOPE, THE 336
BOTANICAL DECORATING CO..... 358
CASAVANT BROTHERS 312
CENTAUR FILM CO..... 362
CHICAGO THEATRE WRECKING HOUSE. 344
COMMERCIAL FILMERS..... 358
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS 350
CORCORAN, INC., A. J..... 312
DADMUN CO. 318
EASTMAN KODAK CO..... 359
GUNBY BROS. 361
HARRIS, CHARLES K..... 356
INDUSTRIAL MOVING PICTURE CO..... 321
KINEMATOGRAPH WEEKLY 358
KRAUS MANUFACTURING CO..... 356
LATCHAW, E. R..... 344
LIMBACH REALTY CO..... 340
MILLER, A. J., & CO..... 360
NATIONAL MOVING PICTURE CO..... 342
NATIONAL TICKET CO..... 354
NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO..... 313
NICHOLS, CAROLINE, B..... 340
PHOTOPLAY CO., INC..... 318
RAW FILM SUPPLY CO..... 329
SMALLWOOD FILM CORPORATION..... 360
STAR "A" SHOP..... 346
TAKITO-OGAWA & CO..... 360
THEATRE BROKERAGE EXCHANGE..... 334
THEATRE RECORD LEDGER CO..... 363
TRADE CIRCULAR ADDRESSING CO..... 291
TURNER, HALSEY CO..... 342
UNDERWOOD TYPEWRITER CO..... 321
WILLIAMS, J. D..... 356
WYANOAK PUBLISHING CO..... 359

MOTION PICTURE CAMERA MANUFACTURERS.
BURKE & JAMES..... 356
GENNERT, G..... 353
MOTION PICTURE CAMERA CO..... 314
MOVING PICTURE APPARATUS CO..... 359
SCHNEIDER, EBERHARD 334

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.
AMERICAN PHOTOPLAYER CO..... 340
DEAGAN, J. C..... 337
SEEBURGH, J. P., PIANO CO..... 362
SINN, CLARENCE E..... 363
WURLITZER, RUDOLPH 327

OPERA CHAIR MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN SEATING CO..... 316
ANDREWS, A. H., CO..... 363
BENNETT SEATING CO..... 363
HARDESTY MANUFACTURING CO..... 363
STEEL FURNITURE CO..... 363
WISCONSIN SEATING CO..... 363

POSTERS AND FRAMES.
AMERICAN SLIDE & POSTER CO..... 296
MENGER & RING..... 364
NEWMAN MANUFACTURING CO..... 340
THEATRE SPECIALTY CO..... 346

PROJECTION MACHINE MANUFACTURERS.
ENTERPRISE OPTICAL CO..... 359
ERNEMAN PHOTO-KINO WORKS..... 319
OPTIGRAPH MFG. CO..... 333
PHANTOSCOPE MANUFACTURING CO.... 313
POWERS, NICHOLAS 368
PRECISION MACHINE CO..... 299
VICTOR ANIMATOGRAPH CO., INC..... 316

PROJECTION SCREEN MANUFACTURERS.
GENTER, J. H., CO..... 350
DAY & NIGHT SCREEN CO..... 363
MIRROR SCREEN CO..... 340

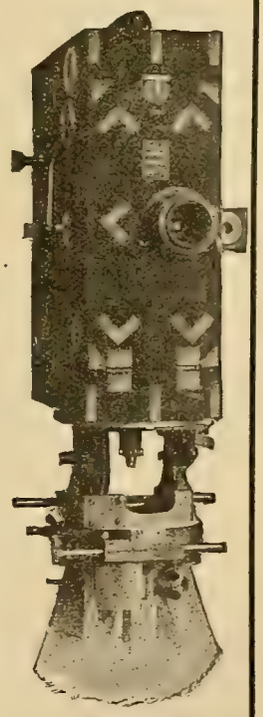
SONG AND ADVERTISING SLIDES.
ERKER BROS. 364
UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO..... 318

THEATRICAL ARCHITECTS.
DECORATORS' SUPPLY CO..... 361

U. S. AGENT FOR

WILLIAMSON'S

MOTION PICTURE CAMERAS



Perforators, Printing Machines and Tripods

SEND FOR CATALOGUE

G. GENNERT

24-26 East 13th St., New York

NOW READY

BOUND VOLUMES

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

VOLUME No. 20

APRIL—JUNE, 1914

$1.50—EACH—$1.50

Express Charges Collect.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

17 Madison Avenue, New York City

INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES

AMERICAN.

June 24—Blue Knot, King of Polo (Drama)....
June 29—The Little House in the Valley (Two Parts—Drama) .....
July 1—Nature's Touch (Drama) .....
July 3—Mein Lieber Katrina Catches a Convict (Comedy) .....
July 6—Cameo of the Yellowstone (Two Parts—Drama) .....
July 8—Feast and Famine (Drama) .....
July 13—The Lure of the Sawdust (Two Parts—Drama) .....
July 15—Youth and Art (Drama) .....

BEAUTY.

June 23—The Tale of the Tailor (Drama).....
June 30—Via the Fire Escape (Drama).....
July 7—The Other Train (Drama).....

"101" BISON.

June 20—The Forbiden Room (Three Parts—Drama) .....
June 27—The Old Cobbler (Two Parts—Western Drama) .....
July 4—The Hopes of Blind Alley—Three Parts—Drama) .....
July 11—Prowlers of the Wild (Two Parts—Drama) .....
July 18—A Mexican Spy in America (2 parts—Drama) .....

BRONCHO.

June 24—Desert Thieves (Two Parts—Drama)..
July 1—Shorty Gets Into Trouble (Two Parts Drama) .....
July 8—The Final Reckoning (Two Parts—Drama) .....
July 15—Shorty Turns Judge (2 parts—Comedy Drama).....

CRYSTAL.

June 30—The Girl in Pants (Comedy).....
—Her New Hat (Comedy).....
July 7—Nearly a Stepmother (Comedy).....
July 14—Vivian's Four Beaus (Comedy).....
—What Pearl's Pearls Did (Comedy)...

DOMINO.

June 25—A Frontier Mother (Two Parts—Dr.)..
July 2—His Hour of Manhood (Two Parts—Drama) .....
July 9—The Curse of Humanity (Two Parts—Drama) .....
July 16—Star of the North (2 parts—Drama)..

ECLAIR.

July 1—Snow Drift (Two Parts—Drama).....
July 5—The Greatest of These (Drama).....
July 8—Duty Two Parts—Drama).....
July 12—Willy Walrus and the Parisians (Com.)
—Lily as a Little Mother (Comedy)....
July 15—Renunciation (2 parts—Western Dr.).
July 19—Tango Versus Poker (Comedy).....

FRONTIER.

June 21—The Gun Men of Plumas (Dr.).....
June 28—On the Verge (Drama).....
July 5—The Broken Barriers (Drama).....
July 12—The Fight in Lonely Gulch (Drama)..
July 19—The Ranger's Reward (Western Dr.)..

GOLD SEAL.

June 16—Lucille Love, the Girl of Mystery (Series No. 10—Two Parts—Drama)
June 23—Lucille Love, the Girl of Mystery (Series No. 11 Two Parts—Drama)
June 30—Lucille Love, the Girl of Mystery (Series No. 12—Two Parts—Drama)
July 7—Lucille Love, the Girl of Mystery (Series No. 13—Two Parts—Drama)
July 14—Lucille Love, the Girl of Mystery, Series No. 14 (2 parts—Drama).....

IMP.

June 29—Adventures of a Girl Reporter (Two Parts—Drama) .....
July 2—The One Best Bet (Comedy).....
July 6—The Lady of the Island (Two Parts—Drama) .....
July 9—The Old Rag Doll (Drama) .....
July 13—When the World Was Silent (2 parts—Drama) .....
July 16—The Universal Boy, Series No. 1 (Comedy) .....

JOKER.

July 3—Captain Kid's Priceless Treasure (Comedy) .....
July 8—Bess, the Detectress, or the Dog Watch (Comedy) .....
July 11—Love Roses and Trousers (Comedy)...
July 15—Willy Walrus and the Awful Confession (Comedy).....
July 18—His Wife's Family (Comedy).....

KAY-BEE.

June 26—The Voice at the Telephone (Part 2—Two Parts) .....
July 3—The Heart of a Crook (Two Parts—Drama) .....
July 10—The Feud of Beaver Creek (Two Parts Drama) .....

KOMIC.

June 21—The Deceiver (Comedy).....
June 28—The Wild Girl (Comedy).....
July 5—"Bill" No. 1 (Comedy).....
July 12—Wrong All Around (Comedy).....

KEYSTONE.

June 22—The Eavesdropper (Comedy).....
June 25—Fatty and the Heiress (Comedy).....
June 27—(No release this day.)
June 29—Caught in Tights (Comedy).....
July 2—(No release this day.)

LUX.

June 12—A Family Feud (Comedy).....
—View of the Alps (Scenic).....
June 19—The Newlyweds (Comedy).....
June 26—A Day's Outing (Comedy).....
—The Telephone Operator (Com dy)...

MAJESTIC.

June 28—The Tavern of Tragedy (Two Parts—Drama) .....
June 30—(Title not yet announced).....
July 5—The Angel of Contention (Two Parts—Drama) .....
July 7—The Only Clue (Drama) .....
July 12—A City Beautiful (Two Parts—Drama)

NESTOR.

July 1—The Lost Arrow (Drama) .....
July 3—Those College Days (Comedy).....
July 8—A Ranch Romance (Western—Drama)
July 10—The Great Universal Mystery (Com.)..
July 15—Her Grave Mistake (Western Drama).
July 17—When Eddie Went to the Front (Com.)

POWERS.

June 19—The Plot that Failed (Drama).....
June 26—The Love Victorious (Two Parts—Dr.)
July 3—Pearl of the Sea (Drama).....
July 17—The Severed Hand (3 parts—Drama).

PRINCESS.

June 19—The Little Senorita (Drama).....
June 26—Professor Smith (Comedy).....
July 3—The Decoy (Drama).....
July 10—Passing the Love of Women (Drama).
July 10—The Girl of the Seasons (Comedy)....

RELIANCE.

June 29—Our Mutual Girl, No. 24.....
July 1—Izzy the Detective (Drama).....
July 4—The Weaker Strain (Two Parts—Dr.).
July 6—Our Mutual Girl, No. 25 (Drama)....
July 8—How Izzy Was Saved (Comedy).....
July 10—A Wife from the Country (Drama)...
July 11—Blue Pete's Escape (Two Parts—Dr.).

REX.

June 28—Lost by a Hair (Comedy).....
July 2—The House Discordant (Two Parts—Drama) .....
July 5—On the Rio Grande (Western Drama).
July 9—When Fate Disposes (Two Parts—Dr.)
July 12—Plain Mary (Drama).....
July 16—The Sob Sister (2 parts—Drama).....
July 19—Out of the Darkness (Drama).....

ROYAL.

June 20—Such a Business (Comedy).....
—The Busy Man (Comedy).....
June 27—A Hasty Exit (Comedy).....
July 4—Did She Run? (Comedy).....
July 11—Mistakes Will Happen (Comedy).....

STERLING.

June 29—It's a Boy (Juvenile—Comedy).....
July 2—The Crash (Comedy).....
July 6—Billy's Vacation (Juvenile—Comedy)..
July 9—Snooke's Flirtation (Comedy).....
July 13—Almost Married (Comedy).....
July 16—Love and Lunch (Comedy).....

THANHOUSER.

June 28—The Widow's Mite (Comedy).....
June 30—The Harlow Handicap (Two Parts—Drama) .....
July 5—The Cooked Goose (Comedy).....
July 7—Bevorah (Two Parts—Drama).....
July 12—The Leaven of Good (Drama).....

UNIVERSAL IKE.

June 23—Universal Ike, Jr., in a Case On the Doctor (Comedy) .....
June 30—Unievrsal Ike, Jr., and the Vampire (Comedy) .....
July 7—Me, Him and I (Comedy).....
July 14—The New Cook (Comedy).....

VICTOR.

June 29—A Twentieth Century Pirate (Comedy-Drama) .....
July 6—At Mexico's Mercy (Drama).....
July 10—A Beggar Prince of India (Three Parts—Drama) .....
July 13—Out of the Valley (Drama).....
July 17—The Panama-Pacific Exposition Up-to-Date (Topical and Educational)....

FEATURES.

HEPWORTH.

June 22—Creatures of Habit (Comedy).....
Fair Game (Comedy).....
—Flotilla the Flirt (Comedy).....
June 29—The Cry of the Captive (Two Parts—Drama) .....

ECLIPSE-URBAN FILM CO.

June 22—The Bird of Prey (Two Parts—Drama)
June 29—Sammy's Umbrella (Comedy).....
Dupin Gets the Bird (Comedy).....
July 6—The Mystery of Green Park (Two Parts—Drama) .....

WHITMAN FEATURES.

GARRISON FILM CO. DISTRIBUTORS.

June 13—The Toll of Love (Four Parts—Dr.)..
June 27—Jane Eyre (Five Parts—Drama).....
July 11—Lena Rivers (Five Parts—Drama)....

ROLL TICKETS

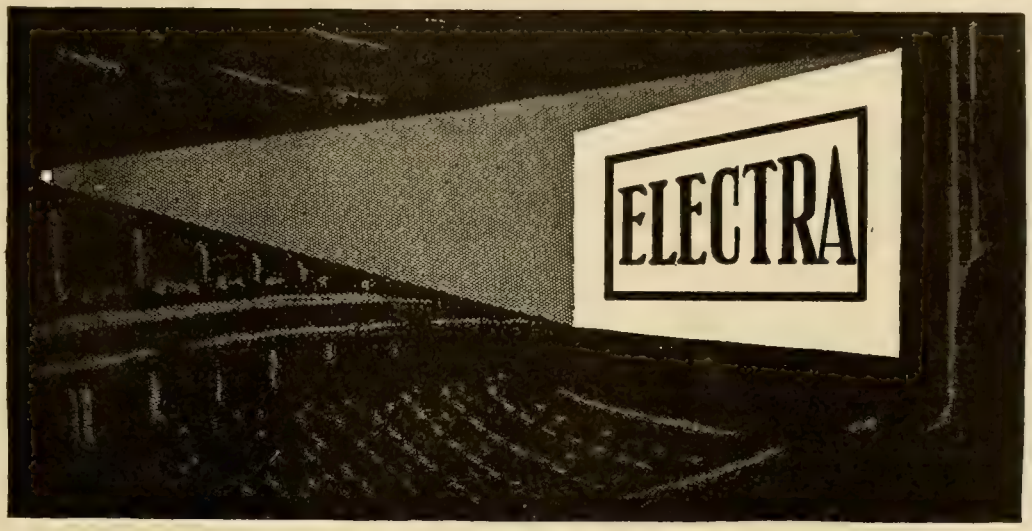
PRICES

Five Thousand.....$1.25
Ten Thousand $2.50
Twenty Thousand $4.50
Twenty-five Thousand.....$5.50
Fifty Thousand $6.50
One Hundred Thousand.....$8.00

Your own special Ticket, any printing, any colors, accurately numbered; every roll guaranteed. Coupon Tickets for Prize Drawings, 5,000 $2.50. Stock Tickets, 6c per 1,000. Prompt shipments. Cash with the order. Get the samples. Send diagram for Reserved Seat Coupon Tickets, serial or dated.

NATIONAL TICKET CO.
SHAMOKIN, PA.

ELECTRA ELECTRA ELECTRA



"Electra" Pink Label Carbons

ARE ALWAYS UNIFORM.
GIVE PURE WHITE LIGHT.
REQUIRE LEAST ADJUSTMENT.
PRODUCE BRILLIANT, STEADY ARC.
BURN SMOOTHLY AND NOISELESSLY.

Samples free on request

HUGO REISINGER
11 BROADWAY NEW YORK CITY

ELECTRA

ELECTRA ELECTRA ELECTRA

LICENSED RELEASE DATES

RELEASE DAYS.

Monday—Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Pathe, Selig, Vitagraph.
Tuesday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Geo. Kleine, Pathe, Lubin, Melies, Selig, Vitagraph.
Wednesday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Melies, Selig, Pathe, Vitagraph.
Thursday—Biograph, Essanay, Lubin, Melies, Selig, Vitagraph.
Friday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Selig, Lubin, Vitagraph.
Saturday—Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Melies, Selig, Vitagraph.

BIOGARPH.

June 29—The Honor of the Law (Special—Two Parts—Drama)
June 2—The Goat (Comedy)
—The Firemen's Social (Comedy)
July 4—The Cracksman's Gratitude (Drama)
July 6—Eva, the Cigarette Girl (Comedy)
—The Boiler Maker's Day of Rest (Comedy)
July 9—A Romance of the Pueblo (Com.-Dr.)
July 11—Her Primitive Model (Drama)

EDISON.

June 27—Dolly Plays Detective (Tenth of the Dolly of the Dailies—Drama)
June 29—The Revengeful Servant Girl (Seventh of the Wood B. Wedd series—Com.)
June 30—The Mystery of the Fadeless Tints (Eighth of the Chronicles of Cleek series—Drama)
July 1—Back to the Simple Life (Comedy)
July 3—The Shattered Tree (Special—Two parts—Drama)
July 4—Molly, the Drummer Boy (Drama)
July 6—Her Spanish Cousins (Comedy)
July 7—Face to Face (Seventh of "The Man Who Disappeared" Series) (Drama)
July 8—Andy Has a Tootache (Eighth of the "Andy" Series) (Comedy)
July 10—In the Shadow of Disgrace (Special—Two Parts—Drama)
July 11—Dolly at the Helm (Eleventh of the Active Life of "Dolly of the Dailies"—Drama)
July 13—Qualifying for Lena (Comedy)
July 14—The Two Doctors (Drama)
July 15—The Ever-Gallant Marquis (Comedy)
—An Up-to-Date Courtship (Comedy)
July 17—Meg o' the Mountains (Special—2 parts—Drama)
July 18—Across the Burning Trestle (Drama)

ESSANAY.

June 30—The Daring Young Person (Com.-Dr.)
July 1—The Fable of "The Good Fairy" (Comedy)
July 2—Sophie Gets Stung (Comedy)
July 3—Trinkets of Tragedy (Special—Two Parts—Drama)
July 4—Broncho Billy's Punishment (Drama).
July 7—A Night with a Million (Com. Drama).
July 8—A Boarding House Scramble (Comedy)
July 9—Slippery Slim—Diplomat (Comedy)
July 10—Night Hawks (Special—Two Parts—Drama)
July 11—Broncho Billy and the Sheriff (Drama)
July 13—Sweedie the Swatter (Comedy)
July 14—At the Foot of the Hill (Drama)
July 15—The Fable of "Napoleon and the Bumps" (Comedy)
July 16—Snakeville's New Waitress (Comedy).
July 17—His Stolen Fortune (Special—2 parts—Drama)
July 18—Broncho Billy Puts One Over (Drama)

KALEM.

June 27—The Gypsy Gambler (Drama)
June 29—The Flaw in the Alibi (Special—Two Parts—Drama)
June 30—The Wire Chief's Reward (Drama)
July 1—The Fatal Portrait (Special—Two Parts—Drama)
July 3—Fleeing from the Fleas (Comedy)
—Trooping the Colors (Topical)
July 4—The Political Boss (Drama)
July 6—The Weakling—Third of the Alice Joyce Series—Special—Two Parts (Drama)
July 7—Kaintucky Bill (Drama)
July 8—A String of Pearls (Special—Two Parts—Drama)
July 10—Rube the Interloper (Comedy)
—In Old England (Topical)
July 11—Lame Dog's Treachery (Drama)
July 13—A Diamond in the Rough (Special—2 parts—Drama)
July 14—Accused (Drama)
July 15—The Express Messenger (Special—2 parts—Drama)
July 17—Wanted, An Heir (Comedy)
July 18—The Fate of a Squaw (Drama)

GEORGE KLEINE.

June 9—The Trap-Door Clue (Celio—Special—Two Parts—Drama)
June 16—One Woman's Way (Cines—Special—Two Parts—Drama)
June 23—A Midnight Guest (Cines—Special—Two Parts—Drama)
June 30—The Bondage of Evil (Celio—Special—Two Parts—Drama)
July 7—Heirloom (Cines—Special—2 parts—Drama)

LUBIN.

June 27—Who's Boss? (Comedy)
—His Sudden Recovery (Comedy)
June 30—The Walko Sisters (Comedy)
July 1—The Living Fear (Special—Two Parts—Drama)
July 2—The Shadow of Tragedy (Special—Two Parts—Drama)
July 3—The Doom of Duty (Drama)
July 4—It's a Shame (Comedy)
—The Kidnapped Bride (Comedy)
July 7—Fooling Fanny's Father (Comedy)
—While Auntie Bounced (Comedy)
July 8—The Incompetent (Special—Two Parts—Drama)
July 9—The Debt (Special—Two Parts—Dr.)
July 10—The Tribunal of Conscience (Drama)
July 11—How He Lost His Trousers (Comedy).
—Mandy's Chicken Dinner (Comedy)
July 14—He Was Bad (Comedy)
—Tough Luck (Comedy)
July 15—Codes of Honor (Special—2 parts—Drama)
July 16—The Cross of Crime (Special—2 parts—Drama)
July 17—The Lie (Drama)
July 18—She Wanted to Know (Comedy)
—All for Love (Comedy)

MELIES.

June 27—A Shadow On the Wall (Special—Two Parts—Drama)
June 30—One Suit of Clothes (Comedy)
July 1—The Monk's Sacrifice (Drama)
July 2—Womanly Curiosity (Comedy)
—The Prescription (Special—Two Parts—Drama)
July 4—Hidden Death (Special—Two Parts—Drama)
July 7—A Discolored Romance (Comedy)
July 8—The Hole in the Wall (Drama)
July 9—Good Fortune's Tardy Smile (Comedy)
July 9—A Royal Survivor (Special—2 parts—Drama)
July 11—A Friend's Forgiveness (Special—2 parts—Drama)

PATHE.

June 29—Visit to Paris (Travel)
—Rapids and Water Falls of New Zealand (Scenic)
June 30—A French Village in Senegal, West Africa (Scenic)
—Venomous Serpents (Educational)
July 1—Pathe's Weekly, No. 43—1914 (News).
July 6—The Heart and the Circulation of the Blood (Biology)
—Modes of Travel in Japan (Manners and Customs)
July 7—A Tiger Hunt (Indo-China) (Scenic)
—The Ice and Snow
July 8—Pathe's Weekly No. 44, 1914 (News)
July 13—A Russian Bear Hunt (Scenic)
—The Wine Industry, Marsala, Sicily (Industrial)
July 14—Through Bosnia and Dalmatia (Scenic)
—The Tombs of the Ancient Japanese Emperors (Architecture)
July 15—Pathe's Weekly No. 45 (News)

SELIG.

June 26—The Captain's Chair (Drama)
June 27—The Right to Happiness (Drama)
June 29—The Leopard's Foundling (Special—Two Parts—Drama)
June 29—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 35 (News)
June 30—Hearts of Men (Drama)
July 1—The Empty Sleeve (Drama)
July 2—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 36 (News)
July 3—Making Good With Her Family (Com.)
—Doc Yak Wishes (Novelty)
July 4—The Little Hobo (Drama)
July 6—Reporter Jimmie Intervenes (Special—Two Parts—Drama)
July 6—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 37 (News)
July 7—Algie's Sister (Comedy)
July 8—Caryl of the Mountains (Drama)
July 9—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 38 (News)
July 10—Did She Cure Him? (Comedy)
July 11—His Fight (Drama)
July 13—The Wilderness Mail (Special—2 parts—Drama)
July 13—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 39 (News)
July 14—An Egyptian Princess (Comedy)
July 15—His Last Appeal (Special—2 parts—Drama)
July 16—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 40 (News)
July 17—Wiggs Takes the Rest Cure (Drama)
July 18—The Squatters (Drama)

VITAGRAPH.

June 20—Father's Flirtation (Special—Two Parts—Comedy)
June 22—Maria's Sacrifice (Drama)
June 23—The Passing of Diana (Special—Two Parts—Drama)
June 24—The "Bear" Facts (Comedy)
June 25—Happy-Go-Lucky (Comedy-Drama)
June 26—The Old Maid's Baby (Comedy)
June 27—His Wife and His Work (Special—Two Parts—Drama)
June 29—The Gang (Drama)
June 30—The Poor Folk's Boy (Special—Two Parts—Drama)
July 1—The Circus and the Boy (Comedy)
July 2—Two Stepchildren (Drama)
July 3—A Train of Incidents (Comedy)
July 4—The Toll (Special—Two Parts—Dr.)
July 6—The False and the True (Drama)
July 7—The Moonstone of Fez (Special—Two Parts—Drama)
July 8—Doctor Smith's Baby (Comedy)
July 9—Prosecution (Drama)
July 10—The Vases of Hymen (Comedy)
July 11—Lillian's Dilemma (Special—Two Parts (Comedy)
July 13—The Soul of Luigi (Drama)
July 14—Fogg's Millions (Special—2 parts—Drama)
July 15—The Arrival of Josie (Comedy-Drama)
July 15—Pigs Is Pigs (Comedy)
July 16—The Little Captain (Drama)
July 18—The Song of the Ghetto (Special—2 parts—Drama)

Greater New York Film Rental Company
All Specials Supplied. Main Office: 126-132 West 46th Street. Depot: 116-118 East 14th Street, New York.
Licensed Film Supplied to Licensed Exhibitors :-: :-: :-: :-: :-: Write or Call for Particulars

To Whom It May Concern

I SEVERED my connection with Wm. W. Hodkinson of my own accord. Mr. Hodkinson will confirm this. My present address is Room 311 Strand Theatre Building, 47th Street and Broadway, New York.

Yours truly,
J. D. WILLIAMS

Pickford, Sweet, Walker, Joyce

are names to conjure with. They are admired by a great number of PICTURE patrons. Four hundred are fast becoming popular through their good work. ALL can be used by you to BOOST YOUR BUSINESS on your dull nights by giving your public PLAYER POST CARDS.

Semi-Photo Post Cards, $3.00 per thousand; formerly sold for $4.00. Over 400 different players.

Hand Colored Post Cards
For the better class of Souvenirs, 60 of the most popular players, all factions, $10.00 per thousand.

Photo Post Cards
For hand coloring. NOTE: The Public buy cards from stationers and color them. It's a new fad—60 Popular Players $5.00 per thousand.

PHOTOGRAPHS, SIZE 8 x 10, of all the prominent players, Association and Independent, 400 different names, 20 cents each.
LARGE PICTURE, semi-photo, glazed finish, size 11 x 14, $1 per doz.; 43 prominent players.
LARGE PICTURES, HAND COLORED, size 11 x 14. Prominent Association players, $2.00 per set of 12.
Photographs for lobby display of the two and three reel features of all of the Mutual multiple reels—set of 6, $1.00. Always ready 10 days ahead of release.

Special 22x28 Association and Mutual Hand Colored Pictures of 24 Favorites
75 Cents Each. Framed $2.50 Each

KRAUS MFG. CO., 14 East 17th St., N. Y.
Send for Catalogue of over 400 players and samples free. Write us, giving details of your dull nights, and we will send you a remedy.

MOVING PICTURE Managers, Singers Pianists

Free Title, Chorus Slide and Regular Piano Copy of Chas. K. Harris' Sensational Song Ballads

"Suppose I Met You Face to Face"
"Don't You Wish You Were Back Home Again"
AND CHAS. K. HARRIS' LATEST
"When Did You Write to Mother Last?"

Will be sent to any Singer in any Moving Picture House in the United States or Canada upon receipt of this advertisement (cut it out and return) attached to letterhead of the house where it will be sung, or a letter signed by the Manager.

Please specify if you have orchestra.

Do not overlook this opportunity of securing the GREATEST BALLADS Mr. Harris has written since his famous song, "AFTER THE BALL."

Not necessary to answer this ad if you are already receiving favors.

Address all Communications to

CHAS. K. HARRIS
Columbia Theatre Building
Broadway and 47th Street
MEYER COHEN, Manager NEW YORK CITY

IN CORRESPONDING WITH ANY OF OUR ADVERTISERS KINDLY MENTION THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

SEND THE COUPON

For Our Big Motion Picture Catalog

Send us your name and address on the coupon, or a letter or post card and get, absolutely free, our Motion Picture Catalog. Everyone interested in motion pictures should have this book. It will show you handsome illustrations of the latest up-to-the-minute inventions, all described in detail. This book is free. Write for it today.

COMPLETE ASSORTMENT

We are manufacturers and wholesalers and are offering a complete assortment of the newest and most efficient cameras, lenses, projectors and supplies, at the rock bottom price.

WRITE TODAY

Get the new Motion Picture Catalog. Absolutely no obligations. You need it. You will refer to it constantly. Write at once. Remember, your name and address on a post card, letter or the coupon is enough. Write today.

Burke & James, Inc.
240-258 E. Ontario St.
Cine Dept. Chicago

Burke & James, Inc., Cine Dept.,
240-258 E. Ontario St., Chicago.

Gentlemen: Please send me absolutely free and prepaid your new Motion Picture Catalog. It is distinctly understood that I assume no obligations of any kind.

Name .....
Address .....
Dealer's Name .....

Price complete, packed in a strong wooden cabinet, $22.75 with 500 foot reel box, or $25.00 with 1,000 foot box.

Profitable Territories Now Being Granted to live men able to see a big opportunity and financially able to lay in a small stock of these inexpensive, serviceable, easily operated and rapid selling machines. For such firms we have a liberal proposition to make, granting exclusive sales agencies which mean big profits for you. Every family is a possible purchaser of

Bing's Home Entertainer

THIS fascinating, absolutely safe motion picture machine, practical in every respect, is manufactured at our factories in Germany, is sold on import, and to dealers only. While useful for lectures and sales demonstrations it is primarily designed for home use. Simple and self-contained; takes standard sized films; equipped with fireproof film boxes of 500 and 1,000 feet capacity.

Bing's Home Entertainer gives very large white pictures at a short distance; has strong, silent mechanism and large lamp house. Each machine has a baby arc lamp of 800 candle power, taking about 6 amperes. The rheostat supplied is suitable for 110, 150 or 220 volts.

Don't delay—write us for territories open NOW

BING BROTHERS, Mfrs. JOHN BING, Sole Representative, 381 Fourth Avenue, New York

DEVELOPING AND PRINTING

6 cents per foot
including stock
TITLE 7 cents per foot
Satisfaction guaranteed

Camera Work

Advertising Motion Pictures

Prices on request

COMMERCIAL FILMERS
1101 W. Randolph St., Chicago, Ill.

When answering advertisements, please mention this paper.

The Kinematograph Weekly

LONDON, ENGLAND
The Most Important Journal Devoted to Motion Pictures in Great Britain and Europe.
Sample copies, 10 cents; $5.13 a year.
ASSOCIATED MOTION PICTURE PRESS,
J. F. FAIRMAN, Advertising Manager,
250a Kingston Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

BEAUTIFY YOUR THEATER WITH FLORAL DECORATIONS

It gives artistic Atmosphere. It produces Charm. It gives an appearance of Culture — enhances Beauty — delights your Patrons — produces Tone and Class. It is a profitable-patronage building Investment. We have every imaginable floral effect and botanical production of America and Europe.

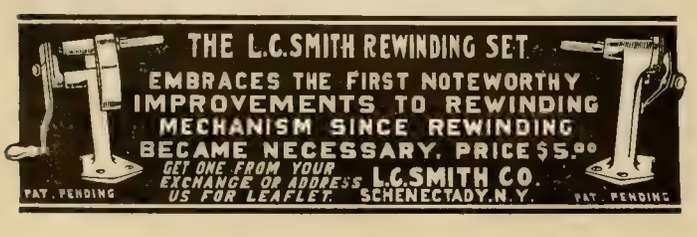
Beautiful Colored Catalogue Mailed Free to You | We Specialize on Floral Parades and Summer Specialties

BOTANICAL DECORATING CO.
504 South Fifth Avenue CHICAGO

READ THIS: We quote absolutely the lowest prices ever offered on reliable goods.



THE L.C.SMITH REWINDING SET
EMBRACES THE FIRST NOTEWORTHY IMPROVEMENTS TO REWINDING MECHANISM SINCE REWINDING BECAME NECESSARY. PRICE $5.00
GET ONE FROM YOUR EXCHANGE OR ADDRESS US FOR LEAFLET.
L.C.SMITH CO.
SCHENECTADY, N.Y.
PAT. PENDING
PAT. PENDING

G. W. BRADENBURGH

802 Vine Street, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

BELL PHONE Walnut 534 — FILMS FOR SALE — CABLE Bradfilms—Phila.

TITLE	Length	Maker	Posters	Price
Treasure of Devil's Vale	2880	Eclair	1-3-6	150
The Wreck	2900	Vita	1-3-6-9	120
When the Earth Trembled	3100	Lubin	1-3-6-9	150
Fight for the Great Black Diamond	3000	Monopol	1-3-6	250
Up to Her Tricks (Asta Nielsen)	3000	Monopol	1-3-6	250
In a Fix (Asta Nielsen)	3000	Monopol	1-3-6	250
Vengeance is Mine (Asta Nielsen)	4000	Monopol	1-3-6	300
Call of the Child (Asta Neilsen)	4000	Monopol	1-3-6	300
Spanish Blood (Asta Nielsen)	3800	Monopol	1-3-6	150
The Gypsy (Exclusive)	3000	Gamsa	1-3-6	200
Zigomar No. 1	2800	Eclair	1-3-6	175
In the Eagle's Claw	2400	Ambrosio	1-3-6	100
In the Midst of the Jungle	2600	Selig	1-3-9	100
Black Mask	2950	Dania	1-3-6	75
Tom Butler	2650	Eclair	1-4-6	100
Life's Bitter Failure	3000	Vesuvio	1-3-6	75
Battle for Freedom	2000	Kalem	1-3-6	50
Secret of the Safe	3000	Cines	1-3-6	40
Gunmen of New York	3000	Rosey	1-3-6	70
When the Mask Falls	3000	Monopol	1-3-6	50
On the Steps of the Throne	3000	Pasquali	1-3-6	50
Fall of Pompeii	1800	Ambrosio	1-3-6	40
Black Snake	3600	Pyramid	1-3-6	60
Leap of Despair	4000	Itala	1-3-6	75
Grandmother's Lamp	3000	Ambrosio	1-3-6	50
Plot and Counterplot	2800	Cines	1-3-6	60
Oliver Twist	4000	Hepworth	1-3-6	100
Midnight Express	3000	Atlas	1-3-6	30
Death Knell	3000	Itala	1-3-6	45
Dread of Doom	3000	Itala	1-3-6	45
A Broker's Sacrifice	3000	Roma	1-3-6	45
Wanted by the Police	3000	Mittenthal	1-3-6	100
Wild Beasts at Large	1800	Vita	1-3-6	75
When Paris Loves	3000	Pathe	1-3-6	40
The Dead Secret	3000	(Marion Leonard)	1-3-6	40
Bank Note Forgers	3000	Exclusive	1-3-6	100
Benjamin's Career	2000	(Jewish)	4	40
Branded for Life	2000	Itala	1-3-6	40
Custer's Last Fight	2300	Bison	1-3-6-8	75
Gem of India	4000	Blache	1-2-3-6	150
Gypsy Blood (Asta Nielsen)	3000	Monopol	1-3	75
In the Shadow of Death	2800	Danish	4	50
Nemesis, or 19 Down Express	2400	Danish	1-3-6	30
New York Society Life and Underworld	3000	Exclusive	1-3-6	75
Passion Play	3000	Pathe	1-3-6	30
Pauline Cushman, Federal Spy	2700	Selig	1-3-6	40
Satan's Castle	2000	Ambrosio	1-3-6	100
Four Dare Devils	2850	Lohse	1-3-6	100
The Man in the Cellar	4400	Continental	1-3-6-9	500
Tango Fever	4200	Union	1-3-6	350
Way of Life (Henny Porten)	3400	Monopol	1-3-6	300
The Sacrifice (Henny Porten)	2400	Monopol	1-3-6	200
The Film Prima Donna (Asta Nielsen)	5000	Monopol	1-3-6	300

1000 reels with posters at $10.00 per reel; 1000 without, excellent condition, $5.00 per reel. Everything for the exchange. Film Cement (Pathe Formula), $4.00 per gallon; leader stock, ½ cent per foot, positive raw stock, 2½ cents ft. perforated; negative, 3¼ cents. Everything cash or Money Order. No Checks.

DON'T FAIL

To See the New Automatic LIGHT REGULATOR
For POSITIVE PRINTING

Also headquarters for

PATHE PROFESSIONAL, DEBRIE PARVO, MOY & PRESTWICH, KINE CAMERAS at the right prices

See Display at the Dayton Convention, July 6th.

MOTION PICTURE APPARATUS CO., INC.,
810 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

Stuyvesant 822 R. HASTINGS, Agent

Film Quality

Quality in the film—quality from a technical photographic standpoint is as important to the Exhibitor as is interest in the story that the film tells.

There's one film that's recognized the world over as the standard of quality—that is always used by those whose effort it is to give the Exhibitors the very best goods and the very best service—Eastman film.

And it is identifiable. Look for "Eastman" on the perforated margin.

EASTMAN KODAK COMPANY,
ROCHESTER, N. Y.

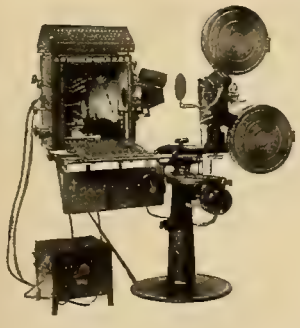
LOBBY PHOTOS
Of
Alice Joyce Series
Also
Kalem Monday Releases

Authorized by the Kalem Company

Six 11 x 14 Photo Reproductions for $1.00
(JUST FILL ONE SHEET FRAME)

You have seen much of our product, so
KNOW THE QUALITY
The Wyanoak Publishing Co.
146 WEST 52nd STREET
NEW YORK CITY
Send Us Single or Standing Order
Your Credit Is Good

NO METHOD THAT WE KNOW



would build up so great a business in repair supplies, as the sale of a machine made of lead composition parts, but we prefer the good will and continuous benefit that will result from the sale of a machine made with a rigid iron, dust-proof frame, and solid steel parts, such as is found in the 1914 Motiograph, to be seen AT DAYTON, during the convention beginning July 6th. Let us show you the hardened parts, the wearing qualities, the excellent Arc Lamp, and the reasons why the Motiograph is the machine to buy.

THE ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. CO.
564 W. Randolph St., CHICAGO, ILL.

EASTERN OFFICE
21 E. 14th St., New York

WESTERN OFFICE
833 Market St., San Francisco

THE BRIGHT WHITE LIGHT

(CALCIUM EFFECT)
so Desirable for Moving Picture Projections
is ONLY produced with

BIO CARBONS

They Are
"The Carbons You Want"

Charles L. Kiewert Co.

NEW YORK 165 Greenwich St. | MILWAUKEE 114 Huron St. | SAN FRANCISCO 143 Second St.

CALEHUFF SUPPLY COMPANY
(INCORPORATED)

Jobbers for Powers, Edison, Motiograph and Simplex

LARGEST LEADING SUPPLY HOUSE IN AMERICA

Mercury Arc Rectifier	Wagner Converters
Flame Arc Lamps	Brass and Wood Frames
Automatic Ticket Registers	Ticket Choppers
Exit Signs	Asbestos State Booths
Slide Ink	Ft. Wayne Compensarcs
Carrying Cases	Fire Extinguishers
Tickets	Fire Boxes
Condensers	Carbons
Pianos	Cement
Chairs	Trap Drum Effects

MIRROR SCREENS
PROMPT SHIPMENTS BACKED BY A SOLID GUARANTEE
A Few Slightly Used Machines
N. W. corner 13th and Race Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

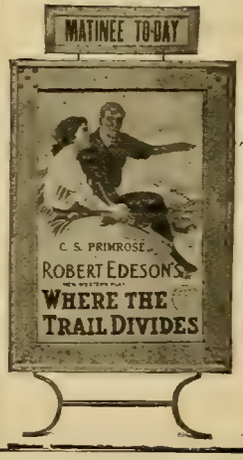
CAMERA MEN OF PROVEN ABILITY

furnished for all occasions. We send our men to any quarter of the globe.
Special lighting equipment suitable for making interior scenes under any and all conditions rented with competent electricians by the day, week or month.

We make educational, dramatic or industrial pictures to order.

SMALLWOOD FILM CORPORATION

"Specialists in Industrial Motion Pictures"
949 Broadway, New York City



A. J. MILLER & CO.

Bellefontaine, Ohio

Makers of fine Brass and Copper Display Frames

Write Us

KEEP 'EM COOL FANS

You can't afford to let your patrons swelter during the hot weather, when you can secure these real breeze producers

at ONLY $4.25 for 500

No less than 500 sold at this special price.
Catalog of Souvenirs and special prizes free upon request.

TAKITO, OGAWA & CO.

323 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

PRINTING and DEVELOPING FILM TITLES
Give us a trial. All work guaranteed.
Prompt service. Prices right.
If there is any event that you want photographed, we can furnish expert camera men.
STANDARD MOTION PICTURE CO.
Phone, Central 2853, 5 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago

Good Light Means Big Crowds
The Sandow Moving Picture Electric Light Plant gives perfect light any time you want it, at 1-10 the cost of public service. Light enough to ship as baggage. Carry your own electric lights. Catalog 261 tells you how and how much. Want it?
Detroit Motor Car Supply Company, Detroit, Michigan.

Do This NOW!
If you do not receive a copy of "The Universal Weekly" every week, send me the name and address of your theatre and I'll see that you get it, NO MATTER WHAT PROGRAM YOU ARE USING. You can't know what's going on in the film business unless you read "The Universal Weekly." Here's a corking good chance to boost your business. Do it now!
CARL LAEMMLE, President
The Laemmle Film Service
205 West Washington Street, Chicago, Ill.
252-A Hennepin Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.
1122 Farnam Street, Omaha, Neb.
Hubbell Building, Des Moines, Iowa.
Agents for All Makes of Machines and Accessories
"The Biggest and Best Film Renter in the world"

Ornamental Theatres
PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS
Theatres Designed Everywhere
Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs.
THE DECORATORS SUPPLY CO.
Archer Ave. and Leo St., CHICAGO, ILL.

LOCAL PICTURES
Your negative developed, printed and titled complete
5c per foot
delivered within 12 hours
We Set the Pace, Let Those That Can, Follow
Feature Work Our Specialty
Titles 6c per foot
GUNBY BROS., Inc.
145 West 45th St. N. Y. City

YOU CAN'T GAUGE OUR PLACE BY OUR "SPACE."
SOMETIMES A LITTLE "AD" SPEAKS FOR A BIG HOUSE THOUGH SMALL IN COLUMN SPACE
"FULCO" FILLS A LARGE PLACE IN THE :-: MOVING PICTURE FIELD :-:
Everything of interest to the purchaser of projection goods and exhibitors' supplies will be found in our A-Z BOOK. The recognized, standardized buyers' guide for exhibitors. Help yourself to a copy.
"FULCO SERVICE" GOES WITH FULTON GOODS
THAT Means Something
E. E. FULTON CO., 152 W. Lake St., Chicago
MACHINES, SUPPLIES, GENERAL EQUIPMENT, COMPLETE INSTALLATIONS
SOLE AMERICAN DISTRIBUTOR OF THE GUIL PASTIL.

SEEBURG "MOTION PICTURE PLAYER"

It has solved one of the Big Problems of the Moving Picture Business.

"The Wonder of them all"

Played either manually or automatically, it produces real music for the pictures.

Get Complete Information on it by Addressing

J. P. SEEBURG PIANO CO., Manufacturers, 209 S. Republic Building STATE STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

THE CENTAUR FILM COMPANY

The Oldest Independent Film Manufacturer

Has the largest commercial plant in America, the most up-to-date equipment, and an organization second to none.

Printing and developing in any quantity. Quality guaranteed. Prices interesting.

CENTAUR FILM CO.
BAYONNE, N. J.

A Gundlach Projection Lens Will Make Your Picture Sharper and Brighter.

If it does not you can return it. Every Lens is sold subject to approval.
When you get a Gundlach Lens you go the limit. There is none better made anywhere.
TELEGRAPH the width of the picture wanted, the distance from lens to screen and the name of the machine. We will ship C. O. D., subject to approval and refund if the lens comes back.

IT'S ALL IN THE LENS

Gundlach-Manhattan Optical Co.
808 Clinton Ave., So., Rochester, N. Y.

The Pioneer and Acknowledged Feature Program

ILLINOIS and WISCONSIN

GENERAL FEATURES EVERY DAY OR ANY DAY

The Only Active Buyers of New State Rights and Single Reels in this Territory

GENERAL FEATURE FILM CO., Mallers Bldg., Chicago

"THE PEERLESS" THE DAY and NIGHT SCREEN "THE PIONEER"

THE SCREEN OF QUALITY. THE SCREEN WITHOUT A SEAM. THE SCREEN DE LUXE

"AN HONEST SCREEN FOR THE HONEST EXHIBITOR"

Exhibitors, who 6 months ago said they could not afford it, are now placing their orders. They found that they could not afford to be without it.

YOU CAN BUY IT ON YOUR OWN TERMS!

MAIN OFFICE, 291 BROADWAY, NEW YORK. TELEPHONE 1951 WORTH

Branch Offices and Distributing Centers at PHILADELPHIA, NEW ORLEANS, ATLANTA, EL PASO, MEMPHIS, KANSAS CITY, DES MOINES, SAN FRANCISCO
LOS ANGELES, SEATTLE, PARIS, BERLIN, LONDON

Non-Breakable and Sanitary STEEL and CAST IRON — HIGH Quality — LOW Price

Opera Chairs
immediate shipment on many styles; Second Hand Chairs; out-of-door seating Send measurements for FREE SEATING PLAN. Mention this paper.

STEEL FURNITURE CO.
Grand Rapids, Mich.; New York, 150 Fifth Ave.
Pittsburgh, 318 Bissell Blk.; Boston, 69 Pearl St.

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE
1,000 STYLES
ESTABLISHED 1865
WRITE FOR CAT. NO. 31

The A. H. Andrews Co.
115-117 So. Wabash Ave.
Chicago, Ill.
Branches in all Leading Cities
New York Office
1472 Broadway, Long Acre Bldg.
Seattle Office
508-10-12 First Ave., So.
San Francisco Office
782 Mission St.

"Moving Picture Bryson"

If You Want to Put SYSTEM in Your Business Slip in Your Order for My Newly Revised 1914 Edition of the THEATRE RECORD LEDGER, the only moving picture man's bookkeeping ledger that can be easily handled without the worry of keeping books—52 weeks of your business under one cover—separated receipts—expenses—list of audeville—motion picture program—weather, etc.—all totalled on one daily and weekly page. Sent on approval upon receipt of $2.50 plus 20c parcel post—don't delay.
The THEATRE RECORD LEDGER CO., 252 Hennepin Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.

The "Standardized" Theatre Chairs

Do you want a life-saving chair?
Do you want a space-saving chair?
Do you want a sanitary chair?
Do you want a scientifically built, double standard chair?

We operate the largest exclusive theatre chair factory in the world, AND SELL DIRECT TO YOU. WRITE US

The HARDESTY MFG. CO., Canal Dover, Ohio

OPERA CHAIRS
Latest and Best in Seats

SEND FOR OUR PRICES BEFORE BUYING
BENNETT SEATING CO
537 West Market St.
LOUISVILLE, KY.

Steel Standards will not break

STEEL OR IRON STANDARDS
AGENCIES:
H. S. Ansley, 1476 B'way, Long Acre Bldg., New York City. 'Phone 5619 Bryant
California Seating Company, 720 South Hill Street, Los Angeles, Cal.
H. A. Johnson Seating Company, 1214½ Third Ave., Seattle, Wash.

THE WISCONSIN SEATING COMPANY
New London, Wis., U. S. A.

Orchestra Music
FOR MOVING PICTURES

The Orpheum Collection of dramatic and descriptive music for Piano and seven orchestra parts. Piano can be used alone. In two series:

No. 1 and No. 2

Piano, 58 cts. each. Both series, $1.15. Violin, 40 cts. each; both 75 cts. Cello-&-Bass same price as violin. Flute 35 cts. each. Both series, 65 cts. Clarinet, Cornet and Trombone same price as Flute. Drums, 30 cts. each. Both series, 55 cts.

Send for free sample page and further discounts; 3d series ready for piano only; 58 cts.

CLARENCE E. SINN
1501 SEDGWICK ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

REBUILT MACHINES AS GOOD AS NEW

All machines entirely rebuilt and only genuine parts used.

Powers No. 6	$140.00
Motiograph, 1913	150.00
Powers No. 5	75.00
Edison Exhibition	75.00
1912 Dissolving Motiograph	165.00

Many others. Write for complete list. All the machines are complete with the electrical attachments. A-1 condition guaranteed.
We carry complete line of new machines and supplies. Will take back your old machine in part payment of new one.

Time or Cash. Send for Catalog today.

AMUSEMENT SUPPLY COMPANY
160A NO. FIFTH AVENUE - - - - - - - - - - CHICAGO

PUT in your own lighting plant and pay for it with your Central Station bills. A Foos generating set will produce current for less than 3 cents per kilowatt, and is more reliable than service from a Central Station.

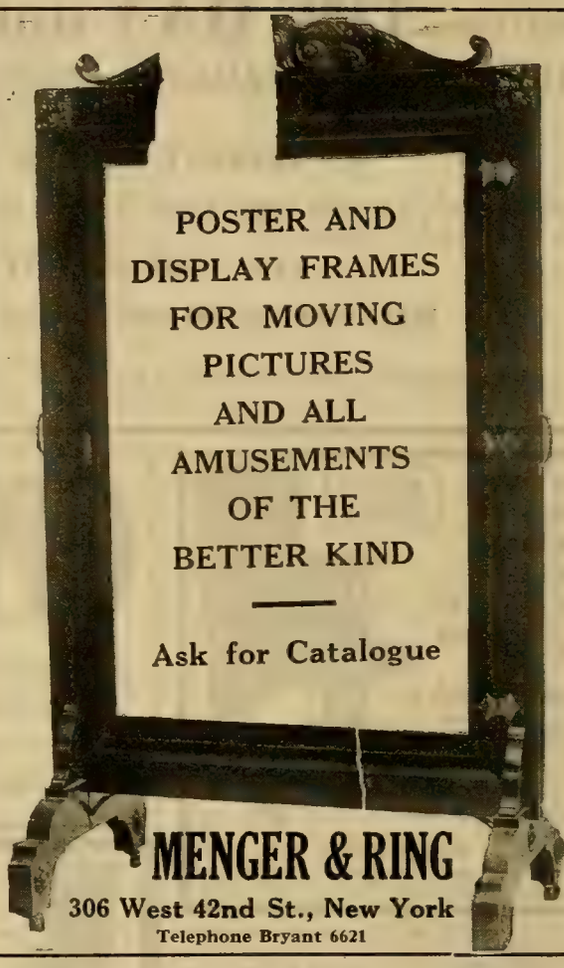
Ask for Bulletin 98.

FOOS GAS ENGINE CO.
Springfield, Ohio.

The EXHIBITOR SAYS

"ERKER'S FOR EVERYTHING"

Complete Equipment
for The MOTION PICTURE THEATRE
Send for Complete Catalogue
608 OLIVE ST ERKER'S ST. LOUIS, MO



POSTER AND DISPLAY FRAMES FOR MOVING PICTURES AND ALL AMUSEMENTS OF THE BETTER KIND

Ask for Catalogue

MENGER & RING
306 West 42nd St., New York
Telephone Bryant 6621

The Film Market of the World

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

When buying, pass up unknown brands.

Only purchase advertised goods.

All the well known and reputable firms advertise in this Paper.

When answering ads kindly mention the

MOVING PICTURE WORLD.

As the Operator Looks at it

As the Operator Looks at It

Just notice how easy this operator takes it. He doesn't have to work over a dangerous juice consuming rheostat at furnace heat anymore since the

Fort Wayne Compensarc was installed.

He can control the machine perfectly now with one hand--gets a clearer, whiter, steadier light and can adjust it to any of the three intensities without even the faintest flicker.

When we sold this machine we guaranteed it would absolutely

Cut 2-3 from the Monthly Lighting Bill

That sounded almost too good to be true, but they put one in on our 30 day free trial plan.

Did the machine "make good?" Well, the first month it reduced the bill from $22.70 to $9.24 and they operated more hours and got better light than ever before.

We can do just as well for you regardless of what voltage you are using and if you will send for our little free booklet, we'll explain how we do it.

Remember you are paying the Lighting Company 66 2-3 per cent more than you need to every day you wait.

Fort Wayne Electric Works
of General Electric Company
1482 Broadway
Fort Wayne, Indiana

The MYSTERIOUS MAN of the JUNGLE

A Triumph in Wild Animal Productions, Vivid, Gripping and all Enthralling. A Story of Romance, Adventure and Daring. Laid in the Ever Dangerous, Animal Infested Jungleland of Africa.

A WILD ANIMAL SENSATION

Four Fascinating Reels. Filled with Exciting Punches, Exceptional Photography, Picturesque Backgrounds; Cleverly Acted by a Selected Cast. A Feature of Features from the California Studios of

TOM NASH and BIG OTTO

Picturedom's Foremost Producers of Wild Animal Dramas. Would You Draw Crowds to Your Theatre During the Summer Months? Then Write or Wire Now for Information Regarding

THE "BIG OTTO" BRAND

OF WILD ANIMAL FEATURES EXTRAORDINARY

NASH

MOTION PICTURE CO.

Executive Offices: Garland Bldg.
Studios and Zoo: Bairdstown,
Los Angeles, California

New York Representative: Stanley H. Twist
Inter-Ocean Sales Company
110 W. 40th Street Phone, Bryant 5667

HUGH HOFFMAN

The Majestic Motion Picture Company

In Its Two-Part Release of Sunday, July 19

"The Painted Lady"

Blanche Sweet

Presents Two Favorite Majestic Stars

Blanche Sweet

and

Dorothy Gish

Dorothy Gish

We call the attention of exhibitors to the "Komic" comedy series of "Bill the Office Boy," adapted from the well-known stories of Paul West, which appear weekly in the magazine sections of 40 Sunday newspapers. "Komics" are released only through Mutual Service.

The Majestic Guide for Exhibitors

(In which we endeavor to tell the truth about all Majestic releases)

THE ONLY CLUE (1 Reel) release date Tuesday, July 7—A well presented detective story ending with a thrilling climax that is entirely novel.

THE CITY BEAUTIFUL (2 Reels) release date Sunday, July 12—A story of a young country boy who seeks his fortune in Los Angeles and secures employment with a motion picture company. A novel and interesting picture featuring DOROTHY GISH.

THE OLD DERELICT (1 Reel) release date Tuesday, July 14—An extremely appealing story, fairly well presented, but not quite as well done as we should have liked.

THE PAINTED LADY (2 Reels) release date Sunday, July 19—We will tell you next week more particularly what we think of this picture. Suffice it now to say that it seems on first examination to be good and it features Blanche Sweet and Dorothy Gish.

D. W. GRIFFITH supervises the production of all Majestic releases.

STUDIO
4500 Sunset Blvd.
Los Angeles, Cal.

Majestic Motion Picture Co.

BUSINESS OFFICES
29 Union Square West,
New York City.

Hearst-Selig News Pictorial Semi-Weekly Service

ALL THE BIG NEWS EVENTS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD SHOWN IN GREAT PICTURES

The most clever, intrepid, fearless, active camera men in all parts of the world are at work every day to portray by expert photography the leading news events for this department.

JUST WHAT THE PUBLIC DEMANDS Special Lithographed Posters.

Order from Your Exchange; Released Mondays and Thursdays

Selig's Current Releases---Get the Crowds

GREAT 2-REEL DRAMA OF THE NORTHWEST

A Story of Love and Adventure with a Great Tragedy

"The Wilderness Mail."

By JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD, Featuring Bessie Eyton.

Released July 13th.

Produced amid the snows of the far Northwest with dog teams, snow banks, etc. A remarkably strong and gripping story most decidedly acceptable to the public. 2-Reels.

Released July 14th.

"An Egyptian Princess."

A delightful and happy comedy depicting the adventures of a chemist who attempts to bring an Egyptian mummy to life—involving a jealous wife and a succession of shriekingly funny situations.

"The Wilderness Mail" 2 Reels, Released July 13.

ALL RELEASES THROUGH GENERAL FILM COMPANY

Released July 15th.

"His Last Appeal."

Depicting the struggle of an ex-convict to decide between right and wrong when it came to a question of forging the Governor's signature to a reprieve to save his employer from death until explanations could be made. All ends happily. IN TWO REELS.

Released July 17th.

"Wiggs Takes the Rest Cure."

The story of a victim of insomnia who wishes to find relief. His adventures with a runaway automobile and a desperate robber, whom he finally captures, cures him.

Released July 18th.

"The Squatters."

The story of a society girl who forms a friendship for the Junoesque daughter of a squatter, and their adventures in keeping peace between an irate land holder and the settlers. Full of dramatic incidents.

POSTERS.—You can order posters and heralds for all our productions, beautifully printed in four colors, artistically illustrated and up-to-date.

PHOTOGRAPHS.—Beautiful, well finished photographs of SELIG popular players. Post-card size, per thousand, $3.00 Size 5 x 8, for lobby display, each 15 cents.

Wonderful Selig Winner---"The Spoilers"

Biggest Money Maker on the Market.

Biggest success in the biggest cities. Crowds have stormed the theatres in Chicago, New York, etc., to see the great photoplay made from Rex Beach's magnificent literary success. Desirable territory still open. Write for particulars at once. Don't miss this great opportunity.

NOTE: We are booking "THE SPOILERS" direct.

Address: General Offices, 20 E. Randolph St., Chicago, Ill.

THE SELIG POLYSCOPE COMPANY
CHICAGO

MERIT WINS

Power's Cameragraph No. 6A

WON ITS POSITION OF LEADERSHIP

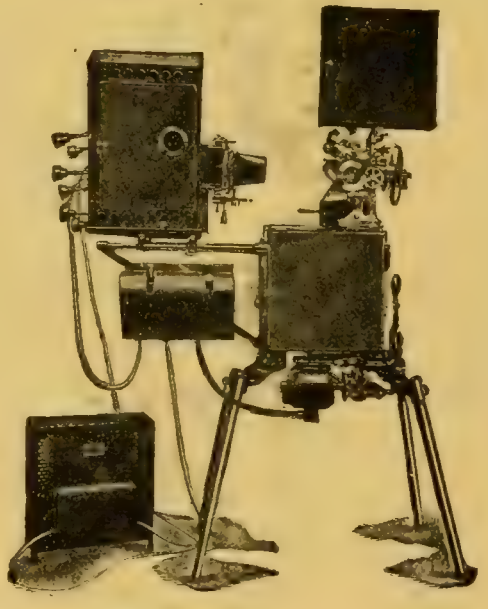
Because This Machine Has Demonstrated In Thousands of Instances That For



Powers Cameragraph No. 6-A

SAFETY AND PROJECTION IT HAS NO EQUAL

This machine is preferred where perfect projection and safety of operation are desired.

Write for Catalog G

Nicholas Power Company

Ninety Gold Street, New York City

Vol. 21, No. 3 July 18, 1914 Price 10 Cents

H. C. HOFFMAN

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE FILM INDEX

EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

Scene from "One Wonderful Night" (Essanay).

Post Office Box 226
Madison Square Station

NEW YORK

17 Madison Avenue
Telephone Madison Square 3510

A Spectacular Production

Spectacular --- because no other film production equals it in size—46 reels.

Spectacular --- because no other film production equals it in costliness—$1,000,000.00.

Spectacular --- because no other film production equals it in stars, settings, photography and dramatic climaxes.

Spectacular --- because no other film production is the motion picture version of a story by Harold MacGrath now appearing in 200 leading newspapers.

$10,000 for 100 Words!

THE MILLION DOLLAR MYSTERY

By Harold MacGrath

$10,000 for 100 Words!

Thanhouser's Million Dollar Motion Picture Production

The first five episodes of this startling production are now being shown at the better theatres throughout America. Each episode is in 2 reels—released each week for 23 weeks. The story is by Harold MacGrath—scenario by Lloyd Lonergan. The Thanhouser Film Corporation is the producer—Syndicate Film Corporation the distributor.

Some booking dates are still open—but you must act quickly! The Million Dollar Mystery is an independent release and may be obtained regardless of the regular program being used.

SYNDICATE FILM CORPORATION

71 W. 23d Street, NEW YORK 166 W. Washington Street, CHICAGO

or Syndicate Film Corporation representative at any Mutual Exchange in the United States and Canada

The Thanhouser Three-a-Week

Tuesday, July 14, "The Substitute." An exciting 2-reel drama, throbbing with stirring scenes from every-day life. Cast includes Mignon Anderson, Carey Hastings, John Lehnberg, Wilford Young, Arthur Bauer and Joseph Phillips.

Friday, July 17, "A Gentleman for a Day." A beautiful child drama; depicting the play spirit of children and how it triumphs over an irate mother. In this production is an exceptional cast of child actors, including Leland Benham, Helen Badgley (the Thanhouser kidlet) and others.

THANHOUSER FILM CORPORATION, New Rochelle, N. Y.

Head European Offices: Thanhouser Films, Ltd., London, W. C., England

Thanhouser releases will continue to be features of the Mutual Program

ESSANAY

Superlative and Aristocratic Features

Released Monday, July 20th

"MONEY TALKS"

A side-splitting "slapstick" comedy of unusual merit.

Released Tuesday, July 21st.

"MRS. BILLINGTON'S FIRST CASE."

An interesting comedy-drama concerning the aspirations of a female attorney. Story adapted from The Munsey Magazines.

Released Wednesday, July 22nd.

The Fable of "Higher Education that Was Too High for the Old Man."

A GEORGE ADE comedy with a laugh in every foot and a shriek in every scene.

Released Thursday, July 23rd.

"SLIPPERY SLIM'S INHERITANCE"

A Western comedy sensation featuring Margaret Joslin, Victor Potel and Harry Todd.

Released Friday, July 24th.

"A LETTER FROM HOME"

(In Two Acts)

A photographic and dramatic masterpiece. A story of heart interest and true to life incidents that is well worth your booking.

Released Saturday, July 25th.

"BRONCHO BILLY AND THE GAMBLER."

A Western drama with a punch, featuring G. M. ANDERSON.

RELEASED THROUGH THE GENERAL FILM COMPANY'S FEATURE DEPARTMENT.

SATURDAY, JULY 18th!

"ONE WONDERFUL NIGHT."

(In Four Acts)

The story written by Louis Tracy that has stirred the entire universe. The novel your audiences took delight in reading, because they were given the privilege to vote—to elect a photoplayer to enact the leading role, that of John Delancey Curtis, in the photoplay production—and they elected

FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN

Your patrons want to see this production. Book it for them!

Essanay Film Manufacturing Company

521 First National Bank Bldg., Chicago.

Factory and studio: 1333 Argyle St., Chicago, Ill. Branch offices in London, Paris, Berlin, Barcelona

The Two

Now On the Great

UNIVERSAL EXHIBITORS

Who ever dreamed that two such well loved stars as Mary program? The Universal has accomplished the seemingly get into immediate touch with the nearest Universal excha any exhibitor can resist the wonderful offerings and advant

MARY FULLER

For years this accomplished girl has delighted the people of the civilized world as the lead in Edison films. For years it has been supposed that she would always remain with that company. But she has signed a contract with the Universal, as previously announced. When we notified the exchanges a universal and telegraphic howl of joy came back to us. Exchanges and exhibitors alike congratulated us and told us we had accomplished the impossible. We are buying some wonderful stories for Miss Fuller from the best authors in America and you can rest assured of a series of delicious treats. Miss Fuller will be under the direction of Mr. Walter Edwin, who has been directing her Edison successes, and will be co-starred with Mr. Chas. Ogle, also of the Edison company. Make all your advance preparations for advertising the fact that you will soon be showing Mary Fuller pictures. Take fullest advantage of the fact that she is well beloved by millions of moving picture fans. Handle it like great big news, for that's what it is!

USE THE BRAINS

Universal Film Manu

Carl Laemmle, President "Largest Film

Marys!

Universal Program
WILD WITH DELIGHT

ller and Mary Pickford could be secured on the very same mpossible achievement and it now invites all exhibitors to e and profit by this double-headed scoop! I don't see how es of that Universal program!—Carl Laemmle, President.

MARY PICKFORD

We have enough Mary Pickford (Little Mary) pictures to LAST US A YEAR! They were made by the Imp company before the Universal company was organized and contain some of her most delightful pieces of work. Some of the pictures were directed by Thomas Ince, now General Director of the New York Motion Picture Co. Some of them show KING BAGGOT and WILLIAM SHAY, those two old stand-bys of the Imp. In some of the Mary Pickford releases you will also see David Miles, formerly of the Kinemacolor and the Biograph; likewise Owen Moore, formerly of the Imp; and W. Robert Daly and J. Farrel MacDonald, and so on. We have looked over every negative with scrupulous care and have rejected those in which the story was weak or which, for one reason or another, are not suitable for present releasing. We have arranged the very cream of the lot for early releasing and are now preparing strikingly beautiful and attractive posters for them. Just imagine what it is going to mean to YOU to be able to advertise a Mary Pickford Day without paying a veritable fortune for the privilege!

GOD GAVE YOU

facturing Company

Manufacturing Concern in the Universe''

All of the Universal Stars in a Single Picture!

What do you know about that?

All the Universal Screen Stars, both East and West, Rounded Up in a Great One-Reeler!

Never before, Nowhere, No place, in the History of the Motion Picture Art, has such a remarkable cast of Celebrities Been Gathered as in that MOST ORIGINAL FILM

"THE GREAT UNIVERSAL MYSTERY"

(Released under the Nestor Brand, Friday, July 10)

Described by the "Moving Picture World" as "Something out of the rut." Never again will your patrons have a chance to see all of their favorites of the screen in a single reel!

Staged and produced by Allan Dwan, on the greatest stage in the world at the Universal West Coast Studios at Hollywood, California, and in the Imp, Victor and Coytesville Studios in the East, and at the Universal executive offices in the Mecca Building, New York City.

The Foremost Personages in the Film World appear in the picture.

President Carl Laemmle; Secretary and Treasurer, R. H. Cochrane; General Manager, J. C. Graham; West Coast Manager, Isidore Bernstein; Joe Brandt, Herman Fichtenberg, Maurice Fleckles, J. V. Bryson, and scores of others in the business end, mingle in the rapid-moving action, with

Stars of the First Magnitude, including:

King Baggot, J. Warren Kerrigan, Pauline Bush, Ford Sterling, Florence Lawrence, William Clifford, Lois Weber, Phillips Smalley, Rupert Julian, George Periolat, Vera Sisson, Louise Glaum, Bobby Fuehrer, Bess Meredith, Ernest Shields, Grace Cunard, Francis Ford, Murdock MacQuarrie, Robert Leonard, Ella Hall, Al. E. Christie, Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran, Victoria Forde, Edna Maison, Harry Schumm, Marie Walcamp, Sherman Bainbridge, Max Asher, Bob Vernon, Louise Fazenda, Gail Henry, Herbert Rawlinson, Anna Little, Frank Lloyd, Otis Turner, Frank Lanning, Lule Warrenton, Herbert Brenon, Cleo Madison, Frank Crane, Leah Baird, William Shay, William Welsh, Allen Curtis, Frank Smith, Matt Moore, Bob Thornby, Wilfred Lucas, Fred Balshofer, Ethel Grandin, Hobart Henley and hosts of others.

It is the Greatest and Most Novel Single-Reeler Ever Filmed!

It is the only single-reeler that has ever carried specially designed six-sheets.

Book it now and give your patrons something to talk about for the next six months

UNIVERSAL FILM MANUFACTURING CO.

CARL LAEMMLE, President.

Reasons why the Universal is the Best Balanced Program!

Gaze on this wonderful program for the week of July 20th! It is an average weekly offering of the Big U, the same as buyers of Universal service get 52 weeks a year. Yet

Did You Ever See a More Enticing Program?

MONDAY, JULY 20:

VICTOR—Value Received (Two-Reel Western Drama) (Vera Sisson and Warren Kerrigan)
IMP—The Sultan's Garden (Drama) (Mary Pickford Special Reissue)
STERLING—The Circus (Comedy)

TUESDAY, JULY 21:

GOLD SEAL—Lucille Love, The Girl of Mystery—(2-R Dr.—Grace Cunard and Francis Ford—Last of Series)
CRYSTAL—Getting Vivian Married (Comedy)
UNIVERSAL IKE—Universal Ike, Jr., in Cupid's Victory (Comedy)

WEDNESDAY, JULY 22:

NESTOR—By the Sun's Rays (Western Drama) (MacQuarrie)
JOKER—Jimmy Kelly and The Kidnappers (Comedy)
ECLAIR—Allah, 3311 (Three-Reel Drama)—(Barbara Tennant and O. A. C. Lund)
ANIMATED WEEKLY—No. 124 (News)

THURSDAY, JULY 23:

IMP—The Gateway of Regret (Drama)
REX—At the Foot of the Stairs (Drama) (Bob Leonard and Ella Hall)
STERLING—Love and Lunch (Sterling)

FRIDAY, JULY 24:

NESTOR—All at Sea (Comedy)
POWERS—Kate Waters of the Secret Service—(2-Reel Drama—Edna Maison)
VICTOR—Irene's Busy Week (Comedy-Drama)

SATURDAY, JULY 25:

JOKER—The Polo Champions (Comedy—Max Asher)
"101 BISON"—Olana of the South Seas (2-R. South Sea Island Drama—Marie Walcamp and Wm. Clifford)

SUNDAY, JULY 26:

REX—An Awkward Cinderella (Comedy-Drama)
FRONTIER—When Memory Recalls (Drama)
ECLAIR—When Death Rode the Engine (West. Dr.) (Robert Frazer and W. A. Myles)

"Love and Lunch," "The Circus," "All at Sea" and "The Polo Champions" will make you split your sides with laughter.

